Exactly the same situation faces the house members who will be elected November 6. Unless the new president sees fit to call a special session of congress after his inauguration, of which there is no present indication, new members will not get a chance to hang their hats in the cloak rooms and do a little voting and committee work until December, 1929. That's quite a chunk of waiting to do for men who only hold down their jobs for two years anyhow. It's not so bad for the senators, who make a longer stay, up to six years, once they arrive in Washington in that capacity.

Majority Favors Proposal

A substantial majority of the present senate and house membership is already committed to the presentation to the states of a constitutional amendment changing the presidential inauguration date from March 4 following an election to January 24. Under the same project, terms of senators and representatives would begin January 4 and congress would meet every year on that date. If that were now the situation, men elected to congress next November would begin functioning in their jobs January 4 next.

It seems possible that the outcome of the house and senate elections in November may have a lot to do with what further action is attempted.

Sentiment Might Change

Assuming that control of either or both the senate and house passed from republican to democratic hands, an entirely new problem might be presented to the republican managers in congress.

Obviously there would be no possibility of ratification of the constitutional amendment by the necessary two thirds of the states in time to bring the seventy-first congress into being any earlier than March 4, 1929, which will be the date from which the elected men hold office although they will not be called in regular session before December, 1929.

But it is at least possible that the amendment could be hustled through by the states in time to slash a couple of months off the two year tenure of the seventy-first congress, and that chance might be regarded as worth trying for by rushing through the resolution this winter. Or again, with control of congress won, the democrats might feel it unwise to risk chopping two months off that period of control by letting the resolution go through.

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

Many is the family today that makes it a rule always to have a bottle of this perfect preparation in the house. Keep it handy and observe these three simple rules of health; keep the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr.

Ends All Signs Of Filthy Dandruff

Best Way To Prevent Baldness

Filthy dandruff in your hair and on your shoulders is as conspicuous as a red flag. Dandruff always irritates the scalp, strangles the hair and makes it fall out—as millions of baldheads can tell you.

Before dandruff has made you a baldhead get a bottle of Parisian Sage and start using it today. Your hair and scalp respond to the very first application. All itching instantly disappears—hair stops falling out and every bit of dandruff is destroyed.

Parisian Sage is more than a dandruff destroyer—it makes the hair live looking, vigorous, glossy and easy to manage. Pleasant, not a bit sticky or greasy—so use it freely. Lee & Osgood Co. and all druggists sell Parisian Sage with guarantee of money back if you are not thoroughly satisfied.

DECLARE CONTINUED PROSPERITY HINGES ON REPUBLICAN TARIFF

(Special to The Bulletin)

BOZRAH, Oct. 23—An enthusiastic republican rally was held here tonight with the principal speakers being Hon. Richard P. Freeman of New London, candidate from the second district, and Capt. Albert M. Simmons of Hartford, a member of the United States army. A third speaker, Judge Carl S. Anderson of Middletown, who was scheduled to address the gathering, was unable to attend. In the course of the rally there was community singing led by George Strouse and the music was furnished by Mallet's orchestra. The speakers were introduced by Rev. George H. Strouse, pastor of the Bozrah Congregational church.

RICHARD P. FREEMAN

The first speaker of the evening, Captain Simmons, said in opening his address that the 1928 campaign is so unique that it is different from any I can remember. It is unique in that the democratic candidate has seen fit to discard the democratic party's platform and has adopted his own platform. The issues in this campaign are about the same as in any other, but the protective tariff issue is the major one. It is the largest issue in this campaign in spite of the various other issues the democrats have dragged in.

We in Connecticut are particularly interested in the protective tariff, continued the speaker, because we have lived under prosperous conditions under the tariff during the republican administration. The republican party stands for protective tariff. After explaining what the protective tariff means, Captain Simmons went on to say that after the democrats came into power in 1913 the Underwood-Simmons tariff law went into effect. After six or eight months the effect of this tariff was immediately noticeable in this country. Thousands of people were out of work in the big cities, and many of the mills were forced to close.

The following year in 1914 the European war broke out and this took the place of the protective tariff until the close of the war in 1918. This was not of our own making. After the armistice was signed the same conditions prevailed in this country during 1919 and 1920 as in 1914. There were 5,000,000 people walking the streets of this country in 1921 when the republicans came into power. The greatest prosperity was after the war and not during the war. There has been greater improvement of our mode of living, of education, etc., during the last 7 1-2 years than before that. The democrats say prosperity is a myth. Now, if it is you folks ought to know.

After speaking of the prohibition and religious questions Capt. Simmons touched upon the two candidates for president. Hoover is a self-made man in every sense of the word, he has educated himself and at the age of 23 was the manager of one of the largest mines in Australia. He is a man who understands not only national but international affairs. Mr. Hoover in his talks over the radio is always speaking of the home and family. Contrast that with the remarks of his opponent. Mr. Smith makes his addresses fit the location in which he speaks. I am certain we will all go out on Nov. 6 and place this government in the able hands of Mr. Hoover, that Mr. Smith will realize that the place for him is on the sidewalks of New York, concluded the speaker.

Congressman Freeman Speaks

After touching upon the great activity of the present campaign in which the radio has played an important part, the zealous interest shown by the women in politics in the various towns in which he had spoken and the attempt of the democrats to inject religion into the campaign, Congressman Freeman, the second speaker on the evening's programme, mentioned a number of deeds of the Coolidge administration. These included the reduced income taxes, the prudent handling of increased revenue, the government run at greatly reduced rates, the Boulder dam, the conquering of which would cause the desert lands to bloom.

One situation confronting the republican party in 1921 was the fact that 5,000,000 citizens were walking the streets with empty pockets. Hundreds of thousands from Europe came to this country after the war. It was necessary for us to curtail emigration. Prosperity has demonstrated its usefulness. The main topic of the campaign, as Capt. Simmons has pointed out to you, is protective tariff. The speaker explained the benefits of the tariff and pointed out that the 1922 tariff needs revision, saying that it will be revised. Do you want it revised by friends or enemies. It is up to you. Without a protective tariff the mills cannot run. You will then be deprived of a steady job.

The farm issue is another question. The great wealth of the country is in the wheat and corn farms of the west and middle west. You in the east are not particularly interested in the McNary-Haugen bill. The farmer in the west and middle west have a man sympathetic to their needs. They will leave the farm problem to Hoover.

The republican party is indeed very fortunate in the choice of its candidate. In holding the office of secretary of commerce, Mr. Hoover has been in touch with the affairs of the government, both at home and in foreign lands. He is a great executive, a great engineer, able, diligent, dignified, has high ideals and is modest and unassuming. My own conviction, said the speaker, in conclusion, is that we will roll up the most tremendous majority on Nov. 6, in the election of Herbert Hoover.

Mr. Freeman closed his talk by speaking highly of the republican state ticket, especially of John H. Trumbull, Ernest E. Rogers, Stanton Manning and Nathan Gilman, the last named of Bozrah, whom Mr. Freeman said had done a great deal for the town of Bozrah and was an excellent choice of the townspeople to serve them in the general assembly.

STATE'S HIGHWAYS READY FOR FOOTBALL DAY TRAFFIC

Due to the exceptionally heavy traffic on the days of all of the major Yale contests, it will be necessary for those motoring to the game to allow considerably more time for travel than would be necessary under ordinary conditions. By arrival in New Haven about noon time, motorists from other parts of the state will be able to avoid the greatest congestion, since they will avoid conflict on the highways and city streets with most of the out-of-state and New Haven local traffic headed for the Bowl.

Connecticut's highway arteries leading to New Haven are now completely open and ready to bear the tremendous motor traffic which will move in and out of the Elm City on the week-ends of the Yale-Army, Yale-Dartmouth and Yale-Harvard games on Oct. 27, Nov. 3 and Nov. 24, respectively, according to an announcement made today by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. With the exception of finishing work on the shoulders of some of the highways which were under construction this summer, all roads leading to New Haven from all parts of the state are in perfect condition.

The Boston Post road, which will bear by far the heaviest part of the big game traffic, is complete throughout its entire length from the New York state line to the Rhode Island state line. Even the five-mile stretch under construction in Old Lyme, East Lyme and Waterford on the eastern end of the road is now ready for travel. The pavement has been laid and traffic is not impeded nor delayed in either direction. On the western end of the Post road, which will carry most of the New York state traffic, there is not a single stretch of uncompleted construction work.

Route No. 2, leading from Hartford and Springfield to New Haven and the Yale Bowl, is now clear of all construction and is greatly improved by new paving between Berlin and Meriden and between Meriden and Wallingford. Motorists using this route have the option at North Haven of continuing straight ahead to Middletown avenue or of taking a right turn and entering New Haven through State street.

Castle bridge on the Torrington-Waterbury highway has been completed and the entire road is open. Both the Cheshire and Derby routes from Waterbury to New Haven are entirely free of construction. Motorists using the latter will have the advantage of reaching the Bowl without the necessity of traveling through the city.

Traffic entering New Haven on all highways will be directed by signs and traffic policemen over the most convenient and least congested routes through the city. Motorists may park in the official spaces provided by the Yale athletic authorities, or may park on streets outside of the restricted area immediately adjacent to the Bowl and walk to the scene of battle.

Uncontested Divorces

Two uncontested divorces are on the motion list for the superior court short calendar at New London Friday. They are assigned for 9 o'clock in the morning and are Laura C. Perry vs. Luther L. Perry; Jessie C. Thomas vs. William Edwards Thomas, alias ——.

GROTON MAN FIGHTING TO BREAK DOCTOR'S WILL

Monroe C. Morgan of Groton is one of four cousins of the late Dr. Ely Morgan of Middletown, who are fighting to break the doctor's will under which Miss Arline Wilder was made principal beneficiary.

The other contestants are Nathan M. Morgan of Hadlyme, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Gates of Middletown, all cousins of the doctor. After six witnesses were examined in Middletown Tuesday the case was continued for a week in order to question Richard L. De Zeng, a friend of Dr. Morgan, who is an invalid at his home.

Three witnesses of the will, which was drawn on Sept. 9, 1928, 20 days before the doctor died, were examined Tuesday, two of whom were a police captain and an officer. Mr. and Mrs. George Wilder, parents of Arline, who was left the estate, were other witnesses called.

It was brought out that Dr. Morgan attended Miss Wilder when she was two years old and soon after she recovered. Since that time he regarded her as "his little girl."

Dr. Morgan gained notoriety for his eccentric life and served sentences for mal-practice. Because of his reputation he closed his office in Hartford and made his headquarters in Middletown.

AMER. LEGION ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE IS ORGANIZED

The American Legion entertainment committee, of which H. A. Bruckner is chairman, met Tuesday evening in the post rooms and elected chairmen of the various sub-committees as follows: Secretary, Walter Clark; treasurer, Carl Johnson; talent, Harry House; theatre, Edward McKay, Harold Robinson, Harry Powers; tickets, Leon Raymond; ushers, Lindsey Smith; property, Warren Wilcox; publicity, Elmer Farnham.

The committee decided to present a two-act revue entitled, The American Legion Follies, under the direction of Michael Farrell. Mr. Farrell was formerly a director for the John B. Rogers Co. and was for many years a professional entertainer. The cast of about 100 will include the best amateur theatrical talent in the city.

RESIGNATIONS PRESENTED AT NORWICH EAGLES MEETING

The last regular meeting of Norwich aerie, No. 367, F. O. E., with James Dwyer, worthy president, presiding, was largely attended.

Among the visiting Eagles present was Richard Dempsey, state president, and Marten Johnson, both of Hartford. Both gave very interesting talks, especially the latter, in the interests of Old Age Pension.

During the meeting the following resignations were presented and accepted: James Mullins, inside guard; Herbert McNeely, treasurer, and the board of trustees, composed of Timothy Fields, W. R. Hastedt and E. J. Mullins. Temporary appointments for the above-named offices have been made.

Reports of various committees were read and accepted.

The sub base liberty limits for overnight liberay are: The area bounded by north and south line through Niantic on the west and Mystic on the east; and the east and west line through Norwich on the north and Long Island sound on the south.

CALLS INATTENTION CHIEF MOTOR ACCIDENT CAUSE

Fifty-one reasons why people have been killed by automobiles in Connecticut during the past two years have been catalogued by the state motor vehicle department. Virtually every element making up traffic or hazards on the highways has been found by the department's study to have a direct or indirect influence in causing fatal accidents. Carelessness, inattention, recklessness and disregard for the rights of others stand out as the chief causes, but time liquor, weather inexperience defective equipment and a score of things played contributing parts.

The great loss of life according to the department's statistics was directly attributable to inattention. Seventy-six deaths were traced to this cause in the first eight months of 1927 and the same period this year. Helped by carelessness the same cause also figured largely in the deaths of 39 adult and child pedestrians who were killed while crossing streets during those periods. Speeding, or driving too fast for conditions, was responsible for 42 deaths; defective equipment accounted for 24; skidding, 22, and confusion, 24. There were 25 deaths in which intoxicated persons were known to have been involved, including 16 operators of cars and nine pedestrians.

As in previous studies, it has been determined that the most dangerous hours of the day on the highways are in the late afternoon and early evening. Thus far this year there have been more fatal accidents in the seven hours from 4 to 11 p. m. than in all of the other 17 hours of the days. The record for the first eight months of 1927 was about the same, nearly one-half of the fatalities occurring in the 4 to 11 p. m. period.

Study of the physical conditions surrounding these fatalities in more than 400 accidents shows that a few less than half occurred on roads described as "clear," or without adjacent intersection, curve, hill or other feature which might add to the primary causes of the accidents. There were 176 fatal accidents in the clear, 117 at intersections of streets and highways, 55 at curves and 55 on hills or at other spots where conditions were not judged "clear."

The following 51 direct or indirect causes of fatal accidents were compiled by the department from reports of operators and witnesses, court, police and coroners' records:

Driving too fast, lack of control, inattention, skidding, inexperience, driving on wrong side of road, railroad crossings without gates, reckless driving, careless bicyclist, defective brakes, defective steering gear, blowout, confusion, horse-drawn vehicle, intersection curve, careless adult pedestrian careless child pedestrian, poles and other stationary objects, hill jumping on or off vehicle, stealing ride, falling on moving vehicle, failure to observe caution at railroad grade crossing, animal, intoxication, failure to set brakes on parked car.

Careless backing, playing in street, coasting, careless boarding or leaving trolley, glaring lights, obscured vision, stepping from behind parked vehicle, push cart, parked vehicle, rear-end collision, head-on collision, sideswiping, passing standing trolley, interference with operator, ineffective lights, fog, slippery road, automobile running on sidewalk, failure to grant right of way, following too closely, failure to signal, overturning after loss of control, running into ditch, automobile burning after crash.

FLAYS SMITH FOR HIS ALLEGIANCE TO TAMMANY

Former Governor John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire who was one of the speakers in a republican rally Tuesday night at Bulkeley school, New London, devoted a portion of his address to Governor Smith's connection with Tammany, in which he said:

"Now a word as to what Tammany is. It has been a powerful political organization since 1790. Its reputation is most unsavory. Senator Simmons in the Congressional Record of May 23, 1928, says nominating Smith would be taking the 'pie in the poke,' that is he is a Tammany leader and he further adds that Tammany has always been a veritable body o fdeath.

"Every great outstanding reformer in New York state in 125 years has been opposed to Tammany. Alexander Hamilton opposed it Samuel J. Tilden the great democrat fought Tammany tooth and nail. Grover Cleveland locked horns with Tammany in deadly conflict and won. Woodrow Wilson and William J. Bryan battled to the last against Tammany. Theodore Roosevelt had to fight with his life against Tammany. Charles E. Hughes in race track and other reforms was in deadly gripe with Smith and Tammany. But Alfred E. Smith since the time when as a boy he was appointed by Tammany influence a jury summoner has held office consistently and trained regularly under Tammany leaders and is their outstanding man today. Only a few weeks since on the steps of Tammany Hall he eulogized that nefarious institution declaring that it was 'all right,' arguing that it 'must be all right because it had survived a great many years.' The same argment of age would be true of Old Nick Satan or King Alcohol who have survived since the world began. Yes, I admit Tammany has survived for long years. Way back in the days of that biggest of American traitors, Aaron Burr, it was living and doing business and Burr went from Tammany headquarters with Tammany 'seconds' and supporters when he marched in duel against Alexander Hamilton and killed him. There is not time to give a history of Tammany Hall. It is published in a large volume and can be read by all. I am simply asking you, is a Tammany record and a life under Tammany training, calculated to produce in a man the right kind of qualities for the president of the United States? So much for his Tammany associations.

"It might be interesting to inquire what outstanding war work the democratic nominee did during the World war. What specific accomplishment of any kind attaches to his name? What has he ever been except a Tammany politician and a Tammany governor? What claim to national approval has he?

"Isn't this country of ours in too good condition and too prosperous to try the experiment of putting a nationally inexperienced Tammany wet in the white house? Calvin Coolidge has steadily and wisely piloted this ship of state through six years of saneness, soberness, practical economy, and general progress. Should all this that we now enjoy be subjected to things that may be reasonably feared if that Tammany leader with his hundreds of satellites should swarm into Washington and take the seats now occupied by the most brilliant men in the nation? Have we stopped to think who these men would be whom he would bring to Washington? Have we tried to name them? It might be impressive for you to picture in your minds who these men would be and then on the other hand the men and women with whom Mr. Hoover would surround himself, and after doing this ask yourselves if you want to embark on such a hazard.

Inspected Stafford Springs Corps

Winters Corps of the W. R. C. at Stafford Springs was officially inspected Monday night by Miss Lillian Bailey of Danielson, department president, who was assisted by Mrs. Louisa Atterbury of this city, department patriotic instructor. Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, Mrs. Annie B. Turner and Mrs. Alice Brinkman accompanied Mrs. Atterbury on the trip to Stafford Springs.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

PHILLIPS Milk of Magnesia

Better Than Any Diet

PAY less attention to what you eat; not one person in a thousand need diet; or ever really has indigestion. Acidity, flatulence and heartburn are caused by excess stomach acid and food fermentation.

Following a hasty lunch, or too hearty a dinner, a little "Pape's Diapepsin," instantly neutralizes excess acidity, stops that fermentation, and soothes and heals the acid-inflamed stomach lining as if by magic. Your recovery is quick, and complete. Make a special point of getting a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist today, and so follow the example of millions all over the world who use "Pape's Diapepsin" to end indigestion and allied stomach troubles.

With "Pape's Diapepsin" handy you can eat and enjoy whatever you fancy without fear of pain or discomfort to follow. At any rate, it's worth the trial, for lots of folks have found a new freedom at the table.

TO PLAY FOOTBALL GAME AT HIGH NOON AT SOUTH CAROLINA FAIR

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—A football game to be played at noon Thursday—an odd hour and an odd day for football—will not create much excitement generally but means a lot to the state of South Carolina. The University of South Carolina and Clemson college will play their annual game at the South Carolina State fair and the season will be made for one and ruined for the other, regardless of the schedule that is to come.

When the Gamecocks of South Carolina and Tigers of Clemson meet, past performances are "thrown out" and anything can happen. They have been rivals since the Gay Nineties with a slight hiatus in the Naughty Naughts, following a riot in 1902.

This year the State university and State Agricultural and Mechanical college meet without a defeat marring either's record. They also have new coaching systems, Clemson's a year old under "Josh" Cody, but South Carolina under a brand new engineer, Billy Laval.

Laval went to Carolina from Furman where he coached for 15 years and made life more or less miserable for haughty Southern conference teams, expected to win from the smaller Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association outfits. Laval never played college football as Furman had no football team when he was a student there.

The now widely known coach was a left-handed baseball pitcher as a small boy in Columbia, the star of a neighborhood team known as the 'Elmwood Sluggers." When the baseball season ended the "Sluggers" took up football and appropriately enough retained their baseball name.

He was the baseball coach at Furman university when football was reinstated as an intercollegiate sport and took on the coaching responsibility for the eleven as well as the nine.

Later he attended many coaching schools but he was a good coach before he sat at the feet of the great in the summer sessions. When he moved from Furman to South Carolina he took his "crazy quilt" shift with him, an evolution defying description but evidently effective as his team has defeated Erskine, Chicago, Virginia, Maryland and Presbyterian college this season.

Josh Cody, the Clemson coach, became head of the Tiger staff last season after serving a term of enlistment as assistant to Dan McGugin at Vanderbilt. Cody was one of Vanderbilt's greatest tackles and his name is always mentioned in a discussion of all-southern all-time teams. During the war he paired with Schultz of Washington and Lee at the tackle positions on the Camp Jackson team, an outfit that was not scored on.

Clemson goes into its big game with a record of not having been scored on, one of the few teams in the country to have gone this far and kept their goal line and uprights inviolate. The Tigers defeated Davidson, Auburn and North Carolina State by margins of single touchdowns and then ran wild to defeat Erskine college 52 to 0. South Carolina, opening its season against Erskine, won by only 19 to 6.

Last year Clemson won the game, 21 to 0, and the year before South Carolina was the victor, 24 to 0, but neither score means anything at noon Thursday on the South Carolina Fair grounds.

EASTERN TEAMS PERFECTING THEIR AERIAL ATTACK

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—The east's major college football elevens, finding scoring becoming more difficult with each succeeding week, devoted most of their practice periods today to perfecting forward passing offensives.

New York university, recalling Colgate's stonewall defense of a year ago, has no hope of piercing the Maroon line this Saturday even with such ball carriers as Strong and Follett. Instead Chick Meehan hopes to score through the air. He replaced Jinx O'Herin, varsity quarterback, with Archie Roberts in practice today. Roberts weighs about 25 pounds less than O'Herin but is a superior passer. Most of Head Coach Abell's difficulties at Colgate consisted of finding a varsity fullback. He had Vaughan, Ed Herb and Macaluso at that post today.

Dartmouth, a forward passing team already, devoted attention to that specialty in preparation for the Harvard battle while the Crimson did likewise at Cambridge.

Mal Stevens, at Yale, welcomed a rainy day for it gave him a chance to instruct the Bulldogs in the extremely difficult art of handling a wet ball. Army, which meets Yale at New Haven next, was put through a strenuous drill although five regulars were absent because of injuries suffered in the Harvard battle.

The Princeton Tigers, hoping to stop Cornell's winning streak, scored twice on an "all-star" team consisting chiefly of the coaches. It took a long forward pass, Bennett to Jones, and 60 yard dash by Jack Norman to turn the trick. Rain interfered with Doble's practice at Ithaca, necessitating scheduling of a scrimmage for tomorrow.

While Navy preparations for the Pennsylvania game were held up by monthly examinations, the Red and Blue drilled under the glare of flood lights. The dope favors Penn to win by a decisive margin but Lou Young, apparently, is taking no chances.

Pitt held a scrimmage against the freshmen but Carnegie Tech, the Panthers' next foe, was satisfied with a dummy scrimmage. Three first-string men were on the injured list as Penn State began work for Syracuse.

There was no rest at Fordham which faces Washington and Jefferson at the Polo grounds on Saturday. West Virginia and Lafayette had hard workouts for their battle at Easton.

Kauffman and Silvers Draw

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—Joey Kauffman and Marty Silvers, New York lightweights, fought 10 rounds to a draw in a slow bout here tonight. Jack Philips 146 1-2 of Toronto, Canada., outpointed Eddie Shapiro, 145, of New York in another 10 rounder and Georgie Cohen, of New York, knocked out Raymond Barpon, Porto Rican flyweight, in the first round of a four round battle.

A NAT. WOMAN'S GOLF BODY IS DESIRED

CHICAGO, Oct. 23—(AP)—A national women's golf association with independent control of all golfing affairs of the fair sex in America is the goal toward which feminine golfdom is headed, according to expressions of leaders at today's annual meeting of the Women's Western Golf association.

This body is successfully independent of men and always has been, but the national championship is now held by direction of the United States Golf association—a golf contest for the women of the country held by the men. Among those who favored such a plan was Mrs. Robert M. Cutting, retiring president of the Women's Western and members of the women's advisory committee of the U. S. G. A.

Mrs. Cutting who gave way to Mrs. Paul Walker of Chicago as president of the W. W. G. A. said after adjournment that she spoke only personally, but that it appealed to her as a splendid idea to have the women in full control of their own affairs, even down to city contests.

Under such an arrangement golf would be controlled under a system similar to the national government. The national body would control in a general way and conduct the national championship tourneys. State organizations would handle regional affairs, while, under state control, there would be city and district associations, all free of the oversight of men, except as to rules of the game.

There was no official consideration of the subject, and, aside from elections, a few minor amendments to the constitution, and reports, the meeting was given over to awarding of prizes. These included the western championship to Mrs. Harry Pressler of Los Angeles, who won this summer for the second consecutive time by defeating Virginia Wilson of Chicago, Canadian champion, in the finals at Indian Hills club; individual medal score honors to Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago; the Chicago championship to Virginia Van Wie for the third time; and a special award to Mrs. Melvin Jones of Olympia Fields, who won the gold medal in the Chicago title event at her home club with a world record score of 73 on the No. 1 course, one above men's par.

Invitations for the holding of the 1929 championship were received from Mayfield club, Cleveland, and Oakland Hills club, Detroit. It is likely that the committee will select one of these cities for the event and a tentative plan is afoot to hold it within a week of the national women's championship, which may be played in one of those two cities also.

Glenna Collett, of Providence, won the national title for the third time this year by defeating Virginia Van Wie in the finals at Hot Springs, Va., and the event is due to come to the mid west this summer.

PLENTY OF ACTION EXPECTED AT AMATEUR BOUTS THURSDAY

Jackie Burns, matchmaker for the Pastime A. C., promises the local boxing fans that they will see plenty of action when he puts on his card of eight bouts at Olympic hall on Thursday evening. Many new faces will be seen in the ring tomorrow night and plenty of fast boxing is expected as all the boys have good reputations.

Chief interest centers in Eddie Sharkie, local 122 pound boy who made his debut at Uncasville a week or so ago. Sharkie in that bout showed that he has the makings of a real scrapper and his work has been the talk of boxing circles for the past week. Just who will be matched against the local lad is uncertain and will depend largely on the weights of boys in the same class. Sharkie, who is being handled by Chick Spivery, will not give away any weight. Spivery also has a flyweight of promise in Baby Joe Gans but it has been very difficult to find a boy of his weight to match him with as he weighs only 110 pounds. This boy is really a clever boxer having been at the game for a number of years before he became old enough to fight in public. He has given exhibitions under the name of "Snooks" Lacy and those who have seen him in these exhibitions will want to see him on Thursday night.

Teams from Danielson, Montville, Westerly and New London are entered and the weights of the entries range from 110 to 190 pounds.

HARVARD TO USE ITS STRONGEST TEAM SATURDAY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 23—(AP)—The same Harvard varsity eleven which started against the Army, will open the fray against Dartmouth next Saturday, it was indicated today when Head Coach Arnold Horween put his first team, which was minus only Wally Harper, the fullback, through some new aerial plays in a dummy scrimmage with team B. Harper, injured Saturday, was expected to be in shape the latter part of the week.

Horween opened today's practice with a blackboard talk, during which he ordered his regulars to "forget the Army game and concentrate on Dartmouth." Then he gave them several new plays to digest.

In the scrimmage with team B, the Crimson regulars showed a slight improvement in both their forward passing offense and defense. A long signal drill ended the session.

All of the injured reported for practice but Harper and Jim Parkinson, a guard, were not in uniform. Barrett, W. Tichnor, Cunningham and Batchelder, all of whom were injured in the Army game, were able to take part in the signal drill.

ARMY HAS STRENUOUS DRILL FOR YALE GAME

WEST POINT, Oct. 23—(AP)—Although five players were absent from practice today on account of injuries suffered last Saturday, the Army squad went through a strenuous drill. The players were divided into groups of backs, linemen and ends.

Maxwell, Humber and Walsh continued their hard bids for regular places and made a favorable impression by their work today.

Murrell went through an intensive course of kicking, and Messinger and Carlmark received special attention for a long period from Major Sasse, Army's end coach.

ROACH SIGNS HOCKEY CONTRACT WITH RANGERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—John Ross Roach, crack goalie acquired by the world champion New York Rangers recently in a trade with Toronto for Lorne Chabot, signed a contract today for the coming National league season. Although his salary was not announced, the Ranger management said Roach now is the "highest paid goalie in the league."

Frank Boucher, center ice star, Butch Keeling and Paul Thompson, reserve forwards, have yet to sign Ranger contracts for the coming season. Boucher alone is a holdout.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Play in the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island conference this week end brings some of the most important games of the season. The Bulkeley-Windham game at New London will serve somewhat as a stepping stone from the mire for one of these teams. The Academy-Westerly game at Westerly, on the other hand will give one of these outfits a chance to go into a tie with Stonington for first place in the league.

Windham lost a tough game to Stonington last week, playing with nearly half the regular team on the sidelines. The break came with but two minutes to play on a fumble which a Stonington lineman scooped up and ran over half the length of the field for the only score of the tilt.

The Wilby high basketball schedule, just announced, as usual carries a heavy list of games. No teams in this section of the state are included. Basketball is to Wilby what baseball is to the Academy.

Putnam plays Plainfield Thursday afternoon in what looks like another victory for the unbeaten Putnam eleven.

The six boys from the Academy on the Conn. Aggie varsity ought to create some kind of a record.

Steffy Cimikoski and Mace Goldblatt, who are at William and Mary college in Williamsburg, Va., in company with quite a few other Norwich boys, write back that the place is ideal and they can hardly wait for baseball to roll around. Both boys are conceded excellent chances of "getting on" down there.

EASTERN CONN. ALL STARS BOWLERS WIN FIRST MATCH

The Eastern Connecticut All-Star bowling team won its first victory of the season Tuesday evening at the Lawrence alleys in New London by defeating an All-Star New London five 1725 to 1634. The E C. All-Stars took the first string by a one-pin margin but were beaten by five pins in the next string. In the final game the E. C. boys rolled 559 against 514 for New London to win the match by a margin of 41 pins. Frankie Barber of Danielson had high single with 141 while Mike Morin of Norwich had high three strings with 368. The scores:

CANADIAN BOXING FEDERATION TO WITHDRAW FROM N. B. ASSOCIATION

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23—(AP)—The Canadian Boxing federation today notified Latrobe Cogswell, secretary of the National Boxing association, of its withdrawal from that organization. Mr. Cogswell today received the formal notification of withdrawal, which had been threatened at the annual meeting of the association held in Toronto last week.

Mr. Cogswell said that the Canadian body became incensed at the failure of the association to elect Thomas Murphy, head of the federation, as a vice-president. Murphy, up to the time of the meeting last week, had been a vice-president of the N. B. A. since the entrance of the Canadian federation into the national body four years ago.

Cogswell said that Murphy, at the meeting last week, had a good chance for election as president of the N. B. A., but that some of the members of the association opposed naming him because he was not from any boxing organization in the United States.

Cogswell said that he had expected the action, and was not in the least surprised, and did not blame the Canadian body for its withdrawal.

JUSTINIAN WINS HARTSDALE STAKE AT EMPIRE CITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—In a hard driving finish, the Green Tree stables two-year-old, Justinian beat out a good field to win the Hartsdale stakes over the six furlong distance at Empire City, today. G. A. Cochran's Oesel made a good bid, taking second with William Ziegler's Holiday, third.

Justinian broke ahead and ran to a good lead. Oesel made his bid in the last furlong but could not overtake Justinian who lasted to win by half a length. The race was worth $4,035, and the winner paid 13 to 5.

The $2,000 Blue Ridge handicap, a six furlong event for all ages which was featured at Laurel, went to a long shot, J. E. Davis' Polish. Polish came from behind in the stretch to beat out Oh Susanna by three fourths of a length. The Heathen took third. Oh Susanna had a rough trip, being bumped and crowded out of a possible victory in the stretch. The winner was held at $20.90 to win the mutuels.

The victory of Captain Haney, paying $41.24 for a $2 mutuel ticket, provided the most interesting feature at Hawthorne although it was not in the best race. Captain Haney beat out Indra and Sphere, both held at better odds. The fifth race, the best on the card, went to Joy Ball in a close finish. Wacker Drive took second and Montanaro, third. Joy Ball came up on the outside in the last sixteenth of the 1 1-16 mile race to snatch the victory.

Good Shepherd, owned by Mose Goldblatt, turned in the best race over a heavy track at Latonia to take the Miami Valley purse.

Yale Frosh Basketball Slate

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23—(AP)—Yale freshman basketball schedule released today, carries the following games:

December 7, Warren Harding high of Bridgeport; December 18, Wilbur; January 9, Naugatuck high; January 14, Connecticut Aggies; February 2, Milford; 15, Princeton freshmen; 19, Roxbury; 23, Weaver high; 26, Roxbury at Cheshire; March 2, Andover; 4, Harvard freshmen at Cambridge; 9, Central high of Bridgeport.

Sekyra Gets Verdict

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23—(AP)—Yale university boxing dates have been completed and their schedule released today. The schedules: February 9, New Hampshire; February 16, Georgetown; February 23, Dartmouth at Hanover; March 2, Army; March 9, Penn at Philadelphia.

DARTMOUTH DRILLS ON FORWARD PASS GAME

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 23—(AP)—Forward passing was stressed to the exclusion of everything else here today, when Head Coach Jesse Hawley sent his Dartmouth varsity football team through a long signal drill and a session of defense formations against Harvard plays.

Bart McDonough, regular quarterback, ran the Big Green machine, which marched up and down the field for more than an hour and went through every play in its repertoire.

Hawley believes that his team has perfected its defensive game and for the rest of the week he will strive to polish up its defense. Al Marsters, Dartmouth's great halfback, was at his old post during the signal drill. He then turned his job over to Eddie Reice and spent the remainder of the session heaving forwards to Wolff. Booma, regular end, was unable to appear in uniform today, following his attempt to get back into action yesterday, and it was apparent that he would be unable to play against Harvard next Saturday.

YALE SQUAD WORKS OUT IN A POURING RAIN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23—(AP)—Yale went through a stiff practice session today in spite of a pouring rain that quickly drenched all the players. After a snappy kicking and passing drill on a muddy field, the Eli freshman eleven were given the ball against the varsity for the first scrimmage this week. The yearlings were given possession of the pigskin on the varsity five yard line with instructions to get it over. They did, on three occasions, and were held by the first string men an equal number of times.

The weather today gave the varsity squad a chance to handle the ball in wet weather as the field and the ball were sloppy and this was the first time this year that Coach Mal Stevens has had an opportunity to drill his charges in the art of holding a soggy pigskin.

The infirmary at Yale is taking no chances with the injured men and Kell, Oldt, and Wilson are being carefully handled to be in shape for the Army game this week.

DE VOS AND HUDKINS ARE MATCHED FOR DEC. 10TH

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—Rene De Vos, Belgian battler, who has whipped every headliner in the middleweight division with the exception of the champion, Mickey Walker, and Ace Hudkins, was matched today to box ten rounds with the Nebraska Wildcat in Madison Square Garden Dec. 10. An effort will be made to match the winner and Walker for a title match here.

Cornell Practices Indoors

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 23—(AP)—Rain curtailed Cornell's football practice session this afternoon, upsetting the week's program and forcing the scheduling of a scrimmage for tomorrow. Thursday's workout will be light, the squad entraining for Princeton that night.

Indoor instruction, outdoor passing, and a signal drill constituted this afternoon's menu. Coach Doble withheld announcement of the eleven to start against the Tigers Saturday.

A Challenge.

The Greeneville school football team would like a game Friday, Oct. 26, with Elizabeth Street school at Mohegan park. Game at 4 p. m. Answer in Friday's paper.

Opposes Roosevelt For Governor Of New York

Attorney General Albert Ottinger, of New York, who has been nominated by the Republicans for governor. He will be opposed by Franklin D. Roosevelt, who has accepted the Democratic nomination.

PARACHUTE JUMPER HAS CLOSE ESCAPE FROM DEATH

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 23—(AP)—James J. McFadden, parachute jumper, has had his greatest thrill and, incidentally, his closest escape from death.

McFadden, who was recovering in a hospital today from concussion of the brain, went aloft yesterday in a balloon as a special "stunt" for the Georgia state fair.

A throng watched him leap from the balloon, at a lofty altitude and drop downward. Later the spectators said that his parachute had failed to open.

Helplessly they stood by, watching the jumper sprawling earthward at a terrific speed, until he finally disappeared on top of a large canvas tent which covered the main show of a circus.

McFadden, it was found had landed on the canvas, head downward, but had escaped with only a slight concussion of the brain. He was expected to be released from the hospital soon.

GENERAL STRIKE IN LODZ IS DYING OUT

WARSAW, Oct. 23—(AP)—Advices tonight from Lodz, where a general strike was called in sympathy with textile workers seeking 15 to 20 per cent wage increases, were that the movement was dying out. Messages stated that slim larders in the workers' homes were sending the men back to work in increasing numbers. It was understood that street car men and other municipal employes had resumed their posts and that some of the textile factories had reopened with their old hands at the machines.

Personal Pilot to Mussolini

TURIN, Italy, Oct. 23—(AP)—Manor Arturo Ferrarin, noted Italian flier, has been promoted to lieutenant-colonel and has been summoned to Rome to act as Premier Mussolini's "personal pilot in waiting," ready to take the duce on any of his impromptu flights.

Ferrarin was the companion of Capt. Carlo Del Prete on a long flight across the South Atlantic last July from Italy to Brazil. Captain Del Prete later died from injuries which he received in a plane crash in Brazil.

Will Investigate Mrs. Willebrandt

Representative Loring Black, Democrat of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has announced that as a member of the committee on campaign expenditures he will insist upon a "full investigation" of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt's speechmaking activities. Mr. Black also said he wanted to find out who was responsible for the Assistant Attorney General's tour to determine the backers of "this campaign of bigoted literature against Governor Smith."

LABOR RALLY HELD AT TOWN HALL TUESDAY EVE.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 23—The labor rally which was held at the town hall this evening was sponsored by the Rhode Island Labor bureau, and was part of the national democratic committee work. The arrangements for the meeting were made by Adam Sawyers, vice chairman of the Rhode Island Labor bureau.

RALLIES OF MAJOR PARTIES INDICATE LIVELY ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 23—In Westerly and vicinity, rallies are being held by both major parties and the prospects are for a bitter fight at the polls on Nov. 6. In Memorial hall at Shannock Monday evening there was a big republican gathering. South county was invaded by prominent G. O. P. orators, including Governor Norman S. Case, Judge Felix Hebert, James Connolly, Attorney Charles P. Sisson, A. L. Gardner, chairman of the republican state central committee and Roy Rawlings.

An appeal to the people of South county to send republicans to the general assembly was made by Mr. Rawlings, who stated that it was ridiculous to send any democrats, for their influence amounted to nothing, being a part of the small minority.

At South Kingstown, Congressman Richard S. Aldrich of the second congressional district, speaking in his opponent's home town, told his audience that Rhode Island had done much for the farmers and asked his hearers if they favored the democratic farm relief bill, which would sell the over-production of food in this country to the people of the old world at any prices it would bring.

Wednesday's list of rallies is headed by the democratic gathering at Burdick hall, Bradford, at 8 o'clock. Among the list of well known speakers are Senator Peter G. Gerry, Attorney Robert E. Curran, John P. Hartigan, candidate for attorney general of Rhode Island and George A. Dolan, candidate for senator from Westerly. An address in Italian will be given by Pasquale Di Caprio, of Providence. This will be the only democratic rally in Bradford before election and arrangements have been made for a large turnout.

Alexander McCurdy, Jr., organist of the Second Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, gave an organ recital at the home of Mrs. William D. Hoxie of Elm street, Monday evening a recital is the annual opening feature of the Westerly Music club season. Mr. McCurdy was ably assisted by Miss Olive Marshall, soprano.

SIX SONS BEARERS AT JOHN MELLOW'S FUNERAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 23—Funeral services for John Mellow, a resident of Westerly for forty five years, were held this afternoon at River Bend chapel, Rev. B. U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church officiating. Mr. Mellow died Sunday at the home of his daughter at Gales Ferry. The bearers were six sons, John, Samuel, Fred, Thomas, David and Ernest Mellow. Burial was in River Bend cemetery, Westerly.

BLOCK ISLAND RESIDENT EXPIRES SUDDENLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 23—Edward S. Payne, 75, one of the more prominent citizens of Block Island died suddenly last night at his farm on the southeast side of the island. He was relaxing in a chair, following supper and was suddenly stricken with heart failure. He had been president of the town council for the past ten years and was one of the leaders in the republican party. He was believed to be the largest property owner on the island.

It was planned to hold a Hallowe'en costume party in the auditorium of the parochial school, at a meeting of the ushers of the Church of the Immaculate Conception held Monday night. James Jessop is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

NOANK

DANCE HALL TEAM TIES SCORE WITH WATERBURY

Dance Hall football team members are back on their home field, after two weeks on the road, with the Fighting Irishmen of Waterbury. Making the fishing village in several automobiles, at 10 o'clock, Monday morning. Since the hotels have been closed for the winter there is no place for the football team to rest before the game starts. Through the kindness of President Rollin Bathbun, of the Aunt Sarah Peabody club, the visiting players were let use the rooms on Beacon street while in the village. Coach Bert Daniels told his men to look the town over and be back by 11 o'clock for lunch and down to the town dock to see the fishing boats come in. Three star players of the team for the first time, saw a lobster. They had the fishermen laughing trying to find out all about the salt water lobster. Getting back in time for lunch and to get ready to go out to Duan's field, at 3 o'clock, Referee Walter Welles called both captains together. A coin was tossed to see what goal to pick. The Fighting Irishmen won the toss and took the east goal, also said "we will kick off!" As the whistle blew the battle was on and 300 fans were ready to cheer the Dance Hall team to victory. Making a long kick, Ten-Yard Coon, for Waterbury, sent the ball high in the air. Cannonball Roberston caught the ball and ran it for 15 yards before a green jersey player got him, trying the air line on forward passes with Listen In L. Sullivan throwing them. The Dance Hall team lost the ball on downs, and the green jersey players were all set to show the Black Bottom dancers a thing about football. Whistling Campbell made an 80-yard run, knocking off man after man for a touchdown and giving the boys from Waterbury six points. The extra point was blocked and what a hand he got from the crowd—like Red Grange in his college days! The first half was over with the score Waterbury 6, Dance Hall team 0. Coach Hurry-Up Bentley told his players they were only Boy Scouts and to get in and play and show the Fighting Irishmen something. "Where have the four horsemen in the backfield gone to?" "A picture show?" The third quarter was on and the Dance Hall team got busy and pulled off some good runs but could not hit the line, for it was a regular stone wall, nothing going by. The final quarter found the score 6 to 0, in favor of Waterbury. Coach Bentley sent in Light-Horse H. Brown, in place of Quarterback E. Butson, who got hurt and had to be helped off the field. One minute was left to play. Ten-Yard Coon made a fumble on the 15-yard line scooping up Light-Horse Brown on his way and making an 85-yard run for a touchdown. The game ended in a tie score, Waterbury 6, Dance Hall team 6.

Capt. Arthur Rafuse, 65, died at his home Monday morning after a few weeks' illness. He was born in Nova Scotia but was a citizen here for 34 years. At one time he worked in the ship yard as a rigger and sent many boats out with full sail. Leaving the ship yard he went to New York and got a job as captain on a coal barge for the Lehigh Wilkesbarre line, remaining there for 26 years. He never had a vacation. He saw some bad storms on the ocean where many barges went down. Captain Rafuse was a devoted husband and father, also a well liked man in the village. He was a member of Charity and Relief lodge, No. 73, A. F. & A. M. of Mystic. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Nellie Rafuse, a daughter, Miss Janet Rafuse and a son, Fred Rafuse, of Noank.

Mrs. Charles Fitch has returned from a short visit with Providence relatives.

Boone Spink is confined to his home by illness.

New Crossing Signals

The railroad company has put in automatic signals. Several men have been working for a number of weeks setting the new signals, north of the station, and south of the Main street crossing. The lights operated from them signals tell when a train is coming, making a good help for the crossing-tenders on a foggy night and they are a warning to the many who go over the crossing.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

With another week of favorable weather for building operations much progress was made on local building projects. Contractors at the present time report that they are rushed with work that must be completed before the cold weather sets in or at least be brought to a point where operations can proceed despite the freezing temperatures. This year there has been a large amount of building done in Norwich, both in the city as well as in the town. It is noticeable the way buildings are springing up in the outlying sections of the town while there is fewer houses being built in the city limits. On Harland road and on the old Canterbury turnpike houses are being erected and before the cold weather halts construction work many will have been completed.

The largest of the building contracts in the city proper is the new Masonic temple at the corner of Washington and Sachem streets. This building is being brought along at a rapid rate in an effort to get the construction work to a point where it will be possible to continue through the winter without endangering the work. All during the past week workmen were engaged in pouring cement for the roof and when this is completed and the windows either set in place or boarded up it will be possible to continue with the interior work. Electricians are engaged in installing conduits for the lighting of the building.

Contractor P. F. Sweeney is rushing the work on the new building on Main street for the Metropolitan Chain Stores Inc. Work of pouring the cement for the foundations has been going on during the past week and it is expected that the brick work will start early next week. The company expects that the building will be ready for occupation about the middle of December.

Contractor Archibald Torrance is well along on the brick addition to the Thermos Bottle plant and expects to have the work completed before the extreme weather.

On the West Side two houses being erected by H. J. Montie are fast nearing the completion stage. The houses have been boarded in and the interior work is being done.

Other dwelling houses of frame construction that are being built in the city are progressing with favorable speed. The new athletic building for the Norwich Free Academy is well along, the concrete foundation having been poured and the work on the superstructure wil start this week or early next week. Peck McWilliams Co. has the contract. This company also has the contract to remodel the Uncas bank building on Shetucket street and work here is progressing rapidly.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 19 sales of real estate, an increase of nine sales over the corresponding week of 1927. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $91,350 and $39,185.

There were nine sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to six sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $115,113 and $35,710.

New London

With a dozen new houses being built in the vicinity of Thames street a veritable building boom is under way in that section of the city. Already nearly a score of new houses have been completed in that neighborhood within the past two years and indications now are that there will be at least 20 more there in another year. Not a few of the new houses are on Thames street, on that property formerly included in Plant field and now being developed by the Plant Field Realty company. New streets have been cut through the old ball park and circus grounds. At the present time there are four new homes being built on these new streets.

Besides this new building centering around the Plant field development there has been a dozen new homes built in that part of Montauk avenue and at least a half dozen in that immediate vicinity in Ocean avenue.

Work is rapidly nearing completion on the construction of a two-family house being built at Montauk avenue and Moore avenue for Rose Verdi. The new structure is of frame construction with the upper half being finished with green stained shingles and the lower half with cream colored wide clapboards. A bay window for both floors on the west side enhance the general appearance. There are six rooms and bath on each of the two floors besides three rooms in the attic. An open veranda extends across the entire front for the first floor and an open veranda extends across half the front for the second floor. A cobblestone garage suitable for the housing of two automobiles has been erected on the property with access to Moore avenue. A steam heating system has been installed. The top floor has been entirely completed and work is now being finished on the first floor interior.

Interior trim is being done in the duplex house which Nassetta Bros. have built on Thames street. Each side of the house has six rooms and a tile bath. There is a brick fireplace in each side. Hard wood floors are laid in both sides. The walls are finished smooth and are tinted. The exterior is finished in stained shingles. The house is built to form a peak at the top of the roof. There are large dormer windows in both the front and rear. The roof is covered in color blend composition shingles. A two-car garage has been built in the rear of the house, the exterior trim being the same as the dwelling.

Building Permits

Alfred Rowland, bungalow, Oneco avenue, $5,500.

James King, garage, Whittlesey street, $600.

Gillette-Vibber Co., sand bin and dipping room, Maple avenue, $1,500.

Antonio Bassillico, alterations, 158 Shaw street, $125.

John Aitchison, garage addition, 208 Broad street, $100.

Number of permits issued for the week, 5; estimated cost of buildings, $7,825.

Quaker Hill

Three windows grouped together have been placed in the south side of the residence part of the building occupied by Louis Ginsberg at Quaker Hill. An exterior stairway has also been placed from the ground to a second story entrance door on the south side of the structure. The ground floor of the building is occupied by a store conducted by Mr. Ginsberg. The second floor is his residence.

Groton

This week has seen a big improvement job in the yard of the Spicer Ice and Coal Co., in Groton, near completion. The work is the laying of 9,000 square feet of concrete, like a great permanent flooring, in the company's yard. The yard has formerly had a dirt top which has become muddy, and at times practically impassable in some instances. Much of the mud was caused by washing of ice. The company decided to rectify the condition, so the laying of a concrete surface was determined upon.

Before the laying of the concrete was started, tile drainage pipes were laid to care for waste water.

Work is also progressing on the building of an addition to the company's office building in Thames street, Groton. The addition framework is enclosed and the structure has been roofed over.

Westerly

Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi have issued building and zoning permits up to the middle of October as follows:

Oct. 6. Lawrence Casey and James Doherty, Burden's pond. Summer camp, 10 by 12 feet. By owners.

Oct. 6. Mrs. Elizabeth G. Peck, 15 Tower street. Reshingle roof of laundry at 15 Tower street with slate-coated shingles.

DIAMONDS VALUED TO $65,000 RECOVERED FROM PLANE WRECK

CH. CITY, Pa., Oct. 23—(AP)—Diamonds valued at $65,000, part of the jewels with an estimated worth of $100,000 that were being transported by Air Mail Pilot William C. Hogan when his plane crashed at Polk last Thursday had been recovered tonight, postal authorities announced. Many of the diamonds were picked from the debri by sightseers while others were located by postal inspectors who examined the ruins of the ship in which Hogan fell to his death.

Fifteen diamonds were turned over to Postmaster H. G. Johnson here tonight by a Titusville resident and Postal Inspector W. H. Tafel of Erie said he had the names of 60 other persons reported to have found some of the gems. He said they would be given until Wednesday noon to turn them in. After that time, Tafel said, warrants would be issued.

SINGULAR PROVISIONS BY PRINCETON BENEFACTOR

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 23—(AP)—Henry G. Granger, of Buskirk, near here, has deposited in the People's National bank of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., $100 to promote and improve the educational facilities of Princeton university where he was graduated in 1893 and played on the football team. The term of the deposit is 1,000 years.

Each year half the interest will be sent to Princeton, the other half added to the principal. The donor provides that in case the accumulating interest should in the course of centuries reach a sum in excess of the needs of Princeton, the university may allocate the balance to public objects as it sees fit.

In 90 years the accumulation in the bank, exclusive of what goes annually to Princeton, will be $1,820,301; in 185 years, $102,731,20; in 504 years, $9,496,970,640.40. These computations were made by the bank of deposit, which also announces that at its 1000 year maturity the deposit would have grown beyond the power of human computation.

It is doubt about an experiment get some other fellow to try it first

Celebrating the Birthday of the Century

JUST a year ago—on October 27, 1927—Hupmobile startled automotive circles with the announcement of a new beauty and a new value in moderately priced six and eight cylinder motor cars.

In their first month, Hupmobile Century Sixes and Eights broke all previous records in Hupmobile history. Month after month, new high sales peaks were recorded culminating early in July with totals that surpassed all of the previous year's production.

To signalize the greatest year in Hupmobile's 20 years of fine car manufacture, we announce a special Anniversary Showing of the complete new 1929 line of Century Sixes and Eights at our Showrooms.

Come in and view them at your leisure—then drive any of the forty-two standard and custom-equipped body styles now available. Prove to yourself that Hupmobile with its brilliantly refined 1929 models is still a year ahead in every quality by which motor car values are judged.

Forty-two body and equipment combinations, standard and custom, on each line. Six of the Century, $1345 to $1645. Century Eight, $1825 to $2125. All prices f. o. b. Detroit.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

The Caged Chipmunk

To see a chipmunk spin
His weary round
Within a man-made wheel
Pats man to shame
And God to scorn.

It is an evil thing
When men will stand,
And gape and grin,
To see the frantic little thing
Spin out his hundredth mile or more;
And seek in vain an open door.
—Isadora Kerr.

The Hermit Crab

With the sound of the sea
I fill my shell,
I fill my shell,
My shell,
My shell . . .
The sea can sing so solemnly,
Can sing so well,
So well,
So well . . .

The storm winds sing their songs to me,
What they sing belongs to me,
To me who dwell
Below the swell,
And with their songs I fill my shell
Beneath the sea,
Beneath the sea;
with their songs I fill my shell
Below the swell,
Beneath the sea.
—Robert Hyde, in The Dial.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES

The bat is a most interesting little animal. It is the only mammal which really flies. Over the long fingers and along the sides of the body to the legs and tail is stretched a thin membrane. This gives the mouselike animal great power in flying.

The bats also have such a well developed sense of touch that they can feel objects in their flight and dodge them without actual contact. Delicate hairs on their wings are affected by the slight rebound of air from such objects, and the connecting nerves respond at once.

Some very large bats of the tropics feed upon fruits, but our bats are all insect feeders and deserve protection as do our song-birds. When they first come out at twilight they are hungry and one sees them darting about very actively in pursuit of mosquitoes and other insects on the wing. The first to appear is the big brown bat, then the redbat, the silvery bat, and the hoary bat.

After hanging up by their hind feet all day asleep in some dark place, bats are not only hungry but thirsty when they wake up and they drink a great deal of water, because they are so active. They do not use it for bathing, however, but lick themselves all over like a cat and wash their faces with the front part of the wing. If their fur is rumpled, they comb it out neatly with the sharp claws on their hind feet.

Our commonest and largest species is the big brown bat, which ranges over most of the continent from Labrador to Alaska southward to Florida and California. It is very fond of caves, being abundant in the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky. During the winter many of these bats migrate from the north to the warmer parts of the south where they hibernate. The young of the species, one or two in number, are born in June, and are carried about by the mother for about two weeks. When three months old, they can fly about and catch their own food.

The red bat, which is of very wide distribution, may be recognized at once by its glossy, orange-red fur. It is four inches long and has a wing-spread of a foot. It begins its hunt for insects in early twilight, and, instead of hiding away in caves during the day, it hangs to the twigs and leaves of trees in the full glare of the sun.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

The Life of Columbus

Dear Uncle Jed: Columbus day is Friday. I'm going to tell you his life.

Christopher Columbus was born in Genoa, Italy. When he was a little boy he used to sit down by the sea and watch the boats come in and go out. Often he would talk to the sailors.

Columbus wanted to be a sailor and go to sea when he became a man.

His father was a wool comber. They were not very rich people; in fact, quite poor.

Later Columbus went to school and studied map-drawing, geography and mathematics. Maybe he studied others, too.

In those days most of the people believed that the earth was flat and thought if anyone sailed on the sea they would fall off. Columbus believed that the earth was round.

As he became a man he wanted to find a new route to India. He believed that by sailing west he would reach the Indies.

Of course, he didn't have any money or ships or sailors. So he went to the king of Spain. The king said that he was crazy and would not lend him any money.

Columbus went to Queen Isabella, but she would not help him. Finally she did give him some money, ships and sailors.

Columbus started off from Palos, Spain, and hoped to reach the Indies. His three ships were the Pinta, Nina and Santa Marie.

They sailed for many days. His men grew mutinous and angry. They wanted to turn back but Columbus would not.

After many days hope came. One morning before daylight one of the sailors spied a light in the distance. He quickly woke the rest and all came out to see the light. It grew larger and larger. As daylight came they saw land in the distance. In the morning they landed and all fell on their knees to thank God that they were safely on land. Columbus took possession of the land for Spain.

There were men on the land with dark skin. Columbus called them Indians, because he thought he had landed in the Indies. He also named the place San Salvador. This all happened in 1492.

But Columbus found no spices and gold that they had been seeking, for Columbus had told the queen that he would bring back spices and gold.

He took some Indians and started back for Spain. The queen was displeased because he did not find gold and spices.

He made three other voyages. Finally the king put him in prison because he didn't find spices and gold.

Columbus died not knowing that he had found a new continent which we now live in.

Goss Fishing.

Dear Uncle Jed: Last Saturday afternoon my brother and I went fishing in a pond near our house. There is a rowboat that we go fishing in. The boat is made of heavy boards which were not put together right and it makes it go to the right. We seldom use the oars, but have made some paddles out of old boards. We have gotten so that we can go along pretty fast.

We do not catch very large fish; the largest we catch are pickerel. I like to catch the bullheads, because they are easy to skin. Once in a while we catch an eel but not very often. We see large turtles almost every time we go fishing but do not try to catch them. I hope I can go fishing next Saturday, but I guess I'll go picking walnuts. May I write again and tell you how many I picked?

The Kingfisher.

Dear Uncle Jed: The kingfisher bird is known by its brilliant coloring, large head, backward-turning crest, long pointed bill, short tail and legs. The best known American species is called the belted kingfisher. In summer it ranges all through North America, and in winter it flies south.

The bird is about twelve inches long from tip of bill to end of tail. The color above is a deep blue or blue gray, the under parts are white. A broad collar of blue crosses the breast. Fishermen may depend upon this bird to know where fish are plentiful. It spends hours sitting on a branch. The kingfisher's nest is found in the walls of clay or in the sand.

About Columbus.

Dear Uncle Jed, and the Wide Awakes: I am writing about Christopher Columbus. Columbus was born in Genoa, Italy. When he was a boy he liked to be at the shore when the boats came in. He liked to see the sailors bring in silks, spices and other things from different countries. He knew that some of the things they brought came from Asia.

When he was a young man he became a sailor. He used to ask himself if anybody could find a way by water to reach the Indies. After many years he said, "As long as the world is round like a ball, there is no reason why I can't sail west to the Indies myself." At first he didn't want to tell anybody about his plan for the Atlantic Ocean had a bad name at that time. It was called the Sea of Darkness. He thought the people would think him crazy, but after waiting for a long while he told King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella about his plan. They furnished him with three ships. He named these ships the Pinta, Nina and Santa Maria. He was captain of one of them. He had sailors with him and the other two captains of the other two ships had sailors with them. They went first to the Canary Islands, supposing that would be the shortest way across the Atlantic.

The sailors who went with him were brave men. When they saw the land of Spain fading away they turned and looked at it. Some of them covered their eyes and cried, for they thought they would never see Spain again.

One day they saw branches floating on the water. One of the sailors picked up a piece of stick which looked as though it had been cut with a knife. At night Christopher Columbus saw a light. In the morning one of the sailors shouted "Land! Land!" They rowed their boats to the shore. When they stepped on land, Columbus with the sailors kneeled on the sand. They gave thanks to God. The island was one of the Bahamas. Columbus named it San Salvador.

The naked, brown skinned people who lived there, Columbus named Indians.

The next spring Columbus went back to Spain. The people thought when he came back he would have his ships loaded with goods from Asia.

Later Columbus made three more voyages, but he couldn't get to Asia. He said there was a strip of land in his way. After trying he gave up hope and went back to Spain where he died.

In one way he had failed, but in another he had succeeded, for he discovered America in fourteen-ninety-two.

My Trip to Groton Long Point.

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you about my trip to Groton Long Point. We started one Sunday morning early for Groton Long Point. It was very foggy as we got to Groton. But as the day went on it cleared up. When we came to the cottage we went barefooted and went in getting mussels. Later on we went crabbing and fishing and rowing. Soon the sun started to come out and we went in swimming. The water was cold at first but after we got wet it was all right. Very late in the evening we started home very tired.

A Way to Print.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am about to write another letter for the Wide Awake Circle. It is entitled "One Way to Print."

To print you first have to learn the different boxes which hold the different letters. Next, set up the type in what you call a stick, which is a metal case. When the stick is full you put the type in what is called a galley. After your story is finished you take a proof of it and hand it to the reader who marks out the mistakes. Next you correct them and set them into a form which is an iron square that holds the type. Then you put in the coins and tighten them up with a key and it is all ready for the press.

The paper is cut to suit certain measurements and is set on a stand beside the press, and the printer runs them through. I hope every one will enjoy my description.

My Vacation.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my summer vacation. During my vacation I stayed with my sister who lives on a farm. She has a baby boy. I played with the baby and had fun. Most every night I would go to the barn and get milk. I liked to watch the cows come in. I had many pleasant times up there.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Peter Follows His Nose
By THOMAS W. BURGESS

Who to his task himself doth lend
Will be triumphant in the end.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit reached the Green Forest in safety. Then he began to look for his cousin, Jumper the Hare. The first one he met was Prickly Porky the Porcupine. Peter dearly loves to be a carrier of news. "Have you heard that Jimmy Skunk is lame because someone attacked him?" Peter inquired.

Prickly Porky merely grunted and started up a tree. It was very clear that Prickly Porky wasn't the least bit interested in Jimmy Skunk.

A little farther on Peter met Bobby Coon. "Have you heard the news, Bobby?" cried Peter.

"I haven't the least idea," replied Peter

"Do you suppose there is anyone who hasn't heard it?" retorted Bobby. "You are a little late, Peter, a little late. Sammy Jay has already been here."

Peter looked a little disappointed, but wasn't altogether surprised. "Who do you suppose did it, Bobby?" he asked.

"Someone who was willing to take a chance, and who there is who would want to take such a chance, I can't think," replied Bobby.

Peter went along. Pretty soon he met Jumper the Hare. Before he could open his mouth to ask Jumper if he had heard the news, Jumper said; "Yes, Peter, I've heard the news. Now who do you suppose could have been so foolish?"

"I haven't the least idea," replied Peter. "I wish I had. But I'm going to find out. Yes, sir, I'm going to find out."

"How are you going to find out?" asked Jumper.

"I don't know," replied Peter. "I just am, that's all."

So Peter continued on his way through the Green Forest, asking all the people whom he met if they knew who had been bold enough to attack Jimmy Skunk. Always he got the same answer—"No." He discovered that it was the talk of the Green Forest. You see, everyone knows Jimmy so well, and has so much respect for that little scent-gun he carries, that no one could imagine anyone being rash enough to attack Jimmy. So the puzzle was as much a puzzle as ever. Peter had even gone as far as the pond of Paddy Beaver without getting even a hint as to who it could have been.

It was after he left the pond of Paddy the Beaver and was taking a short cut through a rather lonely part of the Green Forest that he suddenly stopped and stretched his nose out—that wabbly little nose of his—and how it did wabble! Peter was smelling. Yes, sir, Peter was smelling!

"I declare," said Peter, "it seems to me I smell the scent of Jimmy Skunk. Now how can that be away over here? Jimmy isn't over here and hasn't been over here. He was hurt last night away over the other side of Farmer Brown's. Perhaps one of his children has been over here, or perhaps Mrs. Skunk has been over here, but I doubt it. This is curious, very curious indeed. I think I'll follow this up. Perhaps I'll find out something."

So, very carefully, Peter began to advance. All the time he was using his eyes and his ears and his nose. His eyes and his ears told him nothing, but his nose told him that someone with the scent of Jimmy Skunk certainly had been over in that part of the Green Forest very recently. The smell grew stronger. And Peter wondered and wondered. But he was nervous. Yes, Peter was nervous. So he would only take a hop or two and then stop, sit up, look and listen. But all the looking and all the listening told him nothing.

WHY HUGHES SUPPORTS HOOVER

ability, talent for cooperation, resourcefulness, humane and liberal spirit and capacity for leadership, every one of which is important."

Mr. Hughes, who in the past has spoken favorably of Governor Smith as New York's chief executive, asserted that the democratic candidate had a knowledge of the government of that state.

"But it is a poor argument," he continued, "which says that we should elect a governor because of his intimate knowledge of state affairs, but should not choose a president because of his rare and intimate knowledge of national affairs.

"While Smith has been working at Albany, Hoover has been working in Washington. It is said that Smith is a quick learner. So is Hoover. In his knowledge of the problems of the nation, Hoover starts years ahead. If Smith were elected, it would take him years to learn what Hoover knows now."

Issues of the Campaign

Turning to the issues of the campaign, Mr. Hughes found that "the real issues" were few. Commenting on what he termed "the sham battle over prohibition," he said that Governor Smith knew he had no chance of election without the votes of the dry south.

"He is trying," continued Mr. Hughes, "to gain the presidency by getting enough wet votes in the north and east to add to the essential dry votes of the south. The drys are asked to support him on the ground that he can do nothing, and the wets because he can do much. This is not to my mind a very commendable enterprise.

"We cannot escape, if we would, the varities of the situation. The 18th amendment is in the constitution. It is validly there. It will take the votes of 36 states to change it. No scientific definition of intoxicating liquor can be framed which will permit intoxicating liquors to be made and sold in this country contrary to the constitution. There is nothing within the limits of any possible valid definition which would satisfy the demands of the wets. That is the actual situation and no amount of talk will change it.

"I do not say that the election of Governor Smith would not greatly intensify the demand for a change. I believe that it would also greatly impede efforts at enforcement. But insistent demands for changes would be met by insistent opposition, in which democratic drys would play their part. We should have much agitation, much confusion, increased demoralization and no better, but, I think, less actual enforcement. Meanwhile, the constitution would continue to stand inexorable in its requirements and subject to amendment only by the action of 36 states. For this reason I call this a sham battle."

Mr. Hughes found no issue in honesty. "The republican party," he said, "was betrayed in its own house, but prosecutions have been had, conducted by able counsel selected by President Coolidge to redress the wrongs committed. The republican party is composed of millions of our fellow citizens who believe in its policies as being of advantage to the country.

Hoover A Capable Leader

"If these policies are sound, if Herbert Hoover is an honorable and capable leader it is futile to suggest that they be abandoned and the country entrusted to another and less capable leadership because of wrongs committed in the past which have been the subject of regular and strongly pressed legal proceedings instituted and carried through under the present administration.

"Neither President Coolidge nor Secretary Hoover is in any way responsible for these wrongs."

Mr. Hughes could find no trace of the league of nations issue in the democratic platform, nor any "definite issue as to foreign affairs."

"The democratic platform," he added, "speaks of further efforts for the limitation of armament, but presents no program."

With respect to Latin-America, Mr. Hughes said that the democratic party and Governor Smith seemed "to forget the record of the last democratic administration."

"It was that administration," he continued, "which intervened in Santo Domingo and Haiti. The republican administration inherited that situation and demonstrated its anti-imperialistic policy by partaking arrangements for a withdrawal from Santo Domingo which was adopted. We would leave Haiti if we could. We are trying to help Nicaragua at the instance of both contending parties in that country and in the interest of a fair election in order that an independent and stable government may be established."

Referring to the democratic plank declaring for protection of American lives and rights, Mr. Hughes recalled his statement made at the last Pan-American conference when as a delegate of the United States government he set forth the policy of this country toward Latin-America.

"That is the policy of the republican administration," declared the speaker.

"In the conduct of our foreign relations," he resumed, "we all desire co-operation with other nations in the interest of peace. We have given conclusive proof of that. The striking thing is that the republican administration has been in charge of foreign affairs for seven and a half years, a period of the greatest difficulty due to the unfortunate controversy which had arisen during the last democratic administration and to the problems incident to reconstruction following the war. From our opponents we have had a great deal of criticism and very little constructive suggestion.

"Now when the issues of this campaign were made up, with all that had been done and sought to be done, foreign relations, except for a little talk to small purposes, are virtually left out so far as any definite and important issue is concerned. Considering the deep interest of our people in foreign affairs, that is an extraordinary omission. I regard it as a notable, if perhaps unwilling, tribute to the republican administration."

Domestic Affairs Paramount

The paramount consideration in domestic affairs, he said, is the prosperity of the country. "The chief effort of our opponents is to make it clear that they intend no harm. For unless they can allay the anxiety which has been bred by their past utterances and performances, their promises to be good will receive but scant attention."

Apparently nothing so irritated the democrats, Mr. Hughes declared, "as to suggest that they plan a return to the conditions under the democratic tariff, a tariff for trouble only."

Quoting Governor Smith's mention of the Underwood tariff bill in the candidate's speech of acceptance, he declared:

"This reference was naturally taken to mean that Governor Smith favored the principle of the Underwood tariff bill, the last effective action of his party on this subject. But when this import was found in his words, his faithful friend and manager, Mr. Raskob, broke forth into profuse lamentations."

While Smith and Raskob were "trying to win the election by abandoning the historic tariff policy of the democratic party," Mr. Hughes said it was "quite apparent that the party itself through its effective representation in congress has not yet been converted."

The Tariff Problem

"I should like to see the tariff made as scientific as possible," he asserted, "without the sacrifice of the principle of protection. But the democratic party, as a party, has been opposed to the principle of establishing duties to afford protection against effective foreign competition. The democratic party which for generations has stood for a tariff for revenue only and in its last action for the principles and methods of the Underwood bill, a party whose leaders in congress continue to hold the same sentiments as those heretofore declared, cannot be trusted with carrying out the principle of protection to American interests.

"The principle of stimulating 'effective competition' through tariff changes would be especially injurious to our farmers. They need more protection and not less. This was shown in the operation of the Underwood tariff."

Mr. Hughes declared that the problem of farm relief was "most serious."

"But even here," he continued, "no definite issue is presented. Governor Smith says he stands on the democratic platform. When he has been pressed for an exact statement of his views he has stated that he would appoint a commission which would work out a program. Now, I have long been advised by the language of diplomats of what 'agreement in principle' means. Governor Smith has much to say about alibis, but the greatest of all alibis is 'agreement in principle.'

Agricultural Interests

"The truth is that the agricultural problem is most difficult. It requires for its solution the widest knowledge, keen appreciation of the vast importance of our agricultural interests, deep sympathy with those who are suffering from low prices and high costs, and a determination to do all that is sound and practicable to afford relief. It is not a matter for political quackery. The farmers will have nothing to gain from hat but disappointment and more misery.

"I believe that Mr. Hoover is the best man in the country to deal with this problem. . . . In what possible view can Governor Smith be preferred to Mr. Hoover to deal with an economic problem of this complexity? The experiences of Governor Smith's life, his aptitudes, his associations, have been remote from difficult problems in general and agricultural problems in particular.

"It is clear that we need leadership and special skill in finding remedies. There is no swift road to the goal we seek but I should rather have Mr. Hoover's guidance than that of any other man."

Hoover's Talent for Co-operation

Calling attention to Hoover's "talent for co-operation," his resourcefulness, capacity for leadership and experience in humane enterprises, Mr. Hughes declared:

"He is seeking to be president not because he wishes political control, or in the spirit of the lover of the political game, but because there is always before his view the myriad American homes with their toilers on farm, in factory, in trade, and he wishes to serve them. He thinks of our economic problems in terms of help or harm to these homes. Thus all his plans, which are directed to material gains, have a spiritual meaning, and one cannot understand Herbert Hoover without appreciating the fact that above all else he is an idealist."

The country's problems, is Mr. Hughes' opinion, are economic.

"The less that they are made the subject of political catchplay the better," he said. "At this stage of our history we need more than the background that we usually look for in a candidate for president with respect to general knowledge and political acumen. We need the general knowledge, the training and the talent suited to the nature of our exigencies. . . .

"It is said that Smith would call able and experienced men to his aid. But we are not electing these men. Hoover can call able and experienced men to his aid. We are not electing a cabinet. We are electing a president."

Praising the administration of President Coolidge and the prosperity which he said had accompanied it, Mr. Hughes added:

"If anyone can buttress our prosperity and extend it, that one is Herbert Hoover."

NO REPLY FROM THE BIG EARED WOMAN OF MARS

LONDON, Oct. 24—(AP)—Comarura, the big eared woman of Mars to whom Dr. Mansfield Robinson, psychic devotee, today addressed a wireless dispatch through the big station at St. Albans, had not answered the radio call up to 8.30 a. m., so far as could be learned here. The call was sent out at 2.15 a. m. and the engineers at St. Albans were listening on a 30,000 meter wave length for a reply.

MAN CHARGED WITH BEING COMMON SCOLD

LOCKHAVEN, Pa., Oct. 23—(AP)—In one of the few cases of the kind ever brought in Clinton county, Thomas W. Waliizer of Lockhaven, has been indicted for swearing and being a common scold. He will be tried on the swearing charge, but the grand jury ignored the bill charging him with being a common scold.

HOOVER CHARGED WITH BEING "EVOLUTIONIST"

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 24—(AP)—A new issue, that of evolution, has been raised in the presidential campaign.

The charge that Herbert Hoover is an "evolutionist" was made by Congressman Henry B. Steagall, in an address at Abbeville. The Alabama congressman declared he thought it "strange that orthodox ministers could vote for a man who believes in the evolution theory."

The supreme court announced that it would take a recess from October 29 to November 19.

What will You do when Your— Children Cry for Castoria

THERE is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria. At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of this soothing preparation. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and Baby is comfortable. A few moments, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. Yet this is a vegetable product; a remedy meant for youngsters. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless.

LOWER MONEY RATE RESULTED IN A BROAD UPWARD MOVEMENT IN MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—A general powering of money rates today was accompanied by a broad upward movement in the shares of such basic industries as steel, oil, copper and automotive. Rails also took a more prominent part in the rally. The advance was by no mean uniform, as heavy profit-taking again caused sharp recessions in some of the high-priced specialties.

Call money renewed at 6 per cent, the lowest opening rate since Sept. 28, and was in plentiful supply at that figure all day, despite the calling of 20,000,000 in bank loans. Time money was on a flat 6 3-4 per cent basis as against a ruling rate of 7 per cent last week. Federal Reserve officials indicated that the peak of the fall commercial demands had been passed and that easier rates could be looked for. The weekly bank statement is expected to show a further substantial decline in member bank rediscounts.

Although several commission houses continued to urge a lightening of long accounts, others pointed out that prospective stock dividend and merger action undoubtedly would provide a sustaining influence. One of the most significant developments of the day was a revival of activity and strength in the oil shares based on reports of excellent third quarter earnings by the refining companies and disclosure of further details regarding the proposed oil export association.

U. S. Steel common, which has been quiescent for the last fortnight, climbed nearly 5 points to within a fraction of its record high on reports of trade improvement. Sharp advances also were recorded by a few of the independent steels. Spang Chalfont mounted more than 7 points to a new high record at 48 1-8, and Crucible and Vanadium each sold more than 2 points higher. Directors of the Jones-McLaughlin company today declared an extra dividend of $1.

Atlantic Refining was again the leader of the oil group, soaring nearly 16 points to a new high record at 219 7-8, which contrasts with the low of 95 3-4 early this year. Pan-American and Sinclair issues changed hands in large volume at advancing prices on buying influenced by reports of progress in negotiations for a world curtailment program. Superior Oil which sold as low as 2 1-2 early in the year touched a new peak at 10 5-8, on buying influenced by new oil discoveries.

Eastman Kodak scored an extreme gain of 16 points on buying inspired by reports that experimental education through motion pictures has proven successful and that the company will start large scale production of the films.

Union Carbide ran up more than 7 points to a new peak at 197 3-8 on expectations of an early announcement of a stock dividend. Motor Products, which was weak yesterday, rallied 14 points.

Chrysler led the advance in the automotive group by climbing more than 5 points to 136 3-8, losing a point of its gain on profit taking. Nash advanced nearly 3 points, General Motors ran into heavy selling after crossing 220 and closed only fractionally higher at 218 3-8. New peak prices for the year or longer were registered by National Bellas Hess, Century Ribbon, Dunhill International, Mathieson Alkali, Grasselli Chemical, United Biscuit and Allied Chemical.

Case Threshing broke 7 points on one sale and Montgomery Ward, Midland Steel Products preferred, Advance Rumely, and Industrial Rayon fell back 2 to 4 points.

A further advance of 18 points in Japanese yen to 46.63 cents featured the firmer foreign exchange market. Sterling Cables ruled slightly higher around $4.85.

Commodity markets were mixed. Cotton started upward at the opening on reports of frost damage but ran into heavy realizing and closed about $1 a bale lower. Wheat futures advanced about a cent a bushel on reports of a better domestic demand. Sugar quotations held steady and coffee dropped 23 to 29 points.

Again We Cut Prices to a Still Lower Sensational Mark

Just four days longer and this greatest of all furniture sales will be past history. For these last few days we have gone through the entire stock and slashed prices to absolute rock bottom. You now have the unusual opportunity of buying furniture of the very highest grade, at a price that on many of the items is less than usual wholesale cost. These last four days will be banner thrift days for every shopper in Norwich. This remarkable offer on living room, dining room and bedroom suits is only one of the special features we have planned for these four days. Whatever your plans, be sure they include a visit to this store before Saturday, and waste no time, for such merchandise at these prices can't help but sell fast.

INVESTIGATE—COMPARE AND PROFIT

A SENSATIONAL OFFER SELDOM EQUALLED

It is only because we do things on a big scale that we are able to make such an unrivaled opportunity to the people of Norwich. We are not selling just ten living room suites, or even 20, but ONE HUNDRED. Volume, that's the answer why we can offer such an unusual merchandising opportunity such as this—the reason that our values are infinitely superior to any offered in the city.

A WONDERFUL VARIETY FROM WHICH TO CHOOSE

This great offer gives you a chance to select from a great variety of colors, patterns and designs. Every one of these suites is worth much more, and regularly sells for much more than $100. But it is useless for us to attempt to describe these sensational values. Come and see for yourself, that is the only way—we are so thoroughly convinced of these wonderful values that we gladly welcome your inspection of these suites—we know that you will agree with us and save yourself some real money.

CARD OF THANKS

When the hand of affliction rested heavily upon us through the illness, death and burial of a beloved husband, son and brother, Henry Trushonsky, many warm friends and neighbors displayed their sympathy by kindly acts and each one was appreciated. We take this meagre means of extending our thanks. To those who sent flowers we feel especially grateful. Time will never efface from our memories those Good Samaritan ministrations.

LIGHTS TO AID IN WAR ON LIQUOR RUNNERS

DETROIT, (AP)—Powerful searchlights are to strip away the somber blanket of night on the Detroit river, which cloaked the transportation of illicit liquors from Canada to the United States.

The stretch of the stream, that connects Lakes Huron and Erie, is to be illuminated by the prohibition forces from Grosse Isle on the western outskirts of Detroit to the head of Lake St. Clair at the eastern extremity, a distance of twenty miles. Each of the lights, now being erected, will throw a beam of light two miles.

The illumination of the river front will materially help close a liquor inlet, dry officials believe. They now have fast, well armed patrol boats on the river, but these are virtually powerless at night when rum runners unlighted and with motors throttled down scuttle across with their unlawful loads.

PURCHASED VALUABLE VIOLIN FOR FIVE DOLLARS

DURHAM, N. C., (AP)—Six years ago William E. Burgess, night desk sergeant at the Durham police station, paid $5 for a battered stringless violin.

Now he says he has refused many offers of $5,000 for the instrument, which is said to be a Stradivarius. Burgess traced the instrument to the time it reached this country in 1904. Customs records, the police sergeant said, showed it to have been brought over by J. C. Usennucker of New York city and Pittsburgh, Pa. The violin, Burgess said, was made in Cremore, Italy, in 1761, by Antonio Stradivarius, whose name is inscribed in the instrument.

Burgess said he bought the instrument because of a desire to learn to play a violin, intending to discard it later for a better one. He changed his mind when he learned of the violin's value, and has refused many offers of sale.

CREW AT SEA A YEAR SEES NO FOREIGN PORT

BEAMONT, Texas, (AP)—Riding at sea 365 days in a year but seeing no foreign port or strange land is the lot of the crew of the lightship Heald.

Manned by five men, the vessel is usually anchored "east, sou' east" of Galveston, in the words of its captain, D. H. McCluskey. The vigil of these seamen means safety to all ships in the western gulf traffic.

It is a lonely life for the sailors whose panorama of and endless stretch of water is broken only occasionally by the sight of another vessel, but they are quick to resent any intimation that they do not like the service.

"We have everything we need and just as comfortable as if we were on shore," the skipper declares.

NEW LONDON COLLECTOR ROUNDS UP TAXES DUE FOR OVER SIX YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—Tax Collector Hibbard N. Alexander today issued six more tax warrants, calling for the sale at public auction of residences and building lots, because the owners owe the city back taxes and have refused to pay the assessment levied against several properties. Some of the indebtedness is for six years.

Property owned by Louis C. Gadbois, a store and tenement, corner of Truman and Coit streets, is ordered to be sold Dec. 27, at 2 p. m. Gadbois owes the city on the levies of 1925, 1926 and 1927, the aggregate amount being $728.85.

Property owned by William N. and Eleanor H. Bellamy, Riverview avenue, a residence, is ordered to be sold Dec. 27 at 4 p. m. Bellamy and his wife owe $308.23, which represents the assessments of the levies of 1925, 1926 and 1927.

Giordaini and Orviolla Cesarini, Summer street, own a building lot ordered to be sold Dec. 28 at 9 a. m. The taxes due the city amount to $79.20 and are on the levies of 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927.

Property owned by Thomas H. and Annie Humphries at Oak Grove park, is ordered sold Dec. 27, at 6 p. m. Humphries and his wife owe $534.79 on two building lots and on the assessments of 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, and 1927.

The residence of Hugh Lloyd of Griswold court, is ordered to be sold Dec. 28 at 10 a. m. Lloyd owes taxes of $88.36, which represents the amount due the city on the levies of 1920, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927.

The residence of Rachel Schuman, Huntington street, is ordered to be sold Dec. 28 at 11 a. m. Mrs. Schuman owes the city on the levies of 1919 1926 and 1927 and the amount of the assessments aggregate $123.50.

Tax Collector Alexander has also issued releases of warrants which called for the sale of properties owned by Polo Rogers, Bank street; Pasquale Santangelo, Griswold court and Theodore and Haldor Olsen, Evergreen avenue. All have paid their respective back taxes, the largest amount being that owed by Rogers, which was $1250.

CREW OF DESTROYER WILL DIVIDE PRIZE MONEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—The crew of the destroyer Monoghan, at this port, are to receive the cash award of $5,300 for making the best battle practice exhibition off Florida recently. The award will be made here Saturday at 1 o'clock.

Final tabulation of figures in the registrars' office shows that this city has 11,100 registered voters, the largest number in history. There have been 2,039 new voters sworn in.

Charles Stebbins, run over Sunday night by an automobile on the Boston Post road near Golden Spur, is still in a critical condition at the Lawrence-Memorial hospital. He is suffering from a fractured leg and severe lacerations of the head, face and body.

John W. Flynn, proprietor of Niantic Garage, Niantic, has gone into bankruptcy. Assets are $2,390.57 against liabilities of $7,136.87.

The coast guard and navy will cooperate Saturday in the observance of Navy day. During the day all boats of both divisions will be open for inspection by the public.

Members of Circle No. 2 of the First Baptist church were entertained last night at a Halloween party given by Mrs. Ernest Tatro of Crystal avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Rose, with their daughter, Virginia, of Pequot avenue, have returned from a motor trip through the west and New York state. At the beginning of their trip they went to Yellow Springs, Ohio, where their son, Norman, entered Antioch college.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Dillon of Ridgewood Park were surprised last night by a number of friends on their 30th wedding anniversary. After an evening of games, dancing and music, a midnight supper was served by the hostess.

A large truck carrying a load of oil consigned to the submarine base, caught fire this morning shortly after passing Fort hill, Groton, and was badly damaged. An alarm was turned in and the Pioneer Hose company speeded up and quickly extinguished the blaze. The steering wheel and practically all of the woodwork of the truck was destroyed.

Work on the new Robert Fitch high school, Groton, is going forward rapidly. Brick work was started today and it is expected that the building will be completed ahead of scheduled time.

COURT GETS A SHAVE OF BOOTLEGGING PROFITS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—Mrs. Lillian Pozzello, wife of Frank Pozzello, 73 Woodbridge street, was charged in the city court today with violation of the liquor law and was fined $200 and costs. She paid. Mrs. Pozzello was arrested yesterday when the police raided her home upon information supplied by James "Dutch" Murphy, who had been arrested Saturday charged with theft. Upon the information furnished by Murphy, Mrs. Pozzello was fined, but the charge against Murphy was nolled. Murphy, George "Cowboy" Sheehan and Mrs. Mary Smith, the last named of Waterford went Saturday afternoon to the Pozzello residence where they purchased liquor from Mrs. Pozzello. As the raid upon the Pozzello home four cases of home brew beer, a gallon of alcohol and a quart of hooch was seized.

George Wesley, who was arrested yesterday by State Police Officer Donald Brown of Groton barracks, charged with evasion of responsibility as a result of Wesley driving away after his auto had collided with another machine, was released from custody today upon orders from Officer Brown.

Arrested for the 47th time on a charge of intoxication, a Colchester farm hand was presented in the police court this morning. Acting Judge John McGarry sent him to the workhouse for 10 days. The man went to police headquarters last night and was drunk. He admitted it and said that he was glad he was so. He wanted lodging, but instead of being placed in the tramp room, he was locked in a cell by Desk Sergeant Frank Howard.

Two other cases of intoxication were disposed of by leniency being displayed. One fellow, a sailor from the United States coast guard, arrested last night by a shore patrol, was taken back to the state pier for military discipline and another victim of drink was given a suspension of judgment.

SALE MADE NINE YEARS AGO, DEED RECORDED TUESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—A deed transferring property on Osoco avenue from the Thames Improvement company to Alden and Dorothea Dargatz was received for record at the office of the city clerk today. The property was sold nine years ago, but no record of the sale existed until today.

Morton and Joseph B. Olsen have sold a house and lot on Montauk avenue to Calagero Siracusa.

Mrs. Lucy Rossi, 98 Dean street, Providence, has requested the New London police to assist her in locating her husband, Nicolo, who has been absent from home since last July. Mrs. Rossi, who is especially anxious to find him because she is supporting five children informed the police that she received a postal card from her husband several weeks ago and he said that he was employed by a railroad here.

A Ford sedan has been parked on Grand street for several days and the owner of the auto is unknown to the police. The car, however was tagged today, so that the owner will probably be ordered to swell the city's treasury through prosecution in the police court.

LAW DID NOT BOTHER LEROY WATROUS, UNCASVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—Leroy Watrous, Uncasville, employed as a truck driver, was arrested this afternoon charged with driving without having a license. He was locked up and will be presented in the police court tomorrow. Watrous was arrested July 15, last, by Traffic Officer Dennis Cavanaugh on the same charge. The following day when Watrous was in court the case was continued to July 23 and he was allowed to go on his own recognizance. When the case was called on continuance, Watrous failed to present himself. It became known recently that Watrous was employed driving a truck and today it was ascertained that he was at the submarine base with the truck, which was receiving a shipment of goods for New York, State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh and Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin went to the base and arrested Watrous.

The condition of Joseph Barry, of Bayonet street, this city, who is employed in New York, owner of the automobile that overturned on a curve in Medison early Monday morning, resulting in the instantaneous death of John F. Sullivan, son of Mrs. Nellie Sullivan, 95 Hempstead street, and seriously injured Barry remains critical today at Guilford sanitarium. Barry has sustained internal injuries, besides numerous lacerations and bruises and whether he will recover will not be determined for two or three days. The body of Sullivan was brought to New London today for funeral and burial.

RAIN SPOILED PLANS BUT REPUBLICAN RALLY HELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—The rain tonight dampened the enthusiasm of the republicans, when it had been planned to hold an old-fashioned political parade in connection with the rally at Bulkeley auditorium. Because of the steady and heavy rain that fell from 5 until 8 o'clock, the parade did not take place. A band concert had been planned in front of the municipal building from where it was intended the parade should start, with red fire and flags. The rally, however, was held and was attended by a large assemblage of men and women.

The speakers were United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Hon. John B. Bartlett, first assistant post master-general and ex-governor of New Hampshire. Both speakers proved most interesting, arousing the enthusiasm of the listeners as they told forcibly why the voters should cast their vote for Herbert Hoover. The speakers referred largely to the tariff issue, the most important plank in the republican platform and urged the voters to weigh well the situation before considering a vote for the democratic nominee.

Morris Rice, Division 1, destroyer force, United States Coast Guard, stationed at the state pier, went to police headquarters this afternoon and admitted that he was the driver of the automobile which collided with the machine of Mrs. Burrows of Mystic, in this city several days ago and for which he was accused of evading responsibility and for whom arrest Mrs. Burrows requested. Rice admitted that his car collided with that of Mrs. Burrows, but stated that he was not guilty of evasion for after the accident he drove a short distance and parked his car in order to refrain from causing a congestion of traffic. He also stated that he reported the accident to the first officer he found, which was Traffic Officer Frank Linehan; and that officer corroborated that part of Rice's story.

MANAGER AND FREQUENTERS ARE ARRESTED AT "PECK'S"

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—The police this afternoon raided the club room at 16-18 State street, reputed to be owned by Nathan Peck, Bank street restaurant proprietor and arrested Max Markoff, in charge of the drinking place on a charge of violation of the liquor law, together with 10 frequenters. Markoff was held in bail of $1,000, which was furnished, for his appearance in the police court tomorrow. The frequenters, who gave their names as Chick Gaines, Chester Lund, Jacob Cohen, Richard Curran, Nicholas Clancy, Morris Tedford, E. B. Gess, Lester Kragg, Reuben Lubchansky and Isaac Goodwin, were held in bail of $25 each and will also be presented in court Wednesday.

The club room has been in existence but five or six weeks. Much talk was heard because of the drinking place, which is frequented principally by uniformed men, opening in such a conspicuous place as State street and the men connected with the club are said to have talked too freely of their venture. Last night a sailor was arrested when found intoxicated by a shore patrol and when the bluejacket was taken to the state pier, he informed his commanding officer that he had purchased his liquor at "Peck's". Other sailors had repeatedly made the same statement when questioned at the state pier as to where their liquor was purchased. This afternoon Detective Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh and Patrolmen Walter O'Neill and Cornelius Murphy went to the building and had little difficulty in gaining admission. Markoff was in charge and the frequenters were seated about the rooms. A search of the building resulted in a quantity of liquor including home-brew beer, alcohol and home-made whiskey being seized. This was taken to police headquarters and will be used as evidence against Markoff tomorrow. Markoff has been arrested several times charged with violation of the liquor law and the last time he was arrested, which was about three months ago, when he was employed at a club room, then located corner of Bank and Pearl streets, he was advised by Judge Victor Prince to "get out of business." The advice given by the court apparently was taken lightly by Markoff for he has been in charge of the club room since it opened.

In the police court today, a session which lasted from 9:30 until 4:30, Lorenzo Montali, 28 East street; Augusto Peroni, 26 Nameaug street; Arturo Pettinari, 43 East street; Raymond Giustini, 54 Smith street; Vincent Gaudenzi, 54 Goshen street and Gino Angelo, 25 Fourth street, were charged with breach of the peace and inciting to riot. Acting Judge John McGarry found probable cause and held the accused for trial at the next criminal term of the superior court. Bail was fixed at $500 each, which was furnished.

BIRTHDAY CAKE FEATURE OF D. A. R. CELEBRATION

At the tea given yesterday afternoon at Lighthouse inn by Miss Elizabeth Gorton, regent of Lucretia Shaw chapter, D. A. R., to its members, in celebration of the 26th birthday of the chapter, a large birthday cake decorated in red, white and blue and flowers of the same colors, were on the main table. Miss Gorton was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Frederick S. Weld, vice regent; Mrs. Charles H. Bissell, vice president-general; Mrs. George Maynard Minor, honorary president-general; and Mrs. Frederick M. Smith, a charter member of the chapter. Tea was served by Mrs. Herbert L. Crandall, Mrs. Sidney H. Minor, Mrs. Charles B. Whittlesey and Mrs. Maurice H. Sherman. Over 75 attended.

At the October meeting of the New London League of Women Voters to be held at the Y Friday afternoon, Miss Mary Bulkley, state president of the Connecticut league will be the principal speaker. At the conclusion of the meeting Miss Katheryn Moore will serve tea assisted by Miss Edna Tyler and Mrs. John B. Baxter.

WEDDING

Hanney-Gadbois

Yesterday afternoon Miss Flora Gadbois, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Gadbois of East Lyme, became the bride of Floyd Hanney of Waterford. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother by Rev. C. F. Eldridge of Niantic. Mary Gadbois, a niece and Francis Gadbois a nephew of the bride were the attendants. A supper was served after the marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Hanney have left for a honeymoon through New England, following which they will make their home in East Lyme.

Miss Lena Viscione of 7 Richards street entertained a number of friends the other night on her birthday, with games, music and refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Sisk of 302 Montauk avenue have returned following seven weeks' tour of Europe.

CONN. COLLEGE SMITH CLUB HOLDS FIRST RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 23—At the election of officers of the recently organized Smith club at Connecticut college, Miss Katherine G. Buckley, of this city, was made president. The first rally of the organization took place last night in New London hall. The speakers were Alton T. Miner and Joseph C. Keefe.

Virginia Karfoil of New York, last night was chosen president of the Spanish club at Connecticut college. She has ben an officer of the club for two years and now fills a vacancy created by the failure of the former president to return to the school.

Patients dismissed today from Home Memorial hospital were Robert Richards of 199 Broad street; George Borra 181 Huntington street; Kelty Christensen, 175 Parkway and Ernest Post, 40 Hinman street.

Those dismissed at the Lawrence-Memorial hospital were Robert Angus, 203 Broad street, Mrs. Catherine Harrington, 8 Elizabeth street.

FUNERAL

Patrick Casey

The funeral of Patrick Casey, formerly mate on the New London line steamers, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large gathering of mourners, including a delegation of members of the Knights of Columbus. The high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. Raymond J. O'Callahan. The bearers were members of the New London police department. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Cameramen are called upon to perform many exciting stunts in making motion pictures but, according to Burton Steene, the most thrilling experience was that, when, from the "bombay" of a huge bomber, he filmed twelve full service charge aerial bombs as they were dropped on a reconstructed French village, all twelve scoring direct hits.

Steene performed this feat in the photographing of "Wings," Paramount's wonder air picture, which the Broadway is now showing all this week.

"I believe I drew one of the most difficult assignments in the filming of 'Wings'," says Steene. "I was hoisted and squeezed in the bomb compartment, containing 1,200 pounds of T. N. T. I was in a space so small that I could scarcely move my legs in a kneeling position and I kept thinking what might happen if anything went wrong with those bombs or we had to make a forced landing.

A thin rope was fastened to my left arm and led to the cockpit where Capt. S. R. Stribling was in command. A signal of two sharp pulls was the word to tell me that the bombs would be released. I could not see what was coming, hence the signal, and naturally the scene would be a short one as the ship was doing 90 miles an hour.

"Capt. Stribling gave the two sharp tugs. Looking through the finder in my camera, it was my job to pick up the bombs as they fell. I could neither see nor hear them until they came into the finder."

Breed Theatre

"Something new" briefly sums up Fox films "None but the Brave," a colorful picture vibrant with youth, campus life and bathing beauties in which some of the sequences are in their natural colors.

Charlie Morton and Sally Phipps have the leading roles in a cast which includes many well known screen players. Farrell Macdonald, remembered best as "Corporal Casey" in "The Iron Horse," has another great role. Tom Kennedy, bluff and hearty, adds much to the comedy situations with his spontaneous humor. Sharon Lynn and Alice Adair, two winsome bathing girls, also add to their laurels in "None but the Brave," which is the main attraction of the double feature program at the Breed theatre today and Thursday.

The added feature is a rapid fire comedy in which twin brothers impersonate each other, and the laugh-provoking complications that arise from their deception, are the ingredients that make "Domestic Troubles," an excellent vehicle for Clyde Cook and Louise Fazenda.

Louise Fazenda as a flirtatious young lady, and Clyde Cook, in the dual portrayal of James and Horace Bullard, twin brothers, prove themselves laugh producers of the first magnitude.

Atwater Kent Radios

A message received today by The New Haven Electric Co., New Haven, Conn., distributors for the Atwater Kent Mfg. Co., of Philadelphia, announced today that the two millionth Atwater Kent radio had just been turned out at the company's factory there. This, it was stated, sets a new high record, not only in the total of sets produced by any radio manufacturing company but in the rate of production during the past two years and particularly during the past six months.

Up to May 1, 1928, the beginning of his current production year, 1,535,049 sets had been produced by Mr. Kent in five years—in itself a record in radio production. In reaching the two million mark, 464,951 sets have been turned out in less than six months since May 1. On this basis, and with his big seventeen-acre plant producing receiving sets at the rate of more than 3,000 a day, the schedule of one-million sets in the present production year, which Mr. Kent has set for his factory, seems certain to be reached, if not passed.

The two millionth Atwater Kent radio, The New Haven Electric company states, is a Model 40 house-current set, which operates entirely without battaries, drawing its current from an ordinary electric light socket. An identical set is now on display at The New Haven Electric company's showrooms.

This set is regarded as the last word in simplicity of operation, being controlled simply by one full vision dial and one volume control. It comprises two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio frequency amplification. It uses six alternating current tubes and a rectifying tube for power supply.

The efficiency and simplicity of these house current sets, according to Mr. Kent, has resulted in an unequalled demand on the part of the buying public. In fact, the big problem of today, he says, is to produce the sets in sufficient volume to meet the demand. How this demand has grown is shown in the following year-by-year figures of Atwater Kent production:

Year (April 30-May 1)	Shipped
1922-23	6,628
1923-24	38,027
1924-25	175,461
1925-26	381,203
1926-27	474,635
1927-28	488,190
(a) 1928-29	1,000,000

(a) scheduled production 1,000,000. Of this number, 464,951 have been produced in the less than six months since May 1.

Connecticut College Concert

When Sophie Braslau sings at the New London State Armory Tuesday evening, October 30, the audience which greets her will, in the estimation of most critics, be listening to one of the greatest contralto voices of all generations.

Irving Weil in the New York Journal says of her, "This great contralto gave an evening of singing that was about as close to perfection in the art as we have ever heard. It was singing of pure vocal beauty and held the magnificence inherent in the older golden age of song. This was the kind of authentically great singing that makes the listener—professional or other—forget himself, forget his surroundings, forget almost the singer herself and plunge into complete absorption in the utterly beautiful thing that is pouring into his ears and his inwards. The pity of an attempt at review of such an exhibition of brilliant and deeply felt art is that adequacy eludes it. One merely notes down that Miss Braslau has now apparently perfected all her enormous resources so that they serve her needs of expression with the utmost ease and nicety. Her voice, one of the finest contraltos of the day—perhaps the finest of all—is now at the maturity of its imposing power, its widest dynamic flexibility, its glorious potentialities of color.

"Miss Braslau's evening was indeed the most notable one of the season and one of the most notable of many seasons."

NEW GOVERNOR IS APPOINTED FOR GAMBIA

London anouncements that a new governor of Gambia has just been appointed raise in the minds of most readers the question: "Where is Gambia?"

"Even when the searcher is given the clue that Gambia is in Africa, he will find it none to easy to locate," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "As you run your finger down the west coast of Africa, you must look sharply of the narrow little colony and protectorate will escape you. They have been humorously referred to in political debates as 'thin lips of land in jaws of French territory.'

"As a matter of fact the territory may be looked upon as mostly river with the banks incidentally added. And it was the economic importance of the Gambia river that brought the region under British control. The Gambia is the only river of the African west coast up which ocean-going ships may steam for considerable distances at all seasons. The protectorate consists of only a six-mile wide strip of territory on each side of the river, but this narrow slice of land extends approximately 200 miles up stream from the coast. North and south and far to the east of the inland end of the British zone lies French territory.

"Normally, if geographic and economic forces had unrestricted play the deep, navigable Gambia would be the outlet for products of a large area. But naturally the French favor their own ports, and the Gambia trade must depend for the most part on produce originating in the elongated protectorate itself. French economic influence penetrates the proctectorate. The five-franc piece circulates beside British coins, and French ships have an important part in the carrying trade from the river.

"Because of Gambia's narrowness and the logical way in which it seems to fit into the French scheme of things in Western Africa, it has been seriously suggested on several occasions that Great Britain exchange the territory for a patch of French land elsewhere. This suggestion, however, has always met the disinclination of the Britishto abandon any part of the empire. One reason for Britain's clinging to the river is that it is an extremely important haven from which to protect British shipping lines between the mother country and South Africa.

"The Portugese first explored the Gambia river, but they made no settlements. Later, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the British and the French were rival traders on the Gambia as they were on the Senegal a short distance to the north. In 1783 the Treaty of Versailles recognized Britain's paramount interest on the Gambia and that of France on the Senegal. It is from that time that British sovereignty dates.

"The Bambia trade has always been a fairly flourishing one. The prosperity has rested successively on the slaves, ivory and peanuts. Slaving, of course, tended to reduce the population and left the land open for swarms of animals. Ships in the early days encountered great herds of elephants swimming the river. With the end of slaving and the influx of tribes from the east the animals have been pushed from the territory and large tracts have been put into cultivation. Peanuts or groundnuts as they are called locally, are grown in tremendous quantities. More than five million dollars worth are exported annually.

"A unique factor in groundnut cultivation is the part played by so-called 'stranse farmers.' At planting time every year thousands of Negroes come into the protectorate from the adjoining French territory. They engage land from the native owners and for half the produce remain to grow and harvest a crop. Then they swarm back out of the country. The same individuals may not return for four or five years, but there is always a sufficient number of 'stranse farmers' on hand to produce the crops. Most of the natives of the protectorate as well as those of the nearby French territory are Mohammedans.

"Bathurst, the capital, is the only community of any size in the protectorate. It is situated on an island in the mouth of the river and has a population of approximately 10,000. The island of St. Mary, on which the city is situated, constitutes the colony of Gambia as distinguished from the protectorate which is made up of the strines along the river. Most of the Bathurst. The city has substantial public buildings of red sandstone. Its streets and market place are attractively shaded by great wide-spreading handful of whites of Gambia live in tropical trees."

THE FIRST SURGICAL OPERATION OF ITS KIND

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 23—(AP)—If Columbus hospital surgeons succeed in a great surgical and medical experiment that is being made, Erhardt Denne, 40, of Tonawanda, will have a new lower jaw to replace that which was shot away last March. The surgeons are preparing to graft a portion of one of the man's ribs to the ankles of the jaw. If the operation is a success, a dentist will be called upon to fit a row of teeth over the grafted rib bone, making it possible for Denne again to eat a meal in normal manner.

Details of the surgical effort, the first of its kind so far as known here, were explained to a jury today by Dr. Charles R. Borgilleri when called as a witness at the trial of Emil Kabus, accused of first degree assault in having shot Denne's jaw away.

Stage-struck girls should think twice before they begin to act.

Divorced Husband Of Mrs. Willebrandt

Arthur F. Willebrandt, former husband of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, who divorced his wife five years ago in California. Mr. Willebrandt, now a school teacher in Lomita, near Los Angeles, obtained his divorce in 1923, alleging desertion. Mrs. Willebrandt did not defend the action which was filed on behalf of her husband by her friend Miss Elizabeth Kenny. Granting of a decree did not attract the attention of newspapers because the given names of the principals were not given in full. For sometime Mr. Willebrandt has been masquerading under the name of Jones.

POETRY

The Wild Ride

I hear in my heart, I hear its ominous pulses,
All day, the commotion of sinewy, mane-tossing horses;
All night, from their cells, the impatient tramping and neighing.

Cowards and laggards fall back; but alert in the saddle,
Straight, grim, and abreast, vault our weather-worn, galloping legion,
With a stirrup-cup each to the one gracious woman that loves him.

The road is through dolor and dread, over crags and morasses;
There are shapes by the way, there are things that appall or entice us;
What odds? We are knights, and our souls are but bent on the riding!

I hear in my heart, I hear in its ominous pulses,
All day, the commotion of sinewy, mane-tossing horses;
All night, from their cells, the impatient tramping and neighing.

We spur to a land of no name, outracing the storm-wind;
We leap to the infinite dark, like the sparks from the anvil.
Thou leadest, O God! All's well with Thy troopers that follow.

—Louise Imogen Guiney.

Destiny

His pots and pans would put the sun to shame;
His mug-ups, though the schooner pitched and yawed,
Northeaster-ridden, brought him widespread fame;
All Gloucester marveled: "There's a cook, by Gawd!"
A cheery giant, with a ready will,
He wrought great feats with stubborn gear—and laughed;
Adroit his seamanship, unmatched in skill
By any save true masters of the craft.
Yet mates were made, promoted, their ships earned,
While in his galley still he baked and stirred,
A prince of "doctors"—laughter on his lips;
But in his heart a proud yet chilling word—
Sheer eulogy—which rung ambition's knell:
"You never will command—you cook too well!"

—New York Sun.

Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice

When physicians pronounce cascara the PERFECT laxative — why experiment with things that lash the system into action? Cascara, you know, is the bark of a tree. A natural and normal stimulus to the bowels.

The Indians, who used to chew this bark, had no word in their language that meant "constipation"!

Perfect regularity is possible today, and to all of us. We have cascara in ideal form: the very delightful-tasting candy Cascaret gives us pure cascara. It has helped at least a million people to habitual regularity. Millions of others, unfortunately, have stuck to stronger things and acquired only the laxative habit.

Your first Cascaret will demonstrate how THOROUGH this gentle laxative is, after all. Your next surprise will be the length of time before you need another. Eventually, you'll see that cascarizing tends to make the bowels move thereafter of their own accord!

A modern drugstore must stock many laxatives, but for your own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of Cascarets than anything else.

NORWICH MEN RE-ORGANIZE CHELSEA BOAT CLUB

The Chelsea Boat club, which formerly had its boat house just off West Main street on the east branch of the Yantic river but disbanded several years ago, was re-organized at a meeting held Tuesday evening at the gas and electric department office by a number of men interested in power boats and boats with outboard motors.

Officers were elected as follows: Commodore, Joseph A. French; vice commodore, William E. Mitchell; secretary, H. E. Carpenter; treasurer, George W. Moore, board of governors—Earl W. Taggart, E. L. Duff, Milton C. Green, William B. Mitchell, William R. Frisbie, Benjamin Hall.

A committee was appointed to secure the club house at Kitemaug for use as a club house and a get-together it is to be planned for there soon. Movies of the last outboard race on the Thames were shown and were viewed with great interest by those at the meeting.

It is propose to attempt to secure again the charter of the Chelsea boat club which was surrendered to the state when the club disbanded.

NORWICH P. O. MEN AT ROAST PIG SUPPER

The Norwich post office employes and a few friends, a party of 44 in all, went to Ledyard last Saturday evening to enjoy a roast pig supper with all the "fixins." Following the feast, which was put up in A 1 style, a rising vote of thanks was tendered to Frederick B. Doolittle, substitute carrier, who was the host for the occasion, and the ladies of Ledyard grange who served the feast. The supper was served in the assembly hall of the church, following which the party adjourned to the grange hall for the social part of the evening's program. The party made the trip by automobile and returned about midnight.

FRANK TOBIN, JR., HAS APPOINTMENT IN JAPAN

A former Norwich young man, Frank M. Tobin, Jr., a resident of Detroit, has been appointed representative of the Frigidaire business of the American Trading company in Japan and is already on the way to Tokio, accompanied by his wife. He is to be stationed in Japan for three or four years. Mr. Tobin has been with the Frigidaire people for about two years along with his brother who is superintendent of sales in Detroit.

Both young men are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Tobin who resided in this city on Huntington place a number of years ago while Mr. Tobin was head of the Tobin Arms company here. They now reside in Woodstock, Canada.

SUFFERS SLIGHT INJURIES IN AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

Theodore J. Richard, of No. 27 Division street, was slightly injured early Tuesday evening when the machine he was driving collided with a machine driven by Daniel Dennis. The accident happened on Main street near the bus terminal. Mr. Richard who suffered from bruises and shock was attended by Dr. William T. Driscoll. Mr. Richard's machine, a Nash touring car, was damaged to the extent of about $100. The registration number of Mr. Dennis' car is 11,085.

Lebanon Women Voters Elect

The annual meeting of the Lebanon League of Women Voters was held Monday afternoon in the Lebanon town hall. The regular routine was followed, reports of officers read for the past year and the election of new officers took place. A social hour followed, sandwiches and tea being served by the hospitality committee in charge.

Returns from Havana Convention

Mrs. Muriel S. Greene of Lords Point, Stonington, formerly of Norwich, has arrived home after attending the national convention of the auxiliary to the United Spanish War Veterans held in Havana, Cuba. Many places of interest were visited on the return trip.

Mrs. Greene was not elected to the office of national senior vice president but is a member of the national council of administration.

VOLUNTOWN BUSINESS REVIVAL EXPECTED; MILL PROPERTY AUCTION

Voluntown saw the winding up of its only manufacturing industry, the Briggs Manufacturing company cotton mill, sold at auction Tuesday, after a long period of idleness during which the company has been in liquidation, and the mills have been closed.

But a business revival is promised for Voluntown with the passing of the mills into new ownership, the purchasers being B. G. Stanton of Glasco, W. B. Shaw and A. F. Shaw of Providence, who it is stated are to work on plans to open the mills in a manufacturing line, but their representatives were not prepared to say Tuesday night what this line would be. It was rumored at the time of the sale that the industry to be established in Voluntown would be a bleachery, but this was denied Tuesday night.

The auction was in charge of the Providence firm of G. L. and H. J. Gross, Inc., with the real estate of the Briggs company going under the hammer Tuesday. The cotton machinery and equipment is to be sold today (Wednesday).

Bids on the mill buildings which were sold were made by Land and Goldberg of this city for their clients, who were later revealed to be the three business men already named.

On their bid of $18,100, Messrs. Land and Goldberg secured the so-called No. 4 mill, a stone building of four stories and basement, 166 feet long by 52 feet wide, dam and about ten acres of land.

The hydro-electric station and grist mill was taken by the same bidders for $2,100. This comprises a group of three frame buildings with water power developing about 135 horse power gross, and about three acres.

The third lot purchased by these bidders was the so-called No. 1 mill with water privilege and power. This is a three story frame building with stone basement, 173.7 feet long by 32.4 feet wide. The water privilege includes the control of all the storage basins on the upper reaches of the Pachaug river, a total storage area of about 1,120 acres and estimated yearly flow of 11,716,400,000 gallons. The price at the auction sale was $10,000.

After these buildings had been disposed of, the auctioneer took up the sale of tenement houses and lots, walking over the ground from one to the other while a crowd of a couple of hundred people trooped after him.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon a heavy rain storm commelled abandonment of the auction for the rest of the day. By that time about ten houses and several plots of ground without buildings on them had been sold. The prices on the houses ranged from $295 to $575. A plot of a little over 29 acres went for $540 and another plot of a little over six acres for $420.

There are about 35 more parcels of real estate to be sold today (Wednesday) as well as the mill machinery and equipment.

SOUTH MANCHESTER BAND FOR SALVATION ARMY APPEAL

The Salvation Army band of South Manchester, will come to Norwich on Sunday and render a number of concerts throughout the day and evening. This band consists of thirty members, all master musicians, who volunteer their services entirely free to the Salvation Army organization. Some of the musicians in the band are acknowledged among the foremost artists in their line in the New England states. A number of the men have served in the band for nearly forty years. Most of the men playing in the band are employed in the Cheney mill of South Manchester, with many years of employment to their credit, typifying the faithfulness of their service. Some of the musicians of the band are engaged in business in South Manchester. The band leader, David Abby, who has been with the band for over fifteen years, is employed on the office staff of the Cheney mills. The assistant band leader, William Hanna, is teaching at the state trade school, South Manchester. Solo concert player, Harold Turkington, is band leader of South Manchester high school, and band sergeant, John Lyons, is a master drummer, with a service in the Salvation Army of over twenty-five years.

The entire organization devoted their entire spare evenings to the Salvation Army service, with the proud record of having been on duty at least four evenings a week since 1888—a period of forty years. The band also has the distinction of not having missed one rehearsal a week during the many years of its existence. The South Manchester Salvation Army band was selected from among all the bands in New England to furnish the music at the annual Salvation Army congress held at Old Orchard, in August 1928. They also filled a very important engagement in New York city by playing at a Salvation Army gathering held in February, 1928.

The band will arrive in Norwich on Sunday, Oct. 28th, at 9.30 a. m. and will play at a service to be held at the Norwich Town Congregational church, where Rev. G. F. Bailey will officiate. A special quartet of the band will render both vocal and instrumental selections at the Bible class of the Central Baptist church to be held at 9.45 a. m. The quartet will render a few vocal and instrumental numbers at 10.30 a. m. at a service to be held at Trinity Methodist church—Rev. Joseph Cooper will officiate at the service.

From 1.15 p. m. until 2 p. m. the band will play for the inmates of the Connecticut state hospital as the guests of superintendent, Dr. E. S. Burdsall, and from there it will proceed to Uncas-on-the-Thames sanatorium and play for the patients from 2.30 until 3.15 p. m. The band will then give a sacred concert at Union square at 3.45 p. m. on a stand to be erected by the city authorities for the occasion. His honor, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, will welcome the band to Norwich. The concert will continue until 5 p. m. In the evening at 7 p. m. the band will take part in a special "united service" at the Central Baptist church and will render both vocal and instrumental sacred music. It is expected that one of the highest officers of The Salvation Army of the state of Connecticut will take part in the service. The band will then return to South Manchester by a bus that will call for them at 9 p. m.

The South Manchester band is coming to Norwich to render service to a campaign which the Norwich Salvation Army organization will begin next week in order to raise $5,000 maintenance fund, so that it can carry on its charitable and humanitarian service in Norwich. Campaign Secretary, E. J. McCabe, completed all preliminary arrangements for the appeal and will be ready to make final announcements of the date and manner of campaign in the next few days.

Arthur M. Brown, who is chairman of the appeal, expressed his hearty approval of the fine committee of Norwich public spirited citizens who will assist him to lead Norwich over the top in the cause of the Salvation Army.

TAFTVILLE WOMAN SEEKS DIVORCE AND ALIMONY

A divorce, alimony and change of name is sought in a petition filed in the superior court by Lena Parsons of Taftville, against Thomas Parsons of Bristol, formerly of New London. The couple were married Sept. 23, 1919. A statutory offense is alleged.

Miss Janet Louise Kimball

Relatives and friends from Willington, New London and Preston City were present at the funeral of Miss Janet Louise Kimball held Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at her home on the Plain Hill road. The services were conducted by Rev. George W. Clark of the Preston City Congregational church and there were many beautiful floral tributes. Burial was in the family lot in Rixtown cemetery, where a committal service was read by Rev. Mr. Clark. The bearers were Ralph Main, Frank Gifford, Maurice Raymond and Olin Wilson. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertakers Cummings & Ring.

FINISHING CO. COMPLAINS AGAINST N. H. RAILROAD

Charging that the New Haven railroad violated the long and short haul provisions of the interstate commerce act in the rates for the transportation of coal from Harbor Junction wharf, Rhode Island, to this city, the United States Finishing company has filed formal complaint with the interstate commerce commission at Washington, seeking damages of $310, plus interest.

The complaint sets forth that the defendant railroad charged a rate of $1.51 per gross ton on shipments of coal between the Rhode Island wharf and Norwich during the period Sept. 22-Nov. 1, 1926. It is further alleged that during this period the railroad transported coal from Harbor Junction to Jewett City, eight miles further than Norwich, and passing directly through the latter place, at a rate of $1.39 per gross ton. After repeated requests and delays, the complaint further states, the railroad, on Nov. 25, 1926, published a $1.39 ton rate for the haul to Norwich.

REVIEWED CHRISTMAS BOOKS SUITABLE FOR CHILDREN

Speaking before a round table group of The Woman's City club, in the club room in The Wauregan hotel, Tuesday afternoon, Miss Josephine Thomas of New Haven presented in a highly delightful and profitable manner a talk on "Christmas Books for Children."

Mrs. Alexander H. Abbott presented Miss Thomas who very charmingly enumerated the newer publications for children, stressing the importance of the text, subject matter, and illustrations. She told her hearers that of the hundreds of books published each year only a small percentage were often worthwhile, she, herself, having chosen only fifteen of the more distinguished to illustrate her talk.

Not only, because of its timely helpfulness just before the Christmas season and its presentation at the approach of book week, but for its aid in guiding the selection of material suitable to the child mind was the discussion so significant.

Miss Thomas is well qualified to speak on her subject since she has been children's librarian at the New Haven library and the Woman's City club felt fortunate in having an expert bring this matter before them in such a charming manner.

LITTLE TIME LEFT TO PUT IN PROPERTY LISTS

All of this week and four days next week are all the time that is left for property owners to put in their lists before the assessors, but it is estimated by the assessors that probably not one-half the number of lists to be received has been filed yet.

Property owners this year seem more dilatory than usual, according to the assessors, who believe this may be because people have got the impression that they do not need to hand in lists because of the re-valuation that is underway. This is a false impression, the assessors say, for tax payers must hand in their lists just as they have always done if they are to escape the ten per cent addition for failure to do so.

The figures placed on property by the re-valuation will be used by the assessors, it is understood, as a basis of comparison and possible revision in checking up all the property on the grand list before they turn in their final grand list report, but the re-valuation does not excuse property, owners from putting in their grand lists now.

Will Consider Membership Aplications

The board of managers of the Connecticut society, Sons of the American Revolution, is to hold a stated meeting next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at the office of the president at the state library at Hartford to act upon applications for membership in the order.

The fall campaign, under the direction of the committee on membership, is beginning to bear fruit and there are several applications to be taken into consideration at this meeting. The last year showed the largest increase in membership in the experience of the society and it is confidently predicted that it will be exceeded this year.

TRYING COLCHESTER APPEAL IN LOUIS MINTZ CASE

Trial was proceeding Tuesday in the superior court at New London before Judge John Richards Booth in the appeal from decision of the probate court of Colchester which adjudged Louis Mintz of that town an incompetent person and placed a conservator over him.

Mintz is taking the appeal. The court took the action following an application made by his son, Benjamin A. Mintz, of Colchester on June 12, 1928.

Will Lecture for Engineers

The lectures given under the auspices of Norwich Association of Power Engineers have been well attended, especially the last one given by Walter Queen and W. Savain of the Q. P. Signal Co., whose subject was the Manufacturing of Special Packings. This week Mr. Lee of New London will talk on the subject of Turbine and Combustion controling apparatus. This is one of Mr. Lee's own inventions and has been installed in several local plants and should prove very interesting to the engineers of the city.

JUDGMENT IS GIVEN FOR PARTNER IN QUARRY FIRM

Judgment in favor of Gusta Leino of Niantic to collect $541.07 from John A. Hennieman and John Cuttilla both of Groton, is set forth in a decision handed down in the court of common pleas and filed here with Assistant Clerk J. Frank Corey in the court of common pleas. The judgment is given Leino as a share in the partnership of the Leino Quarry of Niantic, in which the plaintiff and the defendants were partners. The partnership was dissolved in December, 1926.

RELEASED AFTER SERVING FIVE WEEKS IN JAIL

Mrs. Loretta Beebe Loper of Montville was released from the New London county jail in New London Monday after serving approximately five weeks of a six months' jail sentence. Arthur S. Dart of Montville was released from the county jail here also. He had also served five weeks of a six months' sentence.

Both persons were sentenced to six months' terms in jail at the September session of the criminal superior court here. They were charged with a statutory offense alleged to have been committed in Montville.

Niantic Garage Man Bankrupt

John W. Flynn, proprietor of the Niantic garage in Niantic, has gone into bankruptcy, being judged a bankrupt by the United States district court, it was announced Tuesday. He lists liabilities of $7,136.87, and assets of $2,890.87.

A creditors' meeting has been called by Referee in Bankruptcy Thomas M. Shields of Norwich, to be held in Mr. Shields' office on Nov. 3.

Submarines for Navy Day

Local submarines will not be sent to other ports along the Atlantic coast on Navy day, next Saturday, it has been announced at the Submarine Base at New London.

This arrangement will leave at least five submersibles at the Submarine Base open to visitors on Navy day, besides those which will be tied up alongside the tender Camden in the harbor.

The program at New London Saturday will center around the annual football contest between the Submarine Base and the Coast Guard Bears in the afternoon at the base. During the day all units on the base reservation will be open for inspection by visitors, and transportation will be provided to the reservation by navy boats running from the municipal wharf at New London.

Groton Fisheries Output Increases

The amount of fish handled at the Groton plant of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries corporation was again increased during the past week when 791,942 pounds of fish were received at the plant from six trawlers. Of this 776,935 pounds were cut to produce 264,000 pounds of frozen fish of which 210,000 pounds were filet of haddock.

During the week seven carloads of fish were sent out from the plant for distribution in various parts of the country, making 25 carloads of the fish that have been sent out from the plant this month.

Spoke Before Smith-Robinson Club

Ex-Mayor William C. Fox of New London was the speaker Monday evening at the regular meeting of the Smith-Robinson Democratic club in the headquarters on Franklin square. He held the close attention of his audience with a talk upon the qualifications of the party nominees for president and vice-president and upon the outstanding issues of the campaign.

Mrs. Mary Latham and Mrs. Bertha Ashcroft have returned to Groton from Savannah, Ga., where they spent a week.

ZEPPELIN PASSENGERS ORDERED TO BE READY

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—(AP)—Passengers booked to make the mid-western trip of the Graf Zeppelin have been instructed to be at the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., at 6 p. m. tomorrow, Hugh Allen of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation announced tonight.

The time for the dirigible's departure will be determined after a study of the evening weather maps tomorrow, he said, and conditions at that time also will have a bearing on the route for the trip.

On the mid-western trip the dirigible will carry 18 or 20 passengers. A partial list announced tonight by Mr. Allen included E. P. Warner, assistant secretary of the navy for aeronautics; Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the navy; W. P. MacCracken, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics; Dr. J. H. Dellinger, radio expert of the department of commerce; H. H. Blee, of the department of commerce; Col. John A. Paegelow, commanding officer of Scott field, Belleville, Ill.; Maj. R. B. Lincoln, of the army general staff, Washington; Lieut. Frank McKee, commanding officer of Norton field, Columbus, Ohio; Lucius Boomer, of New York; A. G. Mazury, vice-president of International Motors; Austin Beam, of the Chrysler Export corporation, and Edwin Stewart, of Red Bank, N. J.

HEADLIGHTS FROM 1,000 AUTOS GUIDED LINDBERGH

EAGLE PASS, Texas, Oct. 23—(AP)—Head lights from 1,000 automobiles guided Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to an easy landing here at 8:20 o'clock tonight when he arrived from Midland, Texas, with Tal Mangum, Texas ranchman. Lindbergh will be Mangum's guest on the latter's ranch near Muzquis, Mexico, for a bear hunt.

Immediately after their arrival, Lindbergh and Mangum, with a small party of friends, went across the river to Piedras Negras for supper but returned later to spend the night in Eagle Pass.

FOUNDATION OF MODERN OBSERVANCE OF NAVY DAY

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23—(AP)—An incident in American history in the early days of the nation has become the foundation of the modern observance of Navy day, Oct. 27, Lieut. Comdr. W. Earl Miller, U. S. N., officer-in-charge of this recruiting district, will by proxy tell the school children of Connecticut tomorrow. He has sent a letter to school principals on the subject and they will give it to their pupils.

Lieut. Comdr. Miller points out that on Oct. 27, 1775, the first resolution went into the Continental congress to provide for construction of an American man-of-war. It was adopted and the navy had been born.

Talks on Electric Service
An Unsolicited Letter
Nowich, Conn., Sept. 26, 1928.
Norwich Gas & Electric Co.
Norwich, Conn.
Gentlemen: In regard to the new rates on electricity.
I am reading all the letters of remonstrance in our local papers from under dogs, etc., kicking on the new rates.
Now then, I am about as poor in worldly goods as anyone, but I want to give you my heartfelt thanks for the new rates, alleged to be gouging the poor. My bills for lights have been from $2.00 to $3.00 in summer and from $5.00 to $6.00 in winter. Now, as I understand it, my bills this winter will be a little over $3.00 which looks mighty good to me. The money taken from the poor is not given to the rich, at least, in my case.
So please accept my thanks for the help you are about to give me.
Very truly yours,
LEON L. HAYDEN.

BOSTON PANDEMONIACAL IN ITS WELCOME TO GOV. SMITH

Democratic Presidential Nominee, Upon His Arrival, Was Surrounded by a Yelling Crowd Which Stretched For Miles—Only by Brute Force Could the Police Restrain the Throngs—Crowds in the Streets Slowed Down the Parade—Outside the Arena the Police Battled With Multitudes Which Sought Admission in Vain—Inside the Hall the Cheering Was Deafening.

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—Staid old Boston turned out in Main street fashion today to welcome Alfred E. Smith and his famous brown derby. The moment the democratic presidential nominee stepped from his special train at South station he was surrounded by the vanguard of a yelling crowd which stretched for several miles.

Here, as through the west, the south and the border states, he was greeted with the salutation: "Hello, Al." Hardly had the governor stepped through the door of the station to the street before shouting enthusiasts had bowie dover all semblance of police protection. The crowd clogged the street in a jiffy. It was minutes before a parade—such as it was—could get under way.

The police, and there were 900 on duty on the line of march, only by brute strength got the people away from the nominee's car so it could move. It did move a few feet, only to stop, and the reason was apparent: The nominee was standing up in the back seat waving the brown derby. All the cheer leaders of Harvard and Boston universities could not have developed more lung power than the crowd turned loose at the sight of the "Brownzo" as the brown derby now is called by many. And while this was on, confetti, the bought kind, along with the home-made variety of torn scraps of paper, floated down from above.

But finally the parade got started. The machines crept along in low gear. The crowd which began at the base of buildings on the sidewalks extended without a break into the middle of the street where it brushed against the sides of the cars. From the running board of the third car back of the governor one could look down Summer street into a sea of people in which there was not a gap. It was only as the machines pushed forward that a pathway appeared. The machines passed and the pathway was gone.

In front of the cars there were people. In the rear as far as the eye could see back along the narrow winding streets of Boston, there still were people.

Air Full of Flying Paper

The air was full of flying paper. Long yellow, purple and white streamers swung slowly down from the buildings, catching here and there in trolley wires.

Another shout down the line. It was the governor up again. A burst of racket—it was the brown derby off again, then when the governor put the derby in the place where hats usually are worn, there'd be another shout. This time it was a black derby—the hat of Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts.

And so the parade of the brown derbies continued slowly through the city.

The Arena hall was packed, every inch of it, more than an hour before the governor was scheduled to go on a nation-wide hook-up of 30 radio stations at 9 p. m. There was hardly elbow room in the structure. No one could tell where the aisles were, as people were everywhere.

Outside, scores of police were battling with another crowd, a disappointed one, which sought admission in vain. It was with difficulty that the few holding passes, most of them newspaper correspondents, got into the hall. Inside, the cheering was deafening. It swept in waves through the large hall, which members of the local reception committee said would seat 10,000 or more people.

Mayor Edward Quinn of Cambridge, democratic national committeeman, had the audience on its feet shouting and howling by a reference to Governor Smith as the next president of the United States.

While the cheering was going on many tossed confetti and scraps of paper from the gallery which surrounded the hall.

There was another demonstration when Mrs. Jessie Wilson Sayre, daughter of the late Woodrow Wilson, appeared on the platform. She was applauded and cheered when she presented Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts to the audience. The senator in turn was cheered and cheered when he referred to Smith as an independent, and a progressive. A moment later the hall rang with shouting when the senator said: "Alfred E. Smith is a free man."

Walsh also praised Senator George Norris of Nebraska, a republican progressive who only today announced he would stump for Smith.

Dozen People Injured

Meanwhile, police inside received word from their comrades battling on the outside of the building that a dozen or more people had been injured in the crush around the doors. Several of these, the officers in the press stand section of the hall said, were sent to hospitals. Of the number injured, two were reported to be policemen.

After Walsh, who is up for re-election this year, concluded, the band took a turn at entertaining the crowd and then Mrs. Sayre introduced Gen. Charles H. Cole, democratic gubernatorial nominee. The daughter of America's war-time president in a brief speech in introducing the speakers, said that "a vote for the republican party endorses its record of crime."

"No prejudices, no blind fears can alter the fact," she said, "that a vote for the republican party now gives license hereafter to any corrupt official to do his work unchallenged by his party, uncensured in any effective way by the public. Mr. Hoover has given the record of the republican party both under Mr. Harding and Mr. Coolidge his unqualified endorsement."

The governor reached the hall a few minutes before nine. He was preceded to the front of the platform by Mrs. Smith and the moment she announced the audience was on its feet yelling at the top of its lungs.

The din grew in volume a minute later when the nominee stepped forward. Waving his hand and smiling broadly, the governor looked out over the yelling thousands—then waved and waved again.

The audience was on its feet. A band was blaring forth with the "Sidewalks of New York." The audience joined in. It stopped its shouting and put its lung-power into the song.

It apparently liked its efforts with the song for again it cheered and cheered when it was over.

Mrs. Sayre walked across the platform and shook hands with the man aspiring for the office her father held for eight years. Again the audience began singing the "Sidewalks." At the last note there was more yelling. A photographer set off a flare. The report of the flare explosion hardly was heard in the din.

Quieting the Audience

After eleven and one-half minutes of cheering the governor brought some semblance of quiet by motioning both hands for silence.

"Sh, sh, sh," went the audience and the yelling ceased. In a few words Mrs. Sayre introduced the governor. Another demonstration started as he walked to the microphone. While this was going on, the nominee adjusted his glasses. The noise subsided as he moved nearer the microphone.

"Sh, sh, sh," went the audience again. The nominee opened his address by referring to Woodrow Wilson as the "greatest living American." There was more cheering. The governor then asked the audience to refrain from cheering until he had concluded, saying "we are paying for this radio time."

Before reaching the Arena Governor Smith made brief addresses to gatherings which filled Mechanics building and Symphony hall.

It had been announced earlier that on account of the throngs which had collected in the vicinity of both places that the governor had deemed it advisable and go directly to the Arena from his hotel, but he adhered to his original schedule.

Thousands were massed at both auditoriums when Gov. Smith arrived and he was greeted with prolonged cheering at each place.

Former Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, introduced him at Mechanics building as "the greatest humanitarian in the world."

Gov. Smith told his audiences that he had been in all the big cities of the west and south but his reception in Boston was "something I'll never forget." He said, "I've never received any reception greater in any place in the country."

After the governor's departure for the Arena, the crowds remained in both Symphony hall and Mechanics building to listen to his Arena address which was brought to them by radio loud speakers.

As the governor warmed up to his speech, he began gesturing freely. He declared Mr. Hoover's utterances on water-power had not been satisfactory. He accused his rival of having used a "conglomeration of words intended to hide something."

He said Mr. Hoover had been called upon by a committee in Los Angeles, Calif., and asked to explain his views.

"He told them he favored the largest dam on the Colorado river that the engineers would recommend," he said. "That was not using words to convey a meaning. The height of the dam is an engineering problem. That has absolutely nothing at all to do with the principle of who is to develop the water-power and who is to gain the profit from it. That is a question of construction.

"The high dam means the greater flow; the greater flow means the largest possible horsepower development; but it has nothing at all to do with the principle."

ABSTRACT OF GOVERNORS SMITH'S SPEECH IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—The charge that Herbert Hoover was using words to "conceal rather than convey" a meaning was made tonight by Governor Alfred E. Smith, who ripped into utterances made by the republican presidential nominee in New York city on water power, farm relief, prosperity and prohibition.

Opening his final drive for the presidency in this city where Hoover spoke nine days ago, the democratic candidate declared in a speech specially prepared for the occasion that the expression of "state socialism" was the stock argument of the power trust" which had been used against him in his gubernatorial fights in New York state.

"The cry of socialism has been patented by powerful interests," he said, "that desire to put the damper on progressive legislation."

The governor argued that on the question of water power the problem simmered down to this:

"Either the people are to retain these water power sites under public ownership and public control, or they are to lease them to private companies for private profit."

The nominee then said he was "not simple-minded on this subject" and declared that he had known "all along exactly where the republican candidate stood."

"What I have been trying to do is to drag him into the open," he continued. "From August 11th to Oct. 22d, Mr. Hoover succeeded in using words to hide his meaning, but on last Monday night the cat got out of the bag, and, at Madison Square Garden in New York city, he told the progressive members of his own party, as well as the democrats of the country, that their proposals would 'cause us to turn to state socialism.'

"If what he says in his Madison

Off On Record Trans-Continental Flight

Monoplane Yankee Doodle Started From Roosevelt Field at 4:15 p. m. Yesterday.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Oct. 24—(AP)—The cigar-shaped Lockheed Vega monoplane Yankee Doodle shot like a white projectile from the runway this afternoon and headed for Mines field, Los Angeles, in an attempt to beat a record that has stood for more than five years.

Harry Tucker, owner of the plane, was in the rear seat, dressed in an ordinary business suit, while the controls were in the hands of Capt. C. B. D. Collyer, sky writer and joint holder of the round-the-world speed record.

Last August Tucker, piloted by Art Goebel, crossed the country in one hop from Los Angeles in 18 hours and 58 minutes, beating the time of the only trans-continental non-stop flight there had ever been by almost eight hours.

That early flight was made from east to west by Lieut. John Macready and Oakley Kelly in 1923, their time being 26 hours and 50 minutes. In the flight started today Collyer and Tucker will attempt to beat Macready and Kelly over their own course.

The Yankee Doodle once before has raced from the east coast toward the west, but without success. In the trans-continental air derby, non-stop class, last month, Tucker and Goebel arrived first at Mines field, but when they were acclaimed as winners they told of having had to make one stop en route. As none of the other entries succeeded the race was declared no contest.

The Yankee Doodle took off today at 4:16:35 p. m. Gasoline enough was carried for a flight of 24 hours, and Tucker and Collyer hoped to land in Los Angeles about noon tomorrow.

Food supply consisted of two apples and some water.

MUST ADAPT INDUSTRIES TO CHANGING CONDITIONS

HARTFORD, Oct. 24—(AP)—The necessity of adaptation by Connecticut manufacturers to changing conditions in foreign trade, which will in turn bring about a greater opportunity for the marketing of products in other countries, was emphasized by a group of representatives of the United States bureau of foreign and domestic commerce at the foreign trade conference of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, at the Hotel Bond, here today.

Dr. Julius Klein, director of the governmental bureau, was the principal speaker at the morning and afternoon sessions which were attended by about 150 Connecticut manufacturers, and regional and commodity conferences were held in smaller groups throughout the day, at which experts from the headquarters of the bureau acted as consultants. A cooperative office of the bureau, which is to be established in Hartford under the direction of Joseph E. Winchot, of Dayton, Ohio, was inaugurated at the morning assembly of the conference.

FOOD POISONING AFTER WEDDING IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 24—(AP)—With one dead, six ill in hospitals, and several ill at their homes, resultant from food poisoning following a wedding dinner given Monday afternoon at the home of Joseph Scinto, 535 Berkshire avenue, for the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scinto, police, under the direction of Coroner John J. Phelan, and local and state health officers have started an intensive investigation and illnesses.

Bridget Macriory, six, of 722 Ogden street, died early this morning at Park City hospital, after physicians had spent the night in attempting to save her life.

Dr. H. R. DeLuca, medical examiner, performed an autopsy this afternoon but will not be able to make a statement for two days.

GRAF ZEPPELIN POSTAGE ON LETTER TO GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—It will cost $1.05 to send a letter to Germany on the Graf Zeppelin and there will be no collecting on the other end.

Acting Postmaster General Glover was advised today that there were a lot of letters at Lakehurst intended for dispatch to Germany with short postage. These will be returned to the senders. Only mail in care of the postmasters at New York city or Lakehurst will be taken on board the dirigible when it starts its return trip. There are now 3,000 Zeppelin letters at Lakehurst.

CRIMINALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF GRANDFATHER

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 24—(AP)—Charles Tremont, of this city, was found to be criminally responsible for the death of his grandfather, Frank Burhance, 63, in a finding made public today by Deputy Coroner James J. Corrigan. According to the finding Tremont was driving his car at a rate of 50 miles an hour, under the influence of liquor, when he collided with another machine on the Danbury road, on October 2. Burhance was riding in the auto with Tremont and died at a hospital a short time after the accident.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS FOR PRINCETON MEN

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 24—(AP)—President John Grier Hibben of Princeton university today recommended twelve undergraduates and three alumni for the Rhodes scholarships. The men including Bradford H. Hutchins, of Waterville, Me. represent eight different states and must appear before the state committee of selections on December 8. The New Jersey section probably will meet in Princeton. Hutchins, member of the class of 1927, must apply in name.

GIVES UP CONTROL OF THE FOKKER AIRCRAFT CORP.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—Anthony H. G. Fokker announced today that he was relinquishing control of the Fokker Aircraft corporation to financial interests, which have subscribed $4,000,000 to the stock of the company. The reorganized company will have James A. Talbot, president of the Richfield Oil company, of California, as chairman, and Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, as president and general manager.

Zeppelin Flight Delayed By Rain

Postponed Until Today Because of Poor Visibility Over Allegheny Mountain Regions.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 24—(AP)—The middle-west flight of the trans-Atlantic air liner, Graf Zeppelin, tonight was postponed until tomorrow night because of rain and poor visibility over the Allegheny mountain region.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the airship, said a low pressure area moving across the Great Lakes toward the mountains, while placing the ship in no danger, would likely obscure the craft from the vision of observers below and hide the country from the passengers.

In addition, he said, the ship would encounter strong head winds which would make it impossible to complete the round trip from Lakehurst to Illinois in the time at the Graf Zeppelin's disposal before her return flight to Germany, which may start as early as next week, according to agents of the company.

The flight to the middle west would have no demonstrative value, Dr. Eckener said, unless the ship sailed in sight of the populace.

BOY WAS SLAIN FOR "SQUEALING" TO POLICE

NASHUA, N. H., Oct. 24—(AP)—A boy who "squealed" was dead, his 13 year old pal was being held to face a charge of murder in the first degree and another boy was being detained as a witness tonight in a murder case which rivalled those of gangland's shootings.

Adam Goodvitch 13, was the boy who paid with his life it is charged, for talking to the police. Frank Rokas, 13, was at the Manchester Industrial school where police said he confessed to the slaying and with him was John Miskinis 10, who was the alleged third member of the trio of boy burglars.

Rokas confessed, police said, that he shot Goodvitch through the heart yesterday and left his body in a heavy growth of brush in the rear of a Main street church in this city.

The boys were members of a band of juvenile burglars which was rounded up Monday night. They were released into the custody of their parents under the agreement that they were to return all the goods they had stolen.

A policeman investigating a prowler last night near the church found Goodvitch's body with a pistol laying near his hand. It was thought that death was either suicidal of accidental until it was found that the pistol had not been fired. A bag containing some of the articles which police said had been stolen by the boys was nearby.

BISHOP CANNON REPLIES TO SENATOR CARTER GLASS

BRISTOL, Va., Oct. 24—(AP)—Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, speaking at a gathering here today, devoted much of his address in answer to the charges by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia in a speech at Richmond last night.

"No man," the bishop declared, "can come forward and fling as a taunt in my face that while he was working for prohibition that I was a paid agent of the anti-saloon league."

Bishop Cannon said that when the enabling act fight was on in Virginia, he led it, and added "I would have been mighty glad if Senator Glass had been there helping me, but he wasn't."

Senator Glass was described by the bishop as a "mere pawn in the hands of Olvany, Hague and Brennan at Houston." Bishop Cannon denied that he had ever received more than traveling expenses from the anti-saloon league.

SENATOR BORAH TELLS WHY HE IS BEING ATTACKED

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 24—(AP)—Senator Joe T. Robinson democratic vice presidential nominee Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy and Governor Dan Moody of Texas were described by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho in a speech here tonight, as "being unable to defend Governor Smith's liquor stand so they are trying to attack me."

"It is easy to catch the defeatist tone," the senator declared in his speech which ended his southern campaign trip for Herbert Hoover's presidential candidacy. "Now they are not really attacking me at all; what they are doing is displaying the agony of mind which comes from trying to make a speech in favor of a candidate in whose principles and policies they do not believe."

SEN. ROBINSON ATTACKED HOOVER'S NEW YORK SPEECH

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Oct. 24—(AP)—The New York speech of Herbert Hoover was attacked by Senator Joe T. Robinson tonight as a document that pronounced the doom of agriculture legislation and was "illustrative of that smug complacency with which the powerful always regard the unfortunate victims of avarice."

The speech, Senator Robinson declared, disclosed the republican presidential nominee totally unable "to comprehend the nature and causes of the farm problem."

"His denunciation of the proposal to make the tariff effective for agriculture as 'state socialism' not only proves," Senator Robinson said, "his utter lack of sympathy for the desire of farmers to enjoy prosperity, but also his very prejudiced viewpoint which prompted the open appeal in his New York speech to all the forces of retrogression."

M. A. C. CO-EDS STRIKE IN PROTEST AGAINST FOOD

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 24—(AP)—The M. A. C. Co-eds went on strike this noon in protest against the food served in Draper Hall. Only 13 of the 225 girls appeared for the noon meal. Recently some of the girls have been ill and blamed the food. Some declared today that such things as defunct cockroaches, safety pins and buttons have been found in the food recently. They also charge the menus have not been sufficiently varied. The only answer to their petitions of protest have been opening of more cans and no improvements in the food, they say.

SEES HOOVER AS LEADING PROGRESSIVE OF OUR DAY

Charles Evans Hughes Sums Up the Political Aims of the American People in the Words "Prosperity and Progress"—Asserts That Hoover Has the Stability, Patience, Talent and Leadership to Assure a Continuance of Present Era of Prosperity.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—(AP)—Charles Evans Hughes, in his second speech in behalf of the candidacy of Herbert Hoover, declared here tonight that the political aims of the great majority of the American people could be summed up broadly in the words "prosperity and progress."

The former associate justice of the United States supreme court, and secretary of state under President Harding, arrived in Chicago only a few hours before the time set for his address in a hall on the north side of the city.

"Progress demands stability, patience in dealing with problems on their merits, the search for the practical way, the talent to recognize it and leadership in pursuing it," he declared.

"If I were asked to name the man who in my judgment is the leading progressive of our day, I should name the republican candidate for president, Herbert Hoover."

Mr. Hughes said much had been done in this campaign in an effort to belittle the "prosperity we enjoy," but he would not discuss it.

"With our roads filled with motor cars, with our savings bank deposits increased in the past seven years and a half from 15 to 26 billions of dollars, there is little need to argue the point," he said.

The government can help in maintaining the extending prosperity by economy, by protection to American interests through adequate tariff, by the extension through internal improvements of the facilities of transportation, and by giving the co-operation of government to co-operative endeavors, Mr. Hughes declared.

As to progress, Mr. Hughes said the republican nominee's "whole bent is in devising improvements and in seeking a more abundant life for all."

"Mr. Hoover has no notion that this can be done by putting government unnecessarily into business," he continued. "He knows that would wreck both government and business. He knows you cannot make the community rich by impoverishing the individuals that compose it. But he knows that government can help or harm. He knows that prosperity can be greatly stimulated by sound governmental policies and methods. He believes the policies which will aid most are those of the republican party.

"The candidate of the democratic party, in an endeavor to prove the contrary, has become quite reckless in his assertions. Thus he said the other day in his speech in this city:

"'The republican party never learns anything new. They never see anything new. They have no ideas about progress.'

"Governor Smith seems to forget that it is the republican party that, against tremendous opposition, gave the interstate commerce commission its rate-making power in the control of transportation; that gave us the Hepburn act and the Carmack amendment; the pure food and drugs act; the meat inspection act; the hours of service act; the employers' liability act; the federal budget reform and many other progressive measures.

"The republican party, whatever its shortcomings, has had constructive genius. It has been genuinely progressive, but some of its best efforts have been put forth in opposing democratic policies which would have been ruinous."

Turning to the part government may play in the prosperity of a people, Hughes said economy was a great factor, with the tendency toward increasing outlays in municipalities, states and nations.

"Every dollar taken unnecessarily in taxes is a drain on our prosperity," he explained. "There is only one way to prevent oppressive taxes and that is by rigorous and intelligent economy. This has been the policy of the republican administration which for the first time in our national history has put into operation an effective system in the interest of economy, with most gratifying results.

"Nothing in this campaign has been more discreditable in my judgment than the attempt to belie and ridicule this successful effort."

Hughes quoted at length from Secretary Mellon's statement as to what has been accomplished by the administration in the matter of reduction of taxes and public debt.

"But instead of taking pride in such achievements, our opponents resort to derisive comment," the speaker said.

Praising the work of Vice-President Dawes when he was at the head of the federal budget bureau, and that of General Lord who followed Mr. Dawes in that position, Mr. Hughes added: "Yet Governor Smith calls him 'Col. Mulberry Sellers Lord,' and accuses him of selling 'eyewash' to the public.

"I suppose this is what Governor Smith calls the 'low down.' I think it is quite low down; a very cheap performance."

Mr. Hughes said he had been unable to find that Governor Smith had a record of economy.

"I think he needs men like Secretary Mellon and General Lord to get results," declared Mr. Hughes.

Mr. Hughes recalled that the first thing the republicans did was to replace the democratic act with one of their own policy, under which "we have greatly prospered." He said the democrats now seek to be put in power, "assuring us they wish no general revision of the republican tariff."

HELD FOR DEFRAUDING PORTLAND, CONN., MAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—Percy Jay Fuller, stock promoter, who has been at liberty under $30,000 bail pending an appeal from his conviction last June on a charge of using the mails to defraud, was locked up in default of $30,000 bail today on a new charge of swindling.

A dozen former clients said their losses through Fuller's operations would exceed $100,000. The specific charge against Fuller today was the theft of $2,000 from Charles Larsen of Portland, Conn., by selling him worthless stock on the promise of a 40 per cent return on the investment.

Larsen testified that he had given Fuller $6,000 but that the promoter returned $2,700. The witness said he not only invested his own money, but induced friends to turn over to Fuller about $100,000.

Last June Fuller was convicted on four counts of the indictment against him. He was sentenced to serve four years under each count, the sentences to run concurrently. Among his victims in the transactions involved in that case was Mrs. Theodore F. Shonts, widow of the transit magnate.

SENATOR NORRIS THROWS HIS SUPPORT TO GOV. SMITH

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 24—(AP)—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, today definitely cast his support to Gov. Alfred E. Smith for president.

The Nebraskan announced his position during a brief stop here en route from Seattle to Omaha, where Saturday night he will deliver the first of a series of speeches in behalf of the democratic national ticket.

"For a progressive there is no other place to land except in the Smith camp," said Senator Norris, who is listed in the congressional directory as a republican, but refers to himself as a "progressive."

He based his endorsement of the democratic nominee on Smith's stand on farm relief and against the "water-power monopoly."

"I am not with Gov. Smith on his stand on prohibition," he said, "but I think that will be worked out satisfactorily if he is elected."

SEN. BINGHAM ADDRESSED UNION LEAGUE OF PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24—(AP)—Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut in addressing the Union League today said the American people had analyzed the abilities of Herbert Hoover and Governor Alfred E. Smith, and that on the basis of their findings Hoover would be elected president.

He charged the democratic leaders with straddling the tariff issue, and drew a contrast between the candidates in their attitude toward the army and navy.

"The republican party in its platform," said the speaker, "pledges that combat ships of the navy shall be kept at the treaty ratio and, while Hoover deplores war, he insists that we have an army and navy sufficient to enable us to protect the nation."

Governor Smith, he said had declared against the expenditure of any great sums in maintaining the armed forces of the country.

HOOVER MID-WEST SUBJECTS WATERWAYS AND AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Herbert Hoover, will make waterways and the problem of agriculture the subjects of his middle-western speech at St. Louis speech on November 2.

The speech, the last one the republican presidential nominee will make before the election will be delivered in the Coliseum over a nation-wide radio hook-up. The nominee will arrive in the city late in the afternoon and will go immediately to the auditorium leaving St. Louis to proceed westward shortly after he finishes his speech.

Hoover now expects to go to Washington on his trans-continental trip to his home in Palo Alto to vote a week from tomorrow and will make stops at Cumberland, Md., and Louisville, Ky., on his way to St. Louis. He will make brief platform talks at both of those stops. From St. Louis he will move to Grand Island, Neb., and then to Wyoming, Utah and Nevada over the shortest route to his home.

The nominee expects to arrive in Palo Alto on the afternoon before the election and probably will make a radio address that night in which he will urge all citizens to vote. On the following day he will cast his ballot in a polling booth on the campus of Stanford university.

MRS. WATKINS APPEARS BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

HARTFORD, Oct. 24—(AP)—Outraged at the treatments he had received from the principals in the Watkins case during its sensational developments, over a period of six months Mrs. Margaret E. Watkins wife of the convict, Roger W. Watkins, came out of the obscurity of the county jail today and for two hours volunteered to the grand jury the facts she wished to divulge in relation to the state's new and extensive inquiry into certain phases of the case.

Two significant developments preceded her appearance before the grand jury. At the request of State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, the foreman of the previous grand jury Corporation Counsel Francis W. Cole was discharged along with the other members of the grand jury, and Attorney Ralph O. Wells, counsel for the Hartford chamber of commerce was made foreman of a new grand jury which included eleven members of the old grand jury and seven new members.

DETECTIVE TESTIFIES IN LEOPOLD MURDER TRIAL

WATERBURY, Oct. 24—(AP)—Detective Sergeant Henry Johnson, of the Waterbury police force denied this afternoon at the trial of Louis N. Leopold that he had promised Morris Shellnitz, who was indicted with Leopold on first degree murder and causing death by wilful burning of a building charges, that he would set off light if he turned state's evidence. He also denied that he promised Shellnitz half of the $600 found in the pocket of Samuel Weiss, who was burned to death in the fire. The detective also said he never told Shellnitz he would be paid $2 a day while held in jail for the trial.

BOSTON PANDEMONIACAL IN ITS WELCOME TO GOV. SMITH

Democratic Presidential Nominee, Upon His Arrival, Was Surrounded by a Yelling Crowd Which Stretched For Miles—Only by Brute Force Could the Police Restrain the Throngs—Crowds in the Streets Slowed Down the Parade—Outside the Arena the Police Battled With Multitudes Which Sought Admission in Vain—Inside the Hall the Cheering Was Deafening.

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—Staid old Boston turned out in Main street fashion today to welcome Alfred E. Smith and his famous brown derby. The moment the democratic presidential nominee stepped from his special train at South station he was surrounded by the vanguard of a yelling crowd which stretched for several miles.

Here, as through the west, the south and the border states, he was greeted with the salutation: "Hello, Al." Hardly had the governor stepped through the door of the station to the street before shouting enthusiasts had bowle dover all semblance of police protection. The crowd clogged the street in a jiffy. It was minutes before a parade—such as it was—could get under way.

The police, and there were 900 on duty on the line of march, only by brute strength got the people away from the nominee's car so it could move. It did move a few feet, only to stop, and the reason was apparent: The nominee was standing up in the back seat waving the brown derby. All the cheer leaders of Harvard and Boston universities could not have developed more lung power than the crowd turned loose at the sight of the "Brownie" as the brown derby now is called by many. And while this was on, confetti, the bought kind, along with the home-made variety of torn scraps of paper, floated down from above.

But finally the parade got started. The machines crept along in low gear. The crowd which began at the base of buildings on the sidewalks extended without a break into the middle of the street where it brushed against the sides of the cars. From the running board of the third car back of the governor one could look down Summer street into a sea of people in which there was not a gap. It was only as the machines pushed forward that a pathway appeared. The machines passed and the pathway was gone.

In front of the cars there were people. In the rear as far as the eye could see back along the narrow winding streets of Boston, there still were people.

Air Full of Flying Paper

The air was full of flying paper. Long yellow, purple and white streamers swung slowly down from the buildings, catching here and there in trolley wires.

Another shout down the line. It was the governor up again. A burst of racket—it was the brown derby off again, then when the governor put the derby in the place where hats usually are worn, there'd be another shout. This time it was a black derby—the hat of Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts.

And so the parade of the brown derbies continued slowly through the city.

The Arena hall was packed, every inch of it, more than an hour before the governor was scheduled to go on a nation-wide hook-up of 30 radio stations at 9 p. m. There was hardly elbow room in the structure. No one could tell where the aisles were, as people were everywhere.

Outside, scores of police were battling with another crowd, a disappointed one, which sought admission in vain. It was with difficulty that the few holding passes, most of them newspaper correspondents, got into the hall. Inside, the cheering was deafening. It swept in waves through the large hall, which members of the local reception committee said would seat 10,000 or more people.

Mayor Edward Quinn of Cambridge, democratic national committeeman, had the audience on its feet shouting and howling by a reference to Governor Smith as the next president of the United States.

While the cheering was going on many tossed confetti and scraps of paper from the gallery which surrounded the hall.

There was another demonstration when Mrs. Jessie Wilson Sayre, daughter of the late Woodrow Wilson, appeared on the platform. She was applauded and cheered when she presented Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts to the audience. The senator in turn was cheered and cheered when he referred to Smith as an independent, and a progressive. A moment later the hall rang with shouting when the senator said: "Alfred E. Smith is a free man."

Walsh also praised Senator George Norris of Nebraska, a republican progressive who only today announced he would stump for Smith.

Dozen People Injured

Meanwhile, police inside received word from their comrades battling on the outside of the building that a dozen or more people had been injured in the crush around the doors. Several of these, the officers in the press stand section of the hall said, were sent to hospitals. Of the number injured, two were reported to be policemen.

After Walsh, who is up for re-election this year, concluded, the band took a turn at entertaining the crowd and then Mrs. Sayre introduced Gen. Charles H. Cole, democratic gubernatorial nominee. The daughter of America's war-time president in a brief speech in introducing the speakers, said that "a vote for the republican party endorses its record of crime."

"No prejudices, no blind fears can alter the fact," she said, "that a vote for the republican party now gives license hereafter to any corrupt official to do his work unchallenged by his party, uncensured in any effective way by the public. Mr. Hoover has given the record of the republican party both under Mr. Harding and Mr. Coolidge his unqualified endorsement."

The governor reached the hall a few minutes before nine. He was preceded to the front of the platform by Mrs. Smith and the moment she appeared the audience was on its feet yelling at the top of its lungs.

The din grew in volume a minute later when the nominee stepped forward. Waving his hand and smiling broadly, the governor looked out over the yelling thousands—then waved and waved again.

The audience was on its feet. A band was blaring forth with the "Sidewalks of New York." The audience joined in. It stopped its shouting and put its lung-power into the song.

It apparently liked its efforts with the song for again it cheered and cheered when it was over.

Mrs. Sayre walked across the platform and shook hands with the man aspiring for the office her father held for eight years. Again the audience began singing the "Sidewalks." At the last note there was more yelling. A photographer set off a flare. The report of the flare explosion hardly was heard in the din.

Quieting the Audience

After eleven and one-half minutes of cheering the governor brought some semblance of quiet by motioning both hands for silence.

"Sh, sh, sh," went the audience and the yelling ceased. In a few words Mrs. Sayre introduced the governor. Another demonstration started as he walked to the microphone. While this was going on, the nominee adjusted his glasses. The noise subsided as he moved nearer the microphone.

"Sh, sh, sh," went the audience again. The nominee opened his address by referring to Woodrow Wilson as the "greatest living American." There was more cheering. The governor then asked the audience to refrain from cheering until he had concluded, saying "we are paying for this radio time."

Before reaching the Arena Governor Smith made brief addresses to gatherings which filled Mechanics building and Symphony hall.

It had been announced earlier that on account of the throngs which had collected in the vicinity of both places that the governor had deemed it advisable and go directly to the Arena from his hotel, but he adhered to his original schedule.

Thousands were massed at both auditoriums when Gov. Smith arrived and he was greeted with prolonged cheering at each place.

Former Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, introduced him at Mechanics building as "the greatest humanitarian in the world."

Gov. Smith told his audiences that he had been in all the big cities of the west and south but his reception in Boston was "something I'll never forget." He said, "I've never received any reception greater in any place in the country."

After the governor's departure for the Arena, the crowds remained in both Symphony hall and Mechanics building to listen to his Arena address which was brought to them by radio loud speakers.

As the governor warmed up to his speech, he began gesturing freely. He declared Mr. Hoover's utterances on water-power had not been satisfactory. He accused his rival of having used a "conglomeration of words intended to hide something."

He said Mr. Hoover had been called upon by a committee in Los Angeles, Calif., and asked to explain his views.

"He told them he favored the largest dam on the Colorado river that the engineers would recommend," he said. "That was not using words to convey a meaning. The height of the dam is an engineering problem. That has absolutely nothing at all to do with the principle of who is to develop the water-power and who is to gain the profit from it. That is a question of construction.

"The high dam means the greater flow; the greater flow means the largest possible horsepower development; but it has nothing at all to do with the principle."

ABSTRACT OF GOVERNORS SMITH'S SPEECH IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—The charge that Herbert Hoover was using words to "conceal rather than convey" a meaning was made tonight by Governor Alfred E. Smith, who ripped into utterances made by the republican presidential nominee in New York city on water power, farm relief, prosperity and prohibition.

Opening his final drive for the presidency in this city where Hoover spoke nine days ago, the democratic candidate declared in a speech specially prepared for the occasion that the expression of "state socialism" was the stock argument of the power trust" which had been used against him in his gubernatorial fights in New York state.

"The cry of socialism has been patented by powerful interests," he said, "that desire to put the damper on progressive legislation."

The governor argued that on the question of water power the problem simmered down to this:

"Either the people are to retain these water power sites under public ownership and public control, or they are to lease them to private companies for private profit."

The nominee then said he was "not simple-minded on this subject" and declared that he had known "all along exactly where the republican candidate stood."

"What I have been trying to do is to drag him into the open," he continued. "From August 11th to Oct. 22d, Mr. Hoover succeeded in using words to hide his meaning, but on last Monday night the cat got out of the bag, and, at Madison Square Garden in New York city, he told the progressive members of his own party, as well as the democrats of the country, that their proposals would 'cause us to turn to state socialism.'

"If what he says in his Madison

Off On Record Trans-Continental Flight

Monoplane Yankee Doodle Started From Roosevelt Field at 4:15 p. m. Yesterday.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Oct. 24—(AP)—The cigar-shaped Lockheed Vega monoplane Yankee Doodle sh[illegible] like a white projectile from the runway this afternoon and headed for Mines field, Los Angeles, in an attempt to beat a record that has stood for more than five years.

Harry Tucker, owner of the plane, was in the rear seat, dressed in an ordinary business suit, while the controls were in the hands of Capt. C. B. D. Collyer, sky writer and joint holder of the round-the-world speed record.

Last August Tucker, piloted by Art Goebel, crossed the country in one hop from Los Angeles in 18 hours and 58 minutes, beating the time of the only trans-continental non-stop flight there had ever been by almost eight hours.

That early flight was made from east to west by Lieut. John Macready and Oakley Kelly in 1923, their time being 26 hours and 50 minutes. In the flight started today Collyer and Tucker will attempt to beat Macready and Kelly over their own course.

The Yankee Doodle once before has raced from the east coast toward the west, but without success. In the trans-continental air derby, non-stop class, last month, Tucker and Goebel arrived first at Mines field, but when they were acclaimed as winners they told of having had to make one stop en route. As none of the other entries succeeded the race was declared no contest.

The Yankee Doodle took off today at 4:16:35 p. m. Gasoline enough was carried for a flight of 24 hours, and Tucker and Collyer hoped to land in Los Angeles about noon tomorrow.

Food supply consisted of two apples and some water.

MUST ADAPT INDUSTRIES TO CHANGING CONDITIONS

HARTFORD, Oct. 24—(AP)—The necessity of adaptation by Connecticut manufacturers to changing conditions in foreign trade, which will in turn bring about a greater opportunity for the marketing of products in other countries, was emphasized by a group of representatives of the United States bureau of foreign and domestic commerce at the foreign trade conference of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, at the Hotel Bond, here today.

Dr. Julius Klein, director of the governmental bureau, was the principal speaker at the morning and afternoon sessions which were attended by about 150 Connecticut manufacturers, and regional and commodity conferences were held by water groups throughout the day at which experts from the headquarters of the bureau acted as consultants. A cooperative office of the bureau, which is to be established in Hartford under the direction of Joseph E. Winchot, of Dayton, Ohio, was inaugurated at the morning assembly of the conference.

FOOD POISONING AFTER WEDDING IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 24—(AP)—With one dead, six ill in hospitals, and several ill at their homes, resultant from food poisoning following a wedding dinner given Monday afternoon at the home of Joseph Scinto, 535 Berkshire avenue, for the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scinto, police, under the direction of Coroner John J. Phelan, and local and state health officers have started an intensive investigation and illnesses.

Bridget Macriory, aged 7, of 722 Ogden street, died early this morning at Park City hospital, after physicians had spent the night in attempting to save her life.

Dr. H. R. DeLuca, medical examiner, performed an autopsy this afternoon but will not be able to make a statement for two days.

GRAF ZEPPELIN . POSTAGE ON LETTER TO GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—It will cost $1.05 to send a letter to Germany on the Graf Zeppelin and there will be no collecting on the other end.

Acting Postmaster General Glover was advised today that there were a lot of letters at Lakehurst intended for dispatch to Germany with short postage. These will be returned to the senders. Only mail in care of the postmasters at New York city or Lakehurst will be taken on board the dirigible when it starts its return trip. There are now 3,000 Zeppelin letters at Lakehurst.

CRIMINALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF GRANDFATHER

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 24—(AP)—Charles Tremont, of this city, was found to be criminally responsible for the death of his grandfather, Frank Burhance, 63, in a finding made public today by Deputy Coroner James J. Corrigan. According to the finding Tremont was driving his car at a rate of 50 miles an hour, under the influence of liquor, when he collided with another machine on the Danbury road, on October 2. Burhance was riding in the auto with Tremont and died at a hospital a short time after the accident.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS FOR PRINCETON MEN

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 24—(AP)—President John Grier Hibben of Princeton university today recommended twelve undergraduates and three alumni for the Rhodes scholarships. The men including Bradford H. Hutchins, of Waterville, Me, represent eight different states and must appear before the state committee of selections on December 8. The New Jersey section probably will meet in Princeton. Hutchins, member of the class of 1927, must apply in name.

GIVES UP CONTROL OF THE FOKKER AIRCRAFT CORP.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—Anthony H. G. Fokker announced today that he was relinquishing control of the Fokker Aircraft corporation to financial interests, which have subscribed $4,000,000 to the stock of the company. The reorganized company will have James A. Talbot, president of the Richfield Oil company, of California, as chairman, and Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, as president and general manager.

Zeppelin Flight Delayed By Rain

Postponed Until Today Because of Poor Visibility Over Allegheny Mountain Regions.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 24—(AP)—The middle-west flight of the trans-Atlantic air liner, Graf Zeppelin, tonight was postponed until tomorrow night because of rain and poor visibility over the Allegheny mountain region.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the airship, said a low pressure area moving across the Great Lakes toward the mountains, while placing the ship in no danger, would likely obscure the craft from the vision of observers below and hide the country from the passengers.

In addition, he said, the ship would encounter strong head winds which would make it impossible to complete the round trip from Lakehurst to Illinois in the time at the Graf Zeppelin's disposal before her return flight to Germany, which may start as early as next week, according to agents of the company.

The flight to the middle west would have no demonstrative value, Dr. Eckener said, unless the ship sailed in sight of the populace.

BOY WAS SLAIN FOR "SQUEALING" TO POLICE

NASHUA, N. H., Oct. 24—(AP)—A boy who "squealed" was dead, his 13 year old pal was being held to face a charge of murder in the first degree and another boy was being detained as a witness tonight in a murder case which rivalled those of gangland's shootings.

Adam Goodvitch 13, was the boy who paid with his life it is charged, for talking to the police. Frank Rokas, 12, was at the Manchester Industrial school where police said he confessed to the slaying and with him was John Miskinis 10, who was the alleged third member of the trio of boy burglars.

Rokas confessed, police said, that he shot Goodvitch through the heart yesterday and left his body in a heavy growth of brush in the rear of a Main street church in this city.

The boys were members of a band of juvenile burglars which was rounded up Monday night. They were released into the custody of their parents under the agreement that they were to return all the goods they had stolen.

A policeman investigating a prowler last night near the church found Goodvitch's body with a pistol laying near his hand. It was thought that death was either suicidal or accidental until it was found that the pistol ha dnot been fired. A bag containing some of the articles which police said had been stolen by the boys was nearby.

BISHOP CANNON REPLIES TO SENATOR CARTER GLASS

BRISTOL, Va., Oct. 24—(AP)—Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, speaking at a gathering here today, devoted much of his address to answer to the charges by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia in a speech at Richmond last night.

"No man," the bishop declared, "can come forward and fling as a taunt in my face that while he was working for prohibition that I was a paid agent of the anti-saloon league."

Bishop Cannon said that when the enabling act fight was on in Virginia, he led it, and added "I would have been mighty glad if Senator Glass had been there helping me, but he wasn't."

Senator Glass was described by the bishop as a "mere pawn in the hands of Olvany, Hague and Brennan at Houston." Bishop Cannon denied that he had ever received more than traveling expenses from the anti-saloon league.

SENATOR BORAH TELLS WHY HE IS BEING ATTACKED

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 24—(AP)—Senator Joe T. Robinson democratic vice presidential nominee Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy and Governor Dan Moody of Texas were described by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho in a speech here tonight, as "being unable to defend Governor Smith's liquor stand so they are trying to attack me."

"It is easy to catch the defeatist tone," the senator declared in his speech which ended his southern campaign trip for Herbert Hoover's presidential candidacy. "Now they are not really attacking me at all: what they are doing is displaying the agony of mind which comes from trying to make a speech in favor of a candidate in whose principles and policies they do not believe."

SEN. ROBINSON ATTACKED HOOVER'S NEW YORK SPEECH

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Oct. 24—(AP)—The New York speech of Herbert Hoover was attacked by Senator Joe T. Robinson tonight as a document that pronounced the doom of agriculture legislation and was "illustrative of that smug complacency with which the powerful always regard the unfortunate victims of avarice."

The speech, Senator Robinson declared, disclosed the republican presidential nominee totally unable "to comprehend the nature and causes of the farm problem."

"His denunciation of the proposal to make the tariff effective for agriculture as 'state socialism' not only proves," Senator Robinson said, "his utter lack of sympathy for the desire of farmers to enjoy prosperity, but also his very prejudiced viewpoint which prompted the open appeal in his New York speech to all the forces of retrogression."

M. A. C. CO-EDS STRIKE IN PROTEST AGAINST FOOD

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 24—(AP)—The M. A. C. Co-eds went on strike this noon in protest against the food served in Draper Hall. Only 13 of the 225 girls appeared for the noon meal. Recently some of the girls have been ill and blamed the food. Some declared today that such things as defunct cockroaches, safety pins and buttons have been found in the food recently. They also charge the menus have not been sufficiently varied. The only answer to their petitions of protest have been opening of more cans and no improvements in the food, they say.

SEES HOOVER AS LEADING PROGRESSIVE OF OUR DAY

Charles Evans Hughes Sums Up the Political Aims of the American People in the Words "Prosperity and Progress"—Asserts That Hoover Has the Stability, Patience, Talent and Leadership to Assure a Continuance of Present Era of Prosperity.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—(AP)—Charles Evans Hughes, in his second speech in behalf of the candidacy of Herbert Hoover, declared here tonight that the political aims of the great majority of the American people could be summed up broadly in the words "prosperity and progress."

The former associate justice of the United States supreme court, and secretary of state under President Harding, arrived in Chicago only a few hours before the time set for his address in a hall on the north side of the city.

"Progress demands stability, patience in dealing with problems on their merits, the search for the practical way, the talent to recognize it and leadership in pursuing it," he declared.

"If I were asked to name the man who in my judgment is the leading progressive of our day, I should name the republican candidate for president, Herbert Hoover."

Mr. Hughes said much had been done in this campaign in an effort to belittle the "prosperity we enjoy," but he would not discuss it.

"With our roads filled with motor cars, with our savings bank deposits increased in the past seven years and a half from 15 to 26 billions of dollars, there is little need to argue the point," he said.

The government can help in maintaining the extending prosperity by economy, by protection to American interests through adequate tariff, by the extension through internal improvements of the facilities of transportation, and by giving the co-operation of government to co-operative endeavors, Mr. Hughes declared.

As to progress, Mr. Hughes said the republican nominee's "whole bent is in devising improvements and in seeking a more abundant life for all."

"Mr. Hoover has no notion that this can be done by putting government unnecessarily into business," he continued. "He knows that would wreck both government and business. He knows you cannot make the community rich by impoverishing the individuals that compose it. But he knows that government can help or harm. He knows that prosperity can be greatly stimulated by sound governmental policies and methods. He believes the policies which will aid most are those of the republican party.

"The candidate of the democratic party, in an endeavor to prove the contrary, has become quite reckless in his assertions. Thus he said the other day in his speech in this city:

"'The republican party never learns anything new. They never see anything new. They have no ideas about progress.'

"Governor Smith seems to forget that it is the republican party that, against tremendous opposition, gave the interstate commerce commission its rate-making power in the control of transportation; that gave us the Hepburn act and the Carmack amendment; the pure food and drugs act; the meat inspection act; the hours of service act; the employers' liability act; the federal budget reform and many other progressive measures.

"The republican party, whatever its shortcomings, has had constructive genius. It has been genuinely progressive, but some of its best efforts have been put forth in opposing democratic policies which would have been ruinous."

Turning to the part government may play in the prosperity of a people, Hughes said economy was a great factor, with the tendency toward increasing outlays in municipalities, states and nations.

"Every dollar taken unnecessarily in taxes is a drain on our prosperity," he explained. "There is only one way to prevent oppressive taxes and that is by rigorous and intelligent economy. This has been the policy of the republican administration which for the first time in our national history has put into operation an effective system in the interest of economy, with most gratifying results.

"Nothing in this campaign has been more discreditable in my judgment than the attempt to belie and ridicule this successful effort."

Hughes quoted at length from Secretary Mellon's statement as to what has been accomplished by the administration in the matter of reduction of taxes and public debt.

"But instead of taking pride in such achievements, our opponents resort to derisive comment," the speaker said.

Praising the work of Vice-President Dawes when he was at the head of the federal budget bureau, and that of General Lord who followed Mr. Dawes in that position, Mr. Hughes added: "Yet Governor Smith calls him 'Col. Mulberry Sellers Lord,' and accuses him of selling 'eyewash' to the public.

"I suppose this is what Governor Smith calls the 'low down.' I think it is quite low down; a very cheap performance."

Mr. Hughes said he had been unable to find that Governor Smith had a record of economy.

"I think he needs men like Secretary Mellon and General Lord to get results," declared Mr. Hughes.

Mr. Hughes recalled that the first thing the republicans did was to replace the democratic act with one of their own policy, under which "we have greatly prospered." He said the democrats now seek to be put in power, "assuring us they wish no general revision of the republican tariff."

[illegible] FOR DEFRAUDING PORTLAND, CONN., MAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—Percy Jay Fuller, stock promoter, who has been at liberty under $30,000 bail pending an appeal from his conviction last June on a charge of using the mails to defraud, was locked up in default of $30,000 bail today on a new charge of swindling.

A dozen former clients said their losses through Fuller's operations would exceed $100,000. The specific charge against Fuller today was the theft of $2,000 from Charles Larsen of Portland, Conn., by selling him worthless stock on the promise of a 40 per cent return on the investment.

Larsen testified that he had given Fuller $6,000 but that the promoter returned $2,700. The witness said he not only invested his own money, but induced friends to turn over to Fuller about $100,000.

Last June Fuller was convicted on four counts of the indictment against him. He was sentenced to serve four years under each count, the sentences to run concurrently. Among his victims in the transactions involved in that case was Mrs. Theodore F. Shonts, widow of the transit magnate.

SENATOR NORRIS THROWS HIS SUPPORT TO GOV. SMITH

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 24—(AP)—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, today definitely cast his support to Gov. Alfred E. Smith for president.

The Nebraskan announced his position during a brief stop here en route from Seattle to Omaha, where Saturday night he will deliver the first of a series of speeches in behalf of the democratic national ticket.

"For a progressive there is no other place to land except in the Smith camp," said Senator Norris, who is listed in the congressional directory as a republican, but refers to himself as a "progressive."

He based his endorsement of the democratic nominee on Smith's stand on farm relief and against the "water-power monopoly."

"I am not with Gov. Smith on his stand on prohibition," he said, "but I think that will be worked out satisfactorily if he is elected."

SEN. BINGHAM ADDRESSED UNION LEAGUE OF PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24—(AP)—Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut in addressing the Union League today said the American people had analyzed the abilities of Herbert Hoover and Governor Alfred E. Smith, and that on the basis of their findings Hoover would be elected president.

He charged the democratic leaders with straddling the tariff issue, and drew a contrast between the candidates in their attitude toward the army and navy.

"The republican party in its platform," said the speaker, "pledges that combat ships of the navy shall be kept at the treaty ratio and while Hoover deplores war, he insists that we have an army and navy sufficient to enable us to protect the nation."

Governor Smith, he said had declared against the expenditure of any great sums in maintaining the armed forces of the country.

HOOVER MID-WEST SUBJECTS WATERWAYS AND AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Herbert Hoover, will make waterways and the problem of agriculture the subjects of his middle-western speech at St. Louis speech on November 2.

The speech, the last one the republican presidential nominee will make before the election will be delivered in the Coliseum over a nation-wide radio hook-up. The nominee will arrive in the city late in the afternoon and will go immediately to the auditorium leaving St. Louis to proceed westward shortly after he finishes his speech.

Hoover now expects to go to Washington on his trans-continental trip to his home in Palo Alto to vote a week from tomorrow and will make stops at Cumberland, Md., and Louisville, Ky., on his way to St. Louis. He will make brief platform talks at both of those stops. From St. Louis he will move to Grand Island, Neb., and then to Wyoming, Utah and Nevada over the shortest route to his home.

The nominee expects to arrive in Palo Alto on the afternoon before the election and probably will make a radio address that night in which he will urge all citizens to vote. On the following day he will cast his ballot in a polling booth on the campus of Stanford university.

MRS. WATKINS APPEARS BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

HARTFORD, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Outraged at the treatments he had received from the principals in the Watkins case during its sensational developments over a period of six months Mrs. Margaret E Watkins wife of the convict, Roger W. Watkins, came out of the obscurity of the county jail today and for two hours volunteered to the grand jury the facts she wished to divulge in relation to the state's new and extensive inquiry into certain phases of the case.

Two significant developments preceded her appearance before the grand jury. At the request of State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, the foreman of the previous grand jury, Corporation Counsel Francis W Cole, was discharged along with the other members of the grand jury, and Attorney Ralph O. Wells, counsel for the Hartford chamber of commerce was made foreman of a new grand jury which included eleven members of the old grand jury and seven new members.

DETECTIVE TESTIFIES IN LEOPOLD MURDER TRIAL

WATERBURY, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Detective Sergeant Henry Johnson, of the Waterbury police force denied this afternoon at the trial of Louis N. Leopold that he had promised Morris Shellnitz, who was indicted with Leopold on first degree murder and causing death by wilful burning of a building charges, that he would set off light if he turned state's evidence. He also denied that he promised Shellnitz half of the $600 found in the pocket of Samuel Weiss, who was burned to death in the fire. The detective also said he never told Shellnitz he would be paid $2 a day while held in jail for the trial.

GOV. SMITH WILL SPEAK BRIEFLY TO LOCAL PEOPLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 24—The announcement made in this newspaper Wednesday morning that Governor "Al" Smith would make a five-minute stop on his special train here Thursday afternoon from 3.15 to 3.20 o'clock created wide interest and led to another announcement made during the day that the democratic presidential candidate would say a few words to the populace from the rear platform of the train. The train will bear the nominee, his attendants and some 40 newspapermen and the stop will be made at the New Haven railroad passenger station. In communication with Thomas J Spellacy of Hartford today Town Clerk Frank P Fenton learned that arrangements called for James Walsh of Meriden, chairman of the democratic state committee to board the train here and accompany the governor to Hartford. Mr. Fenton, democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor and member of the reception committee for the arrival of Governor Smith in Hartford will also probably board the nominee's train here for the trip to Hartford. The train will leave Providence at 1.30 p. m. and arrive in Hartford at 4.05 o'clock, making stops at Blackstone, Willimantic and Manchester.

A detail of police has been ordered to handle an expected huge crowd and traffic in the vicinity of Railroad street and the station as it apparent that thousands will flock to the scene to hear and see the governor.

C. H. CLARKE, CIVIL WAR VETERAN DIES HERE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 24—Charles Henry Clarke, 88 and Civil War veteran, died at his home on Jackson street late Tuesday evening. He had been in poor health for the past three years. He was born in Presque Isle, Me., August 19, 1840, son of Ephriam and Mary McKellar Clarke. He served during the full duration of the Civil war, being connected with the Seventh Maine regiment in which he was a volunteer. He was an active member of the G. A. R., for many years. He was a carpenter and lumberman by occupation and since his coming to Connecticut from Maine some 40 years ago he had spent most of his time in Willimantic. The deceased leaves his wife, Mrs. Cynthia Clarke and eight daughters: Mrs. Charles Prentiss of Antrim, N. H., Mrs F. S Long of Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. F E. Witter of Spartanburg, S. C., Mrs. L. D. Broughton of West Hartford, Mrs. C. L. Robinson of Columbia and the Misses Leone, Leola and Bernice Clarke, of this city; two sisters, Mrs. Augusta Dorman of Groton and Miss Laura Clarke of the Card Home, this city; also nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The first honor roll of the school year at the Windham High school made public today consists of the names of 134 pupils who achieved marks of 80 per cent. or over during the marking period just closed. The list, issued by Principal Egbert A Case shows that in the classification of pupils having an average of 90 per cent. or over in four subjects, there are three seniors, five juniors, five sophomores and three freshmen. In the next division of 80 per cent or over there are 24 seniors, 24 juniors 23 sophomores and 46 freshmen. Those having 90 per cent or over are: Seniors: Jerome Arnold, Earle Potter, Alden Fuller; juniors: Harry Levine, Rose Dzwoncavk, Claire Frink, Elizabeth Seckerson, Dorothy White; sophomores: Herbert Johnson, Faith Arnold, Jean Chamberlin, Helen Curran, Vera Rabinowitz; freshmen: Geraldine Bushnell, Olive Jacobs, Evelyn Pollard.

A touch of the old way of advertising candidates in political campaigns was noted here this morning when a large banner, bearing the names of A. L. Weatherhead and Charles B Pomeroy, republican candidates for representatives from the town of Windham, was strung out over Main street between the Jordan Hardware company building and the Windham House block. The banner is one of but a few public manifestations of the keen interest in the present campaign that have been made here to date. Only one public rally has been held, that by the democrats, although this is to be reiterated next Monday night with a rally under the auspices of the Windham Republican club. A campaign dinner was also given Monday evening by the Women's Republican club.

Articles of incorporation for the Uncas Silk company of Windham have been filed with the secretary of state and a copy filed at the office of the town clerk today. The incorporators are Howard A. Reesie, P. Leslie F and Bertha R. Hartson, all of North Windham. The capital stock is set at $50,000 and common stock will be valued at $100 a share with $20,000 to be paid in to start the business. The company is to engage in carrying on every mercantile and manufacturing process connected with the manufacture of silk, rayon cotton or kindred products.

Mrs. H. C. Murray was overnight guest of her sister, Miss Mary Porteous of Norwich.

A kindergarten party for mothers and children was held at the Congregational church this afternoon.

JEWETT CITY

SENATOR MERRITT ADDRESSES REPUBLICAN WOMEN'S MEETING

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 24—The public political campaign in Jewett City was opened Wednesday afternoon with a whist and bridge party held by the republican women, under the direction of Mrs Marie H. Ballou, a member of the town committee. Nearly one hundred women gathered in Rioux hall, mainly to listen to a speech by Senator Alice P. Merritt of Hartford. She stressed particularly that a person should vote as an American citizen not for personal antagonism, and to remember that the constitution guarantees the right to worship as one chooses. She reviewed the life of Herbert Hoover, whose youthful training in self-reliance was the foundation for his fitness for the presidential chair. She noted particularly his humanitarian work in Russia, Belgium and Germany, where he is called "HooverSavior." Besides the economical needs of the country, she said, he stands for the homes and children.

The hall was decorated with the American flag and pictures of Hoover. The score cards were Hoover picture cards. Halloween decorations were used also. The bridge prizes went to Mrs. H. A. Sherman and Mrs. L. G. Buckingham. Mrs. Abraham Zegeer and Mrs Lemuel Green took the prizes at whist. Candy and salted peanuts were served.

E. M. SWIFT'S PROPERTY NOW GOES TO CHILDREN

Mrs. Helen E. Swift of Jewett City left an estate of $7,364.57, according to an appraisal and inventory filed in the Norwich probate court by Benjamin H. Palmer and Arthur D. Tripp, the appraisers. Lydia B. Church is administratrix. The sum of $150 is given outright to a nephew, Herman B. Chapman, while the sum of $100 each is given to Jessie L. Hiscox and Arthur E Swift, children of her late husband. Earl M. Swift, $50 is given to a grandchild, Helen S Swift.

The life use of the estate is given to her sisters, Lydia B. Church and Sarah L. Eccleston, as long as they both live the income to be equally divided between them. Following the death of both sisters, the residue is to be divided into three parts and given as follows: One part to the children of her late sister, Eliza B. Palmer viz: Benjamin H. Palmer Shepard B. Palmer of Norwich, and Bessie Truesdell share and share alike and in the event of the death of the aforesaid children, the child or children of them shall have the share. Another part is given to the children of her sister, Lydia B. Church, viz: Martha B Tripp and her heirs forever.

"I desire that Hannah Brown, widow of my late brother Fred S. Brown be given the use of the third part as long as she lives and at her death the part to be equally divided between my two nephews, Shepard F. Brown and Arnold B. Brown," the will reads. The will is dated Oct. 24, 1916 and was witnessed by Lucius Brown, Lou M. Batty and William Caruthers. By the terms of the late Earl M. Swift's will, the trust property held by Helen E. Swift during her lifetime, is bequeathed to his two children, Jessie L. Hiscox of Jewett City and Arthur E. Swift, of Providence.

DANIELSON

REV. J. REES JONES WILL CONDUCT ALL SAINTS SERVICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 24—The annual All Saints day service that for so many years has attracted devout congregations to Old Trinity church, Church street, Brooklyn, will be held on the morning of November 1, at 11 o'clock. This year the service will be conducted by Rev. J. Rees Jones, rector of St. Alban's church at Danielson and Trinity church at Brooklyn. It will consist of morning prayer, holy communion and sermon.

This annual service attracts attendance from far and near, several states and many towns and cities being represented each year. Old Trinity is the oldest Episcopal church in Connecticut, erected in 1771, and it is has been so hallowed by time and spiritual tradition as to give it place among the leading historical places of worship in New England.

Its setting is a beautiful one among the giant oaks of Old Trinity churchyard, where sleep many of the early settlers of those colonial days when that locality was known as the "Manor of Kingswood," a part of the Mortlake district of the town of Pomfret in the Colony of Connecticut.

To this day the Bible and prayer book and the sacred vessels in use at services in this church prior to the Revolution are preserved and will be used in this year's All Saints' day service.

The ancient church is kept in good repair. Its interior arrangement remains undisturbed. Within the past year a history of it, accompanied by a photograph, was distributed by a nationally known press association for use in papers in the far west and southwest, as part of a feature service intended to especially interest former residents of New England or those with New England antecedants, and it proved of great interest.

The church was modeled after both Trinity church at Newport and King's chapel at Boston and was built largely through the efforts of Colonel Godfrey Malbone, who died in 1735, after an outstanding career in early colonial Connecticut.

MORE MARBLE MARKERS FOR SOLDIERS GRAVES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 24—Through the efforts of Sidney R. Bard of Brooklyn and Danielson, in co-operation with a state agency, 25 more marble markers for soldiers' graves have been placed in cemeteries in the towns of Brooklyn and Killingly. Some of these markers are in the larger cemeteries of the towns mentioned, others in obscure cemeteries where burials seldom occur nowadays.

Mr. Bard has been engaged for about two years in seeking out graves of soldiers that were unmarked or inadequately marked, and through his efforts scores of marble markers have been obtained through the state and are now in place, suitably inscribed.

The carrying out of this work has been difficult and has required much painstaking effort. It has involved searching through cemeteries grown up to brush in some instances, seeking information here and there relative to the soldier dead of the towns of Brooklyn and Killingly, assembling the information and seeing to it that where stones were required that they be obtained, properly marked and properly placed.

Patriotic societies are particularly appreciative of what Mr. Bard has done, and this feeling also extends to all residents of these towns who know about what he has so unselfishly done.

This morning funeral services for Mrs. Emma Hebert were held at St. John's church in Plainfield. Rev. J. H. Landry, the pastor was celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem, with Rev. John D. Carey of Voluntown as deacon and Rev. Harry Chagnon of Moosup as sub-deacon. Burial was in St. John's cemetery at Plainfield, Rev. Fr. Landry conducting the committal service. The bearers were Joseph Bernier, A. Gosselin, Joseph Lassier Edmond Jodoin, Romeo Lambert and Philip Houle. Honorary bearers representing the Ste. Anne society, of which Mrs. Hebert had been a member were Mrs. Peter Allard, Mrs. Louise Gobeille, Mrs. Marie Anne Jodoin, Mrs. Louis Lavigne and Mrs. Anna Lambert. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The Roundabout club is to meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. A. H. Withinton of Spring street.

Another democratic rally is scheduled for Danielson Thursday evening and will be preceded by a short parade, headed by a band, and forming at the Attawaugan hotel and marching to the town hall. The speakers are to be Charles G. Morris, candidate for governor and Rev. B. M. Harris.

Assessors, entering their last week of sessions for the year, were busy receiving lists of taxable property at the town hall building today.

Rev. Thomas Benjamin Powell is to deliver the address at the special meeting of Quinebaug Pomona grange in Abington next Saturday, speaking on The Basis of Liberal Action.

In a number of instances drains for surface water were blocked or partly blocked by leaves during the heavy rainfall of last night, and streets were flooded in various parts of the borough.

A few Danielson people have been so fortunate as to secure tickets for the Yale-Army game at New Haven on Saturday.

Numbers of the democratic of Danielson had planned this afternoon to be in Providence Thursday forenoon to witness the arrival of Governor Alfred E. Smith, their party's candidate for president.

Victor Perreault, formerly a resident here and for the past year or more proprietor of a hotel at Oxford, Mass., has purchased a farm in Thompson.

William A. Graves has sufficiently recovered from injuries received in an automobile accident to be able to go out for little motor trips.

George A. Parlow of Woonsocket was a visitor with friends in Danielson today.

There is some demand for the marking out of a safety lane across Main street about opposite the Jodoin buildings, just below the railroad crossing.

Mrs. C. B. Wheatley, who broke a bone in her arm recently when she fell at her home, is reported as making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

State highway department crews have ben engaged in oiling sections of trunk line highways hereabouts and building up the shoulders on curves as one of the late fall jobs of the year. The roads hereabouts will be in good condition for the winter season.

At Estevan, Sask., Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., formerly of Danielson, gave a banquet the past week for the junior baseball team of which he was coach during the summer season and which won the championship of the district in which it played.

Vaudeville programs at the Orpheum theater at the shows this afternoon and evening attracted large audiences to the theater.

State officers from the Danielson barracks will be doing patrol duty on the roads leading into New Haven Saturday, when traffic will be exceptionally heavy on account of the Yale-Army game.

Miss Mayme Dunn was a visitor in Worcester today.

The Friendly Circle will hold a food and fancy work sale in Wm. Shippee's hall, in E. Killingly, afternoon and evening, Oct. 26th.—Adv.

PUTNAM

GOV. SMITH WILL NOT PAY VISIT TO PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTUAM, October 24—Putnam will not see Governor Alfred E. Smith, democratic nominee for president, when he passes from Providence to Hartford where he will make a tour of the city. This was the word received from the democratic state central committee today, after the subject had been discussed at a meeting of the committee held in Hartford Tuesday afternoon.

As originally planned the governor's train will leave Providence Thursday afternoon with its route over the Providence division of the New Haven road which will bring it through the towns of Sterling, Moosup and Plainfield into Willimantic where it will stop for five minutes.

Edward Keegan, of Thompson a member of the democratic state central committee told Charles A. Ryan of Putnam today that the Putnam town democrats had made their application for a glimpse of the governor too late to have the plans changed. The necessary switching of the train at Blackstone also figured heavily against the New Haven division, Mr. Keegan said.

There will be several Putnam people at Willimantic Thursday when the "Happy Warrior's" train stops, in hopes of obtaining a glimpse of the nominee.

A session of civil court was scheduled to have been held at Putnam in the superior court this Thursday morning, but an announcement received Wednesday afternoon from the court office here stated that the session has been postponed until Friday Nov. 2, and will be held at Willimantic, with Judge Edward Yeoman's presiding. The continuance of court was due to the few cases scheduled to be tried.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL OF WEBSTER FLYERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 24—Funeral services were held at the Sacred Heart church in Webster this morning where the town at large paid tribute to the two gallant fliers, Felix Brisbois and Joseph Basinet, killed when their plane crashed to the earth at the Oxford airport Sunday afternoon. The funeral procession was witnessed by thousands of spectators and over 500 cars were in line. The large Sacred Heart church in Webster was filled to capacity several hours before the bodies were brought in and hundreds, unable to gain admission, lined outside the edifice and followed the funeral mass.

While the bodies were being laid to final rest in the Sacred Heart cemetery, six large airplanes from the Worcester airport in command of Lt. Matthew P. Whittall soared over the graves and dropped flowers that settled lightly on the grave. The funeral service was one of the most impressive and was one of the largest ever held in Webster.

Victor Lapointe of Smith street, Putnam, and Harold Jodoin of Plainfield, sentenced last week by Judge Edward Yeomans in the superior court to indefinite sentences at the state reformatory in Cheshire, began the first day of the imprisonment at the state institution today. Both Lapointe and Jodoin have been held at the county jail in Brooklyn following the imposing of their sentence at Putnam, and were removed by Sheriff Charles A. Gates and his deputies Tuesday afternoon. Lapointe was convicted of driving under the influence of liquor and violating probation, while Jodoin went to the reformatory on a charge of theft of automobiles.

Mrs. William Gifford and Mrs. Edward Bartlett, both of Worcester, sustained injuries when their car crashed into a pole on the Mechanicsville highway Tuesday afternoon. They were taken to the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam where they were treated for lacerations of the head and other body injuries. Mrs. Bartlett also suffered two sprained ankles, which were treated. Edward Bartlett was driving his car when he skidded, crashing into the car. He was not injured. The two women were discharged from the hospital late last evening in an improved condition.

Dr. William A. Bryan, superintendent of the Worcester hospital for insane, addressed the weekly meeting of the Putnam Rotary club today. Dr. Bryan in his address said that a survey of a great number of insanity cases are caused by excessive worries. "Worry," the doctor said, 'is said to be the greatest cause of mental disorders, and 99 per cent of all humans worry about things that can be helped and give too much consideration to a great many things that can never happen."

Dr. Bryan is a widely known authority on the treatment of mental cases. He proved to be a highly interesting speaker.

Mrs. W. J. Bartlett, secretary of the Putnam "Al Smith" club and Mrs. W. J. Rafferty motored to Boston where they listened to the speech of Gov. Smith and attended the ovation given him on his visit to the Hub, today.

Trouble is being experienced in a number of communities in the city by the nightly visits of skunks. One property owner reported this morning that each evening these unwelcome creatures parade across his front lawn, digging holes, and preventing the passage of the members of the household until the skunk departs. This is the first season reports of trappers indicate where the skunk has become so bold as to infest the community. Reason is believed to be a shortage of field food that has driven them to seek food from the garbage cans.

Local huntsmen have bagged a number of red fox since the season opened. One of the fox game prizes was shot by Edward Dohavon of Woodstock avenue, and was fairly large.

The first of the chimney fires of the cold weather season occurred at 5.21 tonight when a general alarm from Box 26 brought the firemen to 279 School street, a three family brick house. The first was confined to the chimney and was soon extinguished with chemicals. When the alarm was first rung, the general excitement caused by the continuous stream of automobiles pouring into School street gave one the impression that a dangerous fire was in progress. The firemen reported no loss of property.

FUNERAL

Mrs. M. S. MacConnell

From her late home on Grove street this afternoon funeral services were held at 2 o'clock for Mrs. Martha Service MacConnell who died shortly after midnight Sunday evening. The service was conducted by Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Second Congregational church of this city, of which Mrs. MacConnell was a member. Mrs. MacConnell's host of friends and acquaintances in Windham county were present at the funeral and were evidenced by the many and beutiful floral tributes.

The bearers were James Service, Jr., of South Willington, a brother of Mrs. MacConnell and three nephews J. Gallup Service, Frederick Service and John MacLearn all of South Willington. Burial was in the family lot in the Westfield cemetery in Danielson.

The large fire that destroyed the Burton Bosworth home in Pomfret shortly before noon Tuesday was said today to be one of the largest individual losses sustained by fire in Pomfret in a number of years. Loss of the house and household furnishings it was said today passed the $35,000 mark.

Students enrolled in the schools of Putnam from the fourth grade up, will go to school in the evening on Wednesday Nov. 7, instead of attending classes in the day, Superintendent of Schools Leon N. Farrin, announced today. The night session for that day will be a part of the observance of American Education week. Classes for the students above the fourth grade in the Israel Putnam, Smith street and High schools will commence at 6.45 and will continue until 9.15 in the evening. As this innovation is to be held for the benefit of the parents, all are urged by the school faculties to attend classes and watch the work of their children. This schedule will be held only on Nov. 7.

CONNECTICUT NEEDS REPUBLICANS

When Congressman Freeman in speaking at Bozrah called attention to the importance of the tariff, declared that it needed revision and asked whether such work should be done by friends or enemies of the tariff, he presented to the voters of this congressional district a matter on which they will do well to think serious.

The tariff is important. There isn't an industrial center in Connecticut but what has good reason for finding it so. The tariff is vital to them and there can be no desire to return to the conditions which had developed under the democratic tariff when the World war opened.

It is true that the democrats claim to have been converted to a competitive tariff. But it was a competitive tariff that went into effect when the Underwood law was enacted and the country knows the effects it suffered. The protective tariff has received the constant opposition of the democratic leaders. They have voiced such sentiments whenever opportunity presented, and it is such democratic leaders as those who have steadfastly fought a protective tariff who will direct the democratic efforts in tariff revision. Those who are out on the speaking platforms may try to promise that democratic victory will mean nothing detrimental to the tariff. Such isn't in keeping with the work of those who will direct tariff policies in congress if they get the chance.

In order to insure the best degree of protection for the industries in this congressional district the voters should insist upon the re-election of Congressman Freeman, who has stood consistently for the best interests of the district, who has upheld republican policies, who has had long experience and established a prestige which operates to the advantage of the district and who will be in a position to give better representation to the district than any other.

Not only in this district but in every one in the state should the republican candidates be elected if Connecticut's best interests are to be served. It is important for the right support of republican policies.

Equally important is it that Connecticut should name for its new senator, Frederic C. Walcott. As a successor to Senator McLean he represents all that has been so admirably upheld by the latter. He stands for constructive policies, for the welfare of the state and nation, possesses the ability to successfully perform his duties and merits in every way a hearty endorsement from the voters of the state.

The country should insist upon the election of Herbert Hoover and at the same time should give him a senate and house of representatives in congress that would insure the carrying out of the policies for which he stands.

CONNECTICUT PROBLEMS

Speakers at the meeting of the Connecticut Forest and Park association held at Hampton touched upon several matters which have a broad interest, matters which concern a great many more than the association's membership.

When Park Commissioner Chapman referred to the value of Hammonasett beach and declared that Connecticut ought to acquire two more such beaches for the public before it is too late, he was talking in sympathy with the effort that was put forth a couple of years ago in behalf of such a public beach on the Groton shore. He would have made no mistake if he had given his endorsement to that location. Restrictions at existing beaches are such that shore places for the public are growing scarcer each year. Conditions which made the restrictions necessary demonstrate that the sooner public beaches are provided the easier will be the task of acquiring them.

Other speakers dwelt at considerable length upon the question of forestry and the members were fortunate in having had the meeting held at a point where it was possible to demonstrate on the Goodwin estate not only what has been accomplished in the way of forestry work but what can be applied by farmers in most every section who have land which ought to be put to some productive use.

Forestry is a subject to which a greater number should be giving thought. The land owners of the state are in a position to produce a greater quantity of timber than is used in Connecticut. Instead of importing it it should be raised right here. There isn't any question but what it can be done, but the difficulty lies in getting enough interested to have it amount to something. Trees do not grow as rapidly as other crops but they can be made to grow on wasteland and each year of growth means increased assets. Connecticut has boundless opportunities for increasing its timber production.

WHY HUGHES PREFERS HOOVER

Charles Evans Hughes has been frequently quoted as having said something favorable to Alfred E. Smith's understanding of affairs in the state of New York. There isn't any question about it, but when it comes to making a selection between Mr. Smith and Mr. Hoover, as candidates for the presidency, Mr. Hughes doesn't hesitate to pick Mr. Hoover. And he gives good and convincing reasons for so doing. He doesn't have to throw mud at Mr. Smith. He doesn't think of such a thing. He says it is a choice between two men and he "decidedly prefers Hoover."

Why does he do this? Well, he says, "We need economy in administration. We have had it in an extraordinary degree. No derision or blustering misstatements can alter that fact. We cannot afford to commit the policy of protection to a party that has always opposed it.

"The way to buttress our prosperity, to give everyone, employer and employe, producer and consumer, a feeling of greater security as he looks forward to the next four years with all their uncertainties, to secure most earnest effort under competent leadership, to deal with all the economic difficulties that confront us, is to continue the policies of the republican administration under the presidency of Herbert Hoover."

In making this statement and in declaring his preference for Mr. Hoover, Mr. Hughes declared there was "a clear room for preference" between the two men for the presidency and he said that "with respect to qualifications of knowledge, training, leadership, executive ability, talent for cooperation, resourcefulness, humane and liberal spirit and capacity for leadership, everyone of which is important."

The manner in which Mr. Smith is playing the wets of the north and east with the drys of the south is not regarded as "a very commendable enterprise" as a means of getting the presidency, and Mr. Hughes fears confusion in the event of Mr. Smith's election. The democratic tariff appeal he regards as a great tribute to the republican party, and Mr. Hughes hammers home an effective point when he can see no reason for picking one who has had experience in state government to handle the federal government when there is a person with years of training in national government in Mr. Hoover available. In spite of his ability Mr. Hughes rightly maintains that it would take Mr. Smith years to find out about federal affairs what Mr. Hoover already knows.

Mr. Hughes was characterically lucid and convincing in his statements. His was a meaty, virile treatment of the political situation and set forth truths which have been sidetracked by other things too often in the present campaign. It was a speech that is bound to be influential.

VOLUNTOWN'S REVIVAL

Indications that industrial activity is to be resumed at Voluntown, where the cotton mills have been silent for so long, furnish some of the best news that has come to that town in many moons.

Voluntown has been a busy village. It was dependent upon one industry and when that found it impossible to meet competition and conditions a once active and prosperous community was stilled. That someone would see the possibilities of the mills and the water power was anticipated. Why such a valuable plant should be allowed to remain stagnant was hard to understand. Apparently it has simply been a question of time for its possibilities to be realized and the putting of the property on the auction block has been the signal for action.

What has happened in Voluntown is only what has occurred in other villages. The same may be said in regard to the appearance of new interests. That village has been the producer of much wealth in the past and it is apparent that the new purchasers of the mill property believe that it still has a future. That they should have and will get all possible encouragement in their plans for an industrial revival in that town goes without saying. It means much to Voluntown, but it also means much to eastern Connecticut. May Voluntown exceed even the best days of the past.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Those who try to beat carbon monoxide never know they fail.

Do you see anything in the news from day to day that causes you to resolve to use more care in the driving of your automobile?

Perhaps it would be a good idea to start in now keeping a record of the predictions concerning the severity of the coming winter, just for future reference.

THE FEMININE TYPE

Marcia took a last approving look at herself in the mirror. Yes, she was, undoubtedly, in keeping with her ideal of the woman of business. Not that Marcia had anything more definite than the movies to guide her. This was her first morning of business—for the first time in her life she was going into an office to earn her living.

She regarded the matter therefore, seriously, in all its aspects. Being entirely feminine, she had laid great stress on her costume. It must, she felt, be businesslike, and she had considered in a superficial way what Mr. Glover's ideas might be concerning the proper costume for the young business woman.

Her selection had been what the saleslady had called "strictly tailored"—straight lines and no frills. She was conscious of a certain satisfaction as she swung open the door of the office at twenty minutes past 8; in this new life which was opening before her she had at least been sensible in this matter of clothes.

The office—one of a number occupied by the firm, held five people. There were Mr. Glover, who was its directing head; two young men who seemed not to count for very much, herself, and a young lady named Gloria.

Gloria was, to Marcia, all that a woman who took her business career seriously should not be. She was a tiny persons, and if there was any art by which her femininity might be heightened Gloria had not neglected it.

Gloria's hair was bewilderingly bobbed, and waved until one could not even guess the shape of the head it covered. And she was Gloria to everybody, even to Mr. Glover. Marcia's mother, clinging to the conservatism of the secure days when papa was living, had advised Marcia against having her hair bobbed, and had carefully inculcated rules against permitting anything that breathed of familiarity. And now Marcia, taking up office work for the first time, and conscious of a peculiar dislike for Gloria, resolved to remain "Miss Dainler' to all.

Because she was young, Marcia expected that sooner or later she would see clear signs of approval of her approach to her job. But the two young men, when Mr. Glover was out of the office, indicated their preference by wasting Gloria's time, and Mr. Glover, Marcia observed in disillusionment, gave no sign of even watching her at work. Considering the amount of time Gloria gave to purely feminine arts, she got through her work with surprising efficiency.

Nevertheless, Marcia, on her side, stuck to her guns. She felt sure that there would be vouchsafed some indication of the fact that her deliberate desire to be businesslike, even in costume, was recognized. She bought mannish collars and wore a four-in-hand tie to heighten the efficient look of her chosen garb.

"At least," she thought, as time went on without such an indication being given, "if there is ever a promotion to be given, that will be a time when it will be seen that what I am trying to do is good practice." Gloria, flaunting her femininity, would surely not be thought of for any more responsible work than she was doing. She—Marcia—did not intend to use the fact that she was a woman to win advancement.

Perhaps six months had elapsed when Mr. Glover called her to his desk at the end of the day.

"Let's see, Miss Dainler," he said. "You've been here about six months, haven't you?"

Marcia nodded assent.

"The manager of our retail salesroom asked me today if I had any one in mind who might meet our clients and give them real service. I suggested you. I have since talked with Mr. Rankin, the general manager, and he wants to see you a few moments."

With her heart beating high, Marcia followed Mr. Glover into the general manager's sanctum at the head of the long corridor. Back of the desk sat Mr. Rankin, round, bald, pompous, but shrewd in his wisdom of the world—particularly shrewd in his knowledge of retail selling.

He heard Mr. Glover's introduction and listened quietly to a brief sketch of Miss Dainler's satisfactory service.

"Ah—yes," he said, when Mr. Glover had finished. "I think Miss—Miss Dainler will be—ah—quite satisfactory.

"You see," he addressed Marcia, "we've mostly women coming into the retail salesroom and what we need there is—ah—the really feminine type. We agree on that, don't we, Mr. Glover? The—ah—really feminine type!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—It is a noteworthy circumstance that the two leading practitioners before the supreme court of the United States are men defeated in a presidential election, one a democrat and the other a republican.

John W. Davis, whose presidential hopes were smothered under the Coolidge landslide four years ago, is rated as the leader among the lawyers practicing before the court. Second only to Davis in the number of cases in which he appears as counsel is Charles Evans Hughes, who left the bench in 1916 to make the race for the White House against Woodrow Wilson.

Davis Pleadings Brief

Davis has established a remarkable record for supreme court work. Hardly a week goes by when the court is in session that does not see him down from New York to present an argument. He also is credited by court attaches with habits of brevity in argument to which they are not accustomed.

Under rules of court an hour is allowed each side for oral argument of cases on the regular docket, subject, of course, to extensions of time where deemed necessary by the court itself due to the intricacy of the matters involved or the number of parties joined in the proceeding.

Davis rarely takes up as much as half of the hour allotted to him, even where he has no other counsel with whom he must share that time. Hughes is not so concise, although he, too, is disinclined to string an argument out or wander into remote fields of reasoning.

This habit of brevity no doubt is appreciated by the justices. Their time is valuable and crowded to a degree that imposes heaven burdens on their advanced years. Many of the rules under which they operate and to which counsel are held rigidly are designed specifically to save unnecessary physical wear and tear on the members of this highest tribunal of American justice. A note attached to the printed book of rules, for example, requires that briefs shall be printed of a fixed size and on unglazed paper, heavily leaded to make for easy reading, and in clear type "never smaller than small pica or 11-point," to relieve the eye strain. Other rules require a proper digest of every brief, and the note adds of the judges:

"They must examine more than a thousand (briefs) each term, besides examining records."

Clerks Relieve Strain

Law clerks of the justices help in the routine of getting cases ready for study by their respective chiefs. Chief Justice Taft and Justices Holmes, Brandeis and Stone each has formed the habit of taking a law honor graduate of his own alma mater into his office for a year as a stepping stone to the young lawyer's future at the bar. Yale men get the Taft billet, Harvard law graduates the Holmes and Brandeis clerkships and Columbia is similarly favored by Justice Stone.

Too quick a return to practice before the court of one of these former law clerks caused an amendment to the court rules this year forbidding their appearance in any capacity until two years have elapsed after they leave the clerkships.

The change is indicative of the scrupulous care taken by every member of the court to stand aloof from any case in which there could be the slightest suspicions of personal interest.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Light Bill Increased

Mr. Editor: I received my electric bill a few weeks ago and I don't see where my bill is any cheaper. In August I used 11 kilowatt hours, and my bill was $1.10. In September I used 11 kilowatt hours and my bill was $1.93. Just imagine 83 cents more for the same amount of electricity. My husband has to work two hours to earn that. They advertised that it was going to be cheaper, but I don't see where. All my neighbors have told me that they have to pay more now.

What difference does it make in the number of rooms in a house? For instance, I have a seven-room house. On the first floor I have a kitchen, pantry, bath room, dining room and a small room that I use for a store room. We always eat in the kitchen, unless special company comes and that may be once in three or four months. I haven't even got a bulb in my store room, and I only light my pantry for about ten or 15 minutes at night, just time to do my dishes. How much do I use on this floor? Upstairs I have four rooms, two bed rooms and two empty rooms, and I have no bulbs in there even. I hardly ever put the light on in my room because there is an electric light pole in front of my house. I light the children's room just long enough to undress them for bed.

So why should I, just because I have seven rooms, pay $1.93 for 11 kilowatt hours and my neighbor, with four rooms for 18 kilowatt hours, which is seven hours more, pay $1.84? I don't think it's right. I'd rather pay what I use at 10 cents per kilowatt hour, than the new rates now, and pay for rooms I am not using at all. They told me that if I used more electricity I'd find it cheaper. I know a friend that has a store where she used to pay $2.30 for 23 kilowatt hours. Her bill this month was $9.54. Was hers any cheaper? I should say not. Why don't the gas and electric people have a public hearing, as Mayor Robbins suggested? Then they could make it plain to some people that don't understand where electricity is cheaper. It is getting so cheap that some poor people can not afford to have it.

Old School Days in Norwich

Mr. Editor: Breathes there a man so devoid of sentiment that he never has a yearning for some of the times of his youth, when he was fancy-free and a student in one of the many schools that we knew in those early days? During the year that has just passed there has been completed a building for school purposes that is the last word as an educational institution, with all the latest and most modern ideas incorporated in its construction, with gyms, swimming pools, basketball court, recreation hall, library, and in fact with everything that is conducive to the comfort and well being of the scholars. This school stands only a block from my home and its perspective and architectural appearance is beyond compare.

As I turn over the leaves in the book of time, I cannot help but think of some of the schools where we were attendants in days of yore. I wonder if any of the young old people can recall when we went to school in the building called the "Castle" that stood back of Tom Cunningham's Union hall, that stood at the foot of Sixth street, and right next to the railroad. Every time a train would go by with its rattle and bang we would have to cease our recitations, due to the noise. This so-called "Castle," take it from me, was one only in name, for it was a rambling old structure. And as I recall it today it was a veritable fire trap. Still we acquired a good sound education, for we had wonderful teachers and I question if today the scholars get as sound an education as they did in those early days when they taught the three R's—reading, riting and rithmetic. This last quotation is only used advisedly, but it conveys a world of meaning and although it was years ago I can even now recall how, when recess time had come, we would all rush down the rickety stairs like a bunch of wild mustangs, and yelling like a lot of Indians on the war path, for our playgrounds out in the street. I recall where some among us used to have errands to do and many of us would go up to "Granny" Wise, and buy her home-made candies. I do not believe there are many who can recall her today, for she was very old and she lived in a little house near the railroad crossing at a point between 12th and 13th streets. This house was in after years the home of the McClures and others. I have a letter from a very dear friend of mine, in answer to a request that I had made, that it would be a fine idea to have a class reunion of some of those who went to school when we did. From the tenor of his letter I assume that out of a total of about 14 boys who were in our class there are but two remaining. All the others have moved on. Is it any wonder then that when I come into Norwich it is almost like entering a strange place? For I meet only a few I once knew and even the old familiar scenes have changed. Still after everything is said and done it is Home. At least the home of our boyhood.

Many years ago, as my memory serves me, there was a newspaper printed in Norwich called "Cooley's Weekly." What ever became of it? Even today I can recall the caption or motto that was at its head—We are never elated when another's oppressed, and never dejected when another man's blest. All of these, with the onward march of time, come back to us with added force, for there are many things and many incidents that we see and hear that bring them to the front again.

How we used to sit on the old park wall at the corner of 12th street and sing the old songs. No police, no interference from anyone to stop us from showing our vocal ability, no matter if it was good, bad or indifferent. Candidly I think it was mostly bad, but anyway we thought it was good, so what does it matter.

Much water has passed under the bridges since these early days, and I have heard many of the great song birds at the Metropolitan, but the recollection of those boys who sang in the moonlight still leaves a faint echo of the Old Folks at Home and the old-time melodies that only our Great Sleep will cause to fade away. Sometimes when I sit down and listen in on the radio I have heard this old song of Foster sung. It is not the song alone but the memories that come forth, for there rise in the mind and imagination and in the highest thoughts of the human soul, fed by the tender memories of the friends of our youth, our old school pals. No, I do not think that old Suwanee River flows through the sunny south, but rather through that sunny land of memory. That brings back to us glorious memories of unfulfilled dreams, and as we listen to the rise and fall of the harmony we can but think there is where the heart is ever turning, for there were spent the happiest years of our lives—our school days. Did we think so then? I don't think so, for our greatest happiness then was to look forward to vacation time. And now we doze and dream of what might have been, and after everything is said and done we all at times have our day dreams. And may I here quote from May Carolyn Davies' The Dreamer:

I went to bitter lanes and dark,
Who once had known the sky
To carry them a Dream—and found
They had more dreams than I.

In conclusion I want to say this: If there are any who went to school when I did in the Rose of New England, I would be pleased to hear from them and I, in turn, would be pleased to answer their letters.

Stories That Recall Others

Slighted

Mrs. X was telling her husband all about a funeral she had attended that afternoon. Ann, age five, was a silent though interested auditor. A funeral must be very much like a party, she decided, with all the discussion of flowers and people and so on. "And the little pall bearers looked so sweet," her mother was saying.

Ann, silent no longer, exclaimed: "Pall-bears, pall-bears, why didn't you bring me some?"

Too Much Noise

A crowd of fox hunters heard this story of a fellow who had been taken out for his first fox hunt.

For a long time the hunters sat on a damp log in the woods waiting for the dogs to hit a trail and the veterans of the chase swapped stories of former hunts. Suddenly, in the far distance, was heard the deep, full baying mingled with the sudden eager ye'ps of the hounds in full pursuit.

"There, now, listen to that music, will you?" one of the veterans said, triumphantly, trying to engender enthusiasm in the mind of the younger man.

The new man listened for a while, then turned in disgust

"How could you expect anyone to hear the music with all those dogs making such a noise?"

Most Amazing Guarantee Ever Made to Pile Sufferers

Because there are still thousands of men and women needlessly suffering the torture and discomfort of itching, bleeding, burning piles, Peterson of Buffalo asks every druggist to broadcast his remarkable offer.

He says—"Tell every one of your customer that it doesn't make any difference what they have tried before or what lack of success they have gotten from any internal or external remedy for piles—I want them to give Peterson's Ointment a fair trial. Tell them they make this trial at my expense for if the mighty healing upwer of my ointment doesn't stop itching and burning and dry up piles quicker and better than they ever hoped for—their money will be returned." Burgess Bedtime Story

Peter Understands at Last

By THOMAS W. BURGESS

Investigate if you would know
Why this is thus and that is so.
—Peter Rabbit.

It was the most lonesome part of the Green Forest. Peter Rabbit seldom went there. He was there now simply because he had been trying to take a short cut to another part of the Green Forest. There was a strong odor in the air. Peter didn't have to be told what that odor was. It was the odor that only Jimmy Skunk can produce from that little scent-gun of his. And because Peter could smell that odor so strong he suspected that Jimmy or one of his family had been attacked somewhere around there.

"I've gone past," thought Peter.

Now, Peter felt nervous all the time. Anyone who would attack a member of Jimmy Skunk's family wouldn't hesitate to attack a plump Rabbit. So Peter remembered what his eyes were for and what his ears were for and what his nose was for, and he used all three to the best of his ability. But his eyes saw no one and his ears heard no one and his nose—well, his nose was just filled with the odor of Skunk. Peter hopped about cautiously, always ready to run at the slightest hint of danger. But all his hopping about discovered nothing. Peter sat down under a hemlock tree to study and think.

Presently it came to him that the odor was the strongest when he was in a certain place where the wind blew in his face. Therefore it must be coming from the direction from which the wind was coming. He hopped over to that particular place. Sure enough, the wind blew in his face and the odor of Skunk was stronger than ever. Peter hopped forward just a little way and found the smell as strong as ever, and perhaps a little bit stronger. He did the same thing again with the same result. A third time the result was the same. But the fourth time, although the wind was still blowing in his face, he got only a faint scent.

"I've gone past," thought Peter. "I must have gone past. Yet I didn't see anything to indicate a fight. I'll go back and look again."

So Peter went back a little way. Then he turned so that the wind blew in his face, and once more the odor of Skunk was very, very strong. Now, it chanced that Peter happened to look up just then. What he saw caused him to duck for cover without waiting for a second look. Up in a certain tall tree sat Hooty the Owl taking a nap. Peter remembered then that this was where Hooty the Owl nested in the winter and early spring.

"Why didn't I think of it before" exclaimed Peter. "It was Hooty. Of course, it was Hooty. He was the one who tried to catch Jimmy Skunk. Jimmy must have thrown some of his perfume at him and that is why it smells so strong here. No one but Hooty could stand it, but he doesn't seem to mind. He is sleeping as peacefully as if there were no such thing as a bad odor. Perhaps he doesn't smell it at all. But, anyway, I have found out who dared attack Jimmy Skunk and now it is my turn to carry news."

So Peter hopped away and how he did run—lippety-lippety-lip. Yes, sir, that is just the way he ran—lippety-lippety-lip. And every time he met anyone he stopped just long enough to tell them that it was Hooty the Owl who had dared to attack Jimmy Skunk. So the news soon spread all through the Green Forest and all over the Green Meadows.

Pimples

If you want to get rid of ugly, disgusting pimples in a hurry, try the harmless new remedy, in convenient tablet form, called Kitagran. It gets rid of the impurities in the blood so quickly that the skin clears up right away—often within 24 hours. You can get Kitagran from Lee & Osgood Co., who will return your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Coastipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall or Liggett Drug Store.

Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly.

Tanlac has a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years' standing.

Mr. Alexis Caya, 546 Hunt St., Woonsocket, R. I., says: "I was in such bad health I couldn't work for a year. I decided to try Tanlac. Now I've gained 30 lbs., my yellow skin has cleared, constipation overcome and appetite returned."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. It is good, pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and barks. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you.

The death of Bertil L. Swanson occurred Tuesday in Los Angeles, Cal., after a brief illness. He was born in North Grosvenordale, April 26, 1902, the son of Adolph and Anna Swanson, but had resided in Norwich and Baltic most of his life. He was formerly employed in the office of the Ulmer Leather company.

Mr. Swanson was married in Denver, Colo., June 20, 1926, to Harriet Chase of Denver, who survives him. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. Anna Swanson, five sisters, Mildred Swanson of Willimantic, Mrs. Gustave Phillips and Mrs. Albert Taylor of Baltic, Mrs. Gustave Johnson of North Grosvenordale, Mrs. Fred Cruthers of Norwich, and three brothers, Paul of Providence, Joel of Milwaukee, Wis., and Gustave of Baltic. He also leaves several nieces and nephews.

Mr. Swanson was a member of the Baltic Methodist Episcopal church.

FUNERALS

Pedro Lupe

At 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning the funeral of Pedro Lupe of Bridgeport, who died in this city, was held at the parlors of Undertakers Cummings and Ring and at 8:45 o'clock there was a requiem mass at St. Patrick's Church. Rev. John J. Reilly celebrated the mass and Henry J. LaFontaine presided at the organ. Roderick F. Sullivan sang De Profundis at the offertory and Lead, Kindly Light as the waiting hymn. The recessional was Chopin's Funeral March. The bearers were Charles Daley, James Casey, Daniel Sullivan and Frederick Driscoll and burial took place in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Mrs. John Morrison

The funeral of Mrs. John Morrison was held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at her late home, No. 465 West Main street, and the service was conducted by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church. There were numerous and very beautiful floral tributes of esteem, and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends including mourners from Tarrytown, N. Y., and New London.

The burial was in Maplewood cemetery and Rev. Mr. Abbott conducted the committal service. The bearers were Herman Pukallus, Harold S. Burt, Louis Snyder and William D. Lathrop. Undertaker C. A. Gager had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Andrew Pizzo

Many relatives and friends attended the funeral of Mrs. Andrew Pizzo held Wedsesday morning at 8:20 o'clock at her home at Trading Cove with a requiem mass at St. John's church, Montville, at 9 o'clock. Rev. James J. O'Meara was celebrant of the mass and Miss Helen Ganey presided at the organ. At the offertory Mrs. Chagnon sang Pie Jesu and as the waiting hymn, Abide With Me. The burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery, Montville, and the committal service was read by Rev. Fr. O'Meara. The bearers were John Zarembkowicz, John Anton, William Casper, John Scoctlas, John Pytko and Vincent Utakewicz. Mourners were present from Thorndike, Mass., Chicopee, Mass., Hartford, Jewett City and Pawtucket, R. I. There were many beautiful flowers. Hourigan Bros., had charge of the funeral arrangements.

WEDDING

Riela-Royle

A very pretty fall wedding took place in St. Patrick's church Wednesday morning at eight o'clock when Miss Grace Mildred Royle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harris Royle of Trading Cove, became the bride of Joseph John Piela, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Piela of Fall River, Mass., at a nuptial high mass celebrated by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, who also performed the wedding ceremony.

The bride was beautiful in a gown of peacock blue chiffon velvet with silver trimmings and large picture hat to match and carried white chrysanthemums. Her bridesmaid, Miss Emma M. Lavallee, was charming in georgette blue chiffon velvet with metal and velvet hat to match and carried pink chrysanthemums. The groom had as his best man James H. Royle, the bride's brother. The groom presented his best man with a gold piece while the bride presented her bridesmaid with a crystal necklace. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride after which the happy couple left by motor for a tour of the New England states. The bride's going away dress was cocoa brown georgette with brown velvet hat and beaver coat.

After they return from their wedding trip they will reside in a newly furnished home in Hallville.

For the senior group—Howard Ludlow, president; Aubrey Brown, vice president; Robert Storms, secretary; Unabel Harbeck, treasurer; Marion Royce, social chairman; Amie March, membership chairman.

CONFUSION IN MANY STREET NAMES SHOWN IN NORWICH CITY AND TOWN

Duplication in the naming of streets, similarity in the names of others, and streets, avenues, places and courts known by the same names has brought about considerable confusion in the city and town. For instance, there are two Alice streets, two Pleasant streets, two School streets, two Shetucket streets and two Joseph streets in Norwich. A canvass of the streets in the city and town as shown in the new directory, has resulted in the discovery of the above duplications and also has brought to light that there are numerous other near-duplications. There is an Arnold street and an Arnold place, a Baltic street and a Baltic road, a Cliff street and a Cliff place, a Hunters avenue and a Hunters road, a Cooper street and a Copper street, a Rose place and a Rose alley, a Terrace avenue and a Terrace Boulevard, and so on.

In the case of the duplication in the names of streets confusion is most likely to occur, in fact it has occurred on calls for fire apparatus or police protection. As an example, there are two streets by the name of Alice street, one running off Asylum street, in the West Side section and the other running off Lorenzo street, in the vicinity of Boswell avenue. Should a hurried call be sent in for the ambulance, for fire apparatus or for police officers there would arise the question as to which Alice street the call came in from. In the case of an emergency call to the fire department for a fire on Alice street, unless specific directions were given the firemen would be at a loss as to which street to send the apparatus. So with the police department, and the hospital. Valuable time would be lost in making responses to such calls. A house might be in flames on Alice street, (the West Side Alice street) while the apparatus was driven to Alice street, off Lorenzo street, which is the upper end of the Greeneville section. The two streets are a mile or more apart.

A call for taxi service to School street might result in the taxi driver going to School street, off Washington street, while the person who called for the taxi might be waiting on School street, in Taftville, five miles away.

Another angle of the confusion that might result. There are two Shetucket streets, one in Taftville and the other in the business section of the city. A hurry call to a physician to attend an injured person at some number on Shetucket street, Taftville, might cause the physician to go to an identical address on Shetucket street in the business section of the city. He would find no injured person there and would be at a loss as to the reason for the call and unless it occurred to him that there is a Shetucket street in Taftville, he would undoubtedly return to his office. In the meantime the injured person would remain unattended and the person who called the physician would be wondering why the doctor did not appear. Other telephone calls would have to be made in order to straighten out the confusion or another physician called.

Such confusion could easily result in the cases of streets, roads and avenues by the same name. For example, Palmer street and Palmer avenue, Rogers avenue and Rogers road, Tannar avenue and Tannar street, Rockwell street and Rockwell terrace.

Another development of the survey brought to light that there are two streets, named alike, but with a slight difference in the spelling of the name. These are Pratt street and Praite avenue.

The suggestion has been made that steps be taken to eliminate the duplication, and similarity in the names of streets, avenues, places and courts.

Herewith is given a list of duplicate streets, avenues, etc., streets with similar names, and their locations in the city and town:

FUNERAL TRIBUTE PAID TO PRIEST AT BALTIC

The funeral of Rev. William T. O'Brien, late pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Baltic, was held in Baltic Wednesday morning. Factories and stores in the village were closed during the funeral hours, 9 to 12 o'clock and hundreds of mourners, Catholic and non-Catholic paid final respect to the late priest. Relatives, friends and clergy from all sections of the state were present.

The guard of honor, from 9 a. m. until 12 noon, were the following members of Rev. Daniel Mullen Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus: Dennis J. Welch, John F. Conway, Jeremiah Delaney, Paul Maurice and John P. Corcoran.

At 8 o'clock there was a mass for the children and the solemn requiem mass was held at 10 o'clock at the church.

The mass, which was attended by the entire adult Catholic populace of Baltic, began at 10 o'clock and was in charge of the following officers: Celebrant, Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, D. D., Hartford; arch priest, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, Norwich; deacons of honor, Rev. Thomas Harrigan, Buffalo, Rev. Joseph McCarthy; deacon of the mass, Rev. George Donahue; sub-deacon, Matthew Judge; master of ceremony, Rt. Rev. Msgr. William Flynn; assistant master of ceremony, Rev. William Kearney; acolytes, Rev. John Reilley and Rev. Ernest Boilleu; thurifer, Rev. J. B. Malley; preachers—English, Rev. Francis E. May; French, Rev. Joseph P. Cournoyer, Rt. Rev. Maurice McAuliffe, D. D.

Miss Milner, the church organist, was in charge of the music. Following the mass relatives and friends were given a final opportunity to view the body and at one o'clock the funeral cortege of 100 automobiles, headed by state police from the Groton barracks, left for Middletown where the burial took place in the priests' plot in St. John's cemetery.

At Middletown the cortege was met by a squad of Middletown police and escorted to the cemetery. The committal service was conducted by the Rt. Rev. Maurice F. McAuliffe, D. D., who was assisted by the Rev. A. A. Jalbert, Rev. James J. Chesnut, Rev. Thomas Harrigan and other visiting priests. Honorary bearers from the clergy were:

Rt. Rev. Maurice T. McAuliffe, D. D., auxiliary bishop; Very Rev. Msgr. William Flynn, Hartford; Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, Norwich; Revs. J. Quinn, Willimantic; J. J. Papillon; Francis E. Honorary bearers from the parish: Michael H. Donohue, Arthur Ray, A. P. Cote; Albert Papineau; Noe Caron, Sr., Daniel Day.

The active bearers were: Noe Caron, Charles Charon, George LaCroix, Louis Fontaine, Fred Gauthier, Earl Papineau, Eugene Dion, Dennis Hinea.

There were many beautiful floral tributes bearing testimony to the love and esteem in which Rev. Fr. O'Brien was held.

HIBERNIANS RAISE $3,000 QUOTA FOR IRISH COLLEGE

A joint board meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies auxiliary of the order was held Sunday at 413 Orange street, New Haven, with a full representation from all the counties in the state. It was reported that the Connecticut membership has raised its quota of $3,000 for the Irish college in Rome.

Reports from the various county presidents showed an increase in membership. Plans were made to attend the national convention in Denver in July, 1929, and arrangements were made for the state convention in Meriden, Aug. 21-22, 1929.

Attending the meeting from New London county were William T. May of New London, a past state officer, Mrs. Julia Brock, of this city, state treasurer, and Mrs. Susie Malone of Taftville, county president.

YALE PROFESSOR TALKS ON KELLOGG PEACE NOTE

An address on the topic, The Kellogg Peace Note and Disarmament, by Prof. Ralph Henry Gabriel of Yale university, given at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Wauregan hotel, opened the current events course of the Women's City club. Over 200 members of the club were present and were favored with a most interesting and instructive hour's talk on the subject, which at the present time is getting widespread publicity. The chairman of the current events committee, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn, introduced the speaker.

In part Prof. Gabriel said: The Kellogg peace treaty, which has just been ratified by the leading nations of the world, provides that the United States and other powers will give up aggressive warfare. What does that mean? We have no idea at the present time. I think, however, a few things can be made clear to you. It is necessary it seems to me that I take you back to 1917, eleven years ago, now we went off to war and why we went. We were going to war to end war. We were in the belief that this would be the last time that America would have to defend the country.

When we came back we left many of our soldiers across the waters. Have we remained true to those boys we left behind, if they fought with the belief that they have fought in the last great war? In 1918 the matter of the League of Nations came up. The League of Nations is an institution with the avowed object to bring wars to an end. The United States did not see fit to ratify it. I believe that politics played an important part in its rejection and also the instinctive fear of the poor people of the country that it would further wars. These are fundamental reasons why we remained outside. The Americans fundamentally stayed out of the League of Nations in order to stay out of war.

In 1921 the next episode occurred in the Washington conference in the autumn. Back of the Washington conference lay the great naval building programme of the United States, providing for the building of a navy. After the war we had money and the determination to do it. What was the attitude of the United States? It was to dispel as quickly as possible the war cloud over the Pacific. By calling the Washington conference of 1921 we proposed definitely to give up our great naval programme. The Washington conference dispelled the war cloud in the Pacific by bringing about the limitation of armament. The United States possesses in the Island Guam a superb protective naval base. Guam is the strategic center of the western Pacific.

We pledged in 1921 we would not fortify Guam and Japan pledged no further development of naval bases. The naval bases mean to a fleet what gas stations mean to the automobiles. A fleet cannot operate effectively only about 1,000 miles from a base. It meant that a fleet of the United States could not operate effectively 1,000 miles from Guam. We therefore said to Japan we are desirous of clearing up the situation, we cannot attack your mainland and cannot protect our western mainland. Japan was in the same position. They could only operate a fleet effectively from their mainland, as was the case with the United States, leaving a No Man's sea in the middle of the ocean. This was the practical result of the Washington conference.

In the year 1927 you will recall occurred the triple disarmament conference at Geneva. The conference of powers was a failure. Why was it a failure? Because the powers were unable to agree. The disagreement was over the 10,000 ton cruisers. The United States insisted upon the 10,000 ton cruisers armed with eight inch guns, while Great Britain advised the practically abolition of them, insisting upon the use of the 7,500 or 6,000 ton cruisers armed with six inch guns. We were unwilling to accept the regulations of Great Britain.

In 1928 we persisted as a people as a nation to further world peace. This took the form of the Kellogg treaty, which provided that the nations give up warfare. England in ratifying the treaty reserved the rights and obligations to go to war by the League of Nations and in addition the right and obligation to go to war in unspecified parts of the world, such as Australia, Egypt, etc. France ratified the treaty with similar reservations. Did the United States make any reservations? They did not.

The Kellogg peace treaty has not been ratified by the senate. It is pretty clear it will not be ratified, only after a sharp fight. Some senators believe that the treaty binds us to the League of Nations. I cannot follow their reasoning.

Following the signing of the Kellogg peace treaty has come a revival of the disarmament question and word of arrangement between France and England in secret, concerning the 6,500 ton cruisers.

Now as to the military policy of the United States at the present time. Germany is officially disarmed, but it has an army of 100,000. The United States army is 113,000. The United States is very much more disarmed than Germany, comparing the armies with the population of each country. We do not stand for complete disarmament. The government has not accepted the abolition of armaments. Abolitions of armaments is just as much a cause of war as to be too over armed. This was one of the factors that brought about the Civil war. The north and south were both disarmed. The men of the south of 1861 saw that the north had no army and said these northern commercial men won't fight; the war will last only three months. The men of the north in looking at the south had the same thoughts. On this basis the United States decided upon a defense policy, not a total abolition of arms, but the retention of absolute minimum of armaments with other nations.

EXPECT 40 BOYS FOR CONFERENCE AT MIDDLETOWN

The quota of 40 from the southern part of the county to attend the Connecticut Older Boys' conference at Middletown on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, is expected to be filled. Those who have already signed to go are Russell Reynolds, Edward Pearson and an adult leader to be chosen from Lyme Congregational church; Hadley B. Larrabee, H. Marshall, Clifford Hansen, William Caird and Sidney H. Moon, First Congregational church, New London; Clinton Sharpe, Union Baptist, Montville; Wilber D. Walker, Y. M. C. A.; Rudolph E. Jacobus and J. Morgan Adams, First Congregational, Groton; Donald Vallett, Tryon Lathrop and Rev. William D. Barnes, Montville Center Congregational; Roger Coffey and Austin Johnson, Salem Congregational, and Lloyd Pratt and David Beebe, First Methodist Episcopal, New London. Others are to be registered, it is known, but their names have not been reported to the Y. M. C. A. as yet. The trip will be made by private autos, either direct from the churches or from the Y. M. C. A., Friday noon at 1.

The conference theme is "Youth's Search for Truth," and the programme includes the following:

Friday, 3 p. m.—Organ recital, devotional service, address, What About God? Rev. James G. Gilkey, Springfield, Mass.; Friday evening, address, What More About God? Rev. Dr. Gilkey.

Saturday—Morning discussion period, address, What About My Mind? Dr. George Ross Wells, Hartford; Saturday afternoon, recreation; Saturday evening, conference dinner, address, What About My Body? Dr. F. N. Seerley, dean of Springfield college.

Sunday morning—Attendance at churches; Sunday afternoon, mass meeting, presentation of the torch, address by Rev. John L. Davis, New York city, upon What About My Life?

Church Executive Council Met

The executive council of the United Congregational church met Wednesday evening at the Community house for supper, which was followed by the business meeting with an attendance of seventeen. Rev. Alexander H. Abbott presided and business of the church was under discussion.

"Happiest Boy in Connecticut"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Connecticut mother, Mrs. C. C. Schweiger, 11 Clinton St., Hartford, says: "My little son, Elliott, became so constipated that I was badly worried. Then a friend got me to give him some California Fig Syrup. It stopped his constipation quick; and the way it improved his color and made him pick up made me realize how run-down he had been. He is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say he's the happiest boy in Connecticut."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

FAST AMATEUR BOUTS SLATED FOR OLYMPIC HALL THIS EVENING

The indoor amateur boxing season opens tonight at Olympic hall on Water street when the Pastime A. C., of which Jackie Burns is matchmaker puts on a card of eight fast bouts. With an entry list of some 30 boxers to draw upon there should be little difficulty in matching up the boys in their respective class so as to give the fans an even bout. The weights of the boys run from 108 pounds up to 160 pounds which with eight bouts on the program should give the fans a bout in every class.

Fast talent is all that will appear on the card which means that some of the best amateurs in the eastern part of the state will show their wares this evening. Included in the list of entrants for tonight's card are four boys from Pelouskin's stable in Danielson and a number from the boxing school of Kid Wilson in Montville. Joe (Pop) Connelly is bringing up several boys from New London while Norwich will be represented by Eddie Sparkie and Baby Joe Gans, from Chick Spivery's stable and Freddie Besade popular local favorite.

Another boy of note that will be on the card is Scotty McPhillips a New York amateur who is now at George Schiller's camp in Bozrah. McPhillips is rated as a fast performer in the 123 pound class. Two boys from the Submarine Base will be on the card which also adds to the action. One heavyweight bout has been slated between Young Brush of Norwich and Johnny Argyia of Montville. This bout is a real treat as both are reputed to be tough boys and real sluggers.

Matchmaker Burns has collected a good bunch of two fisted boys who should give the fans plenty of action tonight and the hall should be packed. Good seating arrangements have been made for the fans and if the patronage tonight warrants it these amateur bouts will be put on every Thursday evening throughout the winter.

CALDWELL LIKES BASEBALL BETTER THAN FOOTBALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Football minus the rah-rah is the business of Bruce Caldwell these crisp fall days in common with a number of other young men with husky frames and heroic college gridiron reputations but he said today he doesn't expect to work at it indefinitely. In fact, his professional football plans go no further than the present season.

It isn't that this blonde young man who ran rampant for Yale last season and now is the featured star of the New York Giants of the National Professional Football league loves football less, but rather that he loves baseball more.

Those who watched him cut capers in Yale bowl a year ago may never have suspected it. But Bruce wasn't enjoying himself as much as he was when playing second base for the baseball team.

"I always liked baseball better," said Caldwell this afternoon at the Polo grounds where his team practices every afternoon its in town and not booked for a game. "That's why I haven't any plans beyond this season with the Giants."

"After the football season is over, I'm going to start thinking about the baseball season with the Cleveland Indians. I signed with them you know when I was graduated from Yale last spring. And most of all, I want to make good as a big league ball player. It's the game of games for me."

But this earnest rather serious—appearing young bachelor of philosophy does not allow his baseball to interfere with his football out of season. In the practices which followed he flashed much of the pep that used to mark his work in scrimmage and practice drills as well as games when he was the star on Tad Jones' team.

YALE HAS STRENUOUS WORKOUT FOR ARMY

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 24—(AP)—Yale gridders put in a strenuous workout today in preparation for the coming clash with Army. To a spectator it looked as though it was the first practice session of the season as Mal Stevens put his charges through all the phases of football, from dummy-tackling to scrimmage. His session today was the longest and hardest so far this year.

It was definitely decided today that Oldt will not be able to play against the Army Saturday, as his bruised shoulder is very slow in mending.

McEwen has probably been replaced at right end by Barney Crile. Today Stevens worked Crile at this position and McEwen will be in all probability relegated to the second team. Oldt's position at left end will be filled by Dan Hickok. Both of these men were second string men last season and got into a number of games. They have been coming along in great style this year.

The Army team will arrive here Friday morning and will hold a two hour drill at the bowl in the afternoon. The Cadets will not come here until Saturday morning and will march to the bowl from the center of the city. A field drill at the bowl will begin at 1:30 and the kickoff is slated for two o'clock.

INJURIES CONTINUE TO HAMPER EASTERN TEAMS

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—With the mid week practice battles for varsity places producing injuries almost as frequently as the Saturday games, more than one eastern football coach is following the gloomy example set by Gil Dobie of Cornell.

The Navy and Princeton were the worst sufferers today when the hard scrimmage sessions ended. With monthly examinations hampering the practice by keeping many of the men off the field a new woe descended on the Navy camp when Oscar Hagberg, a newly discovered end prospect, received a broken leg during today's scrimmage session that will prevent his becoming a first string player this year if he is able to play at all before the end of the season. Hardin, Navy center, also went on the unavailable list with injuries. A pounding received in the Notre Dame game aggravated old injuries and he will not recover in time to play against Pennsylvania Saturday. The only bright spot for the midshipmen was the return of Spring, a backfield star, who has not been able to play for some time.

The Princeton varsity went through a long session against the coaches and some former varsity players and came out with two damaged first string men. Sam Levine, guard, was pretty well battered and will not be able to practice for several days while Graham Jones, back, received a slight injury.

At Cornell, Dobie has an undamaged team to send against Princeton. An open date Saturday with the resulting opportunity to bring his men along slowly brought Dobie through the last scrimmage today without injuries.

The Penn coaches likewise are shrouded in gloom because of the poor showing the Red and Blue varsity made against the scrubs. The whole first team was benched during today's scrimmage session and the second team promptly crossed the scrub goal line.

The Army squad, with five men still on the hospital list from the Harvard game, had its first hard session in preparation for Yale, but the plays were halted before they became too rough in order not to risk further injuries.

Only one case of serious damage was reported in western Pennsylvania. When Pittsburgh and Carnegie Tech completed their home preparations for their meeting Saturday and prepared to vanish into the hinterlands outside the city for final secret workouts, it was announced that Parkinson, star Pitt back, still was disabled and probably would not get into the fray Penn State came safely through a scrimmage against a mythical Syracuse team.

The pall of gloom extended to New England encompassing both Harvard and Yale. The Crimson scrubs, coached by Charlie Leneham, who has been scouting Dartmouth, overwhelmed the varsity in a long scrimmage using the Dartmouth aerial attack. Although the longest practice of the year at New Haven passed without injuries, it was learned that Oldt, star end, would not play against Army because of a badly bruised shoulder.

DARTMOUTH HAS LITTLE TROUBLE WITH CRIMSON PLAYS

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 24—(AP)—The Dartmouth varsity football team had but little difficulty solving the Harvard attack, as enacted by the scrubs, here today in a practice session which ended long after the floodlights were called into use.

The Dartmouth scrubs, coached by Jim Donnelly, who has been scouting Harvard, wore red jerseys to heighten the reality and gave an excellent display of the Crimson running attack.

Head Coach Jesse Hawley, who has been saving the cream of his football menu for Yale a week from Saturday, outlined a number of "psychological" plays for use against Harvard. After the scrubs gave their Harvard show, Hawley had his regulars polish up their passing attack with Al Marsters doing the bulk of the heaving, although Hawley has six other capable passers on his backfield squad.

The Dartmouth coach paid special attention to his ends, regarded as the weakest part of the Green team. The wingmen were given extra attention and spent much time receiving passes. Hawley had Swarth out at right end and alternated Bankart, Hetfield and McInnes on the opposite wing.

Harry Hillman, track coach and trainer of the football team, said that Fred Breithut, back, injured in the Columbia game, would be able to play against Harvard but that Hal Booma, regular end who has an injured hip, would be out of the game

HARVARD SCRUBS USE GREEN PLAYS AGAINST VARSITY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 24—(AP)—Dartmouth forward passes, as executed by the Harvard scrub eleven, today overwhelmed the varsity in a two hour scrimmage. The scrubs, coached by Charlie Linehan, who has been scouting the Big Green all season, succeeded in completing many long passes from Dartmouth formations.

Tommy Gilligan, sophomore quarterback, ran the scrubs and tossed several passes which traveled between 40 and 50 yards. The varsity backs, with Putnam at quarter, were almost helpless against the Dartmouth aerial attack.

Harvard physicians reported that Henry Gildea, a substitute center, and Sam Burns, second string end, would be unable to play against the Green. Both were injured in yesterday's practice. Foster Davis, a tackle substitute, who was injured in the Army game, was also reported as unfit for action next Saturday. Every other member of the squad, however, was pronounced fit.

BOSTON COLLEGE PREPARES FOR STIFF BATTLE WITH B. U.

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—Realizing that the Boston university football team is no longer a punching bag for larger teams, Coach Joe McKenney today assembled three different Boston college backfield combinations to work against the Terriers next Saturday.

The first string quartet included Weston, Creeden, Marr and Smith. The second had Bond, Anos, Mirley and Kennedy and the third lineup of ball carriers included Colbert, Shea, Aaron and O'Brien.

McKenney sent the varsity through a long scrimmage with the second and third elevens and then ended the practice session by having each team run through signals. It was evident that Captain Warren McGuirk, who has been ill, would be unable to start against Boston university and Henry Plausse, a sophomore, was groomed for his tackle position.

Officials of the athletic association said they were unable to arrange a game with Southern Methodist university, which wanted to play on Nov. 2, the day the Eagles were scheduled to play Duke university

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Naugatuck High promises to contend somewhat for the state football title this fall. Naugy has started out in that direction anyway with four straight victories.

Chapman Tech's strong cross-country runners gave Bacon Academy's inexperienced squad a bad beating this week. Tech took five first places.

Aside from six boys on Conn. Aggies varsity, Norwich, or the Academy, has no active representative in college football this fall. Dan Polsky is on the injured list of the Brown squad.

The first basketball game of the season has already been played in New York city high school leagues.

There will be no junior varsity basketball team at the Coast Guard Academy in New London this winter, the varsity drawing all of the candidates. Incidentally the Cadets have a 25 game schedule in the offing opening December 7.

N. B. A. NOT HEADED FOR THE ROCKS, SAYS PRELM

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The National Boxing association is not going on the rocks because of a threatened withdrawal of two or three eastern states and Canada, Paul Prehn, chairman of the Illinois state athletic commission and newly elected president of the N. B. A. said today

The present internal dissension in the organization is "just a controversy between several former office holders," President Prehn said He added this controversy would not deter the association from pushing its plans to promote the sport.

The present situation was caused, Prehn said, by the failure of Thomas Murphy of Toronto, Canada, to become elected to the presidency or a vice presidency. Prehn revealed an effort was made a year ago to have the constitution amended so Canada could be given equal representation on the question of votes and office, but that Lathron Coxswell, of Marviand, secretary of the N. B A., took no action on the suggestion.

Prehn said he was surprised to learn that Thomas E. Donohue, of New London, Conn., retiring president of the N. B. A., was no waligned with Murphy, president of the Canadian Boxing Federation in the threatened unrising. He said Donohue had pledged hiss upport to Prehn at the convention held in 1927 at Toledo.

WORK ON TROWBRIDGE MEMORIAL IS STARTED

HARTFORD, Oct. 24—(AP)—Construction of the Trowbridge memorial, first unit of Trinity's new athletic plant, has ben started by the R. G. Bent company, of Hartford, which has been awarded the contract. The building, which will contain a 30 by 70 foot swimming pool and six squash racquets courts, will be located at the south end of the campus, in the center of the flat section extending west from Broad street to the terrace that marks the formal campus.

The construction will be under the supervision of former State Highway Commissioner Charles J. Bennett, who has been retained as supervising engineer representing the college trustees. The building was designed by the architectural firm of Trowbridge and Livingston, New York, for many years architects of the college, and is a memorial to the late S. B. P. Trowbridge, Trinity 1883, who was the senior partner of the firm.

Y EMPS PREPARING FOR BUSY BASKETBALL SEASON

The Y Emps, who had a successful season last year, finishing in the runner-up position for the eastern Connecticut intermediate court title, will start preparing for the coming basketball season with their first practice at the Y gym tonight. The starting time is set for 8 o'clock and Coach Conklin expects a large turnout of candidates.

Among those from last year's quintet expected to put in an appearance are Schwartzburg, Fagan, Stevens, Economous, Murphy, Henschel, Lynch, Sheridan, Vulgares, Dierman, Sherry and Golemeskie.

Urospects for a strong team this year are exceptionally bright and with that view a stiff schedule is to be arranged. It is hoped to secure a few high school teams on the slate, which will be announced within the next few weeks.

ACADEMY MEETS WESTERLY IN LEAGUE CONTEST FRIDAY

The Academy will meet Westerly High's grid forces tomorrow afternoon at Westerly in one of the important Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Conference games. These teams are now tied for first place in the league, having a victory apiece in their only games while Stonington is the literal leader with two victories in as many games.

Both teams are now practically ready for the engagement. While work has not been exceptionally stiff this week, still the fine points have been stressed and a remedy for faults evident of late sought.

The Academy came out of the hard Warren Harding game in good shape and will probably be able to present all its regulars tomorrow in the Rhode Island city. Capt. Buck LaCroix, halfback, who sustained two broken ribs two weeks ago, is expected back in the game in a short time.

CALDWELL PREDICTS YALE WILL WIN OVER ARMY

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—Bruce Cladwell, whose accurate toe kicked the deciding points for Yale in the Army game of a year ago, thinks the Eli jinx will be functioning again on Saturday and will more than counterbalance any advantage the Army may have on paper.

"The Army sems to have an edge because it has more experienced material," said Caldwell as he pulled on his cleated shoes for practice with his pro eleven, the New York Giants, "but Yale teams have a quality of coming through against the Army even when the dope is the other way."

The star who has the center of all eyes in this game last year expects to be just one of 75,000 spectators when the teams take the field this time.

Palangion Is Sold

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 24—(AP)—Carl Palangion, member of the squad of the Canadiens of the National Professional Hockey league, has been sold to the Newark club of the Canadian-American league. Carl is a brother of Pete Palangion, one of the Canadiens' regulars.

RED GRANGE ARRESTED ON COMPLAINT OF CHICAGO WOMAN

CHICAGO, Oct. 23—(AP)—Harold "Red" Grange, famous "Galloping Ghost" of the gridiron, surrendered himself at the detective bureau late today after a warrant for his arrest on a paternity charge had been granted Mrs. Helen Flozet. Mrs. Flozet says she is the mother of a daughter born last March 1 and claims the child's father is Grange.

The former football star, who is now appearing as an attraction at a loop theatre, posted a bond of $1,500 and was released.

Lizzie Wins

Elizabeth St. school defeated Broadway school eleven by the score of 30 to 0, in a fast game at Chelsea park Wednesday. A. Kirstein scored three touchdowns, Lovinsky one and Buster one. Romanowski, A. Kirstein, Sikorski, Lacey, Fogarty and Buster played a good game for the winners. Lamphere and the Rosenberg brothers played a good game for the losers. Sherry refereed a good game. The lineup for the winners was: Buster, fullback; A. Kirstein, right halfback; Romanowski, left halfback; Lacey, quarterback; Sikorski, left tackle; L. Kirstein, right tackle; Sheckter, center; Blinderman, left guard; Sadusky, right guard; Dekoven, left end; Lorinsky, right end; substitutions, Santos for Blinderman, Sikorski for Fogarty, George for L. Kirstein.

Broad Street School Wins

The Broad Street school football eleven defeated Terry's All-Stars, 12 to 0, Wednesday afternoon at the Academy campus. This is the second time that the Broad street team has won from the All-Stars, the score of the first game being 12 to 6. Tony Fidrych with two touchdowns starred for the Broad street team while Jerry Tramontozzi played a brilliant defensive game. The Broad street team challenges the Broadway fifth and sixth grade team. The Broad street lineup was: Capliozzi, center; West, right tackle; Tramontozzi, left tackle; Parmalee, left guard; Schwartz, right guard; Terry, left end; Lane, right end; Fidrych, fullback; Crandall, left halfback; Johnson, quarterback; Corbeille, right halfback.

Cox's All Stars Win.

Wednesday afternoon Cox's All-Stars won from Hamel's All-Stars 26 to 0 in a very one-sided game. The perfect functioning of the back field for the Cox team resulted in the large score. W. White and Burke played well on the line while Kirker starred in the backfield and Cox at end. LaRochelle, Hamel and Bamber played well for the losers. The lineup for the winners was: Cox and White, ends; Burke and Tamaino tackles; Ravenell and Hogan, guards; O'Brien, center; H. Mathews, quarterback; Murphy, left halfback; Kirker right halfback and A. Matthews fullback.

SIMPLE EPISCOPAL SERVICE FOR GEO. BARR McCUTCHEON

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—A simple Episcopal service for the dead was conducted today for George Barr McCutcheon, autho rof "Graustark" and almost half a hundred other novels, who died yesterday while attending a luncheon.

Only members of the author's family and a few friends were at the chapel where the services were held. The body was taken after services to a crematory. Tomorrow the ashes will be taken to Lafayette, Ind., where they will be interred.

THREE YOUTHS CHARGED WITH STEALING AUTOS

NEW BRITAIN, Oct. 24—(AP)—Charged with stealing automobiles, three youths, Frank Rutkowski, 16, Alex Rutkowski, 19, and William Baldagi, 17, all of this city, were locked up today in lieu of not furnishing bail for $2,000 each. It is alleged that the boys sold one car in Waterbury and concealed another in a local garage here.

MORE SHORE PARKS ARE NEEDED IN CONNECTICUT

When the Connecticut Forest and Park association held a meeting last Saturday on the estate of James L. Goodwin at Hampton, H. H. Chapman of the state park commission made the statement that although Connecticut was making commendable progress in building up a series of state forest for the production of timber, the protection of water sheds and the propagation of fish and game, it was behind hand in the acquisition of park lands along the shore. Its one active shore park at Hammonnasset Beach, he declared, served over half a million people a year and that at least two more parks should be acquired along the shore before it was too late. The places suitable for shore parks, he declared to be very limited in number, only two sites remaining which in his opinion would be satisfactory.

Arthur L. Peale, the Norwich member of the state park commission, said Wednesday night that he cordially endorsed the work of the Connecticut State Park and Forest association and he also commended the statement of President Chapman that more shore parks are needed. The central part of the state has Hammonessett park, but the eastern and western sections of the state are without shore parks. Eastern Connecticut should certainly have a shore park, said Mr. Peale.

Author Lays Story in Norwich.

One of the new fall novels is "Derelicts" by Deane T. Wilton, of Boston.

The author has laid most of the story in New London and Norwich. The hero is arrested and sentenced to prison in the New London county superior court.

Mr. Wilton was in Norwich Wednesday, and again visited the scenes described in "Derelicts" which is the first one he has had accepted for publication.

He is now at work on a third story which is to be one with a war background. The author was stationed at New London during the World war and has a wide acquaintance in the state.

BOSTON PANDEMONIACAL IN ITS WELCOME TO GOV. SMITH

Square Garden speech is true, then all the members of congress, republicans and democrats, who voted for the Muscle Shoals bill—vetoed by President Coolidge—are socialists.

"I can almost picture the republican candidate saying to Chairman Mac-old: 'What argument did you use against Smith's water power proposal in New York?'

"And Mac-old's reply: 'Refer to it as state socialism; that is best calculated to scare business men, large [illegible]'

"Mr. Mac-old referred to by the [illegible] as the chairman of the re-[illegible] state committee in New [illegible] nominee added that he [illegible] are, however, that chair-[illegible] did not explain' that [illegible] distinguished New Yorker [illegible] up 'with what he [illegible] a socialistic doctrine.'"

Quoted Theodore Roosevelt

Governor then quoted Theodore [illegible] as saying said: "Coal and [illegible] compare to water [illegible] to put them get a mon-[illegible] belongs to this state."

[illegible] distinguished socialist—[illegible] republican candidate [illegible] republican chairman—is [illegible] "the nominee [illegible] back as 1907, twenty [illegible] first advocated [illegible] development of public waters in [illegible] state of New York under state [illegible] and state control.

"Mr. Mac-old and Mr. Hoover [illegible] Governor Miller [illegible] among the socialists [illegible] water power de-[illegible]

[illegible] Young chairman of the [illegible] of directors of the General Elec-[illegible] company and advocate of state [illegible] state controlled power [illegible] according to the language [illegible] candidate, take his [illegible] the ranks of state socialists.

[illegible] the candidate's own words. [illegible] not instead of hiding be-[illegible] phrase of 'state social-[illegible] out and say:

"[illegible] in leasing or selling [illegible] alienating the water [illegible] country in the in-[illegible] private power companies for [illegible] by them for private [illegible] and private gain, and I am op-[illegible] government ownership, gov-[illegible] control and government de-[illegible]

[illegible] governor said Mr. Hoover had [illegible] water power develop-[illegible] discussed without mentioning [illegible] Muscle Shoals," and asked [illegible] republican candidate had in [illegible] the words "deadly de-[illegible]

[illegible] that mean public ownership [illegible] control?" he asked. "If [illegible] words to convey the [illegible] and what did he have in his [illegible] when he tried to hide it?"

Governor Smith also charged his [illegible] with quoting from a speech made by Samuel Gompers [illegible] government ownership of rail-[illegible] to bolster up his argument.

"There is a wide difference," the [illegible] nominee added, "between [illegible] owned railroad and a water [illegible] Mr. Hoover failed to dif-[illegible] between the development [illegible] resource and the opera-[illegible] of a private built-up business."

Salt Creek Oil Lease

[illegible] again assailed Hubert [illegible] chairman of the republican [illegible] committee for renewing the [illegible] lease to the Sin-[illegible] while serving as secre-[illegible] interior. He de-[illegible] references to this lease [illegible] as one of the oil magnates [illegible] the senate investiga-[illegible] have been sufficient to put [illegible] on notice so that at least be-[illegible] following the option he would get [illegible] from the attorney-general [illegible] He added that Work, [illegible] not done this and that [illegible] secretary had held the lease [illegible]

[illegible] said Hoover besides re-[illegible] to public water power development [illegible] calling it "state socialism," [illegible] identical course toward [illegible] He also declared that the [illegible] candidate had referred to [illegible] proposal for a change in [illegible] the same term.

[illegible] the governor declared his rival, in his Boston speech, "spoke of the prosperity of New England, but in his speech of acceptance he said that agriculture, coal and textile industries are still lagging behind."

Speaks of Textiles

"What are the facts?" the governor asked. "In one manufacturing city alone in this state the number of wage earners in industry dropped from 53 300 in 1921 to 24,800 in 1927, a loss of work for 8500 men and women, particularly in the woolen and cotton mills. In that same period the amount of wages earned in a year had fallen from $36,904,884 to $28,961,874 or a loss in wages of $8,000,000 a year.

"These figures come from the Massachusetts department of labor and industry.

"In his Boston speech, Mr. Hoover offered the textile workers of New England the consolation that they earned on an average of 40 cents an hour and, for that reason, they were much better off than textile workers in other parts of the world.

"For a little over a 53-hour week, 40 cents an hour would make the weekly wage of a full-time textile worker $21.36 a week. Even this small amount is not agreed to by the bureau of labor and statistics in Washington, which only recently issued a statement declaring that a survey of the cotton textile industry showed that the average worker received $17.30.

"I should like to have a picture of a $17.30 a week textile worker riding out to dinner in his own automobile. In the face of the republican party's own declaration that agriculture is prostrate and that the buying power of one-third of the people of the nation has been paralyzed, the republican candidate at Madison Square Garden on Monday night of this week declared the democratic remedy for the economic ills of agriculture to be state socialism, without offering anything in the way of a remedy for their solution. "Unfounded statements of that kind go farther to build up the ranks of socialism in this country than anything else."

Prohibition

On prohibition the governor quoted Mr. Hoover as saying:

"Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose. It must be worked out constructively."

"What does that mean?" asked Smit. "What is the matter with the noble experiment that, after eight years of trial, it is necessary for the republican candidate to say it must be worked out constructively? Is it working now? If not, what is the matter? And what is his remedy? Why not use words to convey the meaning and not hide it?

Grave Abuses

"Further in his speech he says: 'Common sense compels us to realize that grave abuses have occurred.'

"What are they and what is the remedy for them?"

Again, the governor said, Mr. Hoover declared "my plan for farm relief to be state socialism." He said that as a result of this Senator Curtis of Kansas, republican vice-presidential candidate was a "fifty per cent socialist" as he had originally voted for the McNary-Haugen farm bill and then voted to sustain President Coolidge's veto.

The nominee added that, further, Mr. Hoover, by so referring to his farm plan, included Vice-President Dawes and Frank O. Lowden, former Illinois governor and a leader in the farm movement, as well as many members of the house and senate in the "state socialistic party."

"As far as all these problems are concerned" the governor concluded, "I have certainly used words to convey my meaning and I have not attempted to conceal it, and it made no difference in what part of the country I was talking.

"To refer to the remedies for all these evils as state socialism is not constructive statesmanship, it is not leadership; and leadership is what this country is hungry for today. It has not had it in the last eight years and it has little prospect of it in the four to come, in the event of republican success."

POETRY

Finis

October, and nearly November! Grey Winter is here ere we know;
Clouds hurry down the horizon, half shy with their secret of snow.
In the valley a low wind is sighing to the silent, listening wood;
And the note of a lone bird crying, like a ghost in the solitude.

October, and nearly November! Dull breakers are cold on the dune;
Softly they sigh and remember bright April, and brief golden June,
And Fair August, seductive and languid, with blossoms that rival the sun;
Sadly they sigh and remember sweet summer, when summer is done.

October, and nearly November! The garden is lonely and cold,
Filled with dead leaves from the maple, like hands that are withered and old.
There is silence; not even the crickets, with cracked tenor voices off key,
Break the monotonous falling, and calling of voices for me.

—Marjorie Somern Scheuer.

The Road to Slumberland

What is the road to slumberland and when does the baby go?
The road lies straight through mother's arms when the sun is sinking low.

He goes by the drowsy land of nod to the music of lullaby,
When all wee lambs are safe in the fold, under the evening sky.

A soft little nightgown clean and white; a face washed sweet and fair;
A mother, brushing the tangles out of the silken, golden hair.

Two little tired, satiny feet, from shoe and stocking free;
Two little palms together clasped at the mother's patient knee.

Some baby words that are drowsily lisped to the tender Shepherd's ear;
And a kiss that only a mother can place on the brow of her baby dear.

A little round head that nestles at last close to the mother's breast.
And then the lullaby soft and low, singing the song of rest.

And closer, and closer the blue-veined lids are hiding the baby eyes,
As over the road to slumber land the dear little traveler lies.

For this is the way, through mother's arms, all little babies go
To the beautiful city of slumberland when the sun is sinking low.

—Mary Dow Brine.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Maud is all wrapped up in herself."
"Yes; it's a pity she doesn't realize how much she is overdressed."—Boston Transcript.

Second (to battered pugilist after sixth round)—Keep a stiff upper lip, Jim.
Jim (speaking painfully)—E's seen to that.—Sporting News.

Mrs. Smith—My husband makes his money go a long way.
Mrs. Scott—My husband is disinclined to let his go at all.—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Nayber—Your lodger isn't very talkative, is he?
Mrs. Nosey—Mercy, no! I have to open all his letters to find out anything about him.—Answers.

Globe Trotter—Have you been to the Occident?
Mrs. Newrich—No, really! Was anyone hurt?—Vancouver Province.

"What does the modern domestic lack?" inquires a writer in a weekly paper.
The answer is obviously—staying power.—London Westminster.

"See here!" exclaimed the angry man. "I wish you would muzzle that dog of yours at night. His barking keeps my baby awake."
"I was going to request you to muzzle your baby," rejoined the neighbor. "His nightly howling annoys my dog."—The Scotsman.

"There ought to be only one head to every family," declared the earnest speaker in the club.
"That's true," agreed a worried-looking man standing by the mantel making figures on a piece of paper.
"You agree, do you?" asked the first man with a smile.
"Indeed I do," was the answer. "I've just paid for hats for nine daughters."—Montreal Star.

Nearly half the 32,500 American army trucks and ambulances left in France are still in service, thanks to the French dealers in automobile parts, who had the foresight to buy up the entire spare-parts depots at the end of the war. The continued performance of these machines has done much to establish the good reputation American trucks now hold in France.

Meat from the horse, the mule and the donkey comprised the menu at a dinner in Paris recently, arranged by the National Horse Industry. The meal opened with a plate of donkey and horse meat sausage. Then there was a spiced mule sausage. The ministers of agriculture, commerce and war were invited to the feast. They sent representatives.

The latest cabinet bureau statistics relating to Japan's national wealth, the taking of which started in 1924, disclose a valuation of approximately 192,300,000,000 yen (the yen is valued at less than 50 cents). This gives per capita wealth of 1,731 yen. The national wealth is shown to have increased about 70,000,000,000 yen since 1912. At that time the per capita wealth was estimated at 806 yen. The biggest items of the recent estimates are land, valued at some 32,000,000,000 yen, and buildings, valued at around 16,000,000,000 yen.

Patronize These Well Known Concerns

H. H. BENJAMIN DOES EXCELLENT WORK AT CENTRAL GARAGE

There is nothing in the world which damages the paint on your new automobile any more than tar or oil mixed with sand. Hundreds of car owners in eastern Connecticut have been riding lately with the fenders and body of their automobiles covered with a coating of tar.

At 25 Franklin street, phone 2161 is the business place of H. H. Benjamin. Here you will find the men and equipment to wash your car and polish it, making it look like new. Washing, polishing and storage are the three things at Benjamin does and does well. If it is not convenient for you to bring your automobile to his place of business a phone call brings a garage man to your home for your car and brings it back when cleaned.

Your car should always be kept in first class condition and with the expenditure of but a little money and the loss of your car for only a short time, it can be made to look as good as new. Many a fine paint job has been ruined because dirt has been allowed to pack and harden on the body. Removal by an inexperienced person results in injuring the paint job and the car is ruined in appearance.

Mr. Benjamin guarantees removal of dirt without removal of paint and this alone is worth a trial. Why not brighten up your car these nice days and enjoy riding in a car shining like new.

Washing never injured an automobile but lack of washing has done so many times over. Let's save that neat appearing car by keeping it cleaned and polished. Drop in and see Mr. Benjamin the next time you are down town and be convinced of the value of the work he does.

YOU HAD BETTER SEE ELDREDGE FOR GOOD FARM EQUIPMENT

At this season of the year when the farmer is busy harvesting and getting in his crops there is one thing that must be working correctly or there will be a serious loss of time and money. Worn out farm machinery is worse than useless and can cause unlimited damage.

The Eldredge Hardware company of 85 Water street, Norwich, has been in the hardware business in Norwich for many years. Only by carefully selecting their merchandise has this company risen to the position it has attained in the business world in Norwich. A good name is a thing to be proud of and farming equipment you owe it to the Eldredge Hardware Co., enjoys this distinction. Every article sold at this store bears the stamp of approval of the management. Some stores might sell an article that will not stand the test of time. Anything sold by Eldredge is guaranteed to stand the test of time.

If you are in need of any type of farming equipment yo uowe it to your pocketbook to visit the Eldredge Hardware company and inspect its stock of the latest type of farming equipment. There you will find nationally known equipment, selected by Eldredge as being the best type for farming. There are in eastern Connecticut hundreds of people who will readily testify to the wearing qualities of merchandise sold by this company. This kind of testimonial is one which is gained only through constant and continual selling of articles which stand the test of time and pay for themselves many times over in the service rendered.

Visit the Eldredge Hardware company the next time you are in Norwich and let them show you these money and labor saving devices. You owe it to yourself to have the best.

RADIATOR TROUBLE ELIMINATED THROUGH A FALL OVERHAUL JOB

Radiator trouble is a growing disease. A little leak becomes, under pressure of the radiating water system, a bad job, engine trouble, and eventually a new radiator, if not other repairs or new parts to your automobile.

The fall is a good time to have your radiator overhauled. A few dollars spent before the radiating system is called upon for extreme wrok in cold weather will save you a lot of money.

The Preston Garage on Westerly road is an extremely good place to have your work done by specialists who know how and at moderate rates. The average job can be done while you are at business. Drive your car around in the morning, it will be repaired when you get ready to go home.

Mufflers repaired and replaced, all the bumps taken out of your fenders so you wouldn't know you had hit that tree, hoods repaired and replaced, your lamps fixed, your gas tank overhauled and repaired. In fact any body job of metal put back so that you wouldn't know you had a damaged part.

Phone 3255 and let Mr. Discola explain to you how to save dollars when you ned a repair job done.

GOOD KEROSENE "THE SMOKELESS KIND" IS BEST ON MARKET

Smith Bros. kerosene oil is becoming more generally recognized as the most highly satisfactory kerosene on the market. This product is distributed by Smith Bros. of 863 Boswell avenue, Nowich, Tel. 3159, and they give excellent service. Regardless of the fact that many homes now have electric lights there is still a big demand for kerosene for while the demand has been reduced so far as lighting is concerned, the use of kerosene for heating has increased. There is hardly a home in city or country that does not make use of a kerosene heater at some time of the year. Then the use of kerosene for cooking purposes has steadily increased. So long as there is a strong demand for kerosene there is no reason why users should not obtain the best and if they purchase Smith Bros. kerosene—the kerosene that will not smoke—then they are sure of the best.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS TO CLOSE DURING STATE INSTITUTE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 24—The Rhode Island Institute of Instruction holds its sessions today (Thursday) and Friday in Elks' auditorium, Providence. During the two days there will be no sessions of Westerly public schools.

OBITUARY

Miss Mildred D. Whipple

Miss Mildred Dorothy Whipple died Tuesday evening at the home of her parents on Canal street extension. She had been in failing health for the past two years. Miss Whipple was born in Groton, Conn., May 5, 1902, the daughter of Wesley O. and Carrie B. Rowley Whipple. With her parents, she came to Westerly 16 years ago. She was graduated from Westerly high school in 1921. For five years after that she was employed in the office of the Westerly Automatic Telephone company. Besides her parents, she is survived by a brother, Vincent C. Whipple, of this town.

During the fall and winter the state supervisor of home classes, under the Rhode Island board of education, Mrs. Althea Mayor Jenckes, will conduct a class in methods of teaching foreigners. The class will meet for the first time at the library, Thursday, Nov. 1, from 4 to 6. There is no charge for the class in methods and it is open to all who are interested. The class will be held once a week for 12 weeks.

EX-LEGION COMMANDER TO SPEAK IN PAWCATUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 24—Thursday evening the Pawcatuck Smith-Robinson club will conduct an open-air rally in front of the Commercial hotel. The hotel balcony provides an excellent rostrum for the speakers. The principal address will be by John F. Pickett, past department commander of the American Legion in Connecticut, who is a candidate for the office of state comptroller.

Three motor busses of the Rhode Island Coach lines were required Sunday to convey Westerly Italians to Providence for the ceremony of blessing the banners of the Calabrese society, and the incidental parade.

Charles F. Eccleston returned Wednesday from Providence and Cambridge, Mass.

Harry Maxson of Montreal is passing a short visit at his summer home in Westerly.

Donald Wheley was in Cambridge, Mass., Tuesday.

Westerly supporters of Al Smith left early Wednesday morning for the Hub to hear the democratic standard bearer.

The private observation and combination Pullman car, "Davey Crockett," with Senator Moses of New Hampshire on board and windows marked with Hoover stickers passed through Westerly in the early hours of Wednesday morning bound for New York, where Westerly radio fans listened to his talk at noontime.

Mrs. Hazel York Ware of Providence is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winslow N. York, The Elms.

William R. Chapman has been passing a part of his vacation from duties in the office of the C. B. Cottrell & Sons company, hunting in Connecticut.

Mrs. William Kennedy of St. Johnsbury, Vt., is in Westerly called here by the death of her mother, Mrs. Ernest E. Coon.

The following has been recorded with the town clerk: Oct. 23. Easement deeds. John Turano et ux, Natalina Saunders et ux, Jacque H. Hoxie et ux, Dominico Federico et ux and Gennaro Selvidio to South County Power Service company, New England Power company, rights of way across properties for an electric power and light pole line.

Charles F. Eccleston of Westerly has purchased in Providence, the property at the southeast corner of Cranston street and Anthony avenue, known as 754 Cranston street. It is understood that the property has been purchased for the purpose of store development, Mr. Eccleston living in Ashaway, R. I., being a Westerly contractor and builder.

State Trooper, No. 54, Ralph Bonat, in the employ of the police department of the town of Westerly, is recovering from an injury to his foot received in the line of duty.

The Westerly Senate, a branch of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, Herbert Hoadley, secretary, will visit Providence Saturday for the purpose of exemplification of degree work.

Inspection Officer Em. Sir Harry P. McAllister, installed Tuesday in Boston, grand captain of the Guards of the Grand Commandery, K. T., and the Appendant Orders of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, will come to Westerly Nov. 7, from his home in Worcester, to make an informal visitation to Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Westerly, Em. Sir David A. Lowry, commander.

Franklin lodge, No. 29, F. and A. M., of Westerly, Lewis R. Greene, master, held a stated communication in Masonic hall Tuesday evening. The Entered Apprentice degree was exemplified on a class by the lodge officers.

BOTH PARTIES HOLD RALLIES WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Wednesday evening rallies were held by both republicans and democrats. At the Town hall the Westerly Hoover-Curtis club held a rally for the Italian residents, with addresses principally in the Italian language. Among the speakers were Benjamin Cianciarulo, republican leader of the house, and Assistant Attorney General Louis Jackvony. Thomas McKenzie, president of the Hoover-Curtis club, presided.

The democrats gathered at Bradford for the last rally there before election day. Senator Peter G. Gerry, Attorney Robert E. Curran and John P. Hartigan were among the English speakers, while Pasquale Di Caprio of Providence made a special address to the Italians. George E. Dolan, Westerly candidate for the state senate, also spoke. This (Thursday) night, Pawcatuck democrats will hold a rally in front of the Commercial hotel on West Broad street.

Sunday afternoon Westerly democrats plan a big rally in the United theatre. Chairman Thomas Clancy has secured Assistant District Attorney Pecora of New York city, Judge Francis X. Mancuso of the New York supreme court, and Mrs. Jeanne M. Doane of New York, to speak. George A. Dolan, president of the Smith-Robinson club, will preside, and Dr. John M. O'Connell, candidate for representative from the first district, will also be heard. A week from Sunday the republicans are expected to meet in the same theatre.

NOANK

TOM GOULD, JACKSONVILLE, COMES BACK FOR A VISIT

Tom Gould, of Jacksonville, Fla., paid a visit to the fishing village Tuesday, his first visit in Noank in five years. Walking into the yard at Capt. Fred Buddington's, he said, "Hello captain! You don't know who I am! "Well, if it isn't Tom Gould! You've never changed a bit!" He was called Indian by the fishermen on the north dock where he was shipmate with Capt. E. Frauche of Boat Ada & Bell, about 14 years ago, when sword fishing was good. Capt Frauche and Tom Gould had a wrestling match on that dock, where 50 fishermen were cheering Indian Gould to win. It was all over hauling in a sword fish that weighed 350 pounds. Tom said that Frauche pulled off his rubber boot. Mate Gould won the match and what cheering he received for putting down the 240-pound captain! Seeing Fred Rathbun with a large store to supply the fishermen during the summer rush, some one asked Gould what he did in Jacksonville. "I own a large chicken farm, that has 2500 chickens and some of the best in the country." "I used to fish out of here for 20 years and always like to come back to see the gang at the north dock. I am a man nearing the 50th mark, but can run a fast half-mile with the best of them. I will be around for a week to meet all my old friends and that grand old baseball player, O. W. Roche, who scooped them up like old Hans Wagner of the Pittsburgh team. It seems good to be back in the village to see all the old sea captains and fishermen."

Harry Mac Arthur has returned to New Hampshire after a visit in the village.

Miss Annie Roberston spent Tuesday in Springfield, Mass., with friends.

Disabled Boat Towed In

Fishing boat Thelma was 60 miles off the shore of Block Island and in a storm lost the rudder. Capt. Nick Nelson was at the wheel and Mate Phillips was fitting the net after getting nine barrels of flat fish. Capt. Nelson put up the distress flag. It seemed about 30 minutes before a boat came to give a hand. The waves were high as a house and the wind was blowing a gale. The boat Bertha C. of Stonington was coming along at a slow rate of speed riding the waves and got a line to the rudderless boat bound for Stonington. This was at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, and they reached Stonington at 8 o'clock in the evening. Both crews got their fish on the night trick to New York. The Bertha C. had 20 barrels and the disabled Thelma had nine barrels of fish. Capt. Nelson said it was the worst storm he was ever in, during his 20 years of fishing on a small boat. It will take a week to get a new rudder, which will be made out of town.

Miss Marion McDonald has returned after two weeks' vacation with relatives at Long Island city.

William Crowell is visiting for a few days in East Hartford.

Sam Carson was in Essex recently.

Marvin Porter has returned from a short visit at Lantern Hill.

UPWARD MOVEMENT IN MARKET WAS CHECKED BY SELLING AT CLOSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP)—A broad upward movement of stock prices, which carried more than two score issues, including U. S. Steel common, Anaconda Copper and Sinclair Oil to record high levels, was checked just before the close of today's market by a heavy selling movement.

The reaction followed the marking up of call money rates from 6 to 8 1-2 per cent. Several commission house observers also attributed part of the selling to the indorsement of Governor Smith's candidacy by Senator Norris, republican, of Nebraska, although previously politics had not been regarded as an important market factor.

Merger, dividend and earnings reports provided the background for the early advance. Several corporations published third quarter earnings reports during the day which made unusually favorable comparison with last year, including General Electric, Packard and Graham-Paige Motors, and the Northern Pacific railroad. Directors of the Packard company declared an extra dividend of $1 in cash, in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 2 1-2 per cent on the $10 par common stock.

Enormous trading in Sinclair Oil, nearly half a million shares of which changed hands, was one of the day's features. Cutten and Fisher interests were reported to be heavy buyers of the stock, which advanced nearly 4 points to a new high at 35 7-8, on reports of merger negotiations involving either the Standard Oil of Indiana or the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport company. Other oils moved upward in sympathy, Atlantic Refining, which has been heavily bought since the publication of an excellent third quarter report, ran up 12 1-2 points to a new high record at 281 1-2.

Coppers continued to move forward as a group on reports of a further increase in red metal prices and special dividend action on a few shares, including Kennecott, Anaconda, Chile, Calumet & Arizona, Cerro de Pasco, Granby, Miami, Kennecott, Nevada and Seneca all sold at new high prices for the year, or longer.

The rally in the department store and merchandising issues was based on predictions of record-breaking holiday trade. Gimbel Bros. and Macy each climbed 7 points, the latter touching a new high together with National Department Stores and Simmons Co. Mail order stocks ran into further profit-taking after their recent spirited advance, Montgomery Ward breaking 9 points to 332.

For the first time in several weeks, the rails moved forward as a group on buying stimulated by the increase in freight traffic and the splendid September earnings statements now being published. St. Louis Southwestern advanced 7 points to a new high at 122 and Rock Island moved up 5 points to a new peak at 136 3-4, but each lost a point of its gain on realizing.

The rise in call money was generally regarded as a temporary flurry. Bankers generally are of the opinion that commercial borrowings are now on the down-grade, and that easy rates may be looked for until the holiday season. Time money was easier, being quoted as low as 6 5-8 per cent for the shorter dates, as against 6 3-4 per cent yesterday and a ruling rate of 7 per cent for all dates last week.

A further advance of 30 points in Japanese yen to 46.83 cents, making an extreme gain of 120 points since the first of the month, was the only development of interest in the foreign exchange market. Sterling cables ruled slightly easier around $4.84 31-32. Although no gold was engaged for import to New York in London yesterday, Wall street believes that the movement of the metal to this country has not yet been completed. Further imports also are expected from Argentine.

Commodity markets were again mixed with price changes narrow. Cotton rallied slightly after yesterday's decline and wheat declined a fraction of a cent a bushel. Coffee and sugar quotations showed little change.

COLCHESTER

State Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers, republican candidate for lieutenant-governor, was a caller on friends here Wednesday.

Edward H. McCall, Jr., of Goshen was a Colchester visitor, Wednesday.

About 26 local people motored to Goshen, Monday evening where they were guests of Edward H. McCall. Dancing was enjoyed after which refreshments were served. The house was decorated with autumn leaves, corn stalks and colored streamers. In attendance were: Mr. and Mrs. William R. Adams, Mrs. Clara M. Gillette, Mrs. F. O. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Stebbins, the Misses A. M. Wickwire and F. I. Dowley, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Carswell, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Riley and daughter; Mrs. Clarence Norton, Mrs. R. S. Brown, Mrs. H. F. Finley, Misses Clarice, Ruth and Hattie Belle Brown, Elmer H. Foote, E. H. Norton, Herbert Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin McCall, G. E. Rosen and Miss Allison Bailey. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jones of Goshen and Earle Stevens of East Hampton were also among those present.

Charles F. Brown and son, Roland Brown, Dr. Edward J. Howland, H. R. Bailey and Charles Standish were business visitors in New London, Tuesday.

Arthur W. Holmes of New London was a caller here, Wednesday.

Mrs. Clara Hammer of Gilead called on friends in the village Wednesday.

Mrs. H. A. Guiterman and son, Hyman of Marlborough were here on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clifford of New Haven are making several weeks' visit with local relatives.

Dr. Michael Shea of New Haven visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Shea Monday.

John Wade, Jr., of East Hartford called on local relatives, Sunday.

A few cases of measles are reported about the village.

James Anderson of Philadelphia, a former local resident, visited over Sunday with friends here.

Eugene P. Beebe has returned after a vacation trip to points in the middle west.

Dr. and Mrs. Cyrus E. Pendleton attended the funeral, Monday of Frank Raymond in Hebron.

Lloyd W. Brown, Dr. A. L. Stebbins and Arthur W. Holmes were on a fishing trip on Long Island sound, Monday, making a good catch of sea bass and flat fish.

George B. A. Baker of Meriden was a guest of his mother on Lebanon avenue, Tuesday.

A large number of local people listened by radio to the address of Herbert Hoover in Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Monday evening.

Selectman Kramer has had men at work repairing the Tainter Hill road.

The registrars of voters are revising the voting lists in preparation for election.

C. A. Ryan of Marlborough was a local caller Monday.

Farmers here report a poor crop of potatoes. One farmer who only harvested about five bushels, was obliged to buy sixty bushels of potatoes from a local chain store to carry his family through the winter.

Although recent hard frosts have killed practically all of the flowers and garden crops about the village, a resident of South Main street has a morning glory vine still in blossom in a sheltered spot.

Roland Brown, who has ben spending several years in the middle west is a guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Connecticut College Concert.

Although the art and voice of Sophie Braslau is not very well known to the New London public, she is held in high esteem in the larger cities where she has appeared, and the numerous excerpts from the pens of the country's leading musical critics printed in these columns, surely warrant the expectancy of a brilliant and inspiring concert next Tuesday evening.

The Boston Globe reviewed a recent concert as follows: "Sophie Braslau, whose unusually rich and brilliant voice has not been heard here for some time, roused her audience to enthusiasm by her spirited and highly emotional singing. This served excellently to display a voice than which there can be a few more beautiful, but also a technique which enables its possessor to use it with almost complete homogeneity, when she so desires, throughout its entire range, a power of variously coloring her tones at will, a strong sense of expressive phrasing and a perfect intonation."

Breed Theatre.

"None But the Brave," a joyous picture of life guards, and bathing beauties, in which many of the scenes are filmed in Technicolor, will end its run at the Breed theatre tonight. Charles Morton, as the college hero turned life guard, Sally Phipps as Queen of the Beach and proprietor of a hot dog stand, have the leading romantic roles.

Scenes of unusual beauty are presented in the Pageant of Nations for bathing girls, wich are filmed in color.

A complication of laugh-provoking situations in which twin brothers impersonate each other, provides an unusual comedy theme for "Domestic Troubles," which is the added attraction on today's program at the Breed and featuring Clyde Cook and Louise Fazenda.

Miss Fazenda scores heavily as the skittish young lady who is the cause of Clyde Cook impersonating his twin brother to prevent the latter's wife from knowing that he had been sent to jail on a speeding charge.

Need of Old Linen

There is urgent and immediate need for old linen and cotton at the Backus hospital. Worn table cloths, napkins, towles, old soft cottons, such as bed cottons or nightgowns or men's shirts-in fact, any old clean white cloth which is of no more use in the home is of untold help to the hospital. These pieces are sterilized and used in many ways. Small cloths make eye and mouth wipes, dozens of which may be used for one patient during one day, while the larger ones make dressings and bandages or are used for packaging dressings to be sterilized. Mrs. Charles Saxton, 329 Washington St., is the chairman of the Auxiliary's Linen Donation committee and she, like Old Mother Hubbard, "finds that the cupboard is bare". She is anxious to see the cupboard's shelves full again at no expense to the hospital and asks that any one who can help in this way will telephone her and she will call for the bundles. Her telephone number is 2945-5. The smallest donation of cloth is welcome and as this is housecleaning time in many homes there should be the same generous response to this appeal as has been in the past.

Arthur Troostwyk Violin Recital

The musical season at Connecticut college opens on Friday evening, October 26th, when the new instructor in violin, Arthur Troostwyk, plays his introductory recital, assisted by Mrs. Troostwyk at the piano. Mr. Troostwyk is a graduate of the Yale School of Music, and later assisted his father as an instructor there. He was for a number of years concert-master of the New Haven Symphony orchestra, and has made successful public appearances as soloist, both with orchestra and in recital. He is also a gifted composer, many of his manuscripts having been brought out by the leading publishers. He has included two of his compositions on the program for Friday.

The recital will be held at eight o'clock in the gymnasium and is open, without charge, to the public.

ROCKVILLE, R. I.

MRS. EUGENE J. PALMER'S FUNERAL HELD AT HER HOME

Lulu Stella Geer Palmer, 67, was the daughter of Nathan A. and Abbie Collins Geer. She was born in Hopkinton, R. I., March 7, 1861 and died after a long illness at her home in Rockville, R. I., October 18. She went to live with Mr. and Mrs. Asher H. Chapman of Pendleton Hill, Conn., later of Westerly, R. I., where she made her house until she married. She attended Connecticut Literary Institution, Suffield, in 1883 and 1884 after which she was a successful teacher for twelve years. She was baptized and joined the First Baptist church at North Stonington, in 1872.

She joined the Rockville Seventh Day Baptist church by letter, July 26, 1914.

She was united in marriage with Eugene J. Palmer, Oct. 14, 1891 by Rev. Alexander McLearn. They had four children, Evaline P. who lived with her mother, Ella M. of Battle Creek, Mich., Lucy C., wife of William N. Johnson of Hope Valley and Josiah C. of Rockville. All of these survive her with two grand children, Eugene J. and Shirley E. Palmer. A nephew is Roy P. Geer of New London, Conn. While her children were still young her husband, who was a carpenter, fell while at work on a building at Hope Valley and died, July 22, 1902. She applied herself together rearing and educating her children. Her funeral was held at the home at Rockville, Oct. 21, and was attended by many relatives and friends from Rockville, Hope Valley, Providence, Mystic and New London. The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev Paul S. Burdick. Two hymns "He Knows" and "Tell Mother I'll Be There" were sung by four young men. There were beautiful flowers, among them a very large wreath from the alumni of Battle Creek, Mich., sanitarium, from which place the daughter, Miss Ella Palmer is a graduate nurse. Mrs. Palmer was laid to rest in the Rockville cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. James Caswell and Mrs. Mary Clark of Narragansett Pier and M. and Mrs. Orlando Smith of Westerly, were callers at Kenyon farm, Sunday.

Miss Lucie Irish has returned home after a week's visit with relatives in Providence.

Josiah C. Palmer, who was severely burned with hot tar while working on the state road, is recovering.

MISS BERNICE CHURCH IN HONOR LIST AT PEMBROKE

The annual honors day exercises of Pembroke college in Brown university were held last Friday. Among those to receive honors for outstanding work during the year 1927-28 was Miss Bernice Church of Wickford, R. I., formerly of this city. Miss Church, now a junior at Pembroke, was awarded first prize in intermediate Italian and preliminary honors. As a freshman, she also won first prize in Italian and attained highest rank in her class.

Miss Church is majoring in romance languages and is vice president of the Spanish club in the university. She graduated from the Norwich Free Academy in 1926 as president of her class and holder of the Lanman scholarship.

Don't Get Up Nights

Rev. D. Lee, Portsmouth, N. H., says: "Come or write to 101 Crescent Way, and I will tell you how in a short time the bladder irritation was relieved by Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula). My case was of long standing and painful. Was bothered 4 to 5 times each night." It acts on bladder as epsom salts do on bowels. Drives out foreign deposits and lessens excessive acidity. This relieves the irritation that causes getting up nights. The tablets cost 36 each at all drug stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio, or locally at Broadway Pharmacy.

Cold Means Nothing to Race Enthusiast!

Driving in the open, in all kinds of weather, even those who are used to it will contract colds. They needn't worry anyone who known a certain compound that comes in plain, white tablets. It kills a cold so quickly you can hardly believe it's the tablet that did it. Just one heads-off a cold that's coming-on; a bad cold you've had for several days may take several.

Even "flu" gives in to Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist can give you, for thirty-five cents. Everyone has suggestions when you have a cold, but this one works!

It Costs You No More to Have This Coal

THE purity and uniformity of Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite insures you a thoroughly dependable fuel.

Yet this coal will cost you no more per ton—and cost you somewhat less per winter.

Because Old Company's Lehigh is a quality anthracite, it may be relied upon to provide ample heat at all times, to hold fire well, under diminished draft, and to burn evenly and steadily.

This means a fire that does not have to be overdriven in coldest weather, nor constantly nursed along during mild spells. To a considerable extent, Old Company's Lehigh is a self-adjusting fuel—adapting itself to changing requirements with great facility.

Tune in on Reinald Werrenrath Recital SUNDAY 7 P.M. WEAF and Associated Stations

Your Old Company's dealer is interested in seeing you get the most and best heating service. To that end, he will deliver this coal to you in prime condition and give you his advice on any point of heater management that you may desire.

CHAS. STEBBINS DIES AT NEW LONDON INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Charles Stebbins, 61, formerly of New London, but for several years a resident at Flanders, died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital as a result of injuries sustained Sunday night when struck by an automobile driven by John Coates, of Ivoryton. So far as is known, Stebbins leave no near relatives. He was a teamster by occupation, but had not been employed for several years. He had been a resident at the Soldiers' home, Noroton until about a year ago when he removed to Flanders. Sunday night Stebbins, a Spanish war veteran was walking along the Boston post road and when near the Golden Spur he was run down by the automobile, sustaining a fractured left leg, lacerations of the scalp, face and arms, besides suffering greatly from shock. He was taken to the hospital, where his condition remained critical until the end.

Patrick J. Clifford, proprietor of the concession at Ocean Beach where a trolley car station is located, today purchased the furnishings and equipment of the Patterson confectionary store, 76 State street. Mr. Clifford intends to transfer the equipment to his place of business at Ocean Beach.

Thomas C. Dillon is confined to his home on Montauk avenue by serious illness.

WHOLESALE INVITATIONS TO DEMOCRATIC RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Democrats of this city are planning one of the most enthusiastic rallies ever held here for Halloween night. The affair will open with a parade which will start at 7.30 p. m. Two fife and drum corps have been engaged and it is expected that the majority of registered democrats of the city will turn out for the affair. After the parade a mass meeting will be held in the armory to which every voter of the city has been invited. Speakers will be the Hon. Henry W. Morgenthal, ex-ambassador to Turkey; acting mayor of New York city, Joseph McKeen and Congressman Coombs of Mississippi. County and state candidates will be present.

Troop No. 2, Boy Scouts of the Methodist Episcopal church, created such a favorable impression with its exhibit given at the Boy Scout circus held some time ago at the armory that an organization in Waterbury has requested the boys to repeat their performance there Nov. 3, at a Boy Scout circus.

TWO LOCAL STUDENTS MAKE GOOD AT COLLEGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Joseph Bulman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Bulman of 55 Summer street, has received two honors at Brown university where he is a freshman. He has been chosen to membership in the university orchestra, also as a contributing artist to the Brown Jug, the official paper of the college.

John T. Farrel has been awarded a scholarship worth $400 at Yale university, according to an announcement made today. It is the Sterling Memorial scholarship and only 25 are awarded annually. Farrel is the son of Letter Carrier and Mrs. John T. Farrel of 29 Williams street and was graduated from Bulkeley school in June. The young student's mother was Miss Mary McCaffery, formerly of Norwich.

Samuel M. Gruskin, local attorney, was entertained at a dinner at the Cinderella Inn last night, by 30 of his friends, who gave him a handsome leather handbag.

MORE THAN $2,000 RAISED TOWARD ARMISTICE $5,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—More than $2,000 has already been raised for the Armistice day fund in this city. Before the date arrives it is expected that in the neighborhood of $5,000 will be raised.

Three of the 125-foot patrol boats stationed here in coast guard service will leave this city within the next 30 days for the west coast, where they will form part of a squadron to be formed there. Departure of the boats will take away from this city about 90 sailors.

Discontinuance of the daily boat service between here and New York, is only temporary, according to a statement issued today by officers of the New England Navigation company. The chief reason for the change in the customary schedule was that one boat had to be taken out of service for repairs and as the company has no reserve vessel it was necessary to change the schedule.

At the annual meeting of the Fairs Harbour club, Mrs. Irvin R. Mitchell was elected president. Others selected for office were, vice-president, Mrs. Worth W. Foster; treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Smith; secretary, Mrs. A. N. Dicklow. Preceding the business meeting a luncheon was served to about 60 members and after the business meeting eight tables of bridge were in play.

Miss Elizabeth Gorton, regent of Lucretia Shaw chapter, D. A. R., attended the meeting held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Clarence Wickham, South Manchester.

Friends of Miss Anna Scanlon, daughter of Mr and Mrs. P. J. Scanlon of Crouch street, surprised her last night with a party on her tenth birthday. The evening was spent in exhibition dances and games, following which a luncheon was served by Mrs. Scanlon.

Mrs. Merietta D. Jackson, 20 Thames street, celebrated her 85th birthday yesterday. During the day she received many callers and remembrances from friends. She has been an invalid for many years. She is a member of the First Baptist church.

Miss Martha L. Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson of Duluth, Minn., became the bride, last night, of Bruce J. Tremayne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tremayne of Grand Rapids, Mich. The ceremony was performed in the home of Mrs. George Lesser of 879 Bank street by Rev. Charles Spaulding of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The weekly meeting of the Sorores club was held yesterday at the Y. W. C. A., observing the nation-wide meeting of professional and business women's groups of the Y. Supper was served by a committee of members.

At a meeting of Lady Aberdeen lodge, Daughters of Scotia, held in Union lodge rooms last night, Mrs. Mary Bain was elected chief daughter and Mrs. Katherine MacArthur sub-chief daughter. Following the business meeting, a masquerade dance was held.

Members of St. Joseph's Women's club will be entertained tomorrow night at a Halloween dance given by the Catholic Women's club.

Miss Dorothy Sullivan of New London has been engaged as teacher of the first grade in the Eastern Point, Eighth district school succeeding Miss Fanny B. Knight of Black Hall.

At a meeting of Clan Cameron, Order of Scottish Clans, held last night, officers elected at a recent meeting were installed. On Nov. 3 a degree team from Waterbury will be present at an initiatory meeting.

Leroy Watrous, of Uncasville, was charged with driving without a license and pleaded guilty. He was fined $100 and costs and was sentenced to jail for 10 days. Watrous, who is a truck driver, was arrested July 15, last, on the same charge, and in court the next day, the case was continued a week. Watrous was not compelled to provide a surety on his bond, but was allowed his liberty on his own recognizance. When the case was called the following week, Watrous did not appear in court and since then he had succeeded in remaining out of the eyes of the police, although he had, at various times, been employed driving a truck. Yesterday when it was learned that Watrous was at the submarine base, loading a truck for its delivery in New York, the officers went there and arrested the young man.

CLUB-ROOM BARKEEP FINED $200 ON TWO COUNTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Marx Markoff, employed at the club room 16 State street, reputed to be owned by Nathan Peck, Bank street restaurant proprietor, who was arrested yesterday when the place was raided was in the police court today charged on two counts with violation of the liquor law. Markoff pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs on each count, keeping with intent to sell and possession and was sentenced to 20 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended. The frequenters of the club room, Chester Lund, "Chick" Gaines, Jacob Cohen, Richard Curran, Nicholas Clancy, Morris Tedford, E. B. Gess, Lester Kragg, Reuben Lubchanski and Isaac Goodwin, were discharged.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' license of Robert Hart, United States Coast Guard; Wilfred J. Pelletier, 51 Eastern avenue and Joseph A. Bruso, 511 Main street.

F. T. Copp, 279 Williams street reported to the police today that while his automobile was parked on Huntington street, near Church, last night some thief stole a spare tire, rim and cover.

Mrs. Mary Brown of Groton; Richard W. McDonald, and Herbert Lombard, both of the United States Coast Guard academy, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

WORKING WITH BOTH HANDS. ALEXANDER PRODS SLOW-PAYS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Tax Collector Hibbard N. Alexander continues his drive to compel delinquent taxpayers to square for back taxes. As a result of the drive, eight additional tax warrants were issued today, calling for the sale of residences and building lots, as follows:

Residence of Mary Downey, Montauk avenue, ordered sold at public auction, Dec. 28, at 3 p. m. Taxes amounting to $524.70, representing the assessment on the levies of 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1927, remain unpaid.

Property owned by Nick Hallifteras, a building lot on Reed street, ordered sold Dec. 28 at 6 p. m. Hallifteras owes the city $467.17, which represents the assessment on the levies of 1925, 1926 and 1927.

Two building lots on Ann street, owned by Kenneth Holmes, ordered sold Dec. 28 at noon. Holmes owes the city $476.49, assessments on the levies of 1922, 1923, 1926 and 1927.

Property of Christopher McCormick, Evergreen avenue, ordered sold Dec. 28 at 1 p. m. Taxes amounting to $120.93 and on the levies of 1922, and 1923 remain unpaid.

The residence on Division street Huntington street, was ordered sold Dec. 29 at 9 a. m; but since the issuance of the warrant a check was received at the municipal building in payment of the back tax. The amount of money paid was $123 and represented the assessment on the levy of 1927.

Two building lots owned by John H. Shea, Viets street, ordered sold Dec. 28 at 4 p. m. Shea owes the city $171.39, for the levies of 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927.

The residence, on Division street owned by Edward J. Thomas, Arthur H. Thomas and Edward E. Thomas, ordered sold Dec. 28 at 2 p. m. Taxes of $181.98 are owed the city and represent the assessment of 1927.

Residence of David Wool, Denison avenue, ordered sold Dec. 28, at 5 p. m. Wool owes the city $278.33, amount due on the levies of 1925 and 1926.

Tax Collector Alexander has issued a release of warrant on the property of John and Rose B. Herbert.

But one case of intoxication was presented in the police court today, a man found drunk yesterday on Main street. He was given suspension of judgment.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Will Show Prohibition Film

On Monday evening, October 29th at 8:15 p. m., a high-grade movie entitled "Deliverance," will be shown at the Y. M. C. A. under the patronage of the Woman's Crusade of the W. C. T. U. This film, based upon Professor Irving Fishers's books on Prohibition, is presented for educational purposes by Robert E. Corradini of New York city and is made by the Stanley educational film division. Because of its purpose the producers forego all personal profits.

The cast includes Earle Larimore, Mary Gardner, Arctius Donaldson and Guy Hedlund.

As the picture is one of much merit a special effort has been made to bring it to Norwich. According to one testimonial, "The story grips and thrills, the whole treatment is commendable. The facts are stubborn and strong. It is a distinct contribution to clean living and good citizenship." Admission will be free but an offering will be taken to help defray the expense of showing the film.

Palace Theatre

What's the first thing a man would notice on returning to civilisation after an absence of four years?

John Gilbert supplies the answer in his new staring picture, "Four Walls," which comes today to the Palace theatre Gilbert plays the role of an ex-convict who returns to the East Side of New York after four years in Sing Sing.

On the day he is released, he hurries directly to his home in the Ghetto where his mother (Vera Gordon) and Bertha (Carmel Myers) are waiting for him. After greeting them Gilbert stands at the window of the apartment and looks down on the busy streets below him.

"Gee, Ma," says Gilbet, "skirts have gotten shorter and legs longer, haven't they?"

It is by such uman touches as this that Director William Nigh has made "Four Walls," one of the most human pictures that Gilbert has ever brought to the screen. Joan Crawford has the leading feminine role, while the cast includes Carmel Myers, Vera Gordon, Louis Natheaux, Robert Emmet O'Conno and othes of note.

Alice D. G. Miller adapted the story from the successful stage play by Geoge Abbott and Dana Bunret.

In addition to the splendid feature there is presented one of the best vaudevile programs of the season consisting of five excellent acts which are sure to entertain and please.

Many a man's reputation reponds on what isn't found out about him.

The finest, fastest car under $1000
Studebaker's ERSKINE SIX

$860
F.O.B. FACTORY

THE simple fact that you can drive your new Erskine Six 40 miles an hour the very first day—and at 62-mile speed later on—is proof positive of the Erskine's finer engineering and precision manufacture.

Studebaker's Erskine Six has outperformed all stock cars under $1000 by traveling 1000 miles in 984 consecutive minutes. This lowest priced of all Studebaker cars now holds 11 official speed and endurance records in its class! Could there be any better evidence of unmatched performance?

A nimble, brilliant car in traffic. Smart as a whip. Roomy. Easy to ride in—easy to steer, and stop, and park. The Erskine Six is just what Studebaker deliberately planned it to be—the finest, fastest car under $1000—and an hour behind the wheel will prove it. Come, drive an Erskine today! Studebaker's 76 years of manufacturing experience stand back of it.

CHAS. STEBBINS DIES AT NEW LONDON INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Charles Stebbins, 61, formerly of New London, but for several years a resident at Flanders, died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital as a result of injuries sustained Sunday night when struck by an automobile driven by John Coates, of Ivoryton. So far as is known, Stebbins leave no near relatives. He was a teamster by occupation, but had not been employed for several years. He had been a resident at the Soldiers' home, Noroton until about a year ago when he removed to Flanders. Sunday night Stebbins, a Spanish war veteran was walking along the Boston post road and when near the Golden Spur he was run down by the automobile, sustaining a fractured left leg, lacerations of the scalp, face and arms, besides suffering greatly from shock. He was taken to the hospital, where his condition remained critical until the end.

Patrick J. Clifford, proprietor of the concession at Ocean Beach where a trolley car station is located, today purchased the furnishings and equipment of the Patterson confectionary store, 76 State street. Mr. Clifford intends to transfer the equipment to his place of business at Ocean Beach.

Thomas C. Dillon is confined to his home on Montauk avenue by serious illness.

WHOLESALE INVITATIONS TO DEMOCRATIC RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Democrats of this city are planning one of the most enthusiastic rallies ever held here for Halloween night. The affair will open with a parade which will start at 7.30 p. m. Two fife and drum corps have been engaged and it is expected that the majority of registered democrats of the city will turn out for the affair. After the parade a mass meeting will be held in the armory to which every voter of the city has been invited. Speakers will be the Hon. Henry W. Morgenthal, ex-ambassador to Turkey; acting mayor of New York city, Joseph McKeen and Congressman Coombs of Mississippi. County and state candidates will be present.

Troop No. 2, Boy Scouts of the Methodist Episcopal church, created such a favorable impression with its exhibit given at the Boy Scout circus held some time ago at the armory that an organization in Waterbury has requested the boys to repeat their performance there Nov. 3, at a Boy Scout circus.

TWO LOCAL STUDENTS MAKE GOOD AT COLLEGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—Joseph Sulman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Sulman of 55 Summer street, has received two honors at Brown university where he is a freshman. He has been chosen to membership in the university orchestra, also as a contributing artist to the Brown Jug, the official paper of the college.

John T. Farrel has been awarded a scholarship worth $400 at Yale university, according to an announcement made today. It is the Sterling Memorial scholarship and only 25 are awarded annually. Farrel is the son of Letter Carrier and Mrs. John T. Farrel of 29 Williams street and was graduated from Bulkeley school in June. The young student's mother was Miss Mary McCaffery, formerly of Norwich.

Samuel M. Gruskin, local attorney, was entertained at a dinner at the Cinderella Inn last night, by 30 of his friends, who gave him a handsome leather handbag.

MORE THAN $2,000 RAISED TOWARD ARMISTICE $5,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 24—More than $2,000 has already been raised for the Armistice day fund in this city. Before the date arrives it is expected that in the neighborhood of $5,000 will be raised.

Three of the 125-foot patrol boats stationed here in coast guard service will leave this city within the next 30 days for the west coast, where they will form part of a squadron to be formed there. Departure of the boats will take away from this city about 50 sailors.

Discontinuance of the daily boat service between here and New York, is only temporary, according to a statement issued today by officers of the New England Navigation company. The chief reason for the change in the customary schedule was that one boat had to be taken out of service for repairs and as the company has no reserve vessel it was necessary to change the schedule.

At the annual meeting of the Fairp Harbour club, Mrs. Irvin R. Mitchell was elected president. Others selected for office were, vice-president, Mrs. Worth W. Foster; treasurer, Mrs W. W. Smith; secretary, Mrs. A. N. Dicklow. Preseding the business meeting a luncheon was served to about 60 members and after the business meeting eight tables of bridge were in play.

Miss Dorothy Sullivan of New London has been engaged as teacher of the first grade in the Eastern Point, Eighth district school succeeding Miss Fanny B. Knight of Black Hall.

At a meeting of Clan Cameron, Order of Scottish Clans, held last night, officers elected at a recent meeting were installed. On Nov. 3 a degree team from Waterbury will be present at an initiatory meeting.

Leroy Watrous, of Uncasville, was charged with driving without a license and pleaded guilty. He was fined $100 and costs and was sentenced to jail for 10 days. Watrous, who is a truck driver, was arrested July 15, last, on the same charge, and in court the next day, the case was continued a week. Watrous was not compelled to provide a surety on his bond, but was allowed his liberty on his own recognisance. When the case was called the following week, Watrous did not appear in court and since then he had succeeded in remaining out of the eyes of the police, although he had, at various times, been employed driving a truck. Yesterday when it was learned that Watrous was at the submarine base, loading a truck for its delivery in New York, the officers went there and arrested the young man.

But one case of intoxication was presented in the police court today, a man found drunk yesterday on Main street. He was given suspension of judgment.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Will Show Prohibition Film

On Monday evening, October 29th at 8:15 p. m., a high-grade movie entitled "Deliverance," will be shown at the Y. M. C. A. under the patronage of the Woman's Crusade of the W. C. T. U. This film, based upon Professor Irving Fishers's books on Prohibition, is presented for educational purposes by Robert E. Corradini of New York city and is made by the Stanley educational film division. Because of its purpose the producers forego all personal profits.

The cast includes Earle Larimore, Mary Gardner, Aretius Donaldson and Guy Hedlund.

As the picture is one of much merit a special effort has been made to bring it to Norwich. According to one testimonial, "The story grips and thrills, the whole treatment is commendable. The facts are stubborn and strong. It is a distinct contribution to clean living and good citizenship." Admission will be free but an offering will be taken to help defray the expense of showing the film.

Palace Theatre

What's the first thing a man would notice on returning to civilization after an absence of four years?

John Gilbert supplies the answer in his new staring picture, "Four Walls," which comes today to the Palace theatre Gilbert plays the role of an ex-convict who returns to the East Side of New York after four years in Sing Sing.

On the day he is released, he hurries directly to his home in the Ghetto where his mother (Vera Gordon) and Bertha (Carmel Myers) are waiting for him. After greeting them Gilbert stands at the window of the apartment and looks down on the busy streets below him.

"Gee, Ma," says Gilbet, "skirts have gotten shorter and legs longer, haven't they?"

It is by such uman touches as this that Director William Nigh has made "Four Walls," one of the most human pictures that Gilbert has ever brought to the screen. Joan Crawford has the leading feminine role, while the cast includes Carmel Myers, Vera Gordon, Louis Natheaux, Robert Emmet O'Conno and othes of note.

Alice D. G. Miller adapted the story from the successful stage play by George Abbott and Dana Burnet.

In addition to the splendid feature there is presented one of the best vaudeville programs of the season consisting of five excellent acts which are sure to entertain and please.

Many a man's reputation repends on what isn't found out about him.

GREENEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. John McNeely are spending a week in New York as the guests of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. McNeely

The rain storm that struck Greeneville Tuesday afternoon and evening made extra work for the street department. Men were at work clearing the sewers which were clogged up by the many leaves. In a number of places the water was over the curbings, making it unpleasant for pedestrians.

Many of the local K. of C. members attended the funeral of Rev. William T. O'Brien, pastor for the past ten years at Immaculate Conception church, at Baltic, Wednesday morning.

Frederick Carter has returned to his home on Central avenue after spending the week end with relatives at New Bedford, Mass.

Stanley Boyd has returned to his home on Fifth street after spending a few days with relatives in Lakehurst, N. J. While there, he saw the German Graf Zeppelin. Mr. Boyd returned home with several photos of the giant ship and he is giving them to his friends.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Greeneville Third Baptist church were the guests of the C. E. Society at Preston City, Sunday evening. The leader was Henry Sebastian and the topic discussed was "How Does Law Increase Freedom." William Lund had charge of a special musical program.

TAFTVILLE

The first meeting of the season of the members of the Thimble club was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. George Helmboldt of Blissville. There was a large attendance, and after the sewing hour, a delicious supper was served by the hostess and a social period followed.

The Lisbon Community club has issued invitations to an old fashioned social and dance to be held at the community hall in the new school building in Newent on October 27th.

Martin Soltys who has been spending several days in town has gone to his home in Chicopee Falls, Mass., ot make arangements to move his family to this village where they will reside.

A lost letter addressed to Don Niclas Singer is being held at the local postoffice, the addressee being unknown to Postmaster Adams.

The members of the St. Veronica society held their regular weekly meeting Wednesday evening at their rooms on Providence street with a full attendance. The president, Miss Mary Nolan presided at the business session. The report of the committee which had charge of the card party held last week at St. Theresa's hall through the committee chairman, Miss Louise White. The card party was a decided success, 16 tables being in play, and the proceeds were for the fund which the members have been raising for the renovation of their rooms which are now being papered and painted.

The annual meeting of the Taftville chapter, A. R. C, will be held in Poneman hall at 8 o'clock, Thursday evening, October 25th.—Adv.

A meeting of the members of St. Vincent de Paul society was held this week and arrangements were made to give a charity whist party at St. Theresa's hall in the near future. This organization has recently banded together for the purpose of raising money to assist needy families in the village.

J. M. Drinkwater of Boston, has been a business caller in the village this week.

Leaves being washed into the closed gutters about the town caused them to clog up during the severe rain storm of Tuesday evening and at places the streets resembled miniature lakes. Automobiles passing through these streets threw water on both sides for a considerable distance.

William Citron of Middletown, democratic candidate for congress, held a short meeting on Providence street Tuesday noon, and addressed some of the employes of the Poneman mills. Mr. Citron's address centered about the number of sessions Congressman Richard P. Freeman had attended, and how he did not put in an appearance in these parts very often so that his constituents might have a look at him.

John Curran of Norwich avenue has accepted a position in the mule spinning department of the local mills.

To Practice Law Here

Edward G. Moran, who has been on the staff of a leading law firm of Stamford for the past year since his admission to the bar, is about to return to this city to be associated with the law office of J. J. Desmond. Mr. Moran graduated at Norwich Free Academy, 1920, Dartmouth college, 1925, B. A. degree and Yale law school 1927 L. L. B.

COL. JENKINS FROM NTL. HEADQUARTERS WILL OPEN SALVATION ARMY CAMPAIGN

Colonel Walter Jenkins of the Salvation Army national headquarters in New York city is coming to Norwich on Sunday, Oct. 28th to open the Salvation Army appeal for $5,000 maintenance fund for the continuance of the Salvation Army service in Norwich during the current year. Colonel Jenkins will be the chief speaker in a "united Service" to be held at the Central Baptist church on Sunday night at 7 with Rev David Pitt officiating. The South Manchester Salvation Army band will render several selections of vocal and instrumental music at the beginning of the service. The committee in charge of the special week end service have requested this paper to make it clear to the people of Norwich that there will not be any appeal for campaign funds in any of the special services of the week end.

Campaign Secretary E J. McCabe said that the committee of public spirited citizens of Norwich who have enlisted to help raise the maintenance fund for the Salvation Army have finally decided to make it primarily a mail campaign. The committee who know the people of Norwich are confident that the Salvation Army has a large number of friends in the city and surrounding towns who will answer to the appeal of the organization with generous donations. A letter of appeal will be sent to all kind people who have contributed to the Salvation Army in Norwich in former years.

Campaign Secretary McCabe, in announcing the date of the opening of the campaign, said: "It is the intention of the committee to send letters of appeal to a large number of Norwich people who could not be reached in former years owing to lack of workers in the campaign. While a number of Norwich kind people have given freely and unstintedly of their time and effort in former campaigns, it nevertheless was impossible for them to see many people who would have gladly contributed to the organization's maintenance fund if someone would have solicited their donation. By means of a mail campaign these people will be appealed to, and both the donor and recipient will be benefited by the donation as most people feel happy by helping a good cause."

A letter of appeal setting forth in most sincere terms the object, aims and needs of the Salvation Army will be mailed at the end of this week. Arthur M. Brown, who heads the Salvation Army appeal as general chairman, has implicit confidence in the benevolence of the Norwich people and is in the hope that the letter will meet with universal kind response. Friends of the Salvation Army who desire to bring their contribution in person will be received with thanks at the Army headquarters, 10 Cliff street, Norwich.

Treasurer John R. Tarrant has made arrangements whereby each subscriber will promptly receive a receipt covering the amount of the contribution and to enable Treasurer Tarrant to carry this system out the committee have arranged that a card will be enclosed in each letter of appeal, on which the subscriber will be asked to give his name and address as well as the amount of his subscription. Plans are being made by the committee that a daily report of the names of the subscribers be made known through the kindness and co-operation of the daily press.

ATTORNEYS READY FOR SLADER TRIAL ARGUMENTS

The evidence was finished Wednesday afternoon and the attorneys are ready to make their arguments before Judge John Richards Booth this (Thursday) morning in the superior court at New London in the $2,000 slander and damage suit of Michael Devko against Stephen Wisneski, both of Montville. From ten to fifteen witnesses gave testimony in the trial which began a week or more ago and continued to Wednesday.

Levko, represented by Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky and Foster K. Sietare, claims that on April 29 last, Wisneski told Grand Juror William Smiddy that the plaintiff had committed the crime of theft by stealing 20 gallons of cider in a keg.

The plaintiff claims that he was presented before Justice of the Peace J. Y. Miller of Montville and was acquitted on May 12, 1928. He claims that allegations were false and malicious. Attorney George Curtis Morgan represents the defendant.

RED CROSS REACHES 128,000 WITH NUTRITION INSTRUCTION

More than 128,000 persons in the United States have been reached by the American Red Cross nutrition service during the fiscal year just closed, according to figures taken from the organization's annual report and made public Wednesday by local Red Cross officers.

In classes for men and women, and especially in the school rooms, instruction in "What to Eat for Health" is being given in an effort to correct and prevent physical defects resulting in whole or in part from malnutrition. Among these are defective eyes, bad teeth, impaired hearing, rickets, and especially lowered vitality and increased susceptibility to diseases. The number of children reached with this instruction during the year totalled 122,386, while the other 6,226 instructed were adults.

LUCIUS MORGAN ESTATE APPRAISED AT $24,138.53

An inventory and appraisal of the estate of the late Lucius B. Morgan of East Great Plain, made by Arad R. Manning and Guy B. Dolbeare, shows that the estate amounts to $24,138.53.

The estate consists of a farm at East Great Plain, located along the Salem turnpike road, bank accounts, 60 shares of stock of the Ashland Cotton Co., Jewett City; 40 shares of stock of the Thames National bank; two shares of stock in the Jewett City Creamery, and eight hens.

Mr. Morgan left practically his entire estate to charitable and ecclesiastical institutions in this city, Plainfield and other places.

ARRESTED WHILE "STEALING" HIS OWN FEATHERED FOWL

Two local men, Ephrium Dorous, colored and Joseph Gralewski, were before the city court Wednesday morning on charges of theft. They were allowed their freedom after Gralewski proved that the chickens they were accused of stealing, were from his own coop. The two men had five chickens in burlap bags when they were arrested Tuesday night. Gralewski claimed that he had taken the chickens from the coop with the intention of selling them. He said his wife had put him out of the house and that he needed money to buy food for himself.

Celebrated Their 60th Anniversary

Two natives of Connecticut, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Booth, who for many years have been residents of Brimfield, Mass., celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary there on Sunday. Mr. Booth is 89 and his wife is 86. The former came from a prominent family of Union, this state, and was a school teacher in that town, Stafford Springs and Holland, later becoming a farmer. He served in Co. G 22nd Connecticut, for nine months during the Civil war. Mrs. Booth was Emily Copeland of Hampton before her marriage, a direct descendant of John and Priscilla Alden. They were married in Union and spent the first 17 years of their married life at the Booth homestead before moving to Brimfield.

Given Surprise Shower

An enjoyable surprise shower was tendered Miss Mary Carparelli at her home Wednesday evening in honor of her approaching marriage to Sam Carelli of Hartford. The Venetian dance band furnished music throughout the evening. Miss Carparelli received many beautiful and useful gifts. Those present were the Misses Antoinette, Margaret and Elizabeth De Placido, Anna and Amelia Mazarelli, Mary and Louise Leone, Anna Bellon, Lucy and Lillian Di Carlo, Mary Emilio, Dominica Renaidi, Sarah and Leah Sohn and Sadie Anthony.

Thieves at Sport Shop

Jack's Sport Shop on Ferry street is minus several watches, mouth organs and other small articles which, it is believed by thieves took when they got into the place by cutting out the glass in a side window of the building.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY BY SACHEM CHAPTER, O. E. S.

Sachem chapter, No. 57, Order of the Eastern Star, celebrated its silver anniversary Wednesday evening at the Masonic temple, with an attendance of 150 that included guests and visitors from Jewett City, Danielson, Moosup, Stafford Springs and New Hampshire, to enjoy the anniversary programme.

Following adjournment of the regular business meeting, the company gathered in the banquet hall where the entertaining programme was conducted. Elmer D. Kinsman of Stafford Springs, first worthy patron of the chapter, was the historian for the evening, giving an interesting address that covered many of the important incidents of the early years. A musical programme was given that included violin solos by George Gulle, and vocal solos by William Prothero, Eunice Taft, and Ruth Crowe.

Light refreshments were served, consisting of fruit salad, butter rolls and fancy cakes, with a huge birthday cake, blazing with 25 candles, decorating the table of Worthy Matron Minnie Bussey. This was duly cut and distributed by Worthy Patron Paul H. Zahn.

Mrs. William Crowe, Jr., was in charge of the entertainment programme and Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury in charge of the refreshments.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS FROM NORWICH, ENG., ROTARY

Wednesday's meeting of the Norwich Rotary club was devoted almost strictly to routine business, reports of committees and a talk by Glenn Merithew on the growth of the five and ten cent store business during the past 50 years. President Edward W. Jewett presided, with Aurin E. Payson and Charles E. Taylor as song leaders. A very interesting letter from the Norwich, Eng., Rotary club to the local club was read by Secretary Davis. President Jewett appointed J. Henry Shannon, James E. Roantree and Secretary Davis as a committee on International Service and to correspond with clubs in other countries.

Reports were given by H. B. Cary for the educational committee, Fred S. Crowell for the classification committee, Aurin E. Payson for the educational committee, Frank D. Davis for the fellowship committee and John J. O'Rourke for the community service committee. In making his report, Mr. O'Rourke said that the committee had in mind four topics that would be brought before the club; first, the need of an evening high school in Norwich; second, the need of a vocational or trade school in Norwich; third, the need of increased attendance at the evening schools; fourth, the need of free text books for the school children.

James E. Roantree introduced Mr. Merithew, who briefly reviewed the growth of the five and ten cent store business, using the Woolworth Co., with which he is connected, as an illustration. Beginning with one store in a little town in Pennsylvania about 50 years ago the Woolworth Co. has expanded so that today this chain has 2,000 stores located in the United States, Canada, Cuba, Germany and the British Isles. Last year the volume of business amounted to $270,000,000 with a profit of approximately $35,000,000. The company hopes to increase the volume of business this year to $295,000,0000. Mr. Merithew was given a vote of appreciation for his talk.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

ENTERTAINED FOR HER GUEST FROM CHICAGO

A party was given Tuesday night at the home of Miss Theresa LeRoux of West Town street in the honor of her guest Miss Katherine Reynolds of Chicago. Many delightful parlor games were played. Dancing and singing were also enjoyed with Miss Blanche Lathrop at the piano. A piano solo "The Storm," by Miss Theresa LaRoux and a tenor solo by John Jones were features of the evening. A very tasty buffet lunch was served by Mrs. LeRoux, mother of the hostess. Those present included Charles McGrath and Francis McGrath of Jewett City, Miss Blanche Lathrop of Sprewville and Miss Genivieve Wiese of Los Angeles, Calif., and Dan Barry, Ed Hally, Albert Lash, Al Wagner, Francis Herbert, the Misses Anna Lappie, Elizabeth Epstine, Peggy Crowe, Sophie Kerserski, Madelyn Chester and Mary LeRoux, all of this city.

POSTPONED TRIAL IN $5,000 AUTOMOBILE SUIT

The auto-negligence case for damages of $5,000 brought by Amos Smith of New London against Floyd Conklin of Groton, which was scheduled to be tried in the superior court at New London Wednesday before Judge John Richards Booth will not begin until today Thursday) due to the trial of a previously listed case.

Smith claims that while he was walking along the highway in Poquonoc road about midway between Trails Corners and the Max Pallock mill on Jan. 2, 1927, he was struck and knocked down by an automobile owned by the defendant and driven by his agent.

He claims that as a result of the accident he received serious injuries to his back and lost many weeks work as a house painter at which he earned between $30 and $35 a week.

JUDGE RESERVES DECISION IN CONSERVATOR CASE

Judge John Richards Booth in the superior court at New London took under advisement the appeal from probate case brought by Louis Mintz of Colchester, who claims to be aggrieved because the Colchester probate court upon application of his son, Benjamin A. Mintz, declared the petitioner an incompentent person and placed a conservator over him.

NORWICH TOWN

SALVATION ARMY BAND TO PLAY AT CONG. CHURCH

The coming Sunday morning, the Manchester Salvation Army band is to give a brief sacred concert on the Norwich Town green, just before the morning service in the First Congregational church. At 10:30 the band will file into the church where reserved seats on the platform will be waiting them and worshipers will hear some fine selections of sacred music. The address of the morning will be given by Colonel Walter Jenkins of New York, secretary of the national Salvation Army organization. Col. Jenkins is next in line to Commander Evangeline Booth, and the congregation of the First church feels favored in having him visit them upon his arrival in Norwich to speak at the morning worship period. There is lively community interest in hearing both the band and the speaker.

A former Norwich Town young woman, Miss Nellie Kingsley of Long Island was a guest recently of her brothers, Thomas and Lawrence Kingsley at the homestead on Huntington avenue. Miss Kingsley a graduate of the nurses' training school of St. Agnes' home, Hartford, a few years ago, called on several friends here, before leaving for a visit with her sisters in Hartford, Sister Victor, of St. Francis' hospital, and Mrs. Henry Farrell.

Miss Alice Clark, of New York, who has been visiting relatives in Norwich and vicinity, was a guest over the week end of Norwich Town friends. Years ago, Miss Clark was an esteemed resident of Town street, at that time making her home with the late Mrs. Julia P. Grant, pleasantly remembered by old neighbors and friends still maintaining their homes on that street.

Clam chowder supper Fri. p. m., 4:30 to 7:30, Methodist vestry 40c. Zabriskie caterer.—Adv.

Several members of the First Congregational church responded to the general invitation sent this parish to attend the Old Home day celebration at Montville Center Congregational church, Sunday last. A few were present at both morning and afternoon sessions, while others attended only the afternoon service. Among those were Organist and Mrs. Herbert L. Terrington and Miss Louise Hyde.

"The Life and Character of Paul" was the theme of the sermon at the Congegational church, Sunday morning by Rev. Inor Partington of North Stonington.

Miss Grace Wheeler was leader of the Sunday evening service of the Young Peoples C. E. society, when the theme was "How Does Law Increase Freedom?"

FINE SUPPER AT CHAPEL DRAWS BIG PATRONAGE

There was a good attendance Wednesday evening in Congregational chapel, when under the auspices of the supper committee of the Woman's department of the League of Service the following tempting menu was served: Fresh roast ham, mashed potato, mashed turnip, pickles, a variety of bread, apple sauce, squash pie, cheese and coffee. Mrs. John L. Browning, chairman of the supper committee was in general charge. Others on the committee were Mrs. Frederick Ross, Mrs. Walter Hitchon Jr., Mrs. Marcus Grady, Mrs. Ronald Nelson and Miss Scott. The pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey said grace.

Several long tables were arranged in the chapel, attractively adorned with Halloween emblems and yellow and black crepe paper and with Halloween napkins. The waitresses were Misses Grace Wheeler, Eleanor Smith, Ruth Hyde, Louise Sterry, Lucile Browning, Dorothy Waterman, Elinor Moore and Bessie Whasley. They had dainty yellow and black aprons and caps. The young men who poured coffee were Arthur Avery, Robert Stott, Crosby Peck, Henry Counterman and Luther Whaley. The tables were lighted with yellow candles. Rev. George Warren Potter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Mrs. Potter, were guests of honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Armstrong and family moved recently from Otis street, to the modern home recently constructed by Mr. Armstrong on Sentry Hill, a part of the estate of the late General Edward Harland.

Eight members of Ever Ready circle of the King's Daughters and four others made up a company Tuesday evening at the Hyde homestead Washington street, when a most enjoyable Halloween social was held. Stunts, fortune telling, etc., provoked much merriment. The hostess served doughnuts and grape juice.

"Healed Like Magic"

Jetroit, Mich.—"My boy was covered with eczema and I seemed powerless to relieve him. I had spent about $100.00 for various prescribed treatments, but none of them did him any good. Finally I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Ointment and they proved to me that this was the treatment my child needed. I bought the Soap and Ointment from my druggist, and after using them as directed, the trouble healed like magic." (Signed) Thos. Saunders.

Thousands of mothers have found the soothing, healing action of Resinol ideal for keeping baby's skin clear and normal. Many wonder at the QUICKNESS of its action. For adults, too! Try it. At all druggists.

SERIES OF OVATIONS FOR SMITH IN THREE STATES

Democratic Presidential Nominee Was Acclaimed by Thousands as He Swung Through Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut—In Providence Smith's Automobile Was Showered With Confetti, Streamers and Ticker Tape—Throngs Cheered the Nominee in Pawtucket and Hartford—At Derby a Brown Derby Was Snatched From His Hand.

GOVERNOR SMITH'S TRAIN EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 26 —(AP)—From the ground, the roof-tops and the air, southern New England roared out a welcome today to Alfred E. Smith as he passed through the many cities and towns which line the route between Boston and New York.

Providence, Pawtucket, Hartford and a dozen other places turned out thousands to add their cheers to those the democratic nominee has received over thousands of miles of campaigning between the Atlantic seaboard and the Rockies.

The demonstration started this morning as soon as the governor stepped from an elevator into the lobby of a hotel in Boston and tonight it was still going on as the nominee, aboard his special train, moved slowly toward New York.

A short distance out of Boston, the nominee left his train at Blackstone, Massachusetts, and there, after a brief speech by Senator David I. Walsh of that state, the governor and his party entered automobiles for a 35 mile ride to the station in Providence, across the state line into Rhode Island. In each city and town along the route he was greeted with the shouts of those by the roadsides, the screech of fire sirens, the blare here and there of a band and the bursting of torpedoes tossed by youngsters against the roadway.

Overhead, as the automobile caravan proceeded into Pawtucket, an airplane, with the words "Al Smith" painted on the bottom of its wings, formed a part of the escort.

At one town along the way, a group of kids, in single file, paraded down the street beating on gallon size tin cans. At the head of this procession was a youngster carrying a picture of the governor fastened to the tap of a broomstick.

The nominee and his party were accompanied through Rhode Island by Senator Peter Gerry of that state, who is up for reelection this year. The senator, who is chairman of the democratic national advisory committee, rode with his wife in a car back of the governor.

Traffic Jumble in Pawtucket

The route of the parade carried the party through Woonsocket, Manville, Albion, Berkeley, Lonsdale, Valley Falls and into Pawtucket. In the latter city, the crowd got away from police control and swarmed into the streets. Taxicabs, grocery trucks and private cars broke into the governor's procession and for a while it looked as if those accompanying him would never get through the traffic jumble.

Everywhere youngsters were running helter-skelter in the streets and many of the nominee's party expressed wonder that the yelling kids escaped injury in the jam.

Here and there on the streets, the words "Al Smith" were written in white and blue chalk. The nominee's picture was displayed in windows and on posts and time and time again the shout of "Hello Al" could be heard.

In Pawtucket, people peered down on the procession from roof tops, in two places youngsters were clinging to lamp-posts and others had perched on the tops of trucks.

Leaving Pawtucket and its shouts behind, the governor moved on to Providence. On the outskirts of that city he changed from a sedan into an open car.

Streets of Providence Jammed

And in Providence there was a continuous battle to get through. In the business section of the city the procession crept along in a storm of shredded paper and ticker tape.

From all sides came the toot, toot of horns and an almost continuous yell.

The jam at city hall temporarily threatened disaster to further movement of the procession, but somehow the cars got through. Police at this point kept a narrow lane open by forming a human chain which swayed to and fro under the pressure from behind, but it held.

Meanwhile, motorcycle and mounted police were busy chasing youngsters from the backs of cars in the nominee's procession, and in running to cover urchins who wiggled through the legs of policemen on the sidelines.

On the way into Hartford, two airplanes escorted Gov. Smith's train. Flying low, they sometimes dipped almost to a level with the train windows while the pilots waved greetings to the passengers who were watching their aerial acrobatics.

Large Crowd in Hartford

Detraining at Hartford, the governor found another large crowd on hand to meet him at the railroad station. It was with difficulty that a detachment of police kept the throng from engulfing the nominee as he made his way to a waiting automobile which took him on a tour through the main streets of the city.

As at the other places he had visited earlier in the day, the streets were jammed and the procession was frequently brought to a stop by admirers who overwhelmed the police escort and surrounded the governor's car in their efforts to shake his hand. The parade consequently made little better than a snail's pace and it required a full hour to cover the three-mile route which had been laid out.

After passing from the station through the business district, the procession circled the grounds of the state house, ending at the Hartford state armory, near which the governor's special train was waiting. Wooden stands seating several thousand spectators had been erected at the armory and every seat was filled, while other thousands stood beside the tracks and cheered and applauded the nominee as he left his automobile and boarded the train.

So dense was the crowd at this point that a score of newspapermen and women accompanying the governor were unable to make their way to the train. Three times after the special had started it came back to take on members of the party who could not force a passage through the crowd until after the train had pulled out, and each time there was a renewed outburst of cheers as the governor stepped to the platform of his private car and waved his brown derby in response to the demand for his appearance. He ended by tossing a brown derby, the second of the day, to hands eagerly outstretched for it, and when he appeared at stations which were reached later he was wearing a light fedora.

Darkness had fallen before the governor's special train left Hartford, and red fire and magnesium flares illuminated the scenes at numerous stations through which the special passed on its way to New York. The train made a brief stop at New Britain where the station platform and streets nearby were filled for blocks with cheering, hand-waving throngs. There were also large gatherings at Bristol, as well as at Plainville, the home town of John H. Trumbull, republican governor of Connecticut, although the train did not stop at either community.

Waterbury, turned out a huge assemblage to greet the nominee during the few minutes that his train remained there. Gov. and Mrs. Smith stood on the rear platform and shook hands with men, women and children who surged around them in a continual stream until the train pulled out, continuing without a stop through Naugatuck and Seymour to Derby-Shelton where a five minute visit was made and earlier scenes repeated.

At Derby-Shelton the crowd lined both sides of the railroad tracks, cheering lustily and holding aloft placards reading, "If you are a Socialist, so are we," "Hello brown derby," "Norris is with you, so are we," and "Welcome to our new first lady." Some of the spectators had climbed to the roof of the station to get a better view of the democratic nominee as he came in on the platform of the rear car and doffed his hat and smiled acknowledgment of the reception.

Waves Gray Fedora

From Derby-Shelton the train proceeded to Devon and from there backed into New Haven bringing Gov. Smith's car in first instead of last. The crowd on the tracks was so dense that the train was halted some distance south of the station, disappointing thousands of persons who had secured vantage points in the parade north of the platform where the train was to have stopped. The governor appeared on the platform waving a gray fedora, evidently having run out of brown derbies in Derby where an admirer snatched one from his hand.

Sea of Faces at Bridgeport

When his special train backed into the Bridgeport station at 9:35 p. m., Gov. Smith looked down into a sea of faces that filled the street below from curb to curb for three solid blocks, here to the democratic nominee and his wife were constantly besieged by persons who wanted to shake their hands. Under the glare of flares which made the murky station as light as day, the governor, who had only one brown derby in reserve, waved his fedora and Mrs. Smith blew kisses to the crowd, which cheered, sounded horns, bells and other sound making devices, as long as the candidate and his wife remained in view.

The governor received still another enthusiastic reception when his train pulled into South Norwalk a half hour after leaving Bridgeport. There was a ten minute stop at South Norwalk while the steam locomotive which had hauled the governor's special from Massachusetts across Connecticut and was replaced by an electric engine. During this time the governor and Mrs. Smith again went out upon the platform of their car to respond to the acclamation with more hand shaking.

At Stamford Gov. Smith saw another great outpouring of the population. The station platform was a solid mass of humanity as the nominee's special train crept into the town and came to a stop. Red fire was burned and banners waved as the crowd cheered during the brief stop.

GOV. SMITH'S TRAIN 40 MINUTES BEHIND TIME

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith arrived at 11:35 o'clock tonight from his trip into New England. Crowds that greeted him at stations along the route from Boston delayed the movement of the governor's special which arrived 40 minutes late.

SMITH PARTED WITH BROWN DERBY AT WILLIMANTIC

GOV. SMITH'S TRAIN, En Route to New York, Oct. 25—(AP)—The first brown derby Governor Smith has parted with on his present campaign trip was given away at Willimantic, Conn., during a brief stop there today on his way to New York. The recipient of the headgear for which many clamored, however, was unknown to the democratic nominee.

A crowd, which swarmed around the rear of his special train, was shouting and cheering at the nominee as he waved the hat first to the right and left. Several shouted out requests for the hat and the governor tossed it to the crowd. A scramble ensued.

LINDBERGH SHOOTS HIS FIRST WILD DEER

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24—(AP)—The department of agriculture today issued to Colonel Charles Lindbergh, who is hunting on the Hal Mangum ranch in northern Mexico, permission to kill two cinnamon bears and two deer.

Friends of Colonel Lindbergh received word today that the aviator had shot his first deer within three hours of his arrival at the ranch.

MID[illegible] FLIGHT OF ZEPPELIN POSTPONED

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 25.—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin, announced at 10.30 o'clock tonight that the flight of the Zeppelin to St. Louis and Chicago would be postponed until after weather reports were received tomorrow morning.

An 18-mile cross-hangar wind influenced Dr. Eckener's decision, he said. The wind had been expected to subside, but the commander said he did not expect conditions would improve tonight.

"When the weather maps are available tomorrow morning," he said, "we will know better when we may start west. I am anxious to take the ship over America's mid-west."

The Zeppelin's passengers who had been summoned earlier in the evening for a take-off tonight returned to their hotels at Toms River when Dr. Eckener said the trip would be delayed again.

SIX PASSENGERS FOR ZEPPELIN RETURN FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—One woman and five men were selected from 55 applicants today as the paying passengers to make the return trip to Germany on the dirigible Graf Zeppelin next week. Their tickets will cost $3,000 apiece.

The paying passengers will be: Mrs. Clara Adams of Tannersville, Pa., wife of George I. Adams, retired cannery magnate.

Richard J. Burke of Big Bear Lake, Cal., brother-in-law of Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Donald M. Castro of Columbus, war-time flier.

Joseph D. Jessel, vice-president of Ullman Jessel company, New York dress goods house.

Paul M. Marko, of the Marko Storage Battery company, of Brooklyn.

Allen Miller of New York and London, British war-time flier and director of Amedia Accumulators, of London, who is taking journey as "normal passenger on a business trip."

Goodyear Zeppelin representatives said that there was no especial reason for selecting these six, except that they all had their applications in early and were "the sort of people desired." All the six are wealthy, they acknowledged, but said there was nothing to indicate they had been selected as likely prospects to interest in Dr. Hugo Eckener's dream of a $14,000,000 trans-Atlantic airship company.

$28,000 MAIL ROBBERY NEAR STOCKTON, CAL.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 25—(AP)—A postoffice truck at Tracy, near here, was held up and robbed of $28,000 today by two armed, unmasked men, who escaped in an automobile driven by a third.

The money taken was contained in three sacks of registered mail, consigned to the Tracy branch of the Bank of Italy. It was in currency and was to have been used in cashing Southern Pacific Railroad pay checks tomorrow, the company's payday, it was insured.

Postmaster George H. Gischel, Assistant Postmaster R. J. Nyren and Alva Bocher, clerk, had just placed the money in a truck to take it to the bank when the robbers appeared. One had a rifle and the other had two pistols.

At the command "hands up" the postmaster and his aides appeared bewildered, witnesses said. Gischel started to run for the postoffice and one of the robbers fired at him and missed. Nyren and Bocher remained with the money with their hands up. The bandits seized the bags and ran. Then Gischel started after them with a gun, firing as he ran, but the men escaped.

The robbers were reported as about 28 years of age. Posses, including one formed by members of the American Legion, began a search.

TESTIMONY ABOUT SHOOTING OF MISS BETTY HEYWOOD

ELYRIA, Ohio, Oct. 25—(AP)—Evidence tending to show that Louis Cicco, Lorain municipal dry officer, did not intentionally shoot Miss Betty Heywood, 22, of Elyria, and that he was merely performing his official duties in attempting to stop her automobile while watching for rum runners, was presented today as the defense neared the end of its case.

Cicco, charged with shooting with intent to wound, took the witness stand in his own defense just before court adjourned. He will resume his testimony tomorrow morning.

Britt Buda, Lorain city detective, testified as to experiments he had made which indicated that Miss Heywood could have been wounded by a glancing bullet. Cicco has contended that he fired at the pavement, and not at the car in which Miss Heywood was a passenger when it failed to halt.

Arthur E. Hart, Cleveland gunsmith, said the bullet which wounded the girl apparently had glanced from some rough surface, and that it fit the hole made in the back of the automobile.

YALE SCHOLARSHIPS FOR CONNECTICUT STUDENTS

NEW HAEN, Oct. 25—(AP)—Eighty scholarships were announced today by Yale university. Among the scholarships are listed students from 20 states, England and China. Connecticut and New York received the largest number, each getting 16. The Connecticut students receiving the awards were:

Lester Rapoport, Hartford; Helmuth P. Duberg, New Haven; Thomas H. Bracken, Short Beach; Jonathan G. Sherman, Bridgeport; Earl F. Spencer, Hartford; William S. Bernard, New Haven; Charles S. Schnelle, Hamden; Hans Klagsbrunn, New Haven; George D. Knopf, New Haven; Albert P. Gagnevin, Deep River; Philip C. Michel, West Suffield; William F. McKenna, Meriden; John L. Daley, Bridgeport; Leon F. Doss, Rockville; Robert Tennant, Jr., Meriden.

Statements From Hoover Headquarters

Republicans Would Protect Private Enterprises From Encroachment by Government.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25—(AP)—A declaration that no conclusion had been reached by Herbert Hoover regarding an extra session of congress to consider farm relief legislation in the event of his election, was made today at the personal headquarters of the republican presidential nominee.

A formal statement saying that the question had been raised a great number of times and discussed was issued in response to inquiries concerning the assertion of Gov. Adam McMullen of Nebraska that Hoover had informed him he would call the new congress into session to put through agricultural legislation.

"It was said at Hoover headquarters that Governor MacMullen has recently seen Mr. Hoover," the statement said. "The question of an extra session has been raised a great many times and discussed. Obviously no conclusion was reached as to the matter."

The nominee spent much of today in conferences with close advisers, going over with them the strategy to be followed during the closing days of the campaign. No comment was made upon the Boston speech last night by Gov. Alfred E. Smith and while there is little likelihood that Hoover himself will touch upon the utterances, it was indicated that other republican speakers might deal with them in addresses that are yet to come before election day.

A statement dealing with state socialism and its operation in Europe was issued by Myron T. Herrick, ambassador to France, after a visit with the nominee. It was the first reply to the Smith speech emanating from republican headquarters.

"The experience of Europe having been under my immediate observation and study for many years past, I rather shudder at the thought that there should be any prospect in America for government ownership and operation while Europe stands out as such a dismal failure in this regard," Herrick said.

"The ownership, control and management of the railways and other instrumentalities by the government have proven such a dismal failure as to need no comment.

"One human quality upon which the success of the American state depends, to my mind, more than any other, and one which must be conserved and fostered, is individualism, initiative and self-help.

"This is a vital quality of the citizenship of any country, and should be nurtured and encouraged for it is the natural, fundamental quality of a free people, and the conduct of the business of a country by the state is destructive of those in-born qualities."

The ambassador added that the United States had assumed a gratifying position among the nations as a creditor nation "clothed with all the responsibilities that that implies." He contrasted the "shiploads of gold coming back to America from Europe to pay our own coupons," with those he said were formerly sent to that country in say European holders of our securities.

"I must confess considerable alarm in view of past experience in our country in politics when I see any tendency of our people to make any changes which will endanger this prosperity, which, of course, is not only a great importance to America, but its international significance is also of tremendous concern."

ABDUCTORS OF POLICEMAN BELIEVED TO BE MURDERERS

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 25—(AP)—Belief was expressed tonight by officials of the Pennsylvania state police that the two men and a woman who early this morning kidnapped a Keystone state trooper, later releasing him, may be responsible for two recent murders and a series of daring holdups in that state. At the same time Baltimore police said that the description of the bandit band tallied with that of a group sought in connection with the murder of Thomas Revel, and several holdups in this district.

Captain Charles H. Burns of the local detective bureau said that the descriptions of the kidnaping trio tallies with that given by a woman companion of Revell, who was shot to death when he reached for a pistol when held up in a parked car on a Baltimore country road. He said that the story told by Revell's woman companion implicated two men and a woman.

Patrolman Russell Troup of the Pennsylvania state police was the man kidnaped and later released by the bandit band early this morning. Troup and a companion officer had arrested the party after halting their automobile for improper lights. Troup was riding in the rear seat of the machine with the woman, and his companion preceded on a motorcycle. The woman produced a pistol, silenced Troup and the car turned from the main highway, later returning to it after shaking off the motorcycle. Troup was relieved of his pistol and released near Halethorpe, Md., after the trio had abandoned a plan to kill him and had forced him to watch them hold up an automobile party.

Troup made his way to a local police station where he told his story and an immediate watch was set up on the roads of the district.

GIRL TESTIFIES IN THE LEOPOLD MURDER CASE

WATERBURY, Oct. 25—(AP)—The state offered another witness this afternoon at the trial of Louis N. Leopold, charged with murder and arson, to identify the car they claim was used by Samuel Weiss and Morris Sheinitz on the morning of Feb. 5 in the vicinity of the Leopold building on Baldwin street. Miss Katherine Kelly of East Liberty street testified she, with another girl and two boy friends, were parked in front of her home from 1:46 to 1:20 a. m., that morning, and saw the car. She said the car came from Baldwin street and turned into River street. It almost stopped before it reached the place where they were parked and after it passed did stop for an instant.

She admitted to the defense counsel that her attention was attracted to the car as she thought the man driving was drunk. She said the car had "E" markers and her boy friend said it was from New Haven. She had just got into the house and retired when the explosion took place.

Contributions To The Dem. Campaign Fund

Thomas Spellacy of Hartford Gave $5,000—On October 22 Total Had Reached $3,065,038.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25—(AP)—The democratic national committee in a report filed today with house special campaign funds committee showed that its total receipts from June 1, 1928, including balance carried over from the old committee, had on October 22 reached a total of $3,065,038. During the present campaign up to October 22 the committee had paid out $2,951,032.

The report pointed out that the receipts included the $500,000 loan which previously had been reported as negotiated, interest on its bank account and collections by state officers which had not been tabulated.

The reports showed the following contributions received since October 15:

$25,000—Francis P. Garvan, New York.

$1,230—Collection Mechanics hall, Boston.

$1,000 — United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada, Strabe V. Claggett, Boston; M. L. Madden, Boston; Ethel F. Donaghue, Hartford, Conn.

FORMER CONGRESSMAN SENT TO PENITENTIARY

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Charles S. Wharton, former congressman and once assistant state's attorney today was sentenced to serve two years in Leavenworth penitentiary by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson on conviction of conspiracy in connection with the $183,000 Evergreen Park mail robbery last February.

Sentence was pronounced after a motion for a new trial had been denied but a stay of execution until November 19 was granted. Wharton said later that he might appeal the case.

Last February a band of robbers held up a Grand Trunk mail train just outside the city and obtained the shipment of money. Within 24 hours Charles "Limpy" Cleaver, leader of the band, was arrested and part of the loot recovered.

Three other members of the band turned government evidence two were slain before they were captured and two accused members still are at large. Cleaver and Wharton were tried together after it was charged that Wharton had loaned his home to the robbers to divide their loot and had received $4,000 for this. Cleaver and the three others who turned government evidence are now in prison.

FOUR BANDITS ROBBED BANK AT ATLANTA, IOWA

ATLANTIC, Iowa., Oct. 25—(AP)—Officers in many Iowa counties late today were patrolling roads in a statewide search for four bandits who at noon today entered the Whitney Loan and Trust bank and robbed the institution of approximately $40,000 in bonds, currency and gold.

The robbers forced ten employes and customers to lie on the floor while the safe and tellers' cages were ransacked. A checkup of the loot made shortly after the robbery, showed the loss of $15,000 in customers' bonds, $10,000 of which were unregistered, $20,000 in currency and gold from the vaults and a little more than $4,000 in currency and silver from the tellers' cages.

Two other men were said by witnesses to have awaited the robbers in an automobile parked near the bank.

1,530 COMMUNISTS HELD PRISONERS IN VINCENNES

VINCENNES, France, Oct 25.—(AP)—Fifteen hundred and thirty communists spent part of today prisoners in the old fortress at Vincennes as a result of thel announced intention to stage a demonstration at the funeral of 19 victims of a building collapse here last week.

Of those arrested 452 were foreigners; tonight all had been released except 92 foreigners. Of this number there were 15 classified as "Spaniards, Poles, Russians and Italians," who likely will be expelled from the country.

The communists had announced a prospective manifestation against the "abject regime which allows workingmen to be murdered by Bourgeois contractors with impunity."

The prefect, M. Chiappe, organized 2,000 policemen and members of the republican guard, and as the communists emerged from the subway stations they were arrested.

POISON FOUND IN BODY OF MISS FRANCIS NEWMAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Poison in sufficient quantity to cause death was found in the body of Miss Frances Newman by City Toxicologist Alexander Goettler, it was announced today. The novelist died in a New York hotel on Monday from what was first thought to be pneumonia and cerebral hemorrhage.

The poison, obtainable by insomnia sufferers without prescription, was found after examination of the brain and stomach by two assistant medical examiners and the toxicologist. The body has been sent to Atlanta, Ga.

NEW RECORD EAST-TO-WEST CROSS-COUNTRY FLIGHT

Captain C. B. D. Collyer Guided the Monoplane Yankee Doodle From New York to Los Angeles in 24 Hours and 55 Minutes—Best Previous Time of East-to-West Non-Stop Flight Was 26 Hours and 50 Minutes—West-to-East Record is 18 Hours and 55 Minutes.

MINES FIELD, Los Angeles, Oct. 25—(AP)—Setting a new record for a trans-continental non-stop airplane flight from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific, the monoplane Yankee Doodle arrived here at 2:12 p. m. today from Roosevelt field, New York.

The unofficial time of the flight as announced by Capt. C. B. D. Collyer, pilot, and Harry Tucker, owner and passenger, was 24 hours and 55 minutes. The best previous time for the westward flight was 26 hours and 50 minutes, made in 1923 by Lieuts. John Macready and Oakley Kelley.

The Yankee Doodle took off at Roosevelt field at 11:13 a. m., eastern standard time, yesterday. The little cigar-shaped, white-winged plane was loaded with 450 gallons of gasoline, just about enough for a 24-hour flight, and a check began shortly after landing to determine how much of the fuel was left.

The westward flight covered approximately the course flown over by Col. Arthur Goebel when he piloted his plane to a new west-east non-stop trans-continental record of 18 hours and 48 minutes several weeks ago. This course lay over McKeesport, Pa., Columbus, Ohio, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Ind., Wichita, Kan., Albuquerque, N. M., and through the Beaumont pass into Southern California.

This was the third time Tucker had sent his plane into a coast-to-coast grind. The first west to east attempt was unsuccessful but on the second attempt Goebel piloted the machine through to its record. A bag of apples and two canteens of water were taken along as nourishment for the fliers.

Much anxiety was felt for the plane during the morning and early afternoon, the only definite word of it being received from Albuquerque, where it was sighted at 9:10 a. m., mountain time.

After swinging low out of the southeast sun, heading to drop into Mines field, the shimmering silver-coated monoplane circled twice above the field. Captain Collyer brought the Yankee Doodle to a perfect landing.

Alan Loughead, manufacturer of the Yankee Doodle, a Lockheed-Vega monoplane, was among the first to congratulate Captain Collyer and Tucker.

YANKEE DOODLE CARRIED PUP ACROSS CONTINENT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25—(AP)—The first pup ever to make a non-stop flight from the Atlantic to the Pacific, "Tail Wind" was proudly exhibited today as Captain C. B. D. Collyer, pilot and Harry Tucker, owner of the monoplane Yankee Doodle, brought their gleaming white craft to rest on Mines field in a 24-hour and 55 minute record making non-stop flight from New York.

"Tail Wind," the honored mascot of the Yankee Doodle's transcontinental flight, was but a "hot dog" to which the fliers' pointers—both pipes for legs, a match for a tail, and a bow knot of blue to indicate where the neck ended and the head began—cheerfully were displayed to the crowd of 150 news camera men, reporters, field attendants and spectators who welcomed the fliers.

"Tail Wind is the first pup ever to make a non-stop record flight across country," Captain Collyer proclaimed joyfully.

IDENTIFIED MEN TO WHOM HE PAID PROTECTION MONEY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25—(AP)—Albert Long, detective, testifying at the trial of Charles Cohen, police captain, and Frank DeRose, once Cohen's subordinate, who are charged with bribery, conspiracy and extortion, said that at Cohen's instigation he had levied protection money from bootleggers and other lawbreakers and split with the captain. Cohen, he testified, got 75 per cent, and he retained the remainder.

Cohen, De Rose and Long were indicted by the October grand jury on evidence uncovered by the special grand jury, which is investigating racketeering, gang murders and police corruption. They were specifically charged with collecting protection money from Morris Clearfield, who admitted running a still.

Long yesterday pleaded guilty to the indictments on which Cohen and DeRose are being tried.

Clearfield preceded Long on the stand and testified that he ran a still from October, 1927, until it was raided on December, 31, 1927, by federal prohibition agents. He said he paid about $200 a week to Long, and sent $75 a week to Cohen in an envelope marked, "captain."

Fifteen sergeants and patrolmen were lined up before the bar of the court while Clearfield was on the stand and he identified them as men to whom he also paid protection money. These policemen were arrested with Cohen, Long and De Rose but have not been indicted.

REV. STRATON SUES N. Y. WORLD FOR $200,000 DAMAGES

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—The Rev. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, has caused papers to be served on the New York World in a suit for $200,000 damages for stories saying that liquor was sold over the bar in a hotel owned by Dr. Straton at Greenwood Lake, N. Y. Announcement of the action was made at the church offices today.

Dr. Straton acquired the hotel property shortly before the time last summer that he charged from his pulpit that Gov. Smith was the bitterest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom.

Numerous reporters went to Greenwood Lake to interview the minister about an apparently impending public debate between him and Gov. Smith. The World reporter told his paper that he found liquor was being sold openly over the bar of the hotel owned by Dr. Straton and the pastor was quoted as saying in reply that "the liquor interests" were seeking to embarrass him in his controversy with the governor.

GOV'T RESTS IN ALBANY BASEBALL POOL CASE

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—Five of nine counts in an indictment against William J. Pringle, secretary-treasurer of the Albany baseball pool, were dismissed today after the government rested its case and Pringle's counsel announced that the defendant would not take the stand.

The four counts allowed to stand charge use of the mails in the promotion of a lottery and conspiracy so to use the mails. The counts dismissed related to the checks sent through the mails from New York to Albany which the government held showed that the mails were being improperly used. Federal Judge Thatcher ruler that no connection had been shown between the checks and operations of the baseball pool.

MARGARET AUCHMUTY TUCKER ENGAGED TO J. L. SALTONSTALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Auchmuty Tucker of New York, today announced the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Auchmuty Tucker, to John Lee Saltonstall of Boston, former member of the Massachusetts state legislature. No date was announced for the wedding.

Miss Tucker made her debut in 1919 and has been active in philanthropic work. Mr. Saltonstall's first wife was the former Gladys Rice of New York.

CASE REVOLVES AROUND WHISKEY TURNING TO WATER

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 25—(AP)—Three cases were reviewed today in the supreme court of errors, the first one heard taking most of the court day and having as its basis of litigation the mysterious turning of 59 barrels of whiskey into water.

The appeal as before the court was the appeal of the Smedley company of New Haven, against the awarding of $36,000 judgment against it to J. Peter DeJon, New Haven sheriff. The award was made in the superior court of New Haven county on March 31, 1927.

The tale behind the disappearance of the liquor, of which the justices of the court were shown six bottles partially filled and used as exhibits, dates back to March of 1920.

At that time DeJon seized the whiskey in the cellar of the establishment of Isaac and Yonas Swirsky, wholesale grocers of New Haven. They had been named defendant in an action brought by the George H. Finlay company, of New York, with violation of contract as a basis.

The Finlay company was later given damages of over $200,000 and the liquor remained in the cellar of the Swirsky establishment under seizure by DeJon. Two years later it was moved to the Smedley company warehouse without the formality of being tested by a gauger.

In 1926, when DeJon was armed with permission from the United States government to sell the liquor to hospitals and drug stores and turn the proceeds over to the Finlay company as part of their judgment, it was discovered that there was but six of the barrels filled with whiskey, the balance in some mysterious way having turned to water. DeJon, then brought his suit and was awarded the claim.

TRIENNIAL CONVENTION OF P. E. CHURCH ADJOURNS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25—(AP)—Bearing a parting message from the house of bishops to work for world peace among nations and unity of Christian churches, delegates to the 49th triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal church today turned homeward after two weeks of session in the nation's capital.

With a ringing declaration that the most momentous task which faces the world today is the warfare against war, "the bishops in their pastoral letter called upon the membership of the church throughout the country to give its support to all worthy movements for peace.

At the same time the bishops said there should be a greater unity among Christian churches. "If Catholic and Protestant cannot find a way to live together and to worship together, one Lord whom both adore, then is our faith vain. We are yet in our sin," the letter declared.

"There is a sense of strain through the Episcopal communion," the letter said. "One group seeks fuller measure of what it counts Catholic. Another group is sick at heart lest some of these great values which we gained at the reformation be lost. The differences were termed challenges to the width of our vision and to the steadfastness of our loyalty."

TEN INDICTMENTS FOR KANSAS CITY BOMBING

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 25—(AP)—Ten indictments, naming alleged participants in recent bombing and racketeering activities in Kansas City, were returned by the Jackson county grand jury here today.

James Martin, Robert W. Jackson and W. H. P. Doerr were charged with arson in connection with the firing of an apartment Oct. 14. The three men were arraigned a few minutes after the indictments were returned.

Judge Thomas J. Seeborn ordered the names of the others indicted be withheld until they could be apprehended.

The grand jury has been engaged in an investigation of alleged bank bombings and of violence in the cleaning and dyeing industry for the past month. Sixty-one witnesses have been questioned.

OVER 5,000 GREET SMITH IN THE THREAD CITY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 25—A crowd of over 5,000 people gone mad with enthusiasm gave Governor "Al" Smith a riotous greeting during a five-minute stop of the democratic candidate's special train at the New Haven railroad passenger station at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon. Much of the cheering from the milling crowd that included hundreds from a dozen smaller border towns was intended for Mrs. Smith who appeared on the platform of the rear coach with her famous husband.

The thousands waited patiently for the train which was making the run from Providence, R. I., to Hartford and was 30 minutes behind the scheduled arrival here. The absence of a band failed to dampen the spirit of the mob during the half-hour wait. Hundreds of school children, many of them carrying small flags and noise-makers were on the scene and braved the crush of their elders in the mad rush for the rear platform of the train.

Simultaneous with the approach of the train around a bend of the Providence division two aeroplanes, heralding the approach of the candidate, sailed gracefully into view and continued to hover over the city during the stop. The planes then continued as an escort to the nominee on the journey to Hartford.

Smith Makes No Speech

As the train came to a stop the mob broke through the police cordon in the hope of reaching the candidate's hand. Then the "Happy Warrior" stepped into view, and smiled the smile that has become one of his strong characteristics. With his brown derby held high in his right hand he bowed gently to the thousands. A great roar went up from the crowd and then came a lull in anticipation of hearing a few words from the governor. Turning to one of the state police escorts of the train, Governor "Al" said, "What town is this?" He was informed by the officer that it was Willimantic and that it was a textile town. Several times he raised his derby and the crowd cheered only to lapse into quiet again to hear the expected words. When it was decided that the candidate was not to speak the enthusiasts again turned their attention to forcing their way to the platform to shake hands with the governor and Mrs. Smith, both of whom extended ready hands to those who managed to slip through the line of police.

Sends Flowers to Mother of Twins

The candidate appeared somewhat tired but Mrs. Smith gave no evidence of the strain of the campaign. Attired in becoming dress of mulberry satin with hat to match, the first lady of the Empire state appeared full of energy and interest. She issued a brief order to an attendant and from within the car a huge basket bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums was handed her. She in turn entrusted the bouquet to Patrolman Joseph Lariviere of the local police department with a request that it be delivered to "that sick lady up in that block," indicating the rear of the Sadd block. Mrs. Smith did not realize that she was sending the flowers to Mrs. Arthur J. Gude who became the mother of twin daughters Sunday morning.

Governor Tosses Out Brown Derby

Just as the train was about to leave Governor Smith threw an old brown derby into the crowd and a mad scramble for its possession ensued, between men, women and children.

The special train was met here by James Walsh of Meriden, chairman of the state committee and Thomas J. Spellacy of Hartford who greeted the governor on his entrance into Connecticut and accompanied him to Hartford. Also boarding the candidate's train were Frank P. Fenton, democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor on the state ticket who voted for "Al" Smith 153 times at the democratic convention in New York city in 1924, and ex-Mayor George W. Hickey, chairman of the city democratic committee. The welcoming party also included Valentine L. Murphy, chairman of the Windham committee, and a member of the state central committee from this district.

Superintendent Carl A. Mitchell of the Hartford division with Assistant Superintendent Ira Wickham, Roadmaster John Regan and local agent Harry A. Blanchette were on hand to direct the movement of the train over the route. After the departure of the train the police detail, in charge of Captain Frank McLean turned their attention to directing congested traffic throughout the business section as the crowd prepared to return home. The schools in the city had closed at 3 o'clock and the majority of the 2,800 pupils were on hand to greet Governor Smith.

GAIN OF 669 VOTERS IN TOWN OF WINDHAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 25—The perfected town voting list made public today by the board of registrars shows the addition of 669 new names to the total list since the last elections. While the result of the campaign for making of new voters in September and October was not determined, it was stated that a large number of names were removed from the list for non-residence and deaths. The list as completed is to be used in the four districts of the town at the national and state election in November. The new list, by districts as compared to that of last year follows:

	1928	1927	Gain
First district	1,187	1,409	138
Secon	2,264	2,115	145
Third	1,434	1,286	148
Fourth	1,648	1,414	234
	6,533	5,864	669

In the third district there are 435 names from Windham Center and North Windham and in the fourth district there are 400 from South Windham.

Announcement of a series of republican rallies in this section was made today through republican official bodies, the series opening with a rally in this city Monday evening, October 29 at the town hall under the auspices of the Windham Republican club. The speakers will be Carroll L. Beedy of Portland, Me., member of congress from the first congressional district of that state; Ernest E. Rogers of New London, candidate for lieutenant-governor; George H. Cohen of Hartford assistant U. S. district attorney and Mrs. Alice P. Merritt of Hartford, member of the state senate.

Tuesday evening, October 30, a rally will be staged under the auspices of the Hampton Republican club at Grange hall in Hampton, with the speakers: Colonel H. Russell Wood of Hartford and Mrs. Zella I. Goodwin of Meriden. State Senator Elbert L. Darbie of Danielson will preside.

A third rally will be held at Knowlton Memorial hall in Warrenville, Friday evening, November 2. The speakers will be: Richard P. Freeman of New London, member of congress from the second district; Ernest E. Rogers, state treasurer of New London; Edwin J. Donnelly of this city; and State Senator Mrs. Alice P. Merritt of Hartford.

Dr. William L. Higgins of Coventry candidate for secretary of state, will preside. There will be a musical program from 7 to 8 o'clock by the combined Eastford and Babcock Silver Cornet bands.

The "humanitarian" sales talk of four salesmen who recently canvassed this city from house to house with household items and a plea that a percentage of the sale price went to an orpharage in New Jersey led to an investigation by the local chamber of commerce which brought out an absolute disclosure of unworthiness of the proposition. It has been learned that in 1926 a sum of $1,000.03 was paid to the asylum. The National Better Business bureau writes that the St. Louis manager of this particular concern was sentenced to 90 days in the workhouse and fined $540 a while ago. At the time the salesmen were here, they discussed their project with the chamber of commerce officials and were subsequently asked to leave town. The information is given as a warning to housewives from whom thousands of dollars are secured every year on such questionable propositions.

The common council again faces the issue of taking action on the petition of two theater managers to be allowed to open motion-picture houses at 5:30 instead of 6:30 o'clock Sunday evenings. A public hearing granted on the petition Wednesday night brought out an unexpected flood of objection, much of it coming from church organizations. Manager John R. Pickett of the Gem theatre who was first to be heard, briefly explained the purport of the petition, explaining that there was no intention of violating the Sabbath, but merely to balance the hours of shows here with that prevailing in other cities. Manager George A. Bartlett of the Capitol theatre, in opposing the petition, stated that little would be gained financially by opening one hour earlier. Attorney J. H. King, appearing for M. W. Sperry, who purchased the Strand theatre one week ago stated that his client was not in favor of earlier opening. The petition had been signed by Peter Fedorko who was owner of the playhouse at the time the petition was drawn up. Rev. David Lovett of the Baptist church stated that amusements should not interfere with church attendance. City Clerk Arthur L. Clark then read a petition by Byron E. Medbury and 102 others opposing the petition, and a similar opposition from the Men's Bible class of the Baptist church voted unanimously by the 58 members, and adding a protest against amusements of all kinds on Sunday evenings. This was signed by the officers of the class: Bert V. Caulfield, president; George Paton, vice-president; L. A. Gessner, secretary and Byron E. Meadbury, treasurer. The hearing adjourned without having taken any action.

Fire believed to have been caused by mice chewing matches caused damage estimated at over $500 this morning to a residence in South Windham owned by Mrs. John J. Kilgurey of this city. The blaze was confined to the vicinity of the pantry, where it broke out, more serious damage having been averted by the village fire department under supervision of Chief James M. Larkham. The house was unoccupied at the time.

Bids for the making of improvements to the cell room at police headquarters will be requested soon, it was stated today by Alderman William E. Jackson. Some time ago an appropriation of $1,000 was made for this work, most of which will be confined to erecting a new cell for women to secure better sanitary and natural lighting conditions and to effect a more complete separation from the men's quarters.

Mrs. Theophile Viau, 58, of Baltic, died at St. Joseph's hospital about 10 o'clock this morning. She had been a patient at the institution for the past few weeks.

Frederick J. Trinder, director of state vocational education was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Willimantic Exchange club held in the Natman Hale hotel Wednesday evening. The club voted $100 to furnish milk to under-nourished children through the Welfare Bureau.

Walter H. Griggs of this city and his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Griggs of Chaplin have just returned from a motor trip through New Hampshire, Vermont and New York state.

Joseph F. Dutton, three times mayor of Bristol, called on Secretary Earl J. Arnold at the chamber of commerce offices today. Mr. Dutton, who is a prominent democrat was enroute from Putnam to Hartford where he was in the receiving party for Governor Alfred E. Smith this afternoon.

Phyllis Jordan, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Roland B. Jordan is guest of her grandmother, Mrs. E. R. Pierson of Norwich for the week end.

Herbert W. Huber, treasurer of the Willimantic Trust company is on a two weeks' business and pleasure trip in Ohio.

Mrs Charles F. Risedorf has returned from a visit with friends in Hartford.

Mrs. George F. Stiles of South Windham and Miss M. L. Blair of Chaplin left today for a few days' stay in New York city.

Patrick McDermott of Windham road was a Hartford visitor today.

Mrs. John R. Cogswell of Providence, R. I., is spending the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Case are making a few days visit with relatives in New Jersey. During the absence of Mr. Case, Substitute Carrier John Conrad is covering the rural mail route to Gardner lake.

W. K. Raymond of Westchester Center was in the village Thursday.

GOSHEN

Christian Citizenship is the Christian's Duty to His Country, was the subject of the pastor's discourse Sunday morning. The C. E. meeting in the evening was led by Charlie Hinckley, the subject, "How Law Increases Freedom When It is Observed by the People of a Nation."

The Eastern Star order of Colchester was entertained at the home of E. H. McCall Monday evening with a Hallowe'en party. Chicken sandwiches, pie and coffee were served. Ghosts greeted the guests and the decorations were in keeping with the holiday. About 30 were present.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Case and Grace Elizabeth Case of Danbury and little Robert McCall of Colchester were at Maple Hill farm Sunday.

There was a good attendance of the Ladies' Aid society members when Miss Dorothy McCall entertained the society last Thursday. Sandwiches, French pastries, cake and tea were served by the hostess. The business meeting resulted in the re-election of most of the officers.

Mrs. Albert Kenyon and son Ralph left by automobile Monday, for a visit with Roland Kenyon who is in the government employ and stationed at Nantucket Island for several years.

Mrs. Mitchell went to New York last week to meet her youngest son just arrived by steamer from his home in Belfast, Ireland. He will probably remain in this country.

A local farmer had an unusual experience recently, when upon removing a milk can with a small amount of cream in it he found 12 half-grown rats which he soon dispatched. This solved the mystery how the chicken feed had disappeared.

Miss Annie Gillette attended the D. A. R. meeting in Manchester, this state, on Tuesday.

A Hallowe'en party is to be given this (Friday) evening at the parsonage, by the Community club. Those attending are to come in costume. The committee comprises Miss Davies, Miss Mary Kostowich and Jane Hinckley with others assisting.

STAFFORDVILLE

Raymond Hathaway, employed in Charlton, Mass., was home with his family over the week end.

Mrs. T. M. Lyon has been confined to her home by illness the past week.

Mrs. Dorothy Kennedy and little son, who have been with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Turner, for some time, have returned to their home in Schenectady, N. Y.

Mrs. Everett Rhodes, Miss Lucy Town, Mrs. Stella Bowen of Thompson and Judge Milan Giesler of Putnam were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Howard.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Belcher of Bloomfield, Clifford Carr of Hartford and Jerry Watson of New Britain were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Belcher Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Lombard and two daughters of Springfield were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Ryder Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Scussel and daughter moved this week to the house formerly known as the late Mrs. Lina Booth place.

A republican rally was held at the Hoover-Curtis club house Monday evening. Lawyer Robert H. Fisk of Stafford Springs and Hon. H. H. Willis of Vernon gave very interesting addresses; also Rev. C. E. Richard addressed the large audience.

WEEKAPAUG

When the Ocean View W. C. T. U. met Wednesday with Mrs. Geneva Champlin it was voted to send $10 to the Florida sufferers. One new name was favored for membership. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Jennie Datson, 20 Park avenue, Westerly, Oct. 31st.

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Smith, who have been spending a few days at their home in Westfield, Mass., have returned to their summer home here.

F. C. Buffum, Jr., and family of Westerly spent the week end at their cottage.

Harris Taylor and Miss L. Gertrude Stillman of Ashaway called on their aunt, Mrs. Harriet Macomber, Sunday.

Harvey Perry is having his cottage renovated and painted.

Hobart Ayers of Pittsburgh visited over the week end at his Hilandale farm here.

Even though the leaves are blowing off and the trees look bare, the flowers are in bloom—cosmos, nasturtiums, calendula are just at their height and would bloom many weeks if the frost keeps away.

Why isn't an actor cut up when he appears in several parts.

PENDLETON HILL

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford B. Thompson entertained 31 guests at cards Saturday evening, a birthday event, honoring the anniversary of Mrs. Thompson's birth, Oct. 21. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ledyard Anthony, of Ashaway; Mr. and Mrs. Elsworth Gray and family of North Stonington, and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Thompson of Westerly. Mrs. Thompson received numerous gifts.

Rev. E. P. Mathewson Sunday morning gave a most interesting account of his visit as delegate from this church to the Baptist state convention at Stamford. The flowers Sunday morning consisted of ten beautiful bouquets of zinias, asters, dahlias and French marigolds, largely from the gardens of Miss Cecile Palmer and sisters. Mrs. Willias E. Almy contributed a bouquet of choice dahlias.

Mrs. Charles H. Cottrell of Oak Lawn, R. I., is spending some time with her son, Charles H. Cottrell, Jr., and his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Thompson entertained at dinner Sunday Mrs. George O. Stead of Norwich Mr. and Mrs. Irving Thompson, and Charles H. Pendleton, Westerly, Mrs. Jennie Thompson, Norwich, and Miss Sarah Thompson, Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Cottrell and family and Mrs. Willis E. Almy attended as delegates a meeting Sunday afternoon called by the Rev. Mr. Partington, counselor of North Stonington village.

Several are suffering from severe colds.

When Founders' day at Wheeler school was celebrated, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cottrell and Mrs. Cottrell, Sr., were the only ones attending from this part of the town. The prize essay was won by Aubrey Whitelow, whose subject was How the Wheeler School Benefits North Stonington. Mr. Whitelow stressed both the educational and financial side of this question. There was an attendance of about 300. The prize won by Mr. Whitelow was a silver loving cup, offered by the class of 1928.

Mrs. Benjamin Gallup continues very ill at Backus hospital, Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cottrell, Jr., drove to Oak Lawn, R. I., Tuesday, taking Mrs. Cottrell to her home in that place. Mrs. Cottrell, Jr., will remain for her annual week's visit, which includes attendance for three days at the Rhode Island Institute of Instruction.

No matter how much a man enjoys peace the band keeps right on playing.

Pile Sufferers

You can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—congestion of blood in the lower bowel. Nothing but an internal remedy can do this—that's why cutting and salves fail. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, is guaranteed to quickly and safely banish any form of Pile misery or money back. Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere sell it with this guarantee.

"OVER THE COUNTER"

Dear Dot:

At last! I have just discovered a new way of making the Modest Penny . . . that paltry sum so little appreciated . . . do its bit in modern merchandising. In fact, this opportunity that I am about to grasp and that I want you to take advantage of too, gives us a chance to Make the Penny Do Double Duty!

Rather unusual, you'll say, and back in your mind somewhere you may be thinking of some of the golden promises that flow from the radio these days. But this opportunity is not a promise or a vision. It is a fact that is Now at hand and we'll have to step lively to cash in on it.

What I am trying to tell you about is the ONE-CENT SALE on all Standard and some Specialty REXALL goods at the WINDHAM PHARMACY, 780 Main street, a store owned by the Wilson Drug Company.

First you will want to know, "What is a One-Cent Rexall Sale?" and I will reply this that I have learned. It is a sale where you buy an item at a regular price, then another item of the same kind for one cent additional. As an illustration: The standard price of Klenzo Dental Creme is 50 cents. You buy one tube at this price and by paying One Cent more, or 51 cents, you get two tubes and Save 49 cents. Every United Drug Co. article in this sale is a high quality guaranteed product, just the same as is sold every day at the regular price. No limit. THE SALE IS ON TODAY AND SATURDAY ONLY. Buy All You Want.

This sale has been developed as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merit of these goods, permission is given this pharmacy to sell you two full-size packages of high quality merchandise for the price of one, plus one cent. It is felt that the sacrifice in profit is justified because the goods are sure to please and thus new and steady customers are made.

So, gather up your Pennies, Dot, and get in on this profit-sharing opportunity, and watch the little "coppers" work in double shifts.

Yours for a One-Cent Bargain,
JANE.

JEWETT CITY

A BIG ATTENDANCE AT DEMOCRATIC RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 25—A democratic rally was held in Finn Opera house last evening, every available space being filled. Prior to the exercises in the hall, there was an old-fashioned street parade, passing through the principal thoroughfares. Led by the police, committee, and Danielson band, 150 men, boys and girls, marched, followed by 30 automobiles, everyone carrying red fire torches. Along the route red fire was burned at many homes. At Smith banners and for the candidate for representative, Lionel Boucher, appeared at intervals. The American flag was carried by several men. Two of the speakers were unable to be present, Rev. George Gilbert, an Episcopal minister, had been called to Washington, and Professor Snow of Wesleyan university to Maine. Attorney Richard Dudkowski presided at the rally. Several of the town and borough officials, the democratic candidate for representative and the speakers were seated on the platform. The first speaker was John F. Hennon, of the district committee. He spoke on the tariff question, and stressed Senator Borah's attitude toward Hoover in 1919, quoting from his speeches at that time. He also paid tribute to Mrs. Willebrand in what he termed her misrepresentation of Governor Smith's attitude toward prohibition and immigration. He quoted republican authorities on the impossibility of enforcing the Volstead act. Miss Purtell, a nationally known democratic speaker and organizer, gave a very clever talk on prohibition. Lionel Boucher, the democratic nominee for representative, spoke earnestly, stating his desire to serve the town to the best of his ability if elected. William C. Fox of New London, ex-senator and candidate for senator from New London district, covered national issues in a witty speech. William M. Citron, candidate for congress, reviewed the whole national situation, criticising Congressman R. P. Freeman, stating that he answered only 50 per cent of the roll calls. Joseph W. Wellington, candidate for senator from the 20th district, spoke on republican rule in Connecticut. During the exercises the band played America and Sidewalks of New York. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the rally was Lionel Boucher, Edmond Dudkowski, John Barnett, Edward Blake, Ulderic Jodoin, George Tormey, William McGovern, Earl Nichols, John Derda, Arthur Rioux and Timothy Shea.

Mrs. G. H. Prior is in Providence, where she is to address the Rhode Island branch convention of the King's Daughters.

Mrs. John Harris has been loaned, by Mrs. Church of Montville, an autograph quilt which is of particular interest to the Baptist church people in Jewett City. It was hand made by the women of this church in 1853, and presented to Elder Daniel Lyon and his wife when they went away from his pastorate here. Familiar names are on the quilt, and Mrs. Ann E. Phillips, now Mrs. Ann Prior, is still living here.

William J. Brickley is in Newark, N. J., where his son, Harold Brickley, is in a hospital, having been operated upon Tuesday night for acute appendicitis and stomach trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Montgomery have returned from New Haven, their son, Earl Montgomery, having been operated upon Wednesday night for appendicitis and complications.

A shower was given in the Social hall at Glasgo, Tuesday evening, for Miss Bertha Kashork in honor of her approaching marriage with Howard Bromley of Voluntown. It was given by the office girls of the Glasgo Finishing company. The hall was prettily decorated in Halloween colors. During the evening three short sketches given by the office girls were enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Edgar Clark. Miss Kashork received many beautiful gifts.

(The item relating to the Swift will in this column Thursday, was added at the Norwich end of the paper and was used without the knowledge of the regular correspondent.—Correspondence Editor.)

ELECT WALCOTT TO SENATE

On repeated occasions it has been shown what a handicap existed for the republicans from the fact that they had such a slim and undependable majority in the United States Senate in the present congress. By a majority of one they were able to organize the senate, but several of those who had gotten their office under republican nominations were as likely to be found voting with the democrats as with the republicans. It stood in the way of the republicans being able to accomplish what they believed necessary and desirable. It offered an unfortunate obstacle to the republican programme, and a handicap to the administration.

As the result of his study of the situation, Mark Sullivan, a political writer and authority, believes that conditions in this campaign are particularly favorable to the republican candidates for senate, where 32 seats are to be filled. Conditions six years ago resulted in the selection of democrats as senators in republican states. The effect of that situation has been reasonably deplored and this year the opportunity is at hand to correct it.

Voters are undoubtedly impressed with the desirability of backing up a republican administration with republican senators. There should be not a few, but a working majority in the interest of republican policies and in order to prevent a handful of recalcitrants from catering to the opponents. In this connection, Connecticut cannot fail to be impressed with the importance of electing Frederic C. Walcott to succeed Senator McLean. His qualifications for the office are unquestioned. He is a personal friend and was a co-worker with Mr. Hoover during the war. Connecticut needs his influence and service in the upper house of congress and should be eager to furnish the support which he will be to a republican chief executive. The interest of Connecticut, the maintenance of a protective tariff and the solution of the problems of state and nation will be in safe hands if Mr. Walcott is elected. Connecticut's welfare can not be advanced by sending a representative of a minority party.

MUCH MORE SENSIBLE

Putting out in his monoplane, Yankee Doodle, and a pilot, Harry Tucker, on his way to the Pacific coast, has cut for a record on the east-west non-stop flight and in his undertaking will make a greater distance than as if he had tried a flight across the Atlantic.

He sets out confident of success, so much so that Captain Collyer, the pilot, declares that they'll get there in record breaking time or not at all for they have taken only enough gasoline for 54 hours, or nearly three hours under the existing record. In view of the fact that the existing record was made five years ago it doesn't seem extravagant claim.

What does stand out as particularly impressive is the fact that this nonstop test is being made over land instead of over the Atlantic. If they can reach Los Angeles in the time believed they could certainly get across the ocean, but there would be no greater skill, no greater endurance, no better performance on the part of the machine. It is much better that long distance flights be undertaken over land until it can be demonstrated that men and machine are fit to face the uncertainties that exist over the ocean.

If for any reason defects develop in the Yankee Doodle, the engine goes wrong or a gas pipe leaks it is possible to land with a reasonable degree of safety. Not so on the ocean. The plane that is forced down there finds a grave gets. Even a seaplane is hardly as favorable a position as the monoplane that is flying over land. It is all well and good to think of flying away in fruitless attempts at flying across the ocean, but it accomplishes nothing. It is a display of the wrong type of courage. All that would be gained through a successful flight, except possibly the publicity, can be gotten by cross country flying which makes landing possible in case of trouble.

A SHAM BATTLE

In his western speech Charles E. Hughes, in dealing with the question of prohibition, declared it was a sham battle that Candidate Smith is waging. The manner in which he is playing the wets of the east and north with the drys of the south he did not regard as a very creditable enterprise.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, democrat and claiming to be one of the dryest of drys, reminded an audience in Richmond this week that he was the author of the dry plank in the democratic platform adopted at Houston. He certainly spent a hectic day and night until the hearing was over and the plank adopted. Speaking in regard to the party announcement which Candidate Smith has overstepped, Senator Glass insisted: "This is a government of party responsibility. His (Smith's) personal views don't amount to a snap if the party and platform are for prohibition. It would be necessary to have two thirds of the votes in both houses (of congress) simultaneously to repeal the 18th amendment. When can that be gotten? Not till Gabriel blows his horn."

Thus the dry senator from Virginia and a democrat representing southern sentiment, practically says what Mr. Hughes says when he calls the Smith attack upon prohibition a sham battle. It can't get anywhere. The south which is expected to and may back Smith isn't going to stand with him on prohibition now or after election.

That backs up just what Mr. Hughes says when he points out that insistent opposition would block insistent demands for changes in the amendment on law and adds "we should have much agitation, more confusion, increased demoralization and no better, but I think, less actual enforcement."

Carter Glass upholds by his words Charles E. Hughes' point that the prohibition issue is a sham battle.

HOOVER'S STRONG LEAD

As another week passes and the additional votes are recorded in the Literary Digest's poll "Hoover is shown holding his strong lead over Smith in the semi-final returns." This continues to show him with a lead in 44 of the states, the four that are giving Smith a majority being Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina.

It was this week that a democratic committeeman was deploring the outlook in Florida. His words indicated a feeling that it was going republican. He was crying for increased democratic activity. That he had reason for it seems to be displayed by the Digest's Florida vote which shows but of a total of more than 26,000 votes an almost two to one lead for Hoover.

In Massachusetts the figures show a lead for Hoover of two to one. In Connecticut it is nearly two and a half to one, while Rhode Island presents a vote of better than two to one. The state of New York continues to give Hoover a majority and in New York city Hoover is running well against Smith. The total vote of the poll 1,717,041 for Hoover and 911,836 for Smith shows nearly a two to one national lead, and the value of the poll gets strength from the Maine figures where the recent election showed a republican lead of three to one and where the poll is giving three times as many votes to Hoover as to Smith.

NAVY DAY

Saturday is to be Navy day, the anniversary on which should stimulate more thought in regard to our first line of defense. In spite of the general demand for peace there cannot be overlooked the fact that we must be prepared to protect ourselves against emergencies. Probably there is nothing that operates more successfully in behalf of peace. This doesn't imply that we should plunge into naval expenditures just for the sake of providing a wonderful fighting machine, but we should maintain such a machine as corresponds to the nation's needs and see that it is kept in fit condition. The importance of having a faithful and efficient watchdog cannot be overlooked.

On Navy day, naval stations, ships and yards are thrown open for the benefit of the public in order that there may be a closer acquaintance with what is being done and the manner in which we are doing it.

The submarine base on the Thames will welcome visitors Saturday, and there is an opportunity thus afforded for those within a reasonable distance to get a close up of that always interesting and active submarine center. Because of the base this part of Connecticut is particularly interested in submarines and navy day affords the chance to satisfy that oft repeated desire to know more about them. They have a story to tell there that all who can should hear.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Boston is recalling the wild enthusiasm in that city when it was once visited by Bryan.

There are certain well defined indications that even New York city thinks well of Herbert Hoover.

When cider mills are experiencing a shortage of apples someone ought to be able to furnish a substitute.

The man on the corner says: Have you participated in any of the freak bets that are usually made before national elections?

Candidate Smith wants to change the federal system of bookkeeping because he cannot understand it. That offers no argument for giving him the chance.

The man who is best equipped to handle the ship of state is the one wanted as the next president, and when that test is made Mr. Hoover stands far in the lead.

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

Chubby Dr. Angelo Storzoni knew not a word of Yiddish, or he would have told Mrs. Yinskopf how very tired he was. Instead, he just mopped his brow and said "Whew!" a couple of times as he came in the door. And soon it followed that he was tired, for it got that he had been up half the night, forgot even that he had not more than an hour ago pulled little Antonia Benuto through just such a crisis as now faced the delirious child on the shabby cot before him.

Outside the door of the dingy fourth-floor flat where the portals of the house of Benuto faced those of the family Yinskopf, across an ill-lighted corridor, there was a flaming red sign. Next to the Benuto door was another. Both signs bore the terrifying legend: "Scarlet Fever; Keep Out."

Antonia Benuto and Rosa Yinskopf had been playmates, which explained why there were two signs. Antonia had come down just the day before Rosa. Soon the visits of the rotund Dr. Storzoni were regular occasions on the fourth floor. Tonight had come the decisive hour in Antonia's fight for life, ending after a hard struggle, in victory. She had fallen quietly asleep and then had come Mr. Yinskopf's timid knock, a flood of incomprehensible language, a mute appeal which Dr. Storzoni understood.

No nurses relieving each other with mechanical promptness, no hospital equipment, no opportunities for more than the crudest attempts at hygiene—Dr. Storzoni didn't even think of these things. He was his own corps of nurses, his own hospital assistants. When he lacked equipment, he improvised.

Gently he removed the thermometer from the girl's parched mouth, gainced at it, pursed his lips. He signed to Mrs. Yinskopf for water, and she left off wringing her hands and got him some. The child, semi-conscious, accepted a drink and groaned as she sank back on the pillow.

"It's just a matter of waiting," said Dr. Storzoni. Mrs. Yinskopf nodded, exactly as if she understood.

And so they waited. The clock ticked, and the child moaned and the mother sobbed, and the doctor mopped his brow at almost regular intervals, and said "Whew!" Mrs. Yinskopf was in and out of the room intermittently.

There were a few moments when the doctor thought, in passing flashes, of himself. Why was he here, anyway? What were this woman and this life on the bed to him? What fame or glory was there in it all for him? What had there ever been in any of his work? Once he had thought—he started in counting respirations again.

Dawn was just discernible through the grimy tenement window when Rosa first began to breathe naturally again. The fever was abating. Dr. Storzoni, her wrist in his big dimpled fist, looked over at the wizened, worn-out mother. And again the two understood each other.

Wearily, the doctor folded his stethoscope and tucked it into its place in his worn black bag. Carefully he washed his hands in a tin basin. For a moment or two he sat in Mrs. Yinskopf's kitchen, while she busied about with dishes and pots and pans. He was almost too tired to sit. He wished to goodness he could speak to the woman, but she knew no English and he was helpless in her tongue.

Suddenly he became aware that he was very hungry. Of course, he had eaten nothing since dinner time and now it was almost his usual time for breakfast. And he had been up all night. Well, it was all in the game. He was hungry. And what was that odor—it made him hungrier! It seemed to emanate from where Mrs. Yinskopf was fussing with the pots and pans, and to permeate everything. He rose to go. Rosa's mother looked at him, shook her head. Did she mean she couldn't pay him? Well, he was used to that. No, apparently she wanted him to stay, to remain seated a few moments.

He sat down again. Swiftly she placed before him a knife, a fork, a dish. Then she took from the oven a sort of coffee cake; he could see clear across the room that it was filled with apples and raisins. It smelled awfully good.

She put the cake down before him. When on earth had she had time to make it? Her eyes smiled at him. He picked up a fork, and tasted a bit gingerly.

"Yum," said Dr. Storzoni in a language every housewife understands.—Exchange.

REDUCING THE DANGER OF THE BABY'S BOTTLE

By George M. Relan, M. D., Syracuse, N. Y.

There is an established idea that bottle feeding is dangerous. In fact a few years ago we were told that four bottle fed babies die devery time one breast fed baby died. This ratio no longer exists, although there are no statistics available to prove this statement. Bottle feeding is perfectly safe if carried on under a doctor's supervision and if the mother is careful regarding her technique.

Years ago before the advent of the children's specialist the important duty of directing the baby's feedings was left to the grandmother. This is no longer a practice of wise mothers, as they realize that the task requires specialized knowledge and skill and that a physician's advice is necessary. During the last ten years there has been a great advancement in our knowledge of nutrition and of infant feeding and of the prevention and cure of nutritional diseases. Today the aim of the children's specialist is not only to nourish the baby, but to prevent certain nutritional diseases such as rickets and scurvey and to build a strong and vigorous child.

Strong healthy and vigorous babies cannot be developed in a haphazard way be a set of mormulas taken from boo kor pamphlet. No mother sufficiently well versed in nutrition to carry on this important duty without skilled guidance.

Only today I saw in my office a baby who illustrates this problem. He was brought to me because, in learning to walk, one foot was badly rotated outward. This was due to relaxation of ligaments of the hip joint from rickets. The mother had fed the baby from a book for formulas and had given him cod liver oil. She was very much surprised that the cod liver oil had not prevented the rickets. This would have been entirely prevented by proper care and feeding. Cod liver oil will prevent rickets in some babies.

The doctor should carefully select milk used for feedings. The best milk for this the is certified milk which is a safe and standardized product. If this is not available grade A pasteurized milk is permissible. If neither of these milks can be obtained, one of the powdered milks on the market has been found useful.

Cow's milk requires special care. It should not be allowed to stand on the doorstep where the sun will warm it and cause the bacteria that are present in the milk to multiply. It should be placed on the ice immediately when delivered and remain there until the formula is made.

In preparing a formula, all nipples, bottles and utensils should be boiled. The entire days formula should be prepared at one time. The water used in diluting the milk should be boiled and cooled. The sugar should be dissolved in the measured quantity of boiled water, after thoroughly added to make the formula. The formula should then be poured into separate nursing bottles. These bottles are covered with rubber caps or absorbent cotton and placed on the ice. The nipples may be kept in a sterile covered fruit jar, or in a solution of boric acid.

Breast feeding still remains the ideal feeding and should be carried out whenever possible. If bottle feeding is necessary, it can safely and successfully be carried out.

A Washington Bystander

By EDWIN L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25—Further investigation of the hullabaloo in the papers about what "career" diplomats are going to do when the administration changes in March has satisfied the bystander that it was a tempest in a teapot.

It does not make any difference what they do or fail to do about tendering their resignations. If the new president does not want to continue them in their posts no action of theirs toward withholding out their resignations could keep them from being ousted in favor of new appointees.

And as the Bystander listens to have had fairly intimate acquaintance with quite a number of the score or so men involved, he is satisfied that they have never considered any such step jointly or severally.

Diplomats Status.

Every diplomat goes to a post abroad, even after his appointment has been confirmed by the senate, with the understanding that his resignation always is available on the president's desk if requested. He is subject to a call home at any time, and if the president merely elected to send the name of another man for the post to the senate and if it was confirmed, the recalled diplomat would be out of a job regardless of whether he had tendered a resignation or not.

Senior men of the foreign service in Washington, now in charge of its personnel administration, hold the situation of the career diplomats in that regard to be the same as that of political appointees.

The suggestion that these career men might withhold their resignations in order to bring up the question of any special status they might or might not have recalls the incident at the close of the Wilson administration when Ray Baker of Nevada stuck to his job as director of the mint despite the fact that she was a democratic appointee and President Harding was known to have a republican friend to whom he would like to hand over the berth.

Baker remained mint director until 1923. His appointment, however, made by President Wilson in 1917, was for a stated term of five years. There was at least a question as to presidential power to oust him except for cause, and Baker hardly enjoyed the embarrassment his refusal to clear out voluntarily before his term expired caused the job distributing machinery of the new administration. That was quite a different question from the status of diplomats, however, who receive their appointments for unstated terms.

Kellogg's Lapsus Linguae.

Incidentally, the fuss about the status of career diplomats put Secretary Kellogg in an embarrassing position. He was asked for his view as to the requirement on career ministers or ambassadors to submit resignations at the end of a presidential term. He answered in effect that he proposed to submit his own resignation at the end of the term, but what he intended to say was that he had offered his resignation as ambassador to London when the Harding administration filled out by President Coolidge expired and President Coolidge took office in his own name.

Since it is no secret that Kellogg does not expect and is not angling for reappointment as secretary of state in the event of a Hoover victory in November, the slip of the tongue made good news copy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Smith Couldn't Help Much

Mr. Editor: I have read the letter in your column with reference to prohibition and would like to stae my view-point on this matter at this time.

The letter advocates that we vote for the party in favor of prohibition. Why, may I ask? Has prohibition made such great strides towards righteousness and lawful living? I fail to see where it has. They have been trying for the past ten years to enforce prohibition; perhaps they haven't had time enough to obtain results as yet. Have they stopped very many habitual drinkers from drinking by closing the saloons? Before prohibition a man, and, in rare cases, a woman, who was cursed with the liquor habit, drank and in many instances deprived a family of proper food and shelter. Since prohibition, has the condition changed? Hardly! Surely anyone with ordinary intelligence can see that the same condition exists today with the added evil that a great many more women drink as well as young boys and girls. Conditions as they exist today, in my opinion are far worse. It has made disloyal Americans out of many who have discovered that they can manufacture a concoction which those in search of liquor will buy at any price, and that is one reason why these "manufacturers" will vote for prohibition. In my estimation, there have been more deaths from liquor, more arrests and accidents from drunken driving, more dissipation and immorality than was ever heard of before prohibition.

Personally, I am not in favor of the return of the saloons, but I do think a modification of the Volstead act would help a great deal if liquor is going to be manufactured and it does seem as though some people are being kept busy along that line, why not turn it into an industry that will be taxed just as other lines of manufacture are taxed? Or, is it possible that the fines paid for violating the Volstead act bring in larger sums than would a tax levied on the manufacture of liquor as a legitimate business?

I do not think that by voting for Governor Smith it will change conditions a great deal because the president has very little to do in making the laws. For example, the 18th amendment was passed during President Wilson's administration and he was not in favor of it. But I certainly am not going to vote for a party that cannot see that prohibition has done more harm than it has good.

Stories That Recall Others

Sounds Reasonable

Tommy, who has spent most of his life in the city, visited his uncle who has a farm. One day he went to the barn to watch his rural relative hitch up the horses.

"What's that horse's name?" he asked.

"Flora," his uncle answered.

"How old is she?"

"Eight years old."

"Why, I'm eight, too, said Tommy. "Flora is eight and I'm eight. Say, she's pretty big for her age, isn't she?"

Forbidden Fruit

The other day three little boys, the oldest only eight years old, were not permitted to eat all the corn-on-the cob their young appetites craved. The next day the father went into the cornfield to get some roasting ears for dinner. In the part of the field the farthest from the house he found a small pile of corn cobs from which the corn had been eaten recently. Investigation revealed that his young sons with the assistance of a few neighbor boys, had satisfied their desire for their favorite vegetable by eating the corn raw.

"Did you say 'we,' my dear?" inquired Jerry

Jerry Muskrat Goes to Work

Work, I do not mind confessing,
Is to me life's greatest blessing.
—Jerry Muskrat

While Jimmy Skunk had been having his adventures, Jerry and Mrs. Muskrat had been waiting for the water to go down, so that they could get back to their homes—Mrs. Muskrat to that hole in the bank and Jerry, to his new house. The very day after their adventure with Reddy Fox in the carrot patch the water had dropped enough for Jerry to sit on the top of his house once more. Perhaps you can guess how anxiously Jerry inspected that house. He dived and swam around it. He went inside, but the water still filled the room inside, so he couldn't stay there. When at last he once more returned to the roof it was with a feeling of great relief.

"It isn't hurt a bit," said Jerry, talking to himself. "I didn't know but that part of it would be swept away. It's all here and all I've got to do is to finish it up. I said it was going to be the biggest house I have ever built, and so it is. My, I hope this water will go down fast now. I'll have to go over and sleep in the house in the bank tonight."

So Jerry swam over to where Mrs. Muskrat was already established in the hole in the bank. It was still pretty wet inside, for the water had been clear way up to their bedroom. Their bed was all wet. But Jerry and Mrs. Muskrat didn't mind. You see, they have waterproof coats. So they weren't damp, and not being damp, they were not cold.

The next morning Jerry discovered that the water had fallen very much. He could hardly wait to eat breakfast before going over to his new house in the Smiling Pool. When he got there he found that he could now get inside without being in the water. This was a great relief and Jerry at once resumed work. He began on the roof. The flood had brought down a great deal of trash. There were bushes and branches along the bank that had been washed down from up above. Jerry got some of these and used them to build up his roof. Then he filled them in with grass and rushes and a little bit of mud. After he had worked at this a while he went back inside. There he found that all the new stuff he had put on his roof had crushed the roof in and there wasn't room enough to sit upright. There wasn't even room to squat comfortably. So then Jerry went to work with those sharp teeth of his. He cut away and cut away and cut away inside until finally he once more had a nice big room.

It was about this time that Mrs. Muskrat arrived. She inspected all the work Jerry had done. He hoped she would say some nice things about it, but she didn't. But neither did she say any bad things about it. She sniffed a little here and sniffed a little there and turned up her nose at this and turned up her nose at that. But Jerry noticed that she seemed in no hurry to go back to the hole in the bank. By and by Jerry got ready to go to work on the roof outside again. Mrs. Muskrat remained inside. Jerry became so busy that he forgot all about Mrs. Muskrat. He brought material to pile on the roof and tucked it into place and worked as only Jerry Muskrat can work. He forgot all about Mrs. Muskrat. Finally Jerry went inside, expecting to have to cut away some more. Much to his surprise, he found that the room was quite all right. The roof hadn't settled a bit. You see, Mrs. Muskrat had been busy. She had used her sharp teeth to cut it away as fast as the roof settled.

"We'll have a very nice house here," said Mrs. Muskrat. "I think we'll spend one of the best winters we have ever experienced."

"Did you say 'we,' my dear?" inquired Jerry.

"Certainly, I said 'we,'" was Mrs. Muskrat's prompt response. "Isn't this our house?"

"Certainly. Of course," replied Jerry somewhat hastily, and there was a funny expression on his face and he hastened off to get another load of material.

DISCOVERY OF METHOD OF OVERCOMING GRAVITY?

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 25—(AP)—Cable dispatches telling of a demonstration given by a young London scientist of his discovery of a method of overcoming gravity, were read with added interest here today, after a similar demonstration had been given by Dr. Sergius P. Grace, vice-president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc., New York.

The experiment was given in the office of Evelyn P. Harris, public relations representative of the Southern Bell Telephone company.

Dr. Grace made it clear that he did not wish in any manner to detract from the claims of the English scientist, but merely called attention to the fact that he could duplicate the experiment—as described in the dispatches—with apparatus brought here for demonstration during his address next Monday evening before the regional convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Dr. Grace used in his private demonstration a piece of cobalt steel about four inches long and about one-fourth of an inch square. This he held above a similar piece of the metal encased in a wooden block. He then released his hold on the heavy metal and it remained in the air.

The scientist smiled at the amazement of his audience of two.

"You see," he explained, "gravity humbled before science. Cobalt steel is capable of super-magnetization. These super-magnetized pieces of cobalt steel have been placed with the positive pole of one over the positive pole of the other. The natural repulsion causes the upper bar to remain suspended."

Reversing the ends of the upper bar, Dr. Grace caused it to adhere closely to the wooden block encasing the lower bar, showing how great was the attraction with the poles reversed.

The scientist asserted that science, for all its advancement, has not yet determined what caused the historic apple to afil from the tree and bump Sir Isaac Newton on the head.

"We frankly do not know what gravity is," he said.

RUSSIANS AND ESKIMOS CUT OFF FROM WORLD

LAURENCE BAY, Siberia, Oct. 25—(AP)—How to get food to five Russians and fifty-five Eskimos who have been cut off from the world on Wrangel Island since 1926 is causing much worry here.

The steamer Stavropol, assigned to carry the colony a three-year supply of food, fuel and medicine, failed to break through the ice and recently returned.

Orders have come from Premier Rykoff that other measures must be taken to reach the island, since help next summer might be too late. An airplane that set out on the same mission as the ship also was compelled to return.

The expedition now on the island represents an attempt by the soviet government to strengthen their claim to the island which is described as almost barren of vegetatio neave for lichens and the like. Game is said to be even scarcer than in some other arctic regions. The island is 110 miles north of Siberia.

COLLEGE PRESIDENTS GUESTS UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT

BURLINGTON, Vt., Oct. 25.—(AP)—Eight college presidents, guests of the University of Vermont, arrived here today to attend the 70th annual conference of the Association of Colleges in New England.

President Guy W. Bailey, of the University of Vermont was host to the visiting presidents. Private sessions will be held to discuss reports of the many phases of college activities and problems.

The following college and university presidents were attending: A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard; Daniel L. Marsh, of Boston university; Arthur Stanley Pease, of Amherst; Kenneth Charles Morton Sills, of Bowdoin; Remsen Brinkerhoff Ogilby, of Trinity; James Lukens McConaughy, of Wesleyan; Harry A. Garfield, of Williams and Guy W. Bailey, of Vermont.

The topic of the mid-week meeting at Trinity Methodist church, led by Rev. Joseph Cooper, the pastor, was "Christ's Teachings on Righteousness."

HEARING PAINTER'S SUIT FOR DAMAGES OF $5,000

Trial was begun Thursday afternoon in the $5,000 auto-negligence suit brought by Amos Smith of New London against Floyd Conklin of Groton, in the superior court in New London before Judge John Richards Booth.

Smith claims that while he was walking along the highway in Poquonoc road about midway between Trails Corners and the Mux Pollock mill on Jan. 2, 1927, he was struck by an automobile owned by the defendant and driven by his agent.

He claims that as result of the accident he received serious injuries to his back and lost many weeks work as a house painter, at which he earned between $30 and $35 a week.

FUNERALS

Mrs. M. V. Murphy

People from New York, New Haven, Saybrook, Hartford, New London and other places were numbered in the large attendance at the funeral of Mrs. M. V. Murphy, held Thursday morning at 8:15 o'clock at her home, No. 343 Main street. There was a solemn high requiem mass at St. Mary's Memorial church at 9 o'clock. Rev. William A. Keefe was celebrant of the mass, Rev. Myles P. Galvin was the deacon and Rev. Frederick M. Coholan was the sub-deacon. Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May was seated in the sanctuary.

Mrs. M. J. Farrell presided at the organ and Miss Josie Hartie and Horace F. Corning sang, Miss Hartie sang Pie Jesu at the offertory and at the recessional Mr. Corning sang The Priceless Love of Jesus. As the waiting hymn Mr. Corning sang Lead, Kindly Light and Chopin's Funeral March was rendered at the processional.

Burial was in the family plot at St. Mary's cemetery and Rev. Fr. Keefe conducted the committal service. The bearers were Dr. Francis J. Harper, John Burke, John Hartie and John Welch of this city, and Owen and Margo O'Neill of New London. The Catholic Woman's club of St. Patrick's parish, of which Mrs. Murphy was a member, attended in a body. There was a wealth of very beautiful floral tributes. Undertakers Cummings and Ring had charge of the funeral arrangements.

WEDDINGS

Jensen-Fields

At the rectory of St. Patrick's church Thursday morning at 10 o'clock Miss Arline Grace Fields of No. 5 Huntington place, daughter of the late Samuel and Jane Fields, and Carl Edmond Jensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nils Jensen of No. 37 Sunnyside avenue, were united in marriage by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May. Miss Laura Jane Fields of New Haven, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid and Harold Jensen, brother of the groom, was the best man.

The bride's gown was of blue transparent velvet with metallic and chiffon trimmings and she carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Her bridesmaid was gowned in blue chiffon, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. After the wedding ceremony there was a breakfast at the Mohican hotel, New London, and later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Jensen left for a wedding trip. On their return they will reside in a newly furnished home at No. 40 Sunnyside avenue. The bride's traveling costume was a tan crepe romaine gown and tan coat with fur trimmings. The couple have the best wishes of their numerous friends for a happy and prosperous future.

Poisoned by Wine

Some people think that all wine is poisonous, but occasionally wine may contain a poison other than alcohol. Such an instance came to the attention of the Connecticut state department of health not long ago. In this case the wine contained lead presumably dissolved from a rubber tube through which the wine had been siphoned. The amount of lead was small, only 0.7 part per million, but nevertheless definite symptoms of lead poisoning occurred in the man drinking the wine. The department comments on the case because of the infrequency of lead poisoning from drinking wine.

The man reports having consumed about 20 gallons of wine since last fall. This amount of wine would contain approximately one grain of lead, but since the man has been using the same rubber tube to siphon his wine for the past six or seven years the total consumption of lead during that time would be considerably more.

COLCHESTED MAN WAS BATTERED IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 25—(AP)—Battered on the head with a coffee pot during a fight at 6 o'clock this evening, with John Kostsky, 44, of Clover Hill avenue, Peter Okunuk, 36, of Colchester, is in St. Vincent's hospital under observation for a possible fracture of the skull. Both men are under arrest charged with assault and breach of the peace with bonds set at $1,000 in each case. The battle occurred at Kostsky's house where Okunuk was a visitor. An argument started and Okunuk is alleged to have grabbed Kostsky by the throat and the latter is declared to have grabbed a coffee pot and beaten Okunuk on the head with it.

The speech will be broadcast at 9 o'clock, eastern standard time, immediately after the Philadelphia speech of Governor Smith, over 24 stations including: WICO, Bridgeport; WNAC, Boston; and WMAF South Dartmouth, Mass.

LIQUOR RAIDS COVER TERRITORY FROM LISBON NORTHERLY TO THOMPSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 25—A veritable flying wedge of state officers crashed the front line trenches of alleged bootleggers from Lisbon, down in New London county, to near the Massachusetts state line in Thompson this afternoon and tonight, and as a consequence of their activities there will be appearances in town, city and justice court within the next few days beginning Friday morning of upwards of a score of men and women, who will be charged with actual sales of liquor, contrary to law, keeping with intent to sell, operating stills and what not.

While not in the least spectacular the raids aggregate the biggest round-up of alleged violators of prohibition laws that eastern Connecticut has known since the Volstead act went into effect.

It is apparent that the raids followed long and careful preparation along the line of getting evidence through secret agents in the way of sales and keeping with intent to sell against various and sundry citizens of towns up and down the line from Lisbon to Thompson. The fact that actual sales will be charged in court seems to indicate beyond a doubt that agents of the state police department have been busy for a long time, shaping up the denouement that came today.

Made Great Clean-up

Consternation reigned up and down the Quinebaug valley tonight in circles supposed to be engaged in illicit liquor selling. The raids today and tonight affected homes, filling stations, shoe stores, drug stores, hotels and even farms. It appears on the face of the arrests and summons to court to amount to the greatest cleanup of all time in northeastern Connecticut.

Nearly a score of state officers, a squad of them from barracks other than the one at Danielson, participated in the great fall roundup. In civilian clothes the state officers set forth from Danielson in automobiles and descended almost simultaneously on their objectives in the various towns involved in the operations. That was like what might be compared to a major action on the western front in the days of the World war. It got away unheralded and unnoticed, but was none the less effective. All through the late afternoon of today and this evening cars were rolling into the state police barracks here with loads of beer, so-called liquor, wine and stills that had been seized and the indications were that it would be midnight before the last of the returns are in.

The casualty list at an early hour this evening was as follows:

Killingly

Honore Lemery, 41 Mechanic street, Danielson, quantity of liquor seized, arrested, charged with selling and keeping with intent to sell; Mrs. Ogena Bouselliel, 29 Mechanic street, Danielson and Irene Breault, her daughter, same address, arrested, charged with keeping and actual sale; Bella Robillard, Lewis boulevard, Danielson, sale and keeping with intent to sell, arrested; Narciase Laprise, Elmville, arrested, charged with sale and keeping with intent to sell, second offense; Albert Stebbine, Danielson, sale and keeping with intent to sell; W. W. Murphy, Dayville, sale and keeping with intent to sell; Joseph St. Claire, South Killingly, seizure of much beer in a raid and charged with selling and keeping with intent to sell; Arthur Edwards, Elmville, being sought by officers tonight to be charged with sale and keeping with intent to sell. Edwards occupies a part of the same house as Narciase LaFrise.

Plainfield

Raid at Henry Lamoureaux store Moosup, Henry Amidon, arrested, sale and keeping with intent to sell; Edmond L. Mercier drug store, Isadore Mercier, brother of the proprietor and Arthur Gilleau, a clerk, arested, both charged with selling and keeping with intent to sell. The entire liquor stock of this store was seized; Homer Hebert's filling station, Plainfield, raided and his brother, Philip, arrested, sale and keeping with intent to tell, quantity of alcohol seized; Joseph Schwitzer, farm in Flat Rock district, large seizure of wine and other intoxicants. Schwitzer arrested, charged on four counts; Valmore Auger, sale and keeping with intent to sell; Mrs. Frederick Cardinal, arrested charged with sale and intent to sell; seizure of a still in operation and alleged moonshine; Joseph Stankowich, charged with sales and keeping with intent to sell.

Lisbon

Arthur Fagnant, proprietor of filling station, charged with keeping with intent to sell, second offense; Donais Fagnant, his son, charged with actual sale, $1,000 bond for Arthur Fagnant and $500 bond for Donais Fagnan.

Putnam

Eugene Rayno, Church and Providence streets, Joseph Rayno, arrested, large seizure of beer, charged with sale and keeping with intent to sell. Joseph King, beer seizure, charged with sale and keeping with intent to sell. Alfred Bardier, Putnam, seizure of liquor and beer; Peter Murray, 103 Arch street, Putnam, charge of sale and keeping with intent to sell.

Thompson

Sophie Condos at store in Quinebaug, arrested charged with a sale; Stanley Yezestercz, sale and keeping with intent to sell, arrested; Leonard Mantell, arrested at store in North Grosvenordale, charged with sale and keeping with intent to sell; Mrs. Odina St. Germaine arrested, charged with sale and keeping with intent to sell.

The accused are out under bonds, ranging from $300 to $500.

TRINITY MEN'S CLUB HEARS THREE SPEAKERS

The Men's club of Trinity Episcopal church held its first meeting of the fall season Thursday evening at the church social rooms with a good sized attendance. The meeting opened at 6:30 o'clock with a supper after which President Walter E. Gilbert presented Judge Arthur F. Libby who spoke on the present presidential campaign. Judge Libby spoke in a general way of the campaign from both republican and democratic viewpoints. He said there was practically no issue between either party.

Rev. J. Eldred Brown, rector of the church, gave an interesting talk on the action of the general convention of the Episcopal church and Dr. Edward Rowland of the Norwich State hospital staff spoke on the subject of How to Make a Men's Club Successful. E. B. Floyd also addressed the meeting.

The meeting adopted a resolution that a committee be appointed to arrange an entertainment for the patients at Uncas-On-Thames. Adjournment was taken about 8:30 o'clock.

INSTRUCTIVE TALK BEFORE MENTAL HYGIENE SOCIETY

In the absence of Miss Hester Crutcher, the assistant secretary of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, Miss Bliss gave the third in the series of weekly talks Thursday afternoon at the Wauregan hotel before the Norwich Society for Mental Hygiene on "About Ourselves — Becoming Adults." The period of adolescence is one of stress and strain in the life of the individual, she said. It arrives sometime quite suddenly. The wise parent will have helped make gradual preparation for this, so that some of the mental and spiritual conflicts on the part of the boy or girl may be avoided. The manifestations of this period, both physical and emotional, are not peculiar and individual, as he or she generally supposes and as most adults have forgotten. In his intellectual and social life and in his contacts with the opposite sex, which should be encouraged until the end of adolescence at about 18 years, the maturing boy and girl need most understanding and sympathetic help from teacher, parents and family.

RULES AGAINST CLAIM FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

A workman's compensation claim on the grounds of hernia has just been disallowed and dismissed by Commissioner Albert L. Bailey in the case of Thurston Maurice Engstrom of Mystic against Sadonia Mills, Inc., of that place. The commissioner has withheld his decision for some time awaiting a decision in a similar claim by the supreme court and now makes his decision in line with the supreme court ruling on a hernia claim.

On Aug. 3, last, Engstrom while working at the Mystic plant, received a strain in his left groin. It later developed that he had to undergo an operation for hernia, which he did. He made a claim for compensation, doctor's and hospital bills which was denied him.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF DRIVING UNDER INFLUENCE

Frank B. Stanley, 48, of North Stonington was brought here to police headquarters Thursday night by state Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh who charged the man with operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor.

Stanley was locked up and is to be presented before a justice's court in Preston.

Joker Friends at Work

Miss Theresa Le Roux stated Thursday evening that there had been no formal party at her home last Tuesday evening with guests from Los Angeles and Chicago, as was reported, but somebody added a joke was evidently to enlarge a simple social affair into something of large importance.

GOTTHELF STORE SOLD TO MAX SILVERMAN

The B. Gottheif company of 100 Main street, millinery and ladies' furnishing, has just been sold by Charles M. Hutzler to Max Silverman of Fleischmans, N. Y., who will continue the business.

This is one of the oldest established stores in the city, having been founded over 50 years ago by Moses Gottheif, but for the last 36 years has been conducted by Charles M. Hutzler. The new owner is not to locate in this city since he has a number of other projects of a similar nature, but will have his local interests looked after by Miss Anna Counihan who has been associated with the firm for a number of years while it has been conducted by Mr. Hutzler. It is planned to remodel the building and put in a new stock of women's and children's wearing apparel.

Mr. Hutzler has no immediate business plans for the future.

RESERVED DECISION IN $3,000 SLANDER SUIT

After the attorneys made their arguments Thursday morning in the superior court at New London, Judge John Richards Booth reserved decision in the $3,000 damage and slander suit brought by Michael Levko, of Montville against Stephen Wisneski, also of that place. Attorneys Perry J. Hollandersky and Foster K. Sistare appeared for the plaintiff and Attorney George Curtis Morgan for the defendant.

Levko charged that Wisneski told Grand Juror William Smiddy that the plaintiff stole a keg containing 20 gallons of cider and that he was presented before Justice of the Peace J. Y. Miller with the result that he was acquitted. Levko claimed the statements of the defendant were false and malicious.

FORMER WESTERLY BARBER INJURED AT AMHERST

M. J. Major, 63, who has been a barber at Westerly but went to Amherst this fall when the college opened and has been employed in an Amherst barber shop, was severely burned at his rooming place this week by falling on a gas heater when he was overcome with gas.

He was shaving in the bath room which was heated with a gas burner. Apparently the gas was leaking and he became unconscious and fell across the heater, but his landlady heard him fall and when she found him unconscious summoned a doctor. Mr. Major was easily revived but he was burned about the body and right arm.

Cadets Will Be Reviewed

Norwich people attending the Yale-West Point football game in New Haven Saturday will have opportunity to see a review of the Cadets.

The West Point contingent will arrive at New Haven at 10.45 a. m. and 10:50 a. m. will march to the university grounds, being reviewed on the New Haven green by state, city and military officials. After lunching at the Yale dining hall the Corps will form at 12:50 p. m. and march to the Yale bowl.

Immediately after the game they will return to West Point, reaching home by 10:00 p. m.

New London Hi-Y Club

The New London Hi-Y club has elected James Morrisey of Bulkeley school for president, Barnard Colby of Chapman Tetch, vice president, Thos. R. N. Gardner of Bulkeley, secretary and S. Alvah Welt, Jr., of Norwich Free Academy treasurer.

The New London Hi-Y club is unique in its make-up, since it includes in its membership fellows from Bulkeley, Chapman Tech and Norwich Free Academy, and they not only come from New London, but the surrounding territory as well.

Thursday morning at 6 o'clock a month's mind high mass of requiem for Mrs. Joseph E. Ring was sung in St. Patrick's church by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May.

FEAR VOTING MACHINES WILL BE INSUFFICIENT

HARTFORD, Oct. 25—In anticipation of a poll of such proportions that the number of voting machines in several Connecticut towns and cities will be insufficient to care for the great number of voters, November 6, Deputy Attorney General Ernest L. Averill today gave an opinion that paper ballots shall be used in cases of necessity.

It was stated at the office of the attorney general today that a decision was also being prepared to determine at what time the voting has legally ended. This ruling, which will probably be issued tomorrow will answer the question as to whether voters who are in line at the time of the closing of the polls, but have not cast their ballot shall be allowed to do so after the allotted time has expired.

The decision given Wednesday was in answer to a request of State Representative George W. Simon of New London. The total registration in that city is 10,157, of which 2,339 are new voters this year. New London has 12 voting machines, which means that at the rate of one voter casting his ballot each minute, which is as fast as it is believed possible, only 8,640 voters, or 86 per cent. of the total could be accommodated.

Because of the proximity of the election date it has been impossible for New London to obtain more voting machines in time for their use, and the question has thus arisen as to how the voters are to be offered an opportunity to register their vote.

This situation is taken care of by statute, according to Mr. Averill's decision. Section 707 provides that if, owing to the number of candidates, or for any other reason it shall be found impracticable to use voting machines at any election, the board of selectmen are authorized to discontinue the use of such machines, and cause written ballots to be procured and used.

SEN. SIMMONS ANSWERS CRITICISM BY GOV. SMITH

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 25—(AP)—Senator F. M. Simmons, of North Carolina, in his second address of the campaign here tonight reiterated previous charges against Governor Alfred E. Smith, democratic nominee, and sharply answered criticism directed against him because of his opposition to the New Yorker.

"I will not vote for a man who repudiates the platform of the democratic party of North Carolina," said the senator, "and the platform on which he was nominated. And because I won't vote for him they say I am a republican, a bolter, a traitor, a Judas Iscariot and haven't got any sense.

"The present campaign," he declared "is a struggle to keep the democratic party from being swallowed by the Tammany tiger, reeking with corruption."

Senator Simmons asserted that Gov. Smith, "without saying a word about this living issue in the heart of every mother, every father, every son and daughter.

"It's a damnable thing," he added, "to say that a man's duty to his party is above his duty to his soul."

TRUCE BETWEEN ON LEONG AND HIP SING TONGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—A truce ending what was regarded as a war between the On Leong and Hip Sing tongs, was signed here today by representatives of both organizations, Dr. S. S. Young, Chinese consul-general, announced tonight.

A series of shootings in which four Chinese were killed and a dozen others wounded in this and other cities, Dr. Young said, was not a tong war but the result of private feuds among members of both tongs.

Tong representatives, he said, met at his office today and signed a document asserting that there had been a "misunderstanding" and urging Chinese in America not to be influenced by "alarming rumors" of tong warfare. The document, Dr. Young said, pledged the tongmen to maintain "peaceful pursuit of everyone's business as before."

SIX PERSONS KILLED WHEN FREIGHT STRUCK AUTO

FORSYTH, Mont., Oct. 25—(AP)—Mrs. Ralph Abbott, 50, assistant principal at the Howard Height school, ten miles west of Forsyth, and five school children, were killed and three others injured on their way home from school today when Mrs. Abbott's car, in which they were riding, was struck by a freight train at the Northern Pacific crossing at Howard.

The dead children were: Emory Abbott, 14; Richard Robinson, 8; Marguerite Virgin, 8; Mildred Simmons, 7, and Betty Lou Ferguson, 6.

STATIONS TO BROADCAST SMITH'S ADDRESS SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—Governor Smith's address at Philadelphia Saturday night will be broadcast starting at 8 o'clock (eastern time) over WEAF and a network of 35 stations including WEEI, Boston; WTIC, Hartford; WJAR, Providence; WTAG, Worcester, and WCSH, Portland, Me.

More stations may be added later, the National Broadcasting company said.

PROF. NICOLLE AWARDED NOBEL MEDICINE PRIZE

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 25—(AP)—The Nobel medicine prize for 1928 was awarded today to Prof. Charles Nicolle, director of the Pasteur institute at Tunis, in connection with his work to combat typhus fever.

BANKER PLINY JEWELL IS GREATLY IMPROVED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 25—(AP)—Pliny Jewel, Boston banker, one of seven injured in the crash of a Junkers airplane here last week, was reported today to be "greatly improved." Rumors that he had suffered a relapse were emphatically denied at the Atlantic City hospital.

MAJOR ELEVENS COMPLETE HARD DRILLS FOR SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—Players who already have written their names across the pages of football history came to the forefront today as the east's major college eleven completed intensive work for the next general gridiron skirmish on Saturday.

Chris Cagle, agile Army halfback, broke loose for a 35 yard run and touchdown against the scrubs as the cadets scrimmaged for the last time before the Yale game. At Yale, Mal Stevens stressed fundamentals, but work on the forward pass was not neglected. Both the Cadets and Eli have had trouble with their kicking game, Murrell, Army fullback, however, showed a return to form in punting, but Yale coaches failed to enthuse over the work of any of the bull dog kicks today.

"Short," Crawford, on the freshman squad four years ago but ineligible thereafter until this season, was at quarterback in a surprising shift at Harvard. Putnam and Gilligan who have been at that position since the season opened were shunted to the "B" and "C" squads although Arnold Horween declined to say whether he intended to start Crawford against Dartmouth. Al Marsters, Dartmouth's crack running back, was in old-time form as the Indians put the finishing touches to their preparations for the Crimson game. Marsters apparently has completely recovered from the injury that kept him out of the Columbia battle but his companion in the backfield, Fred Breithut, is suffering from an injured ankle and may not get into Saturday's game.

Captain Al Lassman, Giant New York university tackle, was in his greatest form as the varsity swept through the scrubs at the Yankee stadium. The way Lassman was opening up wide holes in the scrub line through which Strong and O'Herlihy dashed for long gains, indicated that Colgate will be hard put to hold the Violet scoreless as the up-staters did last year. Colgate left Hamilton hoping to stop Ken Strong.

A Cornell squad of 36 left Ithaca for Princeton tonight after a brief signal drill on a wet field. Princeton's workout consisted of a long dummy scrimmage and passing drill.

Pennsylvania's first string team was back on the field for a mock scrimmage in preparation for the Navy battle. The varsity had been sent to the sidelines on Wednesday for failing to score against the scrubs. Rain and cold weather forced the Midshipmen to abandon a scheduled scrimmage at Annapolis.

After a brief workout in which placement kicking was stressed, Syracuse entrained for Penn State eager to avenge the 9-6 defeat the Orange suffered at State College last year. Hugo Bezdek apparently is going to start practically a new lineup against Syracuse. Defeats at the hands of Bucknell and Penn forced the Nittany Lions' mentor to do something.

Light signal drills were all that disturbed the warriors of Pitt and Carnegie Tech who meet in their annual battle for the city championship of Pittsburgh.

Fordham, which tackles Washington and Jefferson next, had its passing attack working on all cylinders. Larry Dallaire, sophomore quarterback, threw only three passes but all of them resulted in varsity scores.

West Virginia's squad left Morgantown for Easton, Pa., where the powerful Lafayette eleven will be encountered. Larue, counted on to replace the injured Eddie Stumpp, star halfback, may not be able to start against the Leopards. Larue is suffering from boils and an infected toe.

Just now the number of prisoners at Tolland county jail average 20, a larger number than for many months, although the majority were committed for minor offences.

Famous Drummer Of Shiloh

Maj. Gen. John J. Clem, 77 years old, the famous drummer boy of Shiloh, who was re-elected President of the Army of Cumberland at its annual reunion in Columbus, Ohio. Only 12 survivors of the famous army are living, but all averaging 84 years old, journeyed for their annual reunion.

SHARKIE AND GANS FEATURE FAST PASTIME A. C. AMATEUR CARD

Jackie Burns' amateur offering at the Olympia hall last night, although it did not draw a very large crowd gave the fans a very good card of bouts. Of the nine bouts five ended in knockouts and the others were full of action. Eddie Sharkey, the West Side lad, showing his first time in the local ring, and Baby Joe Gans, another local favorite, who has done some club fighting under the name of "Snooks" Lacy, turned in nice exhibitions, the former drawing with Young Daigalo of Norwich and the Baby winning over Young Monty.

Sharkey found Daigalo a hard boy to fight. The latter kept backing away and only lashed out with his rights when Eddie rushed in to make a fight of it. A five-pound difference in weight didn't seem to frighten Sharkey and he did about all the leading, although Daigalo was landing often with his wild swings. Both lads were very cautious in the first round, Sharkey waiting for Daigalo to come to him and the latter stepping back, content to wait for Sharkey to take the aggressive. The first round was even. Daigalo took the lead in the second and Sharkey came back in the third to gain the draw. Sharkey would look much better against a lad that will step up and fight with him. He has the makings of a good little fighter with the proper handling.

Baby Gans gave the fans an eyeful of clever fighting and showed them a good heady little fighter. The little dusky West Side lad has excellent footwork and all in all is a finished fighter. Little Johnny Monty, his opponent, put up a game battle and went tearing into Gans with his wild swings all the way through. But the latter, with a nice left swing, kept out of harm's way, and had no trouble winning the decision in a very interesting bout, which started the show off. Both weighed in at 110 pounds.

"Sheik" Guda of Montville, after having the shade in the first round, took one on the chin from Young Lewis of New London in the second and went down for the long count. The Montville "Sheik" tipped the scales at 143 and his visitor 144.

Young Wakely of Danielson outclassed Young LeClair of Plainfield and the latter decided that he had enough after the first round, after he had taken a drubbing throughout the round. LeClair depended on his right to land but wore himself out trying and twas a tired boy at the bell and called it quits, thus giving Wakely a technical K. O. Wakely weighed 130 and LeClair 131.

The next bout, between Young Alberts of New London and Eddie Schelling of the U. S. S. Camden, started off to be the feature bout of the evening. In fact, it was that while it lasted. Both lads threw in their punches with abandon, neither having a decided advantage for the first round. The second round had barely started when Alberts caught the sailor boy with a terrific right to the jaw and the latter went down and out. Here are wo fast boys very evenly matched and will certainly bring the crowd to their feet any time they fight. They have been rematched for the next show. Alberts weighed 150 and Schelling 147.

Scotty McPhillips of Bozrah and way stations, lived up to his ancestral reputation of taking and not giving. Little Scotty took plenty from Young Joe Bishop of Danielson in their bout. In fact, he took so much he was ashamed to receive any more and big heartedly called for the towel. Bishop overwhelmed him with rights and lefts from all directions which had the Scotch lad completely at sea. Notwithstanding his rugged build he was no match for Joe. Both weighed 120 pounds.

George Londgren from New London stood up under the wallops of "Toots" Gardner of Montville for a round and a half and then got his right to work. It only needed to land once, and when it did "Toots" dropped and had to be carried to his corner. It was rather a surprise, too, because it looked any minute that the New London lad was going to cave in under Gardner's blows. The over-sized waistline on George did not seem to affect him in the least, although "Toots" drove quite a few to his mid-section. Londgren weighed 154 and Gardner 151.

The final, but by no means feature bout, brought together two heavyweights slow of foot and motion and devoid of much interest. Billy Busch of Norwich and Johnny Emelyta, of Montville went through three rounds of mauling with the Montville boy doing most of the leading and hitting and thereby won the honors, if any. Both boys were tired and ready to go home and to bed at the end. John tipped the register at 184 and Bill 190.

Jack Wilson tolled off minutes and Alec Pasnik and George W. Morrow did what little judging there was to be done.

Splashes at the Ringside

A good card but oh, what a small crowd.

Little Baby Joe Gans and Eddie Sharkie, two of Chick Spivery's youngsters proved to be the features of the card.

The dusky little battler has everything that the finished performers possess with the possible exception of a punch. It will take a clever boy to beat him on points.

It was Sharkie's second fight but he showed he has the makings of a clever boxer. He is fast and has two nice hands which he uses to good advantage. A little more experience is needed. He has the fighting heart and likes the game.

What had the makings of the feature bout of the evening terminated suddenly in the second round. Young Alberts knocked out Schelling after the latter had been weakened in the first round when Alberts accidentally butted him in the groin, just as the round ended. Jackie Burns is endeavoring to rematch these boys for the next card.

Next to the bouts the feature attraction was at one corner of the ringside where one heavyweight fan was thoroughly enjoying himself. This fan kept the crowd in an uproar all during the evening.

The heavyweight final was rather disappointing in that Brush the local boy, did not show to better advantage against his less experienced opponent. Brush with his experience should have won easily but seemed content to devote his efforts largely to wrestling.

Johnny Leonard makes a real nice referee and his work last night should give him a job on Thursday nights for the remainder of the season.

YALE TEAM DRILLED IN ONLY STRAIGHT FOOTBALL

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 25—(AP)—Football fundamentals were again drilled into the Yale players today by Coach Mal Stevens and his corps of assistants. Following a long session at this kind of pigskin work the varsity squad was put through an extensive scrimmage behind closed gates at the Yale bowl.

This was the second day this week that the Eli gridders have had a taste of hard work in football practice. A drill in kicking was entirely unsatisfactory to the coaches despite the fact that the kickers had a strong win din back of them. Every member of the varsity eleven was given a drill on the tackling dummy and also on picking up a loose ball.

The backs and ends were pushed in the receiving of punts and passes. Yale thus far this season has not been able to develop any apparent success in the playing of the overhead game. Special emphasis was stressed along this line today in preparation for the Army game Saturday.

Hickok and Crile were used today as ends but it is not certain who will receive these berths for the Army clash. The first team today in scrimmage lined up as follows: Hickok and Crile, ends; Marting and Eddy, tackles; Greene and Hall, guards; Charlesworth, center; Hoben, quarterback; Miller and Lampe, halfbacks and Hubbard, fullback.

The Army team will arrive here tomorrow and will spend two hours of secret practice at the bowl in the afternoon. The cadets will not arrive here until Saturday morning. A parade will precede the game to the bowl from the center of the city and a drill by the West Point cadets will start at the bowl at 1:30.

Saturday's game will start at 2 o'clock.

BULKELEY CLASHES WITH WINDHAM HIGH TODAY

Bulkeley High clashes with the Windham high team this afternoon at Mercer field in New London in an interscholastic game. The Bulkeley contingent is showing more football ability than at the first of the season and plays are being run off with more smoothness and snap.

There has ben much shifting of the men in the backfield and just what the lineup will be is not known. Gatelano, whom Coach William R. Canty was using in the backfield, hurt his ankle in scrimmage yesterday, and he may not be able to play today.

The Windham team has had a fair season, and its lineup will probably be the same as it was in the Windham-Stonington game last Saturday. The Windham lineup: Ends, H. Merrill and Fernier; tackles, Monast and Brettschneider; guards, Denault and Kasperkewicz; center, Kelleher; backfield, A. Meikle, W. Woodward, Chase and Luciani.

The Chapman Tech team will be the guests of the Bulkeley team at today's game. Tech and Windham played to a 6 to 6 tie. Tech will play Stonington at Stonington on Saturday.

BENNY LEONARD FACES TOUGH PROPOSITION IN HOCKEY FIELD

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—When Benny Leonard, retired champion of the lightweight kingdom, stepped into Pittsburgh's hockey situation with a handful of cash, a million dollars worth of optimism, and a fierce desire to get somewhere in a big way, he bought for himself hockey's biggest problem.

Three years ago, Pittsburgh had one of the greatest hockey teams in the country in the Yellow Jackets, members of a fast circuit that included Minneapolis, Cleveland, St. Paul, Eveleth, Minn., and Duluth. It was a happy, powerful aggregation, content to rank at the top of the country's amateurs.

Then the Yellow Jackets, at the start of the 1925-26 season, jumped from amateur ranks into the National Hockey league and the Hamilton Tigers switched to New York as the Americans to strengthen and add breadth to the professional circuit. The Jackets turned professional to a man, organized the Pittsburgh Corsair and sent out to treat the professional game to a dose of the power and speed that had dominated amateur ranks.

In that amateur aggregation were Roy Worters, recognized today as the greatest goal-tender in the game; Hib Milks, a crack center who lead the team in scoring last season, and Hal Darragh, recognized as the "cleanest" player in the league. Roger Smith, Harold Cotton, Herbert Drury and Tex White helped with the forward line. All signed three year contracts as professionals and proceeded to [illegible] the Corsairs into two of the three Stanley cup playoffs for the world championship since their entry.

Now these contracts, entered into then on terms that bulked large to amateurs, have all run out. Professional hockey has added many cubits to its stature and the game is a financial success everywhere but in Pittsburgh. Duquesne Gardens, where the Corsairs play at home, will seat only 3,500 persons and promoters say you can't make money from crowds of that size.

To a small degree, hockey magnates throughout the national circuit are worried over Pittsburgh's situation and Benny, master of the jab and gaiaway in his prime, may have slowed up enough to forget to duck some of the financial onslaughts of his players. No one is worried over Benny's resources, however, for the slightly bald retired champion is said to have Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury and a multi-millionaire in his corner for this engagement. There is always the chance that the Pittsburgh franchise may be shifted to Philadelphia.

The New York Americans are interested in the Pittsburgh club to the extent that they would like to acquire Ray Worters, an entire center team in himself. Other teams could use Milks, Darragh, Drury and anyone else on a squad that tied three and lost eight of their first eleven games last year, but finished the season third in the American group. The magnates all have been informed, however, that Benny has not forgotten to duck to that extent.

SPORT SLANTS

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—If Rogers Hornsby goes to the Chicago Cubs, to concentrate upon second basing and his habit of rolling up big batting averages, the major league campaigns next spring may start without a playing manager on any field for the first time in as many moons as can be recalled, off hand.

Even if the rambling Rajah should retain the helm at Boston or grasp it elsewhere the situation would be in sharp contrast to that of a few years ago, when a majority of the American league pilots were daily or almost daily performers and about half of the entire group of master minds in active harness.

There was an epidemic of playing managers a few seasons ago, when George Sisler, Eddie Collins, Bucky Harris, Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Ray Schalk, Dave Bancroft and Hornsby took whirls at handling the managerial reins here and there. So far as results were concerned, Speaker, Hornsby and Harris not only won pennants but world's championships.

Now, however, the magnates seem to prefer to have the heavy thinking done and strategy directed by managers whose energies are concentrated upon the bench, or no farther afield than the coaching lines.

Buck Harris, who has shifted his responsibility from Washington to Detroit, still has some good playing days before him, but he has indicated he expects to see little, if any action, especially with so spry a second baseman already on hand as Gehringer, one of the outstanding stars of the Tiger club.

Harris's successor at the capital, Walter Johnson, thinks he may make a return to the mound but this idea is more than likely sentimental. Old Barney's pitching days are over, for all practical purposes.

Roger Peckinpaugh satys in uniform at Cleveland but he cannot be considered a member of the active list. He doesn't need to attempt any shortstopping with Joe Sewell around.

There has been talk of Tris Speaker returning to Boston to manage the Braves if Hornsby goes, but Tris, too, has reached the stage where his experience, not his playing ability, is his main asset to a major league club.

The 1927 major league races were dominated by such managers with Hornsby and Harris not only outnumbered but outgeneralled in the pennant tussles. Harris managed to get in the first four, trailing the outfits led by Huggins, Mack and Howley but Hornsby's Braves trailed the pack in the National dominated by McKechnie, McCarthy, Bush and Hendricks.

PUNTS AND PASSES

(By The Associated Press)

Dartmouth beat Harvard yesterday, but it was in their practice sessions, not in a game. The Crimson scrubs, using Dartmouth plays taught by Charlie Linehan, who has been scouting at Hanover, overwhelmed the varsity. At Hanover, Jim Donnelly, likewise a scout, taught the scrubs Harvard's formations, but the varsity had little trouble stopping them.

When the Navy's luck isn't bad it's worse. Yesterday Oscar Hagberg, a new end prospect received a broken leg in scrimmage and Hardin, center, was definitely counted out of the Penn game because of older injuries.

Tuss McLaughry, Brown coach, is not yet through shaking up his team. In a scrimmage yesterday the third team overwhelmed the second, which had four men recently shaken off the varsity, and now Tuss is ready to make more changes.

For one of the highest scoring teams in the east Pennsylvania is having a hard time in practice. The entire first team was benched yesterday when it could not make headway against the scrubs, too muh preliminary hard work was the coaches' explanation.

With a plentiful supply of good backs, Bill Roper keeps on finding more in his Princeton squad. May Wheeler, a sophomore, celebrated his promotion to the varsity yesterday by starring in two scrimmage sessions, for the varsity against the "All-Stars" and the second team against the freshmen.

The dog days have come for the Army coaching staff, with five men on the casualty list and Yale next on the schedule. They have to stop the plays in scrimmage before they are finished so as not to risk more injuries.

The Yale squad had a whole season's practice in one afternoon yesterday. It started with a drill in blocking and tackling and worked up to a scrimmage.

Coach Tate of Lehigh finally has ended his experimenting with his squad. He thinks he has found the best combination of his green players and from now on intends to work at developing a fast powerful attack with them.

A real kicking duel is on the schedule for the Colgate-New York university game Saturday. Ken Strong of U. Y. U. has ben practicing hard in hopes of outkicking Colgate.

N. Y. STATE COMMISSION WILL NOT JOIN NEW BODY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—The New York State Athletic commission will not join the proposed new International Boxing association or any other nation-wide governing body if William Muldoon has anything to say about it. Working agreements with separate states are all right but a definite alliance with a national body is out of the question, the veteran commissioner said yesterday.

"We have no affiliation with any boxing body of national scope nor, as long as I can prevent it, will we undertake such an alliance," Muldoon said." Our situation today is what it always has been. We are ready to help other boxing bodies throughout the country when and if need arises and we welcome a reciprocal arrangement with our commission.

HOOD STOPS FRATTINI IN THE THIRD ROUND

LONDON, Oct. 25—(AP)—Jack Hood, of Birmingham, welterweight champion of Great Britain, stopped Bruno Frattini, of Italy, in the third round of their bout here tonight. After the Italian went down thrice in the third round the referee stopped the fight just as Frattini's seconds tossed in the towel.

Teddy Baldock, crack British bantam, knocked out Phil Lolocky, of Aldgate, in the third round of another bout.

ACADEMY CLASHES WITH WESTERLY IN SECOND LEAGUE CONTEST TODAY

The Academy goes after a "crucial" game this afternoon when it tackles Westerly High at Westerly. This game is undoubtedly the most important so far this season and promises to be one of the major league events for the Wildcats this campaign.

Today's game finds these teams with one victory apiece in one start, tied with Stonington, which has two victories and is also undefeated, leading the Eastern Conn.-Westerly, Rhode Island league with Windham and Chapman Tech next in line and Bulkeley last.

This game either makes one of the clubs or seriously injures their chances. A victory will boost that team into a tie with Stonington and send the vanquished team definitely out of the tie but a tie score will not only help Stonington, but also lose valuable ground for the Academy and Westerly.

Both teams have out in special preparations for the contest and the chances are that both teams will be able to present practically all of their regulars. The outlook is for an even battle, unsoiding both clubs use the lineups that are expected.

Westerly is undefeated this year, winning two games and tieing two while the Academy has won three and lost one. Up until the 7 to 6 setback last Saturday by Warren, Hardins the Academy had also kept its goal line and uprights untrammeled.

Cross-Country Run.

A cross-country run between the Academy and Westerly is also scheduled for this afternoon at Westerly. The Academy lost its only start, that to Chapman Tech two weeks ago although Navick of the locals finished in first position. Today's meet will be the third of the year for Westerly and its first home affair and to date the Rhode Islanders have a clean slate, beating Bulkeley and South Kingston.

AGGIE TEAM LEAVES TODAY FOR GAME WITH VERMONT

STORRS, Oct. 25—Twenty-two members of the Connecticut Aggie football squad will leave here Friday afternoon by bus for Springfield where they will entrain for Burlington for the gridiron contest with the Vermont university machine. The game between the two Eastern Conference teams will be one of the most objective games of the year for the Nutmeggers since it is the first time in history that the two interstate elevens will face each other on the gridiron.

Head Coach Sumner A. Dole put the finishing touches on a thorough week of drilling for the Vermont game Saturday this afternoon with a dummy and tackling practice. The final minutes of the drill session today were taken up with signal practice that showed the three elevens that partook in fine spirit for the conflict.

The apparent loss of pep in the Aggie varsity that was shown last Saturday at Lowell has entirely disappeared in the squad and with the lack of injuries to the members of the team, the Blue and White is at the pink of condition to face the Green Mountain state.

In yesterday's drill, the varsity ran rough shod through the scrubs who were unable to cope with the running and aerial atatck of the regulars. Most of the attention was diverted towards the line which did not perform well against Lowell. Even at this point of the football season, the competition is as keen as it was during the pre-season drills. The backfield is now in the process of evolution and it is very probable there will be some new faces in it before long. Coach Dole has been using Sam Harger at fullback all week with the varsity and it is very probable that the Hartford youth will see more action with the varsity in the future. He was inserted in the Lowell contest and displayed a fine offensive game making some long gains through the line. Arthur Haversat, a senior, has been showing up well all week on the defense for the second team in scrimmage and when he was inserted in the varsity yesterday, he reeled off a thirty-five yard run. He is a fast and elusive back and his work on the defense stands out mostly.

Finally unsatisfied with the way in which the aerial attack has been working all season, Coach Dole spent the greater part of the drilling this week on the overhead attack in order to bring it up above par and at least equal with that of the past few seasons. The Aggie mentor has always been an exponent of the open type of ground gaining and as a result all of his teams have had good aerial offensives. If the Blue and White air attack had been functioning properly last Saturday in the last quarter, the final score would have been much different.

Vermont and the Aggie are about equal on paper with the Blue and White holding a slight edge since they have not been scored upon this year and won one of the games played, tieing the last two. Vermont on the other hand has scored but once this season and that was last Saturday against Union but the Vermonters lost by a 7-6 score. In their other encounters this year, Vermont has been held scoreless and defeated.

MARSTERS WILL BE ABLE TO PLAY AGAINST HARVARD

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 25—(AP)—The Dartmouth varsity football team put the finishing touches on its preparation for the Harvard game by running through all of its scoring tricks and breaking up the scrubs' Crimson formations here today in a two hour scrimmage. Anxiety that Al Marsters, the Green's backfield ace, would be unable to play, was dispelled when he sped through his assignments with the same dash he displayed before he injured his leg last week.

Fred Breithut, Marsters' running mate was not expected to be in shape for Harvard. He injured his ankle in the Columbia game and although he was able to take part in today's signal drill, he was kept out of the scrimmage on the team physician's orders. Head Coach Jesse Hawley, however, refused to definitely rule on Breithut until he saw him perform in the limbering-up exercises which the Dartmouth team will be put through tomorow morning before boarding the train for Boston.

Meanwhile Hawley has Shep Wolff groomed for Breithut's position. Bob McDonough, regular quarterback, ran the varsity during the session and later practiced place kicking with Marsters. Hawley has announced McDonough would start the Harvard game.

BROWN MAY USE ALL THREE TEAMS AGAINST TUFTS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 25—(AP)—All three Brown football elevens may be thrown against the Tufts team, undefeated in 13 starts, when the Bruins and the Jumbos clash at Brown stadium Saturday afternoon, Coach McLaughlry indicated today after he had used a trio of elevens in a workout against Tufts formations.

Although McLaughlry reiterated his intention of starting his second or third eleven, it is still probable that the new A team, formed of those who looked the best against Yale, will be on the field for the referee's whistle. The newly formed combination has not had its mettle tested in scrimmage, but as it numbers Munroe, Munson, Edwards and Capt. Al Cornsweet, veterans of the last year, among its members, the coaches feel that it will not crack before the varied attack of the fast Medford outfit.

Pick Out of Game

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 25—(AP)—Wesleyan will enter Saturday's "Little Three" game against Amherst without the services of Mott Peck, first string quarterback, who was hurt so severely in the Rochester game last week that he may be out for the rest of the season. Tetley, halfback, will pilot the team. Coach Wood is uncertain of the make-up of his front line.

OVER 4000 ATTEND NEW HAVEN AMATEURS

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 25.—(AP)—About 4,000 people witnessed the regular weekly boxing show of the Independent Amateur association in the Arena, here tonight. The usual show of 12 bouts was presented, with Buddy Howard, of this city, winning by a technical knockout over Tom Davis, of Long Branch, N. J., in one of the feature bouts, while Jack "Red" Knight, was successful in his comeback, defeating Charlie Cocuzza, of Long Branch. The summaries:

Tom Mason, Newark, defeated Ted Flowers, New Haven, 3-128.

Joe Fournier, Springfield, defeated Pete Lorenzo, New Haven, 3-110.

Casey Antelik, New Haven, defeated Jack Griffin, Newark, 3-116.

Al Gainor, New Haven, knocked out Joe Lawrance, Long Branch, 1-160.

Jack Dillon, New Haven, defeated Tim O'Connor, New Haven, 3-112.

Pete Blynn, Long Branch, defeated Ritchie DeMonte, Danbury, 3-138.

Johnnie Andrews, New Haven, won technical knockout over Billie Rodgers, Springfield, 3-128.

Ed Skinner, New Haven, knocked out Sam Lawson, Springfield, 1-175.

Alex Tourain, New Haven, won technical knockout over Mickey Bennett, Long Branch, 1-140.

Artie Parker, Newark, defeated Vincent Gullo, Meriden, 3-135.

Jack "Red" Knight, New Haven, defeated Charlie Cocuzza, Long Branch, 3-135.

Buddy Hofard, New Haven, won technical knockout over Thomas Davis, Long Branch, 3-175.

BOSTON COLLEGE DRILLING ON THE FORWARD GAME

BOSTON, Oct. 25—(AP)—The Boston college varsity football team was put through a long dummy scrimmage against Boston university plays here today by Head Coach Joe McKenney. Before the session, Al Weston practiced hurling forwards and later, he and Dixon, another member of the backfield, tried their toes at punting. Dixon was credited with several boots that were good for 65 yards without a roll.

McKenney said that he expected to start "Zus" Wilcewski, his regular guard, against the Terriers. Wilcewski has ben suffering from an injured shoulder, but McKenney believed that his presence in the starting lineup was necessary to bolster up the line which was due to be weakened by the absence of Captain Warren McGuirk, a tackle.

McGuirk, who lost 12 pounds in the Navy game and eight more against Duke, was stricken with influenza a week ago. Though he showed a rapid improvement he was still much under weight and was not expected to return to the game for at least two weeks more.

NEW HARVARD QUARTER PUTS LIFE INTO TEAM

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 25—(AP)—The Harvard varsity football team made a better showing against Dartmouth plays here today with "Shorty" Crawford, a new quarterback, at the helm. Crawford, who played has never been eligible for the varsity until this fall. During the past two seasons, however, he played with the ineligibles and was often a thorn in the side of teh regulars.

During the workout, Eliot Putnam, the first string quarterback, was on team B and Tommy Gilligan, considered almost on a par with Putnam, played on team C.

Head Coach Arnold Horween refused to admit that he would start Crawford against Dartmouth. "Shorty" considered better able to keep the Crimson machine driving than any of the other signal callers, made an impressive showing against Dartmouth plays. The rest of the varsity backfield was better than yesterday but the improvement was not great enough to encourage the coaching staff.

PUTNAM HIGH SWAMPS TOURTELLOTTE SCHOOL, 58 TO 6

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 25—The Putnam high school football team strengthened its hold on the eastern Connecticut championship here this afternoon by trimming the Tourtellotte Memorial high school of North Grosvenordale by a 58 to 6 score. The Putnam team was to have played Plainfield today, but the contest was cancelled when the latter team failed to put in an appearance. Cody and Shann for Putnam were the stars of the tilt, each man scoring a number of touchdowns after long runs down the field. Marmidoff scored the only touchdown for the opposition, which is playing its first year in football and offered very little competition against the locals, due to their inexperience. Putnam used the aerial attack in the most part throughout the game.

RED GRANGE HAS CASE CONTINUED UNTIL NOV. 13

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—(AP)—Harold "Red" Grange, "Galloping Ghost of the Gridiron" and football hero of a few years ago, obtained a continuance until November 13 when arraigned in domestic relations court today on a paternity charge brought by Mrs. Helen Fiozak who claims Grange, now appearing at a Loop theatre, is the father of her seven-months-old daughter.

Mrs. Fiozak was in court holding the baby she has named Haroldine.

The complainant said she had met Grange when he stopped at a hotel where she was employed and had accompanied him to his home at Wheaton, Ill. Grange has charged that the complaint is inspired by an attempt to extort money from him.

YALE REFUNDS $58,000 SENT IN FOR YALE-ARMY GAME

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 25—(AP)—As evidence of the demand for tickets for the Yale-Army game on Saturday in the bowl which could not be filled on applications alone in hand when the time limit came, $58,000 has been returned to those who wrote in with checks.

The interest in this game is such that very few tickets are expected to be returned to the Yale ticket office nad this will mean that there will be none for the public. It is anticipated that much the same condition will exist for the Yale-Harvard game.

MC LARNIN TO FIGHT GROGAN AT DETROIT

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 25—(AP)—Jimmy McLarnin, Vanvouver, will make his first appearance in the junior welterweight boxing division in Detroit on November 23 against Tom Grogan, it was announced today.

If McLarnin is successful in stopping the Oklahoma boy, he is to get a chance against "Mushy" Callaghan for the world's junior welterweight title in December, it is said.

Sonnenberg Beats McGuire

BOSTON, Oct. 25—(AP)—Gus Sonnenberg, former Dartmouth football star, in a wrestling match, tonight defeated Ned McGuire of Boston, in two straight falls here. Sonnenberg won the first fall by a flying tackle in 23 minutes, 40 seconds and the second by a head scissors and double wrist lock in 12 minutes, 52 seconds.

In a semi-final bout, George Walker of Canada defeated Nick Goff of Chicago in 30 minutes, 30 seconds.

Famous Golf Shots of 1928

Beating A Double Obstacle

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Greatness in golf shots doesn't always exhibit itself in the mere defeat of physical obstacles. There's the mental hazard also to overcome at times.

Bobby Jones conquered both when he fired one of the greatest pitch shots of his National Amateur championships victory over Phil Perkins dead to the seventh hole of the tough Brae Burn layout.

The mental angle cropped out of the fact that Bobby's booming drive had hooked to the fringe of the immense crowd and knocked out a gallery marshal, causing unusual commotion. The physical barriers included a yawning sand trap, stretched in inviting fashion across the approach to the green and the pin that was only a few feet from its edge.

It wasn't a particularly vital shot, as the match was going. Bobby was 4 up and the and was in sight, but it illustrated the calm hold the Georgian had on his nerves. The sight of his pale and semi-conscious victim, a few yards away, might have been sufficient to upset the control of a golfer or even sturdier fibre but Bobby hit his mashie perfectly, so straight that the ball "split" the pin and stopped a few feet beyond the cup after almost holing out for an eagle two. As Perkins had visited a brook, Bobby's par 4 to win was a simple matter. He was 3 up and it took only two more holes to complete the rout of his British rival.

WESTERLY

STATE HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION CONSIDERS ROAD PROBLEMS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 26—Members of the Rhode Island Highway association, James L. Mowry of Warwick, president, gathered in Westerly, today for the semi-annual meeting of the association with morning session in the town council chamber of the town hall building. President James L. Mowry, presided and Henry Pickergill, engineer of the state board of public roads of Rhode Island, was made secretary pro tem in the absence of Prof. F. H. Webster, instructor in engineering at the state college at Kingston. The resignation of Prof. Webster, as secretary, because of ill health, was accepted by the association. Prof. Webster, according to President Mowry, was a pioneer worker in the formation of the organization, and in recognition of his activities and interest he was made honorary secretary. Prof. Webster is now on a leave of absence from the state college because of illness.

In the absence of Elton F. Durfee, city engineer of Cranston, who was to lead the discussion on "State Aid to Towns," President Mowry opened the subject, and presented considerable printed data, which constituted the work of the committee appointed to revamp the act presented to the general assembly a year ago, which failed to come out of the committee.

A. L. Leon, superintendent of the highway department of Westerly, and a former president of the R. I. Highway association, spoke on the subject. The association voted to recommend another act to the general assembly setting $300,000 as the sum to be appropriated from the state's receipts on motor vehicle fees and the gas tax, to be used for state aid to cities and towns for improvement and construction of highways.

President Mowry suggested a continuation of the drive in the legislature to get the appropriation for aid to cities and towns and urged the association to work for the necessary change in the present laws to accomplish it.

At the close of the morning session the members started on a tour of inspection of the highways of Westerly and the crushing plant at the Sullivan quarries at Bradford. A. L. Leon explained the "Uniform Cost Keeping System," of the highway department of the town of Westerly.

Russell L. Scott, auditor, told of the method of paying off the highway employes in Westerly. Two men go out, one with the money and another with a list of the employes.

The three members of the Westerly board of highway commissioners, Charles F. Berry, Elihu Chesebro and Harvey C. Perry attended the meeting. Following the inspection during the noon hour lunch was served at Peckham's Inn. The afternoon session started shortly before 3 o'clock with a stereopticon talk in the auditorium of the Westerly town hall with C. N. Connor executive engineer of the American Highway association of Chicago, the speaker on "Low Cost Roads."

The Girls' Friendly society of Christ Episcopal church, Miss Edith Ellis president, met in the church school rooms, Broad and Elm streets, Thursday evening. A Hallowe'en party was tendered by the older girls to the candidates, the committee in charge being Mrs. G. Edgar Tobin, wife of the rector and Miss Louise Carr. The program of the evening from 7 to 9 p. m. included Hallowe'en games, music and refreshments. This party is attended by larger numbers in each succeeding year.

Misses Emma J. and Sarah R. Reed were among those present at the Rhode Island Teachers' Institute Thursday in Providence.

Members of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Henry C. Suter, pastor, this (Friday) evening, will observe Church Family night, with a four part program.

Miss Helen C. Brophy of the newsstand at the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad has been confined to her home on Granite street by illness for the past few days.

Capt. Harry Russell Burdick left Thursday morning for a business and pleasure trip to Boston.

George Mertz of Providence was a Westerly business visitor Thursday.

John Paton returned to his home in Mystic Thursday afternoon, after being discharged from the Anderson hospital. He has recovered from an operation performed several weeks ago.

Michael Tuscano was among democrats to leave Westerly Thursday for Providence to see and if possible hear Nominee Al Smith on his short stay in the capitol city.

Thomas L. Fontana has returned from a vacation visit in New York where he was present at a dinner party at which Mayor Walker was a guest. It was expected that Presidential Nominee Al Smith would be among those present, but duties prevented.

PERUVIAN SUBS FROM NEW LONDON MAKE NON-STOP TRIP TO COLON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 25—The submarines R-2 and R-4, built recently at the plant of the New London Ship & Engine company, have arrived at Coca Solo. The undersea boats left Groton a week ago today and the trip was made without a single stop. According to advices received from the masters of the boats here today, the engines worked entirely satisfactorily during the non-stop trip of seven days.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of Louis Richman, 177 North Bank street, and William M. Hyslop, 69 Hempstead street.

George A. Tyler, Eastern Point, Groton, and 202 Eight avenue, Asbury Park, N. J., was arrested yesterday on Bank street by Traffic Officer Dennis Cavanaugh, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He was presented in the police court this morning and the case was continued to Nov. 3. Tyler was ordered to furnish a bond of $150 and Attorney Nathan Belcher qualified as surety.

John Denig was charged with non-support. The case was continued to Saturday next.

FUNERALS

Charles Stebbins

The funeral of Charles Stebbins of Waterford, who died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Tuesday night, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 43 Shapley street. The services were conducted by Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church. The bearers were Spanish war veterans. Burial was in East Lyme.

John F. Sullivan

The funeral of John F. Sullivan, son of Mrs. Ellen Sullivan, 95 Hempstead, who was instantly killed Sunday night when the automobile in which he was driving with two companions from this city to New York, overturned at Madison, was held this morning at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Michael Reagan, with Rev. George Clark deacon and Rev. Raymond J. O'Callaghan sub-deacon. The bearers were William F. Sullivan, John F. Lavin, Donald J. Walsh, William V. Ryan, Anthony F. Sullivan and George C. Shodoll. As a waiting hymn Edward F. Murray sang "Some Sweet Day." Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. Clark.

OBITUARY

Charles L. Waschmirth

Charles L. Waschmirth, 43, known in New London, died suddenly at a New York hotel yesterday afternoon. He is survived by his widow, Mrs Celia Nellah Waschmirth; a daughter, Miss Dorothy Waschmirth, and a son Robert Waschmirth, of this city, and a daughter by a former marriage, Miss Helen Waschmirth, of Bridgeport. Mr Waschmirth was an interior decorator and his employment was principally in the larger cities.

The partnership of Samuel Shapiro and Levi M. Kenyon, proprietors of the Mohegan Wrecking company, has been dissolved, Mr. Shapiro acquiring his partner's business. Mr. Kenyon's health is impaired and he will seek medical treatment at a sanitarium.

PEEPING IN WINDOWS, MAN SENT TO N. S. HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 25—Tony Welcoe, residing at 47 John street, was arrested last night charged with being a "Peeping Tom." Today after Welcoe had admitted his practice of peering through windows at night to observe the movements of those in the houses, he was examined by Dr. George P. Cheney and Dr. Charles Kaufman to determine his sanity, for it was most apparent that Welcoe is of unsound mentality. The examination resulted in Welcoe being committed to Norwich state hospital. Welcoe was on Williams street late last night and apparently loitering. Patrolman Michael Dorsey observed Welcoe and decided to watch his movements. When Welcoe went into a yard near Mohegan avenue the officer went to a position where he could observe Welcoe and when the latter was seen to peer through windows he was arrested. Welcoe, it is alleged, has been seen of late loitering about the dormitories of Connecticut College for Women and it is presumed he put his practice into operation there, also.

An automobile, the identification of which was not obtained, crashed against the gasoline filling pump of Oswald Ayrton, 319 Bank street, last night. The driver instead of stopping to determine the extent of the damage occasioned, stepped on the accelerator and the car speeded through Ocean avenue and was lost in the darkness. The crash was observed by Patrolman Patrick Sheehan, but the officer was too far away to obtain the markers on the auto. He reported the crash at police headquarters and Patrolmen George Labour and Albert Iverson made a tour of Ocean, Pequot and Montauk avenues in the hope of locating the driver. The pump was demolished and it is believed that the automobile was damaged.

George Van Hook, United States coast guard; Mrs. Esther Blake, 38 Prospect street, and William Murray, 33 Williams street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Bessie W. Starrs of Hartford has sold the residence, corner of Ocean and Elliott avenues, Ocean Beach, to Jacob Liblicus.

Harry E. Green, Waterford, has sold to the Connecticut Securities company a house and lot on Ashcraft road.

Barnet Gordon and Simon Gulman have leased the store, 150 Bank street, to the New London Coat company for a term of two years, dating from Nov. 15, next, for an annual rental of $900. The lessees are given the privilege of renewing the lease.

TOM SPEIRS SHOWS SKILL IN OPERATING AIRPLANE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 25—A local boy, Thomas C. Speirs, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Speirs of 109 Mohegan avenue, flew over this city today and did several stunts in an airplane. He has been a student for some time at Brainard field of aviation at Hartford, following which he studied aviation and airplane engineering at the Long Island school of aviation.

J. Walter Thompson, 11, who died in New York Tuesday, was well known in this city as he maintained a summer home in Pequot avenue for a number of years. He was known to the journalistic world as the greatest advertising salesman of the country and his death was mourned by thousands of members of his profession.

The space back of the monument on State street, where the oval parkiet was once located, is to be paved, according to a statement made today by City Manager Holt. A new parking space is also to be provided in front of the station that will accommodate several more cars. The space is to be paved with bricks removed from Bank street during the recent renovations on that thoroughfare.

Owing to the fact that the vote this year will be counted that in previous years, 18 voting machines will be put in operation against the 10, which previously have been used. Just where the machines will be placed has not been given out, although it is understood that the department has several places in mind.

Tuesday night, the annual quiz of freshmen of Connecticut college took place. During the quiz, which was held in the gymnasium of the university, scholars sat on the platform, in cap and gown, and received judgment on answers given by the freshmen.

The first dance of the season was given last night by members of the Harbour club of their rooms on Methany avenue. The rooms were decorated in a Halloween color scheme. When refreshments were served the colors were in keeping with the season. More than 75 couples attended.

Members of the Girls' Reserve of W. M. I. held the first meeting of the season at the Y. W. C. A. headquarters, last night; a supper party, with games, music and dancing.

At a meeting of the Junior Hadassah, held Tuesday night in the home of Miss Lillian Burnstein of Waterford, the following officers were elected: President, Miss Helen Hendel; vice-president, Miss Belle Ribner; secretary, Miss Pauline Eisenstein; treasurer, Miss Minnie Bogusiarsky.

Members of the Annie Laurie club held a whist and pinochle party last night in the Bacon building. Eight tables were in play and refreshments were served after the game by Mrs. Frank Biggs, Mrs. Raymond J. Cluett and Mrs. Elisabeth Prince.

A barn party was given last night in honor of the 20th birthday of Carl Plimpton, at his home in Truman street. The affair was a Halloween celebration. Games and dancing were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. About 35 persons attended.

A bridge and whist party held Tuesday night by members of the Children of Mary of St. Joseph's church, proved a success. Sixteen tables were in play and those who won prizes were Frances Emery, Mrs. J. J. Gilbarkin, Mrs. Benjamin Murphy, Harry May, J. H. Shea, Mrs. Annie Mahon and Alice Mugaverin.

A fire alarm was turned in this afternoon as a result of a blaze under the rear porch of the home of A. N. Bridges, 78 West street. The Northwest Hose company members had little difficulty in extinguishing the blaze.

Patients dismissed today at Home Memorial hospital were Mrs. Frank Bailey, 59 Converse place, and Joseph Cavesone of 30 State street.

All public schools of this city will be closed tomorrow owing to the fact that the Connecticut State Teachers' Association convention will be held here.

MYSTIC PATIENT DIES ON WAY TO AMBULANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 25—Asa H. Clarke, 58, of Mystic, died at noon today, while being transferred from his home to an ambulance, which was to bring him to the Home Memorial hospital, after he had been stricken with a complication of heart and kidney troubles. Mr. Clarke was a fisherman and had been a resident of Mystic for over 30 years. He had been in poor health for about three months.

He was a native of Charlestown, R. I., and is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Helen Grimes and Miss Constance Clarke, all of Mystic. Two sisters, Mrs. Alston Knowles of Point Judith, and Mrs. Remmington Wright of Jamestown, R. I., and a brother, Henry Clarke, of Westerly, also survive.

AUTHORITIES AWAIT TUDISCO CASE REPORT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 25—State police of Groton barracks, are still awaiting the reception of a report on the analysis of the stomach of Raaele Tudisco, Pawcatuck shoe maker, whose body was found floating off Mason's Island, between Mystic and West Mystic a week ago. There were no wounds on the body, but everything connected with its finding indicated foul play and when an autopsy was performed an irritant was found in the stomach. For the purpose of determining the nature of the irritant the organ was sent to the state laboratory, Hartford. Officers connected with the barracks, however, are checking up on the movements of Tudisco since the Columbus day celebration in New London and when he was in this city and at a time when factions, of which Tudisco was one, engaged in a mob fight on Steward street.

Rev. Elmer G. Page, 80 Raymond street, made complaint to the police tonight that the driver of an automobile carrying Connecticut registration, N-8362 collided with his automobile on Waller street and drove away without stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage occasioned. Page, however, did not desire that the offending driver be arrested. The car is registered in the name of Allan F. Cox, Post Office box 48, Groton.

Two contested cases will be up for hearing in the police court tomorrow. One of them is John A. Monty, 9 Farnsworth street, who is charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. Monty was arrested Sept. 30 at his home upon complaint of his father-in-law, it being claimed that Monty went to his home, intoxicated, which resulted in an altercation between the accused and his father-in-law. The police were summoned and when two officers arrived at the house, Monty attempted to escape, but was captured a short distance from the house by one of the officers. The other case is that of Sigyra Ness, Post Office box 178, Noank, who is charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving while under the influence of liquor. Ness was in New London last Saturday night and during his stay here he imbibed too freely of strong drink. The following day when the case was presented in the police court, it was continued to tomorrow.

Mrs. Arthur May, 435 Montauk avenue, who has been a patient at Home Memorial hospital several weeks, has so far improved that she is now able to sit up daily and will probably be able to return to her home some time next week.

City Manager William A. Holt has returned from him vacation and is now fulfilling his duties at the municipal building.

The condition of Glam Musante, Williams street, who has been critically ill several weeks, does not improve and practically all hope of his recovery has been abandoned.

William E. Jackson, county detective of Windham county, was a visitor in this city today.

Repairs are being made to the interior of the police station, something that has been needed for a long time. The repairs are being made to the cell room and court room and will not be completed for a week or two.

MANY OF THOUSAND VOTERS LEARN TO VOTE BY MACHINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 25—Many of the nearly thousand new voters, who were made by the board of selectmen the past two weeks, have gone to the municipal building and received instructions as to how to manipulate the voting machine, for none of the newly made voters have used the machine and its manipulation is not known as regards voting. Employes in the building have been engaged almost constantly acquainting voters as to how to vote a straight ticket, also how to vote a split ticket.

Walter Reed has moved from the Gilbert apartment, Nathan Hale street to the Hotel Lafayette, corner of Williams and Broad streets, where he will remain during the winter.

Members of Pyramid temple, order of the Mystic Shrine will parade in this city Armistice day, Monday, Nov 12. The order is planning to put on a spectacular affair under direction of Sheik William A. Clinton, who made such a hit at the sesqui-centennial at Philadelphia.

WEDDING

Hansen-Clark

Miss Lillian Clark, daughter of Mrs. Bernard Clark of Centre street, and James Hansen, also of Centre street, were united in marriage at 10 o'clock this morning at the rectory of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, by Rev. Michael Reagan. They were attended by Harry Hansen, a brother of the bridegroom, and Mrs. James O'Neill, the bride's sister. The bride wore maroon velvet with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. A reception was held this evening at the home of the bride's mother at which 40 guests were present. The bridegroom is a graduate of Chapman Technical high school in the class of 1927 and is at present in the employ of the American Canning company in Brooklyn, where he and his bride will make their home. The bride was given a miscellaneous shower at the home of her sister Tuesday night, and received many gifts for her new home.

LEDYARD

CASWELL HOUSE BURNED—LOSS TO MR. AND MRS. HOLDRIDGE

The Samuel Caswell house, owned by Ray and Mildred Holdridge, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon about 2:30. They had just finished dinner when smoke was noticed coming out around the chimney. The telephone was put into service and neighbors responded, trying to save what furniture and household goods they could. The house was large and burned very fast. A good share of the furniture was saved, although they lost many valuable things which were in the sleeping rooms and could not be gotten out. A bucket brigade saved a shed near the house. There was no insurance on the contents and a small insurance on the house. This house was over 200 years old and was occupied by the late Samuel Caswell for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge purchased this farm about a year ago.

Address By Principal Tirrell

Henry A. Tirrell, principal of the Norwich Free Academy, gave a very interesting address on Education and Schooling before Ledyard grange at the regular meeting Friday evening, Oct. 19. A good sized audience was present to hear him. At the close he was given a rising vote of thanks for his interesting talk, as was also Mr. and Mrs. George A. Montgomery, who sang two selections which pleased the audience.

Mrs. Carl Holdridge is helping care for her sister, Priscilla Goodenough, who is ill at her home in Jewett City.

Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Avery have been entertaining Mr. Avery's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Avery of Hartford.

A school board meeting was held at Ledyard Center Monday afternoon. The secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for the following officers, all re-elected: Chairman, Billings T. Avery; secretary, S. E. Holdridge; building committee, Andrew M. Avery, Charles A. Gray; teachers, Samuel E. Holdridge, Billings T. Avery; supplies, Walter M. Buckingham, Leon F. Colver. Supervisor Connelly reported progress for the teachers. Bills were approved and ordered paid.

Carl Holdridge was leader of the C. E. meeting held in the church Sunday evening.

The letter carriers of the Norwich post office and a few guests, 44 in all, enjoyed a roast pig supper in the vestry of the Congregational church Saturday evening. Three pigs were devoured, with all the other good things prepared by the members of the Ladies' Aid society. Ice cream was also furnished.

Miss Lulu Seizer of Hartford spent Sunday with her father, Albert Seizer.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Clark and family enjoyed Saturday on an outing at George Dolbeare's camp.

It Helps Working Girls

HELEN—"You haven't missed a day this month, Margaret. What have you been taking?"

MARGARET—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Why don't you try it, too? It works like a charm. Of course I'm careful not to get my feet wet."

Surprised at Results

GARFIELD, N. J.—"I work in the mill. I had no appetite, was restless and felt all run-down. I could not sleep at times. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised. I took five bottles and I am still taking it. I am surprised at the results. I can do my washing and ironing and my housework now. I will answer all letters asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Jennie Harabalya, 23 Boulder Street, Garfield, N. J.

HIGHER RATE FOR CALL MONEY CAUSED REACTION IN PRICES IN THE MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—Reactionary price tendencies were more pronounced in today's stock market which ran into heavy selling as a result of an unexpected flurry from 6 1-2 to 8 per cent. in call money rates. Pool activities had lifted more than 30 issues, including General Motors and Sinclair, to new high records in the early trading, some of the extreme gains running from 5 to 15 points. More of these gains were cut down and a long list of issues closed 1 to 7 points net lower. Total sales again crossed the 4,000,000 share mark.

The rise in call money followed the calling of upwards of $30,000,000 in bank loans, but easier rates are looked for again next week. Time money rates on nearby maturities also stiffened slightly. Some of the late selling undoubtedly was inspired by fears of a large increase in federal reserve brokers' loans, the actual figures published after the close of the market showing a gain of $107,903,000 bringing the total to another record high level at $4,772,393,000.

Trading in today's market was largely a specialty affair with buying activities centered in stocks, or groups of stocks, of which current earnings positions are favorable and likely to show further improvement, recapitalization and merger rumors also continued to play an important part in the day's proceedings.

Wall street was treated to an unusually long list of favorable earnings statements today by such corporations as General Motors, Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Westinghouse Electric, Phillips Peroleum, Marland, Air Reduction and Continental Can, all of which showed marked improvement over third quarter results last year. Directors of the Gulf States Steel company resumed dividends and an initial dividend at the rate of $3 annually was declared on Consolidated Gas common stock, equivalent to $6 a share on the old, which paid $5 before the split-up. No dividend action was taken towards the resumption of dividends on Bethlehem Steel common, although such action is looked for after the turn of the year.

President Eugene Grace of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation stated that 1928 production would set a new high record, that current operations were at a new peak around 94 per cent. of capacity, that foreign business had increased 50 per cent. and that all leading consumers, except the railroad equipment manufacturers, were heavy buyers of steel.

Oil shares were whirled upward in spectacular fashion again today with buying stimulated by the announcement that Arthur W. Cutten of Chicago and his associates, including the Fisher Brothers of Detroit, had acquired a large block of Sinclair treasury stock and that Mr. Cutten would be elected to the board. More than half a million shares of Sinclair changed hands, the stock touching a new high at 37 1-4 and closing fractionally below that figure. Atlantic Refining ran up more than 8 points to a new high at 239 3-8 but lost most of its gain. Sun and Superior Oils, Skelly, Independent Oil and Gas, and Midcontinent also moved into new high ground.

General Motors attained a new top at 224 1-8 and then sold down to 220, off 1 points net. Other motors also pointed lower with weakness cropping out in Briggs and some of the other accessory issues. Establishment of a new high by Jordan was associated with reports that William C. Durant was endeavoring to bring about a merger of that company with Chandler-Cleveland and one of the small independents.

R. H. Macy ran up 15 1-2 points to a new peak at 170 and then dropped back to 165 1-4. Western Union climbed 9 points to 183 1-4, the best price in its history, and closed within a point of the top. Union Carbide, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and the Pillsbury Flour issues also moved into new high ground, and there were substantial advances in the Gotham Hosiery issues, Fisk Rubber first preferred, Radio and U. S. Tobacco.

Adams Express, which sold last week as high as 410, dropped 25 points to 380, Case Threshing, Commercial Solvents, Coca Cola, American Zinc and Lead common and preferred, Eastman Kodak, Graham Paige, National Bellas Hess, Rossia Insurance, and Stewart-Warner closed 4 to 10 points lower.

A further spectacular advance of 57 points in Japanese yen to 47.40 cents, or nearly two cents above the rate a month ago, was the only important change in the foreign exchange market. Sterling cables ruled firm around $4.85.

Commodity markets were again mixed. Wheat futures ruled slightly firmer in quiet trading. Cotton fell back about $1 a bale and coffee quotations reacted 12 to 24 points. Sugar prices held fairly steady.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—(AP)—Bullish demonstrations in a wide assortment of issues, particularly the oils, together with heavy liquidation by frightened speculators when call money jumped to 8 per cent for the first time in about ten days, caused a confusion of price trends on the curb market today. Transactions totalled 1,507,600 market.

Standard Oil of Nebraska jumped more than 5 points to a new hat 49 1-8, while Humble and Derby preferred extended their gains. Standard of Kentucky closed 4 points higher and Prairie went to within a fraction of its high for the year. Venezuela jumped to a new top at 3 7-8 on reports that it will be absorbed by Sinclair.

In the industrials the more volatile issues were particularly buoyant. Royal Baking Powder soared 22 points to a new top at 409, then cancelled half its gain. Safeway Stores and Singer Manufacturing climbed 10 and 5 points to new tops. American and Foreign securities jumped about 7 points to a new top at 54 1-2 on reports of a merger with American International, then lost most of its advance on realizing. Consolidated Laundries again extended its gain on reports that it is to be listed on the Boston stock exchange. Anchor Cap, Columbia Graphophone, Curtiss Publishing, Follansbee Brothers and Gorham Manufacturing were carried to new highs.

Automotive shares were sharply irregular. Stutz jumped about 6 points to a new top at 21 3-4, while another bear raid on Checker Cab drove it down 17 points at one time. It closed 12 1-2 points lower. McCord Radiator and Mazmon scaled new peaks while Spark Withington receded 6 points.

Budd Manufacturing, Bullard Machine Tool, Campbell Wyant, Hygrade Food and Neisner Brothers fell about 3 to 6 points, while Deere lost 12 points. National Rubber Machinery recovered part of a 4 point loss. Oakes Products preferred A tumbled 14 3-4 points.

Mines were generally heavy. Newmont losing nearly 2 points after an early advance. Utilities also were irregular. American Gas and Electric shot up nearly 6 points, while United Gas Improvement yielded to realizing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

The derivation of the title of the Fannie Hurst story "Roulette," upon which Richard Barthelmess' picture, "The Wheel of Chance," coming to the Breed theatre next Sunday, was based, is a matter of interest.

In this story of Russia and New York, the star plays a dual role—two brothers, one of whom is red-headed, the other dark. Symbolically, the title indicates the part Luck and Fate play in human affairs and as in the famous game of chance, the red or black must either win or lose.

Fannie Hurst wrote the original story from which this Alfred Santell production for First National Pictures is adapted. It is said to be one of the most dramatic vehicles in which Barthelmess has ever appeared.

Palace Theatre

The most interesting picture yet filmed about the most interesting spot in the most interesting city in the world.

Thus reviewers have characterized John Gilbert's new starring picture, "Four Walls," a story of East Side gangsters in the city of New York which opened last night at the Palace theatre and they are not far wrong.

Among the dozens of "crook" pictures filmed during the past few years, "Four Walls" will stand out as something new and undoubtedly different. Director William Nigh has made the characters appear real and human.

Gilbert contributes a characterization which tops anything he has displayed in the way of acting ability since "The Big Parade." He makes Benny Horowitz, gangster, a real live personality that struggles, suffers and finally conquers in a manner that will grip in the heartstrings of every audience in the country.

The story concerns a young gangster leader who accidentally wounds a man in a night club brawl and is sent to prison for four years. At first he fights against the "Four Walls" of the prison but later comes to understand that his whole life in the New York East Side has been spent within the grip of even stronger walls. On his release, he resolves to go straight and his struggles to do so and yet solve the problem of his love for Joan Crawford constitute the highlight of the picture.

Miss Crawford as the erring heroine presents an entirely new side of her personality to the movie-going public. There have been rumors that next year will see her a star and this picture clearly demonstrates her fitness.

Vera Gordon as Gilbert's mother contributes a great ability as an actress while Carmel Myers as Bertha, the "plain girl," also shows herself in a new light. Robert Emmet O'Connor as Sullivan the detective is very excellent as is Louis Natheaux who plays the gangster "Monk."

In addition to the splendid feature one of the best vaudeville programs of the season is presented. The outstanding acts are Jimmy Gilden and Co. in a revue entitled The Great Lover, with a company of six people. The Liazeed Troupe consisting of nine marvellous acrobats present an act known as "The Arabian Whirlwinds." The well known Franklyn Farnum the movie star, remembered for his heroic roles in the past tells of his experience before the Klieg lights, Simpson and Thornton, a very clever team in "Comedy Tid Bits" and Burnett & Dillon in an unusual dancing bit.

Radio "Comfort"

Radio stands in the same position today as does the automobile. Comfort, ease of handling, and abundance of power were of secondary importance in the early days of the automobile. The mere fact that the machine would run was sufficient to satisfy most of those timid souls who first purchased them. Roads were poor and automobile trips of those days were featured by thrills rather than by comfort. One would naturally suppose that as roads became better comfort would not be so important. The features of designing making for improved riding quality, however, have increased steadily year by year as the mileage of concrete and macadam roads has grown.

Thus it has been with radio. When there were only half a dozen stations to be heard almost any kind of a radio receiver that would bring in a few of these stations with hairbreadth tuning and infinite patience was considered a miracle. As entertainment became abundant it would naturally be supposed that the radio receiver would not have to be so carefully made. Receivers however are more carefully made now than ever before for the reason that the public demands more. "Comfort" is just as important in a radio receiver as in an automobile. If one wishes luxurious riding comfort he buys a high quality automobile. Accordingly if one wishes luxurious comfort as measured in naturalness of reproduction in a radio receiver and if he is to secure the greatest enjoyment from the abundance of entertainment now on the air he must buy a high quality instrument.

Connecticut College Concert

When Sophie Braslau comes onto the platform of the New London state armory next Tuesday evening to open the concert series offered by Connecticut college, she should appear before one of the largest audiences ever gathered there.

Of her singing the San Francisco Chronicle phrases its criticism as follows: "Throughout Sophie Braslau's recital there was threaded the persistent regret that this little artist, so brimming with vitality and the pure joy of singing, should be leaving us with the memories of only one program."

Washington Post: "No phrase is current to donate a mode of singing comparable to impressionism in painting or free verse in poetry, yet Sophie Braslau singing yesterday afternoon demonstrated that something in her vocal interpretation, Braslau's remarkable vocal organ, delicacy of expression, and range of program made her appearance a noteworthy event."

NOANK

CHIEF PARK COLLECTS ENOUGH TO BUY SIREN

The Noank Fire Co. held a meeting in their rooms recently with Foreman Walter Palmer in the chair. It is seven months since a regular meeting was held by the Smoke Easters who could not get enough together to have a quorum. It seemed that the company was slipping backward instead of going ahead. But when Secretary Jack Ellis called the roll 20 were setting about the room. Different committees reported. Chief H. Park was on the siren committee trying for the past 20 months to raise money to get the village a real fire alarm. "Brother firemen" Chief Park said, "I have great news tonight! We have enough money for the new siren. I want to know if the company will vote for it and to put it on top of the fire house." It was voted to purchase the siren in Providence. It is the kind used by the biggest fire companys in the United States. It will be here in a month and will be blown every night at 7 o'clock, telling the right time so to give the people a chance to change their watches if they are wrong. A vote of thanks was given Chief Park for getting the money around town to bring a real fire siren into the village. He was cheered by the fire fighters. It was voted to run dances during the winter months, the first one to be held in a couple of weeks. The committee is Chairman Peter Shandor Jack Ellis and Fred Fitzpatrick. The chimney on the outside of the fire house will be repaired soon. They held a real old-fashioned meeting which lasted two and one-half hours after which assistant steward Sam Carson gave the Smoke Easters hamburg sandwiches and pumpkin pie with coffee. Peter Shandor entertained with a whistling solo, then played My Wild Irish Rose. Chief Park did some soft shoe dancing in the style of 1899, as he did in Boston.

Raymond Sistare is spending a few days in New Haven with friends.

Guild Elects Officers

The World Wide Guild of the Baptist church met this week at the home of Miss Lillian Reid of Pearl street. The president, Miss Inez Cox resigned as she is to make her home in New London. The following officers were elected: President, Jean Bentley; vice president, Audrey Brooks; secretary, Beulah Brooks; treasurer, Elizabeth Hobart; leader, Mrs. Wise; program committee, Elizabeth Hobart; work committee, Gertrude Tourjee; membership committee, Aileen Bentley; sick committee, Lillian Reid. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed after the business session.

Mrs. Eva Cox and family are moving to New London to reside.

Mrs. Mary McArthur of Perth Amboy, N. J., is spending a week with relatives in the village.

Boone Spink is confined to his home by illness and is attended by a night nurse.

Eddie Ellis has gone to Bristol to spend a few days with friends.

No One to Take Bet

Two young fellows Mike Olong and Tracy Jackson were talking about the south, where they spent the winters. Olong said that he has never seen any snow in Jacksonville, Fla., since he has been going there, for 30 winters and never heard of any in the south. Jackson pulled out a roll of bills large enough to choke an army mule and put up $200 and said, "I have seen snow in the south!" Roamer Olong did not put any money for he said he did not have it and said he was not a betting man. Traveler Jackson said, "I will tell you. I saw last winter the freight cars coming into Georgia with from 2 to 3 inches of snow on the roofs," and his friend Olong stopped to think for a few minutes and said, "I did see that in a newspaper at the office. You are right about the snow."

Jazz at Corona Hall

Corona hall was crowded with 200 dance fans, who came from out of town and in town to attend the dance given by the four young men. Russo's orchestra of New London with six music boys with plenty of pep kept the jazz dancers on the move. Everyone got a Halloween hat and a horn also streamers to throw around the hall.

It was more like ringing out the old year and helping push in the new year. At the last Floor Manager Roy Abate said "I will have a surprise for every one next week!"

Potato Going to Canada

Farmer William Franklin was getting in his potatoes on his farm, Sunny Brook, out in the field digging away, and came across a potato that looked like a large rock. It took him seven minutes to get the monster out of its hiding place. It was a triple potato, three-in-one. Farm hand, Joe Walsh, said that it will make a meal for a family of four. The huge potato weighed 4 1-2 pounds and was 2 3-4 inches around it. The largest potato raised in the village in 40 years, that the farmers have a record of. Helper Walsh is going to send the huge potato to his uncle, Chais Barry, in Canada, to show how they raise those west view special potatoes, where one potato is enough for a small family.

STONINGTON

PARKING LAW CHANGES VOTED AT SPECIAL MEETING

A special borough meeting was held in Borough hall on Wednesday evening for the purpose of changing the parking laws. Warden C. B. Crandall presided and Clerk Joseph E. Cushman read the call. There was an attendance of 35. On motion of Joseph F. Joseph the present law of 30 minute parking on west side of the street was changed to allow parking for one hour on the west side. On motion of Frank O. Grandy, parking restrictions on Church street between Water and Main streets were changed to all parking on south side of Church street. On motion of C. H. Cowan, parking rules on Water street were suspended unrestricted after 6 p. m. during the winter months. A motion made by Harold Hubbard was carried and the borough officials were instructed to paint the sidewalk curbs at corners for a length of 15 feet.

SMITH-ROBINSON CLUB HOLDS OUTDOOR RALLY

The fourth open air rally under the auspices of the Stonington (Pawcatuck) Smith-Robinson club was held Thursday evening at the Commercial hotel, West Broad street. The principal speaker was John F. Pickett, past department commander of the American Legion in Connecticut and present democratic candidate for the office of state comptroller.

Joseph Foley is in Cincinnati, Ohio, on a business trip.

The Mistuxet club bridge team, which will participate in the Eastern Shore bridge tournament to begin Nov. 5, has received the schedule from Worth W. Foster, secretary of the tournament. Nov. 5 the local clubmen will play the Westerly Cycle club at Westerly; on Nov. 12, the Winthrop club of New London at Stonington; on Nov. 19, the Mystic Hook and Ladder team at Mystic; on Nov. 26, the Westerly Square and Compass club at Westerly; Dec. 3, the Harbour club of New London at Stonington; Dec. 10, the Westerly Cycle club at Stonington; Dec. 17, the Winthrop club at New London; Dec. 24, the Mystic Hook and Ladder company at Stonington; Dec. 31, the Westerly Square and Compass club at Stonington, and on Jan. 7, the Harbour club at New London. The local team will play each of the other five teams twice, once away and once at home.

The sophomore class of Stonington high school held a Halloween party in the school auditorium, Thursday evening. The hall was attractively decorated with Halloween colors. Novelty dances were given.

Borough Tax Collector William C. Robinson held his last evening sitting in the Borough hall Wednesday.

Bayside camp, No. 392, R. N., held a meeting in Muller hall on Thursday evening, after which a whist party was held.

Troop No. 2, Stonington Girl Scouts, met in the Community house Wednesday evening for their weekly drill. Thursday they took a hike. Parents and friends of the several patrols have been invited to a Halloween party Saturday, at which plays will be given by the different patrols.

Barbara Frietchie council, No. 2 met in Fort hall Thursday evening.

Mrs. Joseph F. Joseph, Mrs. Mary L. Sliney and Miss Margaret McGrath were visitors in Norwich Wednesday.

Mrs. James V. A. Trumbull is spending a few days as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Pendleton, in New London.

The grade schools of the town of Stonington were closed on Thursday and today (Friday), to enable the teachers to attend the convention in New London and visit schools in other parts of the state.

The World Wide guild of the First Baptist church is to meet at the home of Mrs. E. A. Potter this (Friday) evening.

Avoid Dizzy Spells
Never well. Always tired and fagged out. Beauty tossed away by neglect. To be beautiful and to keep youth the system must be free from poisonous backwash of constipation which often causes dizzy spells. For 20 years, Dr. F. M. Edwards gave his patients, in place of calomel, a compound of vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Known by their olive color. They free the system of poisons that ravage health, energy, beauty.
You need never have sallow complexion, dull eyes, coated tongue, throbbing headaches—all signs that your bowels are clogged, liver is torpid. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly. They act smoothly and without griping. . . . How much better you'll feel and look! Everywhere wise men and women who know the value of good health take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at North Stonington, within and for the District of North Stonington, on the 25th day of October, A. D. 1928.

Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Acting Judge.

Estate of Frank H. Brown, late of North Stonington, in said District, deceased.

George H. Stone, of North Stonington, Conn., appeared in Court by counsel and filed a petition praying, for the reasons therein set forth, that an instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, be admitted to probate.

Whereupon, it is Ordered, That said petition be heard and determined at the Probate Court Room in the Town of North Stonington, in said District, on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1928, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and that notice of the pendency of said petition, and of said hearing thereon, be given by the publication of this order one time in some newspaper having a circulation in said District at least three days prior to the date of said hearing, and that return be made to this Court.

NELSON J. AYLING,
Acting Judge.

The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest,
NELSON J. AYLING,
oc26d Acting Judge.

2 GREAT EVENTS COMBINED--SATURDAY
THE LAST DAY OF SCHWARTZ BROS.

Easy Terms

Easy terms adjusted to your convenience may be had on any article in this sale. Thus you can buy on credit, super-quality furniture at prices much lower than you could ordinarily get, on a strictly CASH BASIS. But remember Saturday is the last day.

$75,000.00 LUCKY BUY

We are ready for a busy day, a very busy day, with new irresistible values, rearranged stocks and RE-CUT PRICES. Please come early. We think we have enough of these items to last all day but the wise shopper will make sure — by early shopping.

and NORWICH SUBURBAN DAY!

Final Drastic Reductions Paves The Way For A Glorious Finish

There have been furniture sales here before, but Saturday brings to an end the GREATEST sale that Schwartz Bros. have ever celebrated in their business career in Norwich. We doubt if any other furniture store in the entire New England section has ever been able to offer its customers a more remarkable opportunity as this event as this one we bring to a close Saturday night. The Griswold, Richmond & Glock Co. handled only the best products obtainable, they never ran sales, never gave special values. Theirs was the class of trade that demanded the best and who were willing to pay the price. Never to our knowledge has furniture of such standard been offered at SUCH price reductions. All things come to an inevitable end, and so must this sale. Saturday is your FINAL CHANCE. To make this day set a record for all time, we have again slashed the prices on our own as well as the balance of the Griswold stock, and brought in many new things especially for Suburban Day shoppers.

TAKE FULL ADVANTAGE — BE HERE SATURDAY!

GREENEVILLE

Mrs. William Carroll has returned to her home on Boswell avenue after spending a few days at Providence. While there, Mrs. Carroll saw Al Smith, while he was enroute to Hartford, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Connell and family, May and James Collins, were guests of relatives of Greeneville over the week end. They made the trip by auto from Bridgeport.

The T. D. Sewing Circle held their regular weekly meeting at the home of Miss Irene Shaw of Boswell avenue, Tuesday evening, with a large attendance. After the sewing period a social hour was enjoyed with piano and vocal solos featuring the entertainment. A buffet lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Margaret Sullivan.

Patrick O'Connors has returned to his home on North Main street after spending a few days with relatives at Saybrook.

Anders Peterson has returned to Providence after spending a few days recently as the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peterson of Boswell avenue.

Walter Christy has returned to his home on Second street after spending a few days with relatives at New Haven.

A month's mind mass of requiem was offered for the repose of the soul of the late Timothy A. Carey at St. Mary's Memorial church at 7.30 o'clock Thursday with Rev. William A. Keefe the pastor celebrant. This mass was requested by the Knights of Columbus. On Tuesday morning at 7.30 o'clock a month's mind was offered for John Donohue. Mrs. Michael J. Farrell, organist, had charge of the musical program at each mass. Relatives and family friends attended both masses.

Miss Nellie Monahan has returned to her home on Central avenue after spending a few days with relatives at Providence.

The lady workers of the democrat party of the third ward attended the celebration for Al Smith at Hartford, Thursday.

A surprise party was held Monday evening at the home of Miss Alice Ring, of Prospect street, with 20 of her friends attending. Among those present were people from Jewett City, Willimantic and Mystic. Piano, radio and victrola solos were rendered during the evening. Howard Ring gave a fine exhibition of the black bottom. Refreshments consisting of fancy cakes, assorted sandwiches, assorted wafers, candy, salted peanuts, ice cream and hot chocolate were served by the hostess assisted by Miss Mary McCluggage. The party broke up at a late hour voting Miss Ring a very pleasing hostess. The favors and decorations were of the halloween type.

RETIRED ACROBAT FOUND DEAD IN MYSTIC FIELD

Missed from his home in Old Mystic Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock, by a niece, Mrs. George Ingram, who lived in a tenement above him, Edward H. Houche, 85, was found in a field by Mrs. Ingram in a search which she was conducting for the aged man. Death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Houche was born in Old Essex, the son of John Baptist Houche and Mary Ann Brown Houche. He was a widely read and well-educated man. For many years he traveled with circuses as an acrobat. He was also a public accountant. He had been retired for several years.

He was unmarried. Among his survivors are many nieces and nephews in this vicinity.

Found Spelling Book

Some girl pupil in the Norwich schools must be wondering where her spelling book is, as such a book was found in Franklin square Thursday by an employe of The Bulletin. The book is at The Bulletin office waiting for its owner to prove her property.

United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson in a speech at Visalia, Calif., reiterated his support of the republican national ticket, describing Herbert Hoover, the party's presidential nominee, as one of the world's greatest leaders.

JUDGMENT FOR $900 WITHOUT TRIAL IN $10,000 AUTOMOBILE SUIT

Judgment by agreement of counsel for $900 without costs was rendered for the plaintiff, Pasquale Caponia, of Montville, against Frank Malinoski, alias Frank Malinowsky, of the same place, by Judge John Richards Booth in the superior court at New London Thursday. The case, which was a $10,000, auto-negligence action, was not tried as scheduled.

Pasquale claimed that on the night of Feb. 28, last, while he was operating a car owned by Vincenzo Descrescenzo on the New London-Norwich turnpike in the town of Montville, it figured in a crash with a car driven by the defendant, who was under the influence of liquor.

Pasquale claims that he received a fracture of the left shoulder blade, a fracture of the clavicle, and a permanent dislocation and deformation of the clavicle. He claims that he lost many weeks' work as chauffeur, at which he made $35 a week, and that he had to expend much money for medical care and attention.

LEGISLATURE TO HAVE OVER HALF NEW MEMBERS

More than half of the members of the 1929 legislature will be serving their first terms in the upper house, even if all of the 13 members of the 1927 senate who are candidates this year are re-elected. Four women have been nominated for the senate, three republicans and one socialist. They are Mrs. Alice P. Merritt of Hartford, who served in the senate in 1925 and 1927, and who is the only woman who has been elected to the senate, Mrs. Hannah D. Townsend of New Haven and Miss Mary B. Weaver of New Milford, both republicans, and both of whom have served in the house, and Anna S. Reiner, socialist, who is a candidate in the fifth district.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE TO HEAR NATIONAL PRESIDENT

Miss Belle Sherwin of Cleveland and Washington, the president of the National League of Women Voters, is to be a guest of honor and speaker at the eighth annual convention of the Connecticut league to be held in New London, Nov. 14, 15 and 16. She will speak at a luncheon on Thursday, the second day of the convention, at the Hotel Mohican.

As the head of the league, Miss Sherwin has been in a position to know how an organization whose purpose is the political education of women can meet the test of a campaign year. She will tell of outstanding services which the league has been able to render this year.

Miss Sherwin's own public service began in 1900 when she became president of the first Consumers' league organized in Cleveland. In 1921, while she was serving as chairman of the Cleveland League of Women Voters, Miss Sherwin was elected vice-president of the National League of Women Voters. She served in the vice-presidency for three years, and in 1924 she was elected president, and again re-elected in 1926 for a two-year term.

NORWICH LIONS RECEIVE ADDITIONS TO MEMBERSHIP

The weekly luncheon meeting of the Norwich Lions club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with President Kopland K. Markoff in the chair. C. E. Carpenter asked the blessing and the meeting opened with the singing of America. William R. Frisbie was the song leader.

President Markoff announced that a number of applications for membership in the club had been received and the applicants were unanimously accepted. Secretary Earl Taggart was requested to notify the new members of their election to membership.

The club voted to give a Thanksgiving dinner to the deserving poor children of Norwich. C. E. Carpenter, Max Hanover and Louis Fontaine were named a committee to make arrangements for the dinner. The meeting closed with the Lions roar and the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

PROF. CHARLES R. LANMAN SPEAKS AT OXFORD CONGRESS

A native of Norwich, Prof. Charles Rockwell Lanman, of Harvard university, Norwich Free Academy class of 1867, had the signal honor of speaking at the final meeting of the 17th International Congress of Orientalists, held at Oxford university, England, this fall. With the Right Honorable Lord Chalmers presiding, Professor Lanman spoke as follows:

My Lord, ladies and gentlemen: Last evening, after our dinner at Christ Church hall, Professor Breasted gave utterance to the gladness and gratitude which we, as guests of this ancient and beautiful city of Oxford, most deeply feel. It has been my good fortune to take part in former congresses of students of the East. But in none, as I think, have we been made to feel more at home than here. The place of my birth is called New England. And if you will kindly take the remark as not wholly impertinent to this occasion, my forebears, of say ten generations ago, were truly Englishmen.

It is good that we of the 20th century come together, not so much that we may read and listen to learned papers, as that we may see each other face to face and recognize that we are fellow workers at the noble task of helping the East and the West to understand each other, and so to respect each other, and so to live in peace and good-will together. This I take to be the real purpose, the first purpose, of this international gathering.

Not too long ago, a familiar Sanskrit quatrain occurred to me as a suitable inscription for one of the lintels of the Peace palace at The Hague:

"A's on our side"—and "B's on t'other."
Thus lightwits reckon. More's the pother.
And men of high-souled vision see
In all the world one family.

Our remembrances of some men whom we have known well and loved, are among the most valued of our possessions. Our renewals during this week of old and treasured friendships belong in this category. May they not also find a visible and tangible expression in a brief, formal resolution to be spread upon the printed records of this congress?

Professor Lanman then offered a resolution setting forth the hearty thanks of the Congress of Orientalists in Oxford assembled, to the university, the colleges, the committee of arrangements and the devoted men and women of Oxford "for their generously unfailing kindness and work, which have made this meeting notable in the history of world co-operation for peace and good-will among the nations of the earth."

The report of the session comments: "The acceptance of the resolution was in no wise doubtful."

ELLSWORTH TAKES LEAD IN WEST SIDE PINOCHLE

Making high score for the evening, Wednesday, Ellsworth jumped from fifth place to first position in the West Side Pinochle club tournament, displacing Schuler who dropped back to second place. Bailey who held second place last week dropped back one notch, to third place. The scores for the evening:

Ellsworth, 7,820; A. Jordan, 7,845; Peckham, 7,820; Bailey, 6,715; McNaught, 6,570; J. Jordan, 6,500; Underwood, 6,475; Boynton, 6,445; Schuler, 6,285; Parker, 5,995; Lewis, 5,305; Pettis, 5,800.

WILL LAY CORNERSTONE OF GROTON'S NEW HIGH SCHOOL

The cornerstone of the Robert Fitch high school, now under construction at Poquonoc Bridge, will be laid this (Friday) morning at 10 o'clock.

No elaborate celebration has been planned in connection with the laying of the stone. It is expected that all of the members of the building committee, and officials of the town will be at the high school site when the stone is laid.

The stone will contain a copy of the will of the late Charles P. Fitch of Groton, who left a bequest of money to the town to assist in the building of the high school. The stone will also contain records of town meetings at which action on the high school project was taken.

TWO ESCAPE BY SAWING TOLLAND JAIL BARS

Sawing their way through cell window bars, James B. Fox, 30, a Somers farmhand and Reginald P. Chase, 20, of Ellington, escaped the Tolland county jail at Tolland where they were awaiting trial in the next term of the superior court on charges of breaking and entering.

The break was discovered Thursday morning between 6 and 7 o'clock when the jailer went to call them to breakfast. How long they had been gone was not determined.

Where they got the saw is yet a mystery, but inasmuch as their cells were on the ground floor facing the highway, and the windows of the cells are usually open during warm days, it is possible that someone going along the highway stopped to give one of the pair the hack saw blade which was found Thursday morning lying on the sill of one of the sawed windows. They could not have obtained the saw from visitors inside the jail for prisoners awaiting trial are not allowed to see anyone except on written order of the state's attorney.

No definite trace of the men was found Thursday morning though state police and Sheriff Frederick O. Vinton of Eagleville were working on the case. Two men who might be the fugitives were seen between Stafford Springs and Somers. The escaped prisoners were without money.

The pair wore nondescript clothes when they broke for freedom. Fox and Chase both had on khaki trousers and Fox a dark coat. The former is about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, weighing about 140, while Chase is 5 feet, 1 inch in height and about 120 pounds in weight. Fox is light and Chase dark.

NORWICH TOWN

The Junior Epworth league of the Methodist church held a Hallowe'en party in the vestry Wednesday night, in charge of the junior superintendent, Florence M. Bennett. Miss Beulah Rogers had charge of the decorations and the games, which included many of the popular old ones as well as a number of new games. Mrs. Helen Haviland Potter told a Hallowe'en story which was greatly enjoyed by the children. The Hallowe'en refreshments were in charge of Miss Bennett, assisted in serving by Alice Brown and Doris Rose. There was an attendance of about 40.

The Junior league is to hold its first devotional meeting of the fall Sunday afternoon next.

Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, and two boys of his church, are in attendance at the twenty-ninth annual Boys' conference at Middletown. Rev. Mr. Bailey furnished one of the automobiles for the transportation of boys from this section.

"The Challenge of the Cross," a sacred drama with a cast of nine characters, assisted by the choir, is to be given in Norwich Town Methodist church Sunday evening next at the regular evening service beginning at 7:15. The play is in charge of Mrs. Helen Haviland Potter who has had much experience along this line of church work. The public is privileged to join with the members and friends of the church in this service of worship.

HALLOWEEN SOCIAL BY METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL

Members of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church Sunday school held a delightful halloween social Tuesday evening in the chapel, which was attractively decorated to represent the out-of-doors. The entertainment for the evening consisted of Halloween pranks, games and music, after which refreshments were served. The music was furnished by Lucile Guile Williams, pianist, and George Guile, violinist, who presented a fine programme. The committee in charge of the affair comprised Miss Mary Crowe, chairman, Mrs. C. R. Browning, Miss Mary Gray, Raymond Brown, and Robert Gray. Mrs. E. J. Jones, Mrs. A. A. Guile, and Mrs. John A. Phillips assisted the committee in serving refreshments.

CLAIMS HE MURDERED A BOY IN NEW LONDON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25—(AP)—Carl Panzram, confessed slayer of two boys, told the chief of police at New London, Conn., that he had also killed a boy there, it became known today, when Massachusetts police officers arrived here today to question him regarding the murder of Henry McMahon, 13, at Salem, Mass., six years ago.

Before examining Panzram, Capt. Gideon Pelletier of the Salem police and Lieut. William F. Murray of the Massachusetts state police officials, said that Panzram had written to the New London chief and told him that he had murdered a 16-year-old boy in that city. They said a postscript to his letter read: "For 18 years I have been going around murdering people and now I think it is about time for someone to murder me. Good luck to you." No date of the alleged murder was given.

When arrested here on a burglary charge several weeks ago, Panzram told police he had murdered two boys, one of them near Salem, Mass. He gave the details of the unsolved McMahon killing so minutely that the Massachusetts officers came here today to question him. The boy was brutally murdered in a field near his home.

After interviewing Panzram the officers said they had gained no new information. They said the prisoner refused to discuss the Salem killing but had told them he had served in 11 penitentiaries and had been in 200 jails. They will question him further in an effort to learn whether he really participated in the Massachusetts murder and is attempting to bring about his extradition from Washington.

"OPEN HOUSE" DAY AT METH. DISTRICT PARSONAGE

District Superintendent Myron E. Genter and Mrs. Genter will this (Friday) afternoon observe "Open House" day at the Methodist parsonage at 56 Williams street between the hours of 2 and 11 p. m.

This is the annual occasion when the district superintendent and his family delight to share hospitality with all who can come, and the invitation is general, not only to members of the Methodist Episcopal churches of the Norwich district, but to all friends and acquaintances as well.

Gifted people from various parts of the district will assist in entertainment at periods through the day and Mrs. Genter will be assisted by ladies from Norwich and New London.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

The Wednesday club held its second meeting of the season with Mrs. William Tyler Olcott, the hostess, reading the paper on Commander Byrd and Colonel Lindbergh. The club opened the season by meeting with Mrs. Allyn L. Brown. The officers are, Mrs. Albert H. Chase, president, Miss Ella M. Norton, vice president, Mrs. Charles D. White, treasurer, Mrs. William B. Birge recording secretary, Mrs. Allyn L. Brown, corresponding secretary, Miss Jane Bill, chairman of the program committee.

Nathan A. Gibbs and Miss Natalie King Gibbs have closed their home at Gales Ferry and are occupying the house 327 Washington street for the winter.

Miss Audrey Gernon, who has been motoring through the West and South with friends since late in September will arrive home at the end of the month.

With an attendance of fourteen, the Home Service unit met to sew Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. James M. Morton, of Lincoln avenue. Later tea was poured by Mrs. Howarth C. Collins and Mrs. W. Leslie Fletcher.

W. Tyler Olcott has returned from Boston, having spent the week end at Harvard in attendance at the meeting of the American association of variable star observers.

Miss Amanda M. Fisher and Miss Beatrice Smith were hostesses to the Round Table, Tuesday evening, at the home of Miss Fisher on Williams street. It was an Indian evening, the roll call responses being facts of Indian lore. The paper by Miss Florence E. Fellows was on "The Original Norwich" and Miss L. Angeline Stanton gave an Indian reading. Edwin A. Tracy, the president called for a brief memorial tribute to William H. Collins. The hostesses served ice cream, wafers and candy.

Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Gildersleeve, who have been on a motor trip to the Pacific coast are in Dallas, Texas, this week, on their way to New Orleans.

Love, fire and a bad cough are three things that can't be hidden.

B'NAI BRITH LODGES ENJOYED JOINT SOCIAL

Rose of New England lodge and auxiliary of the B'nai B'rith held a joint meeting and social Thursday evening, the first of a series in the new headquarters on Shetucket street. There was an attendance of about 75. Presiding at the gathering were Jacob Wechsler, president of the B'nai B'rith, and Mrs. Alex Pasnik, president of the auxiliary. Interesting talks depicting the progress of the order were given by both presidents.

The entertainment programme of the evening opened with the singing of America and the Jewish national anthem which were followed by a piano recital by Mrs. Silberman. A sketch given by the younger members of the auxiliary, who had had only three rehearsals in preparation for its presentation, was a feature of the evening. It was entitled "The Telegram" and had the following cast: Ann Clinton, Miss A. Alexander; Sis Clinton, Miss B. Grabiefsky; Don, Miss S. Hyman; Bernie, Miss B. Bruckner; Mrs. Clinton, Miss A. Bruckner. Other numbers were a reading by Mrs. A. Wechsler, a recitation, Leaving With a Handsomer Man, by Mrs. Paul A. Schwartz, a recitation, The Face on the Barroom Floor, by Herman Bruckner.

Under the direction of the house committees, which were in charge of the programme, refreshments were served. These socials are to be held monthly throughout the winter season and promise to give the membership many pleasant social evenings.

It was announced that the Bible class will meet Sunday at 10:45 in the morning.

A. O. H. AUXILIARY, NO. 18 RE-ELECTS ITS PRESIDENT

At the Buckingham Memorial Tuesday evening, Ladies Auxiliary, No. 18, A. O. H., held its election of officers, followed by a halloween supper and social.

Miss Mary D. Sullivan, the president for 1927-1928, was the unanimous choice for that office again. The society feels under her careful guidance and good leadership it will continue to enjoy the financial and numercial success it has gained the past year. Her staff of officers follows: Vice president, Mrs. Margaret Dunn; recording secretary, Mrs. Nellie Bissonette; financial secretary, Mrs. A. P. Niles; treasurer, Miss M. K. Carroll; sentinel, Mrs. Mary McNally; sergeant at arms, Miss M. E. Hartie; chairman of standing committee, Mrs. A. Levitsky; chairman of Irish history, Mrs. Hannah Sullivan.

The hall was prettily decorated and presented a gay and colorful appearance with its crowd of masqueraders. After the halloween supper the hall was cleared for games and dancing which were enjoyed till a late hour. It was voted one of the pleasantest socials yet held and all joined in thanking Miss Carroll who was in general charge, also her assistants, Mrs. Julia Shea, Mrs. Mary Sabourin and Mrs. Mary McNally.

TO BE PRIEST FOR LOCAL SYRIAN CATHOLICS

Rev. Anthony Aneed, who has been engaged until recently in conducting the missions of the Syrian Catholics of the Melchite rite in the northern diocese of this country, has been appointed by Bishop John J. Nilan of Hartford as priest of the district including Norwich, New London, Mystic, Willimantic and Jewett City.

For the present the Rev. Mr. Aneed will conduct services at the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in New London.

The newly appointed priest studied at Rome and speaks Arabic, French, English and Greek fluently, and has some knowledge of Italian.

New London will henceforth be his home and his time will be divided among the families of the five towns under his jurisdiction. There are 40 Syrian families in New London and 40 in the four other towns together.

AGENT WINS SUIT IN CLAIM FOR COMMISSION

Angelo Covello of this city, a real estate agent, is given judgment for $1,669.69 to recover on a commission in his $2,000 damage suit brought against Philip J. Hendel of New London, Louis Alexander of Hartford and Morris Silverstein of Westerly in a decision handed down Thursday by Judge John Richards Booth of the superior court.

Covello claimed that he procured a customer, one Nicholas Mooney, who was ready, able and willing to buy the property of the defendants, located at 86-108 Franklin street, Norwich, for their price of $50,000. He claimed that they engaged him to do this and agreed to pay him a three per cent commission. Attorney Edward McKay represented the plaintiff.

WEST WILLINGTON HENS FINISH FIRST AND SECOND IN CONTEST AT STORRS

George Lowry of West Willington, Conn., is entitled to all the glory that can be bestowed upon the winner of a contest, says the official report on the egg laying contest at Storrs. His two pens entered last fall captured first and second place over all the other 138 pens. During the seventeen years that the contest has been running, 17,410 birds have been trapnested. These birds have come from the four corners of the globe, representing some thirty-two states, three Canadian Provinces, and England. Almost 600 poultry breeders have entered birds in these contests, but no record has ever been produced equal to the one just made by George Lowry's pen of White Leghorns. This pen finished the fifty-first week with a grand total of 2,969 eggs which is greater than any other pen total ever produced at this contest by 300 eggs. As a matter of fact it is believed by the contest management that it is the highest record ever produced by any ten birds in an official contest in the world for fifty-one weeks. This pen will be kept a full year in order that it may have a chance to break the world record made by the University of British Columbia's pen of birds at the Agassiz contest in 1926. Lowry's second atring pen laid 2,573 eggs.

The following is a list of the winning pens and their scores for the past ten years:

Hen No. 436—a Rhode Island Red owned by George B. Treadwell of Spencer, Mass., is the highest scoring bird that has ever been trapnested at the Storrs contest since it started in 1911. This bird laid 334 eggs and will be kept for the full year. 300 eggers seem to be quite common in the present contest for no less than ten have made that distinction, which is seven more than last year and four more than for the last sixteen years. Records revised to date indicate that one such bird should appear in every 1,100 pullets put through the trapnests.

Below is a list of the 300 eggers and their scores until the end of the contest:

George B. Treadwell, R. I. Red 334, George Lowry, W. Leghorn 321, Charlescote Farm, R. I. Red 321, Hollywood P. Farm, W. Leghorn 317, Broadview Farm, W. Leghorn 314, W. S. Hannah & Sons, W. Leghorn 312, Broadview Farm, W. Leghorn 311, Globus P. Farm, R. I. Red 306, George Lowry, W. Leghorn 303, George Lowry, W. Leghorn 302.

In the Rhode Island Red class a new contest record has been established by Charlescote Farm's pen from Sherborn, Mass. This pen finished third in the contest with a lay of 2,543 eggs. Not only is this the highest egg record for a pen of Rhode Island Reds in the Storrs contest, but it is believed that it is the highest in the world. The second best pen in this class is owned by Clarence E. Lee of Auburn, N. Y. This pen has been doing some fine laying for the past six months, and finished the contest with a net of 2,536 eggs.

In the Wyandotte class Fisher Poultry Farm was first with a production of 2,270 eggs. Second honors in this breed went to The Locusts of West Cornwall, Conn., whose pen laid 2,215 eggs. In the Barred Rock class R. W. Davis & Sons of Rockland, Maine had the best pen. These birds laid 2,087 eggs. Second place went to Kerr Chickeries, Inc., of Frenchtown, N. J. In the White Rock class Granite Springs Farm of Granite Springs, N. Y., was first with a lay of 2,188 eggs and E. A. Hirt of South Weymouth, Mass., was second. In the Connecticut pens Lowry's Leghorns were first and second; Broadview Farm of Winsted, third; and William L. Gilbert Home was fourth.

The contest started November 1st, continued for 51 weeks, and closed on Monday, October 22nd. The contest comprised 140 pens of ten birds each, or a total of 1,400 hens from 20 different states, the Province of Ontario in Canada and England. These birds laid a grand total of 262,916 eggs or an average of 188 for each bird. This annual average is five eggs higher than last year's contest and the highest average record ever produced at the Storrs contest. The subjoined table shows the number of birds in each of the principal varieties the average individual egg yield for the year, and the general average for all breeds that competed:

30	Other varieties	144.1
120	Barred Rocks	180.6
70	White Rocks	185.7
30	White Wyandottes	186.7
840	Rhode Island Reds	190.4
760	White Leghorns	189.7
1400	Average for all breeds	187.8

Among the twenty best pens of the contest Connecticut had four, Massachusetts four, Washington two, New York two, Michigan two, Oregon, England, Maine, New Jersey, Ontario and Ohio one each.

Vanderbilt Yacht at New London

William K. Vanderbilt's palatial yacht Ara was launched from the ways of the Thames Towboat company shipyard at New London Wednesday afternoon after having her bottom thoroughly cleaned and painted. Mr. Vanderbilt was expected to arrive later in the afternoon to board the vessel. The owner is planning a two years' trip around the world in the Ara and is expected to start soon. In the Ara, Mr. Vanderbilt a short time ago, completed a voyage to the West Indies and South America, being accompanied by his bride, Rosamond Lancaster Warburton, granddaughter of the late David Hale Fanning, one of the benefactors of Connecticut college.

BIBLE STUDY CLASS HELD AT Y. M. C. A.

The group of men who attended the weekly Bible study class at the local Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening was greatly interested in the discussion. The scripture used for the basis of the study was Mark 1: 21-34. The topic was "Jesus and the Sick." Some of the points brought out in the study were as follows: Mark used the word "straight" many times in his gospel, in connection with the activities of Jesus. The Master was certainly a very busy man; he never wasted his time, for it was too precious. Too many men waste valuable time; sometimes by doing nothing; sometimes for lack of system and also because of ignorance of their job, etc. The plodder accomplishes much more than does the man who plays to the gallery.

"Jesus always spoke with peculiar authority; he was original; he claimed he had authority and he did. Jesus wrought two cures on this occasion; one was the casting out of a devil and the other was the curing of the mother of Peter's wife, and by the time evening came large numbers of sick folk came to be healed, and Jesus healed many. It is possible today for men of christian character and devout faith to accomplish cures.

"It is a greater miracle to cure a man of envy and malice than to cure a physical illness. Every christian man should realize that there are those around him who are troubled, in pain or in sin, and he can and should endeavor to help his fellows thus afflicted. If we love God with the whole heart and our neighbor as we love ourselves we will be of the greatest possible use in the world."

Crown Prince's Double

AMIENS, France—(AP)—Like Lindbergh, former Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany has a double in France. He is Baron van Wychersloock of Flanders.

BOYS GO INTO BUSINESS OF BUILDNG TOY PLANES

HOUSTON, Texas—(AP)—One of the youngest industries in Houston is a toy airplane factory, established and owned by Frank Harrel, 15 years old, and Albert Rowe, 14.

Frank, designed the planes, which are being made for young customers in all sections of the city. The boys began making the tiny "machines for their own use and amusement. News of their proficiency as builders spread and soon their office was filled with orders.

Now Frank and Albert work overtime, for the guarantee delivery of airplanes one day after the orders are received.

Frank's model is made of rubber bands and spool-like frame inside the body connecting with the propeller and making it spin. Theplane will fly 300 feet. It has a wing spread of about 11 inches.

Frank has built a model of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis." It is fashioned out of bamboo sticks and pine. The frame is covered with tissue paper and the entire surfaces then is covered with shellac.

The boys hope to build real airplanes some day.

DUCKS PACED BY AIRMAN, FLY 90 MILES AN HOUR

ST. PAUL—(AP)—Curiosity prompted Gene Shank, an aviator, to pace flying ducks and geese, and now he knows they travel 90 miles an hour. Shank once held the record forthe number of loops in a plane.

Once, while in the air, he trailed a flock of blue teals. They were going one and one-half miles a minute.

Again he followed a flock of Canadian geese. His mount, a training ship, could only do 80 miles an hour. By the distance he lost he estimated they flew 90 miles an hour.

Magnesia Best for Acid Indigestion

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants.

Most people who used to suffer from gas, sourness, bloating and indigestion have now given up disagreeable diets and the use of harmful artificial digestants. Instead they eat their favorite and formerly forbidden foods and after meals take a little Bisurated Magnesia—either tablets or powder—in some water. They have no stomach trouble.

Most so-called indigestion is merely "too much acid" in the stomach. Food sours and ferments before it can be digested. Gas forms. The stomach needs an alkaline to give safe, certain and speedy relief.

Bisurated Magnesia instantly neutralizes excess stomach acids, sweetens the food contents, ends gas and bloating and quickly stops stomach pain. Then digestion becomes easy. It is a safe, pleasant and convenient method to use, and reliable druggists everywhere sell it on a positive guarantee of satisfactory relief or money back. Try a test package on this plan, and enjoy your meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Barber Won't Bob

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. —(AP)— Abbie Bergsma, local barber, no more will bob a woman's hair because he interprets the Bible as being opposed to short tresses. He quotes First Corinthians: "It is a glory to her: for her hair is given to her for a covering."

MAYFLOWER DESCENDANTS ELECT TO MEMBERSHIP

The 32nd annual meeting of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the state of Connecticut was held in the lecture room of the Morgan Memorial at Hartford Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, Governor Edwin H. Bingham, presiding. The secretary, Miss Jennie Loomis, of Windsor, stated that the Society had lost fourteen members during the year by death; three by resignation; two by transfer to other societies; three dropped for non-payment of dues. To offset these losses, thirty-five members have been added, making a total of 533, an increase of seventeen over last year. Included in ten elected to membership in the society were Charles Billings Allyn, Mystic, 9th in descent from William Brewster; Mrs. Charles Billings Allyn, 10th from John Howland; Mrs. Christopher Clinton Case, Willimantic, 10th from William Brewster. Reports were presented as follows: by the treasurer, Edwin H. Tucker; historian, Dr. Edwin A. Hill, Washington, D. C.; chairman of membership committee, Mrs. Herbert L. Crandall, New London; historical research, Mrs. J. William Bailey, Middletown; press publicity, Mrs. Albert Carlos Bates.

The nominating committee, Prof. Edward F. Humphrey, chairman, presented the following names for the respective offices to which they were duly elected: Governor, George Clinton Fairchild Williams, M. D., Hartford; deputy governor, Charles Welles Cross, Hartford; secretary, Miss Jennie Loomis, Windsor; assistant secretary, Miss Alice Lee Welcher, Hartford; treasurer, Edwin Hovey Tucker, Hartford; historian, Edwin Alston Hill, Ph. D., Washington, D. C.; elder, Rt. Rev. Chauncey B. Brewster, D. D., Hartford; captain, Robert Lovell Smith, New London; auditor, Samuel C. Doty, Hartford; assistants, term to expire 1931, Mrs. Albert Carlos Bates, Hartford; Miss Katherine Seymour Day, Hartford; Edwin Henry Bingham the retiring governor.

At the luncheon which followed at the Hartford club, the reception committee was as follows: Miss Jane Burton Watson, chairman; Mrs. Normand F. Allen; Mrs. Frank A. Corbin, New Haven; Mrs. John M. Parker, Jr., Hartford; Mrs. Donald T. Warner, Salisbury, also members of the board of assistants. The speaker of the day was Hon. John Denord Merrill, governor general of the Order of the Founders and Patriots of America, whose subject was "The Value of American Patriotic and Ancestral Societies." Songs were rendered by Maurice Wallen, and the "Mayflower Compact" was read by the captain, Robert Lovell Smith, of New London.

RIVER BARGES HANDLE BIG GRAIN MOVEMENT

MINNEAPOLIS —(AP)— More than 2,000,000 bushels of grain will have been moved out of this region on barges by the time winter locks the Mississippi river lane.

This is the first full season of barge transportation on the upper reaches of the stream, most of the grain on which goes to New Orleans for transfer to ocean freighters bound for Great Britain.

W. W. Morse, manager of the upper river division of the Inland Waterways corporation, estimates that transfer by river to the southern port this year is saving grain shippers $175,000 in freight bills.

Five or six barges, each carrying 15,000 bushels, are going downstream each week from Minneapolis, St. Paul and Burlington, Iowa, says G. E. Helwig, traffic manager.

In September 652,370 bushels of grain, largely wheat from northwest fields, went down river for exportation, in addition to quantities of merchandise. High water has made large tows possible.

Wheat shipped by barge, whether it is new or old, arrives in New Orleans in as good condition as when it is loaded," says Morse.

"The steel barges do not permit any dampness, while there can be no heating of the grain because the water is cool the length of the stream."

Grain movement on the upper river last year was less extensive because tows did not begin operations until August.

Edison Fruit Grower

FORT MYERS, Fla.—(AP)— Thomas A. Edison is a fruit grower as well as inventor. He is sending exhibits to a series of New England fairs this fall. Included are three bunches of cocoanuts, 46 single cocoanuts and a number of sapodillas.

Job Hazardous

MIAMI, Fla. —(AP)— Dog-eat-dog-catcher seems to be the canine war cry here. In a recent dog roundup, Harold Fitzstevens, employed by the health department, was bitten seven times.

CONVICTS WORK FARM WITHOUT GUARDS NEAR

RHINELANDER, Wis. —(AP)— More than forty convicts are serving prison terms on a 400-acre farm north of here without guards watching them.

The men are in charge of one man, a superintendent. The windows of the farm house where the men live are without bars, and there is no outward evidence that they are prisoners.

State prison officials selected the men for their exemplary conduct. Should they attempt to escape, and be recaptured, their right to work on the farm away from the tangible evidence of authority would be withdrawn.

Products for the prison are raised on the land. None of the men has attempted to escape.

NEW ROAD TO QUEBEC WILL BE OPENED SOON

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A new international highway linking Three Rivers, Canada, with Portland, Me., will be officially opened this autumn, George H. Barringer, vice consul at Quebec, informs the department of commerce.

The highway, named the Arnold Trail, will follow the route used by General Arnold when he invaded Canada with his troops after the outbreak of the Revolutionary war. It will shorten by many miles the distance between Quebec and New England centers and will pass through one of the most beautiful parts of Canada.

EASTERN VOLUNTOWN

Callers recently at Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood's were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Breman of Saybrook and Miss Rebecca Strongheart of Turner Falls, Mass. They called to see Moses, Mrs. Bitgood's pet rooster, but poor Moses did not look very good, as he is losing his feathers.

Sunday visitors and callers at the Pine Grove farm were Elisha Bitgood and daughter, Mrs. Emma Chattee, and three children of Hope Valley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barber and son and granddaughter of Jewett City, Joel Barber, cousin of Mr. Bitgood of Voluntown, and George Green and grandson of Eastern Voluntown. There were 15 that ate dinner.

Marion Gray and two sons of Campbell Mills called at the Pine Grove farm Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Tanner of Ekonk took their little girl to Willimantic hospital and she had an operation Monday on her throat. She had her tonsils taken out. Hope to hear of her coming home soon. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner have your correspondent's sympathy in their trouble.

James Church had five of his friends from Thornton, R. I., to call on him Sunday afternoon. There were three young ladies and one gentleman.

Mrs. Albert Brown's daughter and Mrs. John Lewis and William Strange of Voluntown visited with Mrs. George and Annie Bitgood of Sterling Hill one day last week. Mr. Strange said they had a good old fashioned dinner and lots of other goodies besides. He thinks if you want to get something good to eat, go up and see Annie Bitgood.

Lee Remington was in Danielson and Providence recently.

Callers at William Bitgood's Tuesday were John R. Barber of Escoheag and Frank Sweet and friend of Shannock, R. I.

Mrs. William Ingraham and son, Winfield Moran, who have been visiting Thomas J. Barber, have gone to visit some of their other friends.

Callers at Mrs. Alice Reed's Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hull of Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hull and Mrs. Frank Mell of Lisbon.

William Bitgood and James Church were callers on George Green recently.

Had quite a rain Tuesday afternoon and evening.

For All To See

INDIANAPOLIS —(AP)— Portraits of Indiana governors, which are now in storage, are likely to be dusted off and hung in the capitol as a result of agitation among state house officials. There was thought to be no room available.

CONSIDERING BLUFF POINT AS POSSIBLE STATE PARK

That Bluff Point, or Gardner Point, as it is also known, in the town of Groton, fronting on Long Island sound, may soon be forwarded again as a favorable site for a state park is seen in the statement of Herman H. Chapman of New Haven, who has said that two more state parks along the shores should be acquired as soon as possible by the state park and forest commission. Mr. Chapman is a member of the commission, which has been for some time considering the Bluff Point site.

During the last session of the general legislature a bill to appropriate money for the purchase of the Bluff Point site was introduced. Largely through the efforts of Representative John M. Malion, Jr., of New London, member of the committee on state parks and reservations the bill was favorably reported by the committee and favored by the senate and the house of representatives. It then went to the appropriations' committee, but was unfavorably acted upon there. The committee reasoned that the amount of money required to purchase the site was more than could be used for the purpose at that time, for there were other large appropriations to be made, and it was declared that the state park bill would have to give way for them.

Bluff Point is reached by automobile by following the Boston Post road to Poquonoc Bridge and then turning at the hotel, by traveling along a road leading to the Midway railway yards to an entrance gate to the point. The seashore section is reached by following a low road on one side of which is woodland, and on the other open fields. There is another entrance road which runs to a farmhouse on the place.

The shores of the greater part of Bluff Point are rock strewn. There is a long beach which stretches from the point to Bushy Point. The point has become a favorite place for many persons to spend summers, and there are many shacks there. The point proper is practically devoid of trees, but back from the point there is much woodland.

According to Mr. Chapman, although Connecticut is making "commendable progress in building up a series of state forests for the production of timber, the protection of water sheds and the propagation of fish and game," it is his opinion that it is "behind hand in the acquisition of park lands along the shores."

The one active shore park of the state, at Hammonasset Beach, is serving more than a half-million persons a year.

DANIELSON

PEOPLE GET ONE FLEETING GLIMPSE OF GOV. SMITH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 25—A brilliant hued rainbow gracefully arched itself over the town of Plainfield this afternoon as Governor Smith's special train was wending its way westward through that section, and perhaps there was no democrat who happened to see it that did not regard it as a good omen for the democratic candidate for the presidency of the United States. Incidentally, the rainbow followed a smart little shower such as is traditionally associated with early April days.

At Moosup and at Plainfield railroad stations were gathered those who would cheer "Al" Smith, with those who came only with a faint curiosity of seeing just what he looks like. At Moosup a crowd of about 300, including many school children, cheered lustily as the special ran through, but had to be satisfied with no more than a passing glance of the celebrity seated in his private car, the last in the train.

The cross-over of the Providence-Willimantic, New London-Worcester routes at Plainfield forced a slow down—almost to a stop—of the special, which picked up train orders there. Probably 300 persons, mostly school children, who had waited through the hour that the train was late to see Governor Smith set up a lusty cheer and waved flags and hoisted Smith banners as the special crept past the station.

Sharp-eyed spectators, checking each car of the train as it rolled along, seemed due to be satisfied with no more than a passing glimpse of newspapermen clicking away at typewriters, and others of the governor's entourage having a late lunch as the private car St. Nicholas cleared the station platform.

There was such a hub-bub of cheering and tooting of motor horns, however, that the famous "Al" and his brown derby made an appearance in the vestibule of his car as it was hauling away into the distance—giving those who would do him honor and those who would like to see him, as a matter of record—a fleeting glimpse of one of the outstanding figures of the nation.

Plainfield people and those who stood with them from other towns to watch the passing of the special were a bit disappointed, but fully sensed that it is quite impossible for any presidential candidate to be on view or on parade all of the time, no matter how much he might desire to see and please everyone.

Ovila Belanger, resident of the West Side, being more or less indiscreet, found himself in a difficult position this morning, when he was presented before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court, facing a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of an intoxicant. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs, which was paid.

Mr. Belanger practically arrested himself last night, as shall be set forth: A very few days ago state officers from the Danielson barracks appeared at his home on the West Side with a view to conducting a liquor raid. It appears at hisxJtflik ETAOINEAOI It appears that their demands for entrance were unheeded, so they more or less forcibly eased their way in, a fact that apparently has germinated some belligerent ideas in Mr. Belanger's mentality. Last evening he appeared at the state police barracks to make a complaint and to have an accounting, and was ushered in, it is understood, as graciously as though he were a royal personage. Belanger had arrived at the barracks in his car and was not so good, as to sobriety, at the time. Having been so courteously received he was invited to enter through another door at the barracks and when someone shut it after him he was in the cage where prisoners are kept, and remained there until this morning, when he was taken down to court. This all being more or less unusual, it gets due publicity this morning.

In line with the policy of the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn, and their people, and incident to unfortunate situations that have arisen in various places throughout the country, Supt. W. E. Parker of the schools of Killingly and Brooklyn issued the following circular letter to principals of schools in the two towns mentioned this afternoon, with a request that its contents be made known to all teachers in the area mentioned: To the teachers of Killingly and Brooklyn: It is not at all unlikely that at this particular time in connection with the study of history and civics, teachers of the various class rooms may wish to hold a mock election. If this be properly done I can see no objection whatsoever but if the political situation be discussed in the class rooms or if such mock election be held please bear in mind that the teacher must in all cases be absolutely impartial and non-partisan, making no reference whatsoever to the merits of any candidate and expressing to the pupils of the school no opinions concerning the various issues.

Already there have been in various communities teachers who have shown poor judgment in these matters and this letter is by way of warning to exercise the utmost care in anything you may say or do. Yours very truly,

W. E. PARKER,
Superintendent of schools.

Up to this afternoon no meeting has been held of the special committee of the town appointed at a special town meeting last Friday evening to arrange for the employment of a certified public accountant to audit the books of officials of the town of Killingly. When the committee is to meet and confer is not announced. The committee is made up of Patrick Riley, Attorney E. L. Darbie and Frank J. Gorman.

No republican rallies are to be held here during the presidential campaign. This was announced this afternoon and is in line with local party policy as forecasted weeks ago. The local republican organization is depending on advertisements in the interest of party candidates, on the wealth of newspaper publicity that has been given party policies and which will continue to be given right up to election day, and to radio broadcasts. Local republicans will be in action the last few days of the campaign, however, perfecting the machinery for getting out a record party vote. This work is to be systematized in a manner to insure getting every republican voter to the polls.

A clipping from a Winter Haven, Fla., newspaper indicates that Henry W. Babson of Danielson received a cordial welcome when he arrived there a few days ago to spend his tenth winter season. Mr. Babson enjoys the honorary title of Colonel down there, and is also known as the "Grand Old Mason." The paper quotes Mr. Babson as saying that Winter Haven looks finer and more beautiful than ever before. Mention also is made of the fact that he reached his 85th birthday on October 5, and that here in Danielson he was showered with scores of cards and other greetings from friends in Winter Haven. Mr. Babson is the oldest attendant at Masonic lodge meetings in Winter Haven, and the cards he received while here were mostly from his southern friends in that order or members of their families.

The Winter Haven writer did not overlook the fact that "the colonel is sporting a 'donkey' pin on which the name of Al Smith is engraved. The colonel is an enthusiastic Smith supporter and declares that he is for Al—first, last and all of the time—which is comforting news to the Smithites of this city. However, the colonel does not disdain his Hoover friends and gives them equally as enthusiastic a greeting."

Monster fur sale, extraordinary values, wonderful selection. Your chance of the season. Sale opens Friday and continues through Saturday. See large display adv. on this page Saturday, The Vogue Shop, W. E. Bitgood, proprietor, Hyde Block.—Adv.

John W. Gallup, one of Danielson's best known business men and one of the democratic nominees for representative from this town, is a patient at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston for observation.

John C. Wiltse of Brockton was a visitor with friends in Danielson today.

Nathan Blumenthal, who has been away from business the past week on account of illness, was able today to reassume supervisory control of his interests here, being well on the road to recovery.

There were very heavy frosts all through this territory this morning, and hunters expressed their appreciation of weather conditions more to their liking.

Today's sessions of the public schools of Killingly marked the end of teaching and studying activities for this week, as the schools will be closed Friday to permit the teaching staff to attend teachers' conventions to be held at different cities in the state. Numbers of Killingly's teachers will be at the convention in New London.

It was said for the assessors of Killingly today that many people have as yet failed to file their lists of taxable property, and the time for doing that thing without being subject to a 10 per cent addition expires with this month.

Killingly people interested in obtaining positions with the federal government may be interested in knowing that ment under the civil service commission open competitive examinations for the field service in New England and Canada are to be held in the near future and that applications must be on file by November 9. More relative to this may be ascertained by inquiry at the postoffice.

Chief A. P. Woodward of the Danielson fire department is home again after spending a week in Philadelphia in attendance at the annual convention of the International Fire Chiefs association. Chief Woodward tells of interesting sessions of the body, marvelous entertainment and finally, a trip, to New York, where he was one of the guests of Chief Kenlon on a trip of a new fireboat of the New York fire department on a trip around the great city's waterfront.

Clayton F. Wright, former member of the legislature from this town, and for years a resident of Sterling, is to leave in November to spend the winter in the south.

It now appears that only a few young people who have reached their majority since October 20—last time for making voters above 21 years of age—will call upon officials of the town to admit them to the electorate prior to November 6

MANY COMPLAIN OF RADIO INTERFERENCE IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 25—Superintendent Ralph E. Thurston of the Eastern Connecticut Power company is being deluged with complaints from residents on the west side of the Quinebaug River, relative to interference that is marring radio reception daily and is believed to be a leakage from some lines of the power company furnishing power to homes on that side of the city.

Mr. Thurston with his staff of electrical engineers have been working for the past two weeks in the vicinity of Bridge street and Woodstock avenue attempting to locate the trouble.

Mr. Thurston said this afternoon that his men have been unsuccessful since the start and are of the opinion that an amateur radio broadcaster has a transmitting outfit in operation and is delighting at the communications with other stations and is unaware of the annoyance he is causing one half of the radio audience in Putnam. Engineers in various radio stores of the city have devised portable receiving sets and have stationed themselves in suspicious neighborhoods in the city evenings, attempting to locate the would be "amateur" but their search was fruitless. The amateur must pass prescribed government tests and is assigned a license and number of his station operating upon a wave length which will not interfere with commercial reception. Violations of this law will subject any person to arrest, according to regulations of the federal radio commission.

The aurora borealis or northern lights were plainly visible Wednesday evening and formed beautiful patchwork on the northern skies of green, red and pink color variation.

Rumors today that the Al Smith special train out of Providence would run through Putnam on its way to Hartford, where the governor would receive the greetings of the capital city, proved untrue when railroad dispatches reached here saying that the train bearing the democratic nominee passed through the town of Plainfield. Word was received that the train positively could not be re-routed and several Putnam residents left early this morning for Providence where they witnessed the hospitality of the Rhode Islanders toward the empire state chief executive. Among them were democratic candidate for general assembly Otis Fox and Richard Wenlen. Mrs. W. J. Bartlett and Mrs. W. F. Rafferty of Grove street returned from Boston this morning where they had attended the Boston ovation to Governor Smith on Wednesday.

The fourth democratic town rally was held Wednesday evening in St. John's auditorium on Providence street with a capacity crowd in attendance. Before the opening of the meeting the democrats staged a monster Al Smith parade through the streets. The demonstration was headed by a large automobile wrecker and carried gigantic Smith banners.

Joseph C. Dutton, former mayor of Bristol, Conn., was the only speaker. Mr. Dutton's subject was upon the campaign in general. During his speech he introduced Leon A. Talbot, democratic candidate for representative to general assembly and James J. Charron, candidate for Putnam judge of probate court.

The principal speaker of the evening was to have been John A. Matthew, former congressman from New Jersey, but through a sudden illness that came upon him in Newport this previous evening Mr. Matthew was forced to cancel his Putnam engagement. At the close of Mr. Dutton's address the local committee tuned in for the radio address of Governor Alfred E. Smith from Boston, but the reception was distorted because of the disturbance being experienced in the north end of the city.

A death in North Grosvenordale this morning was that of Gideon Reichie, a life long resident of the little textile village. Mr. Reichie was stricken early in the week and succumbed today after a courageous but losing battle against death. He is a native of Canada, but came to North Grosvenordale several years ago. He is survived by his son, Eli Reichie, who resides in Webster.

Word received today by Putnam friends of Miss Fannie Oblets, former Putnam girl, is that Miss Oblets is making a speedy recovery from a recent strain on her wrists and fingers that forced her to give up her studies at the Juliard Foundation of Music in New York city, where she won competitive honors and obtained a scholarship to the school. Miss Oblets completed her first course of study with high honors and was about to take final examinations for her second scholarship, when the muscles in her hands refused to function and she had to abandon the work. She has been under scientific treatment and hope was expressed in letters that she will be fully recovered by the first of the year and will be able to return to her musical studies.

Putnam's first female member of the bar will be Miss Elsie Gallant of Church street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Gallant, if she successfully passes the bar examinations which she will take in December. Miss Gallant has completed a law course at the Hartford school of law and is continuing her study at the offices of Torrey and Geissler in Putnam. At a meeting of the Windham county bar association held last week in Willimantic, Miss Gallant's application for permission to take the examinations was accepted. She is a graduate of Putnam high school and for a number of years was employed in the law offices of Torrey and Geissler.

The assessors of the town are now in session at their offices in the municipal building for the purposes of receiving valuations for the 1929 grand tax list of property. The assessors will be in session from today until November 1 to receive the lists of taxable property. As is other places all those owning automobiles and not entering them upon the list will be assessed an extra ten per cent, since the local board have check lists from the state motor vehicle department.

The Windham County Farmers association have engaged Miss Alice A. Billings of Waltham, Mass., to fill the position of director of home economics of Windham county. She will work among the homemakers of the county and her duties will consist of aid-

FERTILIZER CAN HARM AS WELL AS AID CROP

CRENOBLE, France—(AP)—French authorities hold the use of fertilizers responsible for a cryptogamic disease known as pouridie, which is ravaging the walnut orchards, one of the principal sources of wealth in this region.

Spread of the disease long has been a mystery. M. Gard, eminent agricultural chemist, has discovered that it is due to decalcification of the soil by the use of chemical fertilizers.

Contrary to the impression of persons who have not looked at the map the eastern end of the Panama canal empties into the Pacific, while the western end empties into the Atlantic.

Rheumatic Agony

Can Be Ended

There is absolutely no reason why any one who is constantly subject to attacks of Rheumatism, Neuritis or Gout should go on suffering the terrible torture and awful pain of these dread afflictions. For instance any rheumatic sufferer may get immediate and quick relief from the use of Rheuma, a harmless remedy which has proved itself in thousands of cases.

Rheuma will absolutely stop your rheumatic suffering or it will not cost you one penny. If you really want to get rid of those awful stabbing knife-pains—if you really want to drive those dull, grinding, numbing aches out of your system, just step into Lee & Osgood Co. and ask for a bottle of RHEUMA, for they, and druggists everywhere, sell it with a positive guarantee of money back if it does not rid you of all rheumatic misery.

NESTLING IN THE LAP OF NATURE.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

Doubtless you have all heard of Dr. Cadman. He is the pastor of one of Brooklyn's biggest churches and president of the Federal Council of Churches and newly appointed preacher-by-radio to a Sunday hook-up of several hundred radio stations and several million radio fans. In addition to the duties going with all these positions, he has a busy and usually helpful finger in scores of other pies.

Among other things, he is constantly being called upon by people in theological doubt or social uncertainty or domestic difference for advice as to the handling of their problems. In fact, this latter function—sort of advisor-general to the universe—has long been so demanding that, some years ago, he established in the Herald-Tribune a daily department, called "Dr. Cadman's Counsel." In this he answers the more significant and widely appealing questions which are being thrown at him all the time.

Parents with wayward daughters or domineering sons, children with ultra-conservative parents, husbands and wives with varying phases of the common domestic problem worrying them, doubting Thomases and dogmatic Peters of theology, inquirers about evolution and companionate marriage—all these and hundreds of others fly to his study lamp like moths on a summer night for advice or suggestion or help.

I was especially interested in his recent answer to a correspondent who wrote, noting that, with all their talk about getting back to nature, most of the urban "nature-lovers" hustled back to town the moment fall approaches, and asking, "After all, isn't it true that the country is a wilderness, even though a beautiful wilderness, and that most of us are glad to be out of it when the cold weather comes?"

To which Dr. Cadman replied—and I hope you'll be as much interested in the answer as I was:—

"I agree that nestling in the lap of nature, listening to the heartbeats of that great mother, can be overdone. The solid, steady-going farmer who does not rave about her, yet reaps her fruits, is her real lover. But he will tell you that he finds it exceedingly difficult to induce people to stay with him summer and winter. And why not? For though genuine country people are our real aristocracy, too many who have to live in the open spaces have heretofore simply withered away.

"But automobiles and the radio are rapidly combining urban and rural advantages. A few hours in a car, and you are in summer's enchanted realms or snugly lodged in your city home, according to your desire.

"Whatever town or country can do for us will soon be within the reach of the majority. The contrasts between vacation days and the lights of the city gleaming gratefully through the dripping gloom of an autumn evening are destined to be widely extended experiences.

"So why discuss the comparative merits of the rural regions and the cities? Marry them and let Henry Ford tie the knot."

From which it is reasonable to assume that you will note Dr. Cadman is a diplomatist as well as a counselor. He isn't to be driven into taking sides, so long as the middle of the road is open for an impartial passage. He divides his benediction between both sides of the road in carefully equalized shares. He has a good word to say for "the genuine country people who are our real aristocracy," and at the same time smiles approvingly on those who watch for the lights of the city, "gleaming gratefully through the dripping gloom of an autumn evening."

At the same time, I should know, from the tone of the answer, even though I had never heard of Dr. Cadman before, that he was a city man to the marrow of his bones. He is scrupulously impartial in his utterance. The stick of candy which he gives the country boy has exactly as much sugar in it as the chocolate bonbon he passes to the city maid. And the gist of his advice is that, by means of the automobile, radio, the telephone, etc., both candy-suckers ought to be happy in their mutual capacity to "swap cuds" whenever desirable. His last jocose suggestion that country merits and civic conveniences can be married with Henry Ford of flivver fame tying the knot is simply a graceful and kindly way of side-stepping the real dispute.

For it is a real one, after all. And some of us doubt whether it can ever be satisfactorily settled, or even comfortably compromised. There is no doubt that the two disputants can, with proper management, be got to shake hands and swear off hair-pulling. But, whether they can ever be got to draw together in the same double harness, and in the same direction, is quite another matter.

Dr. Cadman is absolutely right in saying that this "nestling in the lap of nature" can be "overdone." It not only can be, it annually is by hundreds and thousands of insincere or monkey-minded pilgrims from the cities.

Nature isn't by any means always a cuddly, purry foster-mother. She may seem that way, at times. But sooner or later, the would-be "nestler" finds that she has claws and fangs as well as soft fur.

So has all the rest of life.

And the radical, fundamental distinction between the real nature-lover and his cheap imitator is that the real lover takes her as she is with all her faults and all her tantrums and all her cruelties and "has it out with her" on her own field, taking and giving in a certain stern joy of combat; while the imitation lover snarks up at her and whispers honeyed words—and all the while is planning to get back to town as soon as possible. He doesn't really love her at all. He pretends to, because that is "the thing" to do in his set. But, at the bottom of his heart, he doesn't understand her, doesn't really like her, and is vastly more comfortable in surroundings where the natural has been mostly suppressed and the conventional has been put in charge.

He may put on an air of affection for the surf at the shore resort, or for the winding trails behind the mountain hotel. But what he really wants is the asphalt sidewalked pavements and the bathroom with hot and cold water always on tap.

Now nature doesn't even make trails through her domains. The lover who seeks to penetrate into her real home must make his own trails, and take his own chances of their getting him there.

Moreover, nature distinctly and irrevocably refuses to be put "on tap" behind either a nickel-plated or a solid silver faucet.

She "gangs her ain gait," and can no more be piped through man-made conduits than an eagle can be caged in a walnut shell.

The main endeavor of the city-lover is to eliminate, abolish, or at least avoid all the roughnesses of nature. Whenever nature begins to show her claws he sets his manicurists at work paring them down to stubs. Whenever she bares her rather savage teeth he sets his dentists to filing them down into mere grinders or pulling them completely out. When she begins to growl he sets his so-called musicians to the task of transforming the noise into "jazz." When she actually starts to bite, he turns tail incontinently and seeks refuge in some lock-fast retreat where he feels sure she can't get at him.

Per contra, the true country-lover doesn't want to get away from nature; he wants to get away with her. When she shows her claws he picks up his club; when she bares her fangs he gets out his gun; when she begins to growl he laughs in her face and says "Now you're talking, old girl." And if she sets out to bite he answers with club or knife or gun and gaily yodels, as the furflies, "Fight fair, now, and we'll see who lasts longest?"

The true nature-lover who, perforce, is also country-lover, likes to "nestle" when the nestling is good, just as well as anybody else. At the same time he recognizes the ultimate fact that he can't expect to be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease, and that there's a time for labor as well as loafing, for giving as well as taking, for battle as truly as for Sybaritic luxury.

Everyone knows the difficulty of mixing oil and water—and making them stay mixed. The country spirit and the city spirit are every whit as unmixable. Oil and water are both fluid; the countryman and the urbanite are both human. But, somehow, there's a line of division if not of actual hostility between them both.

Of course, there are exceptions. There are those who live in the city winters, because they have to, all the while wishing they could have stayed in the country. And there are those who stick the winters through in the wilderness, always wishing they didn't have to, but could hive up in town. And there are those who honestly attempt a compromise, a sort of modus vivendi by which they seek to combine city comforts with rural freedom.

Also there are sincere country-lovers who are free to admit certain superiorities in city conveniences. A shower-bath, for example, is exceedingly comfortable and consolatory. And it's pleasant to be able to take one in a warm bathroom when the natural cascade in the rural glen is either frozen stiff or spattering ice-water. Also steam-heated city apartments have claims against stove-warmed farmhouse chambers or kitchens.

On the other hand, life lacks sturdiness and elasticity when it is all made easy. The storm-swept, ice-incrusted oaks on New England's granite ridges shake defiance in the face of winter gales, while the tropically nurtured and vastly more graceful-looking palms of the summer lands are uprooted by the first hurricane.

For the most of us life is hard, even at its best. There is no real question as to which is worthiest, either for the individual or the race, whether to face it and fight it or to dodge it and try to hide from it.

"Things are in the saddle and ride mankind," once wrote Emerson. This is a reversal of the desirable order. Mankind should take the saddle and ride things.

But it isn't likely to be done in a social regime which frankly puts possession above being; which measures men by what they have rather than by what they are.

THE FARMER.

An Uphill Fight.

You may be ill and you may be sore
With aches and bruises and pains galore;
Perhaps you are groggy, and halt and lame;
But keep right on, for it's all a game
Where like as not you are booked to win
Right now, in spite of the shape you're in.

Your brain is weary, your thoughts are dead,
Each step is heavy as lifting lead;
The sun is under a passing cloud;
Don't let them measure you for a shroud,
But hang on now, though it may be hard,
For your next hand holds the winning card.

If you have played at a losing game
Until the colors all look the same,
You'll feel more joy when your luck has turned,
And look on life, which you may have spurned,
Through eyes that glow with the glory light
That comes from winning an uphill fight!

Have That Footlight Sheen

By Edna Wallace Hopper

To my audiences, my hair is of everlasting interest. It always looks alive and women admire its constant sheen.

Edna Wallace Hopper as she looks today

One of my "secrets" is mere cleanliness. The fascinating glow comes from the regular use of my liquid Wave and Sheen.

I shampoo my hair once a week under ordinary circumstances. After it dries I comb it and apply Wave and Sheen. Then I place my combs in the direction I wish the waves. (My hair is not curly.)

You can get Wave and Sheen at any toilet counter. The price is 75 cents. Your money refunded if you are not pleased with results.

Uncrowned Queen Of Italy

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD, N. Y.

H. R. H. Helen of France, Duchess of Aosta, who may become the Queen Mother of Italy, if the story told by the newspaper "Observateur" in Brussels is true. The story says that King Victor Emmanuel, because of Fascism, may abdicate in favor of the Duke of Apulia, who is the son of Helen. She is often called the Uncrowned Queen of Italy.

Seattle's first postoff e still re m..ins intact in that city. It was opened in August, 1858, and consisted of a mahogany table and desk at which the postmaster, A. A. Denny, sat to distribute letters and infrequent parcels. The desk, with fewer than a score of pigeonholes, indicates the town's population then.

LEBANON

In the death of Miss Harriet Hewitt Lebanon loses one of its most respected residents, one who had been a life-long resident of the town. She was loved by all as she was always ready to help anyone in trouble.

Mrs. George McDonald and Mrs. Walter Vey were in Bridgeport from Tuesday until Friday to attend the Missionary conference. They spent over night as guests of Rev. and Mrs. Stanley Selliels. Mr. Selliels was a former pastor of the First Congregational church.

The turkey supper given by the men of the Baptist church was well patronized Tuesday, a large number coming from New London, Norwich and Willimantic. About $50 was cleared. Roast turkey, mashed potato, turnip, onions, celery, cranberry sauce, pie, cheese and coffee was the menu.

Friday evening, a variety supper, consisting of meat loaf, mashed potato, rolls, cake and coffee, was served in the parlors of the First Congregational church to a large number of people; $50 was cleared.

The O. U. A. M. gave a whist in Grange hall on Tuesday evening. Five tables were in play. Mrs. A. E. Hewitt and David Pitcher, Miss Ethel Chapman and Lee Gardner won the prizes. Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Scott and four children spent the week-end with Mrs. Scott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Bruce.

Miss Leora Carpenter is visiting in New Haven.

Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Littlefield and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Goodwin spent Friday in New London, guests of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Harvey.

Mrs. C. M. Geer is spending a week with her sister, Mrs. M. D. Whitaker, at South Killingly.

Miss Beatrice Littlefield spent Wednesday and Thursday in New York on business.

Miss Marion Campbell was in Glasgo Tuesday evening to attend the shower given Miss Bertha Kashork, in honor of her approaching marriage.

Miss Viola Brewster is spending a week with Miss Myra Geer.

The Mission Study class met in the chapel of the Baptist church Wednesday evening. Games were enjoyed after the study hour and cake, cookies and cocoa were served by Mrs. Abel and her Sunday school class.

The United Cigar Stores company of America has acquired a substantial stock interest in La Lasine International, Inc., manufacturers of antiseptic products.

Autumn Thoughts

The Autumn!—the trees of the woodland
Gay robes of festivity wear—
The Frost King, with gold and with crimson,
Paints Nature in brilliancy rare!
Say not, that the Spirit of Winter
Is blighting the earth with her breath—
That Beauty is shrouded in sadness;
And Autumn is herald of Death!

We see, in the woodlands, in Maytime,
When Nature is waking anew—
The same glowing colors of Autumn,
In newness of life, peeping through—
Subdued tints of gold and of crimson,
In each tiny bud and new leaf;
But Spring heralds life, hope, and gladness,
With never a shadow of grief.

In budding new life of the springtime
A cheeks with Autumn is seen;
A color subdued, faintly shadowed—
Like crimson, with mist in between:—
So likewise, the spirits unfolding
In God's heavenly Springtime shall be;
In fuller perfection to blossom
In the light of Eternity.

God speaks, through the beauty of Autumn,
His mystical messages strange;
To listening hearts, a sweet story—
Eternity's story of change—
Death's shadow is changed into beauty
When all is made perfect in Him;
And we shall awake in His likeness
With eyes never clouded or dim.

Our Father, the Giver of beauty,
Speaks clearly to you and to me—
The hand of a great Master-Artist
Is shaping our life's destiny
Ah!—how can we fathom His purpose
Who gives to us all, life and breath?
For His thoughts are higher than earth—
Supreme over life, over death!

All-perfect His ways and all-righteous—
Through death's shadowed portal may be
The gate-way of life—still unfolding—
When spirit from earth's bond is free—
To life, that shall blossom in beauty
Like flowers that spring from the sod
Unfolding in infinite glory—
To life, all-eternal in God!

—By Emily Hersey.

October's Party

October gave a party;
The leaves by hundreds came—
The Chestnuts, Oaks and Maples,
And leaves of every name.
The Sunshine spread a carpet,
And everything was grand,
Miss Weather led the dancing,
Professor Wind the band.

The Chestnuts came in yellow,
The Oaks in crimson dressed;
The lovely Misses Maple
In scarlet looked the best;
All balanced to their partners,
And gayly fluttered by;
The sight was like a rainbow
New fallen from the sky.

Then, in the rustic hollow,
At hide-and-seek they played,
The party closed at sundown,
And everybody stayed.
Professor Wind played louder;
They flew along the ground;
And then the merry end-of
In jolly "hands around."

—George Cooper.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Barker—I believe in free speech.

Blunt—That's nice. I'd hate to have to pay to hear you.—Montreal Star.

Matrimonial problems are no longer solved; they are dissolved.—Everybody's Weekly.

Employer—What we want is a smart boy, intelligent and alert. Are you quick to take notice?

Applicant (proudly)—Yes, sir—'ad it twice in a fortnight once.—Sydney Bulletin.

First Girl—Jack Richleigh is so serious minded. Always tells me I ought to be putting something away for a rainy day.

Second Girl—Well, aren't you saving his letters?—London Opinion.

The farmer reproved the autoists who had helped themselves to his fruit.

"You must think I'm running a self-service farmateria," he growled at them.—Exchange.

Wife—Have you cut that article, "How to live to be a hundred years old" out of the paper?

Hubby—Yes, your mother must not read it.—Times of India.

Visiting Mother-in-Law — Robert doesn't kiss you goodby mornings, I notice. He'll probably make up for it by kissing his stenographer when he gets to the office.

Bride — I shouldn't mind that, mother.

Mother-in-Law—What! You'd let him kiss his stenographer?

Bride—Yes; you see his stenographer is a man.—America's Humor.

The force of a lightning flash was computed by Steinmetz to be about 50,000,000 volts.

A salt mining company in Michigan has lined a hole 1,100 feet deep with concrete, for use in getting out the salt.

A survey of doctors in towns of 1,000 people or less in the United States showed that almost one-third of these towns that had doctors in 1914 had none at all in 1925.

In an effort to rid streams of predatory fish the Texas game department recently had opportunity to study the effect of electricity on fish. A current of from 330 to 440 volts was put into a stream. The shocked fish floated to the surface and the predatory ones were gathered and killed. Whereas fish and snakes came to the top when shocked, turtles went to the stream's bottom. There were no fatalities from the electricity.

Dr. Amy Shuhoa Ling, a Chinese girl, is one of the few of her race practicing medicine in the United States. She is at present an interne at the Western Pennsylvania hospital at Pittsburgh. The Chinese girl began her year as an interne thereafter having graduated from the School of Medicine at Western Reserve University at Cleveland, O. There is little in Dr. Ling's appearance or conversation to distinguish her from an American girl. She wears a white uniform and shell-rimmed glasses.

For sixty-two years Vic Spjut, of Royal, Neb., has been mending shoes at Royal, Neb. He started his career in Sweden, when he was eight years old, in business with his father. It was the custom then to go from house to house mending shoes for entire families at a time. Spjut explained. Spjut came to this country forty-eight years ago and homesteaded near Royal. He lived in a sod house and has experienced blizzards in winter and tornadoes in the summer. Three times his crops were destroyed by hail, once he fought a prairie fire with his coat until only the collar remained and once his crops were eaten by grasshoppers.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Hector MacConnell

Funeral services for Mrs. Martha A. Service MacConnell were held Wednesday afternoon from her late home, 166 Grove street, Putnam. The officiating clergyman was Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Second Congregational church of which Mrs. MacConnell was a member. Interment was in Westfield cemetery, Danielson. The bearers were James Service, Jr., of So. Willington, a brother of Mrs. MacConnell and three nephews, J. Gallup Service, Frederick Service and John MacLearn, all of So. Willington.

Mrs. MacConnell was the widow of Hector MacConnell and spent many years of her life in Norwich where she has many friends. Surviving in the immediate family are three daughters, the Misses Margaret, Isabella and Mary E. MacConnell and a nephew, Donald MacLearn. There are also the following brothers and sisters: James Service, Jr., of So. Willington, Conn., William Service of Oakland, California, Mrs. Annie Knowles of Millville, N. J., and Mrs. Richard Stephenson of Audubon, N. J., the latter being in attendance at the funeral.

Norwich relatives present at the funeral services were Miss Mary MacConnell, John Service, Mrs. Fred Fox, Mrs. Elizabeth Service, James R. Service and Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Torrance; from So. Willington, Mr. and Mrs. James Service, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Gallup Service, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Service and John MacLearn.

HANOVER

Mrs. Roger C. Peck represented the Congregational church at the annual meeting of the A. B. C. F. M., at Bridgeport, last week Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Eighteen of the church people attended the union meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E., at Norwich Town M. E. church Sunday evening, and led by the acting president of the Hanover society, Mrs. John Robish. All remained to hear the illustrated lecture which the pastor of the church, Rev. George Warren Potter, gave upon Applied Christianity as indicated by the work of hospitals under the direction of the Deaconess' society of the M. E. church.

Mrs. Frank Still was taken to Backus hospital Monday for a minor operation from which she is recovering steadily.

A number of the smaller children are housed because of mumps. Dickey Paquineau is able to be out, but Frederick Eadie and Billie Geoner are right in the midst of it at present.

The harvest supper served in the parish house Wednesday under the auspices of the Ladies' guild brought to the village a number of friends and relatives from away, including Occum and Baldc, Norwich, Willimantic, East Lyme, Dayville and East Glastonbury. In the neighborhood of 150 were fed (and well fed).

The contractor has begun operations in the way of excavating for a house to be erected by Kenneth Doyle at the upper end of the village.

The building, which for so long served the public as store and post office until the erection of the one at present occupied by Henry E. Smith, was taken down and removed in sections. It is now being reassembled and will add one more to the village of Charles Chapman on the west side of Lee Hill.

ROAD SOCIETY

C. B. Wheeler and family were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gates of Providence at their summer home in Mystic.

Mrs. Elliott H. Peabody spent Wednesday with her cousin, Mrs. William Gray, of Mystic.

Mrs. Dwight Thompson has returned to George Wheeler's after a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hilliard, of North Stonington.

Mrs. Fernando Wheeler is visiting her brother and his family in New Jersey.

Mrs. Henry Phelps of Springfield was a recent guest of Mrs. Emmeline Allyn of Quiambaug. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fowler and Mrs. Robert Allyn of of Westfield have been recent guests also.

The home of Ralph C. Wheeler has been renovated and electricity, steam heat, etc., added.

Activities at Dean's dam are viewed with interest on account of the unusual feat of engineering being accomplished there in enlarging the dam.

Among recent callers at Edmund Burdick's were Mrs. Walter Merrill and daughter Edith of Wequetequock, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Burdick and granddaughter Winifred of Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burdick of Danielson, Miss Arline Main, Westerly, and Langworthy Pierce of Wakefield.

Miss Mary Starr Wheeler of Philadelphia, after a business trip to Chicago and stopping at Wellesley college to see her sister, Miss Linda, spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Wheeler.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Sinclair have returned from a motor trip to Provincetown and Taunton, Mass.

LISBON

The pastor's sermon Sunday morning was on Moses as leader of the children of Israel in their journey out of Egypt. This was the second in a series of sermons on Great Journeys.

Claire Barber and son Rowland of Waterbury spent the week end at the Barber home.

The collection for the Red Cross at Newent church Sunday amounted to $11.

Mrs. F. E. Hyde had as guests Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Randall of Lebanon and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hyde and children, Ellsworth and Myrtice, of Jewett City. The date was F. E. Hyde's birthday and also the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Hyde.

Miss Elizabeth Hall of Norwich called on her cousin, Miss Martie Barber, Sunday. Miss Hall, since her mother's recent death, has sold her home in Norwich and will live in Pawtucket, R. I.

A few weeks ago First Selectman Harry Hull sent out a general invitation to any who were willing to give their time to help in grading the school grounds at Newent. About 20 men responded and good progress was made toward putting the grounds in shape. Those who helped at that time expressed a desire to get together again and push the work forward; consequently Mr. Hull is asking any who are willing to help in the good work without expense to the town to meet there the coming Saturday. Dinner will be served at noon as before by several of the public spirited women of the town, under direction of Mrs. George Helmholdt.

EKONK

STERLING HILL

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Frink and Robert and Albert Frink of New London were visitors Sunday at John Frink's.

Rev. H. B. Sloat of Hartford occupied the pulpit on Sterling Hill Sunday and gave his hearers a fine address. He was accompanied by his wife, and they were dinner guests at Enoch Douglas'.

Mrs. Leona Frink attended church and sang the solo Christ is All in fine voice. Clyde Leach also sang a solo.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Tanner and three children and Mrs. Phebe Gallup spent Sunday in Willimantic, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holmes.

Ethel Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Tanner, underwent a minor operation at the General hospital in Willimantic Monday. She was able to return home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Gallup left Monday morning by automobile for their winter home in Altemonte Springs, Fla.

There was a heavy downpour of rain Tuesday afternoon and evening. In many places wells and springs are low.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Gallup entertained a large number of friends on Sunday.

Charles Allen Wilcox is working for John Frink.

Mrs. John Lewis, Mrs. Albert Brown, Mrs. Susie Partelo and William Strange of Voluntown called on old friends Thursday.

Important Discovery Forever Rids You of Vile Catarrh

Opex Opens up Catarrh Stuffed Nostrils in Ten Minutes. Lessens Buzzing, Ringing and Singing in Ears and Destroys Deadly Catarrh Germs Says Authority.

Inflammation in nose, throat and bronchial tubes rapidly disappears, nuffles cease and you can breathe freely through nose again.

It's about time that someone with brains gave to Catarrh sufferers a simple, quick and sure remedy that not only soothes and heals the inflamed catarrh soaked membrane, but also promptly destroys the vicious germs that cause this disgusting disease.

The thousands of intelligent readers who have tried in vain to find something that actually will drive away every trace of loathesome catarrh, will be glad to know that Opex can now be procured at Lee and Osgood's, who will be pleased to show you how simple it is with Opex to once and for all conquer catarrh and its stubborn symptoms.

Now all you have to do is to spray gently and over the entire sore, germ infested membrane, this purifying, germ killing vapor of Opex, reaching every nook, crevice and fold in the membrane, as no other remedy can and opening up in ten minutes the stuffed up passages.

It seems like a miracle, but after you use Opex a few times each day for a few days, you will find that the sore, raw, swollen, tender membrane is completely healed; sniffling and hawking have ceased and the discharge of catarrhal mucous has stopped.

The ringing and buzzing in the ears will start to disappear and your hearing, if affected, will probably be improved.

It is worth a whole lot of money to get rid of stubborn catarrh and buzzing noises in the ears, but Opex, which costs 1.00, will send its purifying, healing, smoke-like vapor just where it will do the most good—you can actually see it going in one nostril and out of the other.

Opex is for sale with the distinct understanding that if you are not satisfied at the end of 30 days your money will be gladly refunded. Opex is delightful to use because of its wholesome fragrance. The Opex Co., 11 W 20th St., New York City.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES FINDS SMITH EQUIVOCAL

Mr. Hughes Calls Upon Gov. Smith to State Once and For All Where He Stands on the Farm Relief Problem—Challenges the Democratic Nominee to Say Whether He Stands For "Government Operation of Power Plants or Not"—Resents Smith's Criticism of Hoover's New York Address—Regards Smith's Prohibition Policy as Futile.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 26—(AP)—Charles Evans Hughes, in his third campaign address here tonight attacked the program of Governor Smith on prohibition, farm relief and water power as "state socialism" and defended the position of Herbert Hoover on these issues.

Elaborating on the criticisms levelled at the democratic presidential nominee by Mr. Hoover in his New York address, Mr. Hughes said that the governor, in his reply at Boston, "at once jumped for the martyr's crown" by asserting that "he was being called a socialist."

"By implication," the former secretary of state said, "he associated what Mr. Hoover had said with opposition 'to practically every forward looking constructive measure that meant a betterment of the human element' for 25 years."

"If anyone," he said, "has called measures in the interest of health and human welfare, such as Governor Smith cited, socialistic measures, it is not Mr. Hoover. If anyone has opposed Governor Smith as being socialistic in relation to such humanitarian legislation, it is not Mr. Hoover. Is anyone in this campaign opposing Governor Smith with respect to such welfare legislation? Quite the contrary, the republican party is stating its own progressive record.

"Instead of opposing government and state control of public resources and the safeguarding of every public interest, Mr. Hoover declared himself for the most effective control."

Of prohibition, Mr. Hughes said that "Governor Smith has advocated the state manufacture, or the state purchase and state distribution and sale, of intoxicating liquors."

"If this is not the method of state socialism, as stated by Mr. Hoover," he said, "I do not know what it is. Certainly Governor Smith cannot identify me as being associated with any such project and it is obvious that Mr. Hoover is opposed to it, lock, stock and barrel."

Asking his audience to "imagine Tammany hall in charge of the executive distribution and sale of intoxicating liquors within the city of New York," he said that "if you put the state, in control of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, you will have either no restrictions at all or else, the most widespread corruption and debauching of government."

Governor Smith's plan, he said, "is to give the state a choice between federal prohibition and this method, which Mr. Hoover properly described as the method of state socialism, a disastrous method of dealing with this problem."

Turning to farm relief, he called upon the governor to "state, once and for all, where he stands on this question."

"Is he," he asked, "for the imposition of the equalization fee by the government? If that is his plan, it is the most gigantic program of government in commercial business ever proposed. Certainly these sincere people in the west, who believe in this method, deserve to know where Governor Smith stands, and the people in the east likewise are entitled to know whether or not this is his program."

On water power, Mr. Hughes challenged the governor to say whether he stands for "government operation of power plants or not."

"As I read it," he said, "Governor Smith in his Boston speech, studiously avoided the use of the word 'operation'. Yet Senator Norris, and others who are earnestly supporting Governor Smith, are avowedly for the government operation of power plants. They must be under the impression that Governor Smith is in their camp. If Governor Smith is not for the government operation of power plants then he is with Hoover who insists upon complete control by the government.

"Let Governor Smith clarify his position, Mr. Hoover has stated emphatically that he is not for operation but for regulation. That is my position. That was the position of Theodore Roosevelt."

Referring to the governor's proposal for a change in the prohibition law, Mr. Hughes said, "it is futile to think that when the people have expressed their will and amended the constitution in the prescribed manner that the supreme court will ever hold that it has the right to invalidate the amendment thus adopted because of any political conception."

"That, I believe," he said, "is one inescapable fact. The supreme court has passed upon the validity of the eighteenth amendment and sustained it. It has, in numerous decisions, construed and given effect to the laws under that amendment. Nothing could be further from reason and good sense than to suppose that the supreme court will override the amendment thus sustained."

Taking the same position upon the Volstead act, he said that "congress cannot pass a valid act which would give to the state authority to manufacture and sell intoxicating liquors contrary to the constitution."

The reason for the democratic candidate's "limited proposal" for modification, was he said, because he desired to "create the impression that it was not proposing a return to the saloon."

"It is wholly impractical," he said "and it is safe to say that it will never be adopted. If you are going to return the matter to state control, then declare for state control, not for federal restriction on state control."

Discussing the qualifications of the two candidates for the presidency, Mr. Hughes said that "Mr. Hoover has the intimate knowledge of the federal government in all its branches," while "Governor Smith certainly could not undertake reorganization of the federal government until he had the advantage of a liberal federal education." He contrasted the "record at Washington" with that at Albany and said that he was "not ready to accept" the governor as "an authority on finance."

HOOVER AND BORAH DISCUSS POLITICAL ISSUES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26—(AP)—Herbert Hoover and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, a republican independent in the senate, sat at the luncheon table today for more than an hour and discussed farm relief and various other subjects.

Neither the republican presidential nominee nor the senator made any formal statement regarding the conference but it was known that Borah had it in mind that the St. Louis speech on which Hoover now is working should contain a more detailed exposition of the farm relief program outlined in the acceptance speech.

The Idahoan, who has been the most active stump speaker for Hoover in the campaign, believes that such an exposition would be of material benefit in the west although he has made it plain that he has no apprehension regarding the result in the great corn and wheat belts.

Hoover announced upon his return from New York that the major subjects of his St. Louis address on November 2 would be farm aid and the development of waterways.

How much the announcement of Senator George W. Norris that he would support the democratic presidential nominee came into the discussion was not revealed. However, it is know that measures are under consideration for offsetting the effect that the Norris declaration may have had in the agricultural west.

ACTOR LOU TELLEGEN IS BEING SUED FOR DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26—(AP)—Lou Tellegen, stage and screen actor, was sued for divorce today by Isabel Craven Tellegen, who filed a complaint in superior court charging her husband with cruel and inhuman treatment.

Tellegen, formerly the husband of Geraldine Farrar, former grand opera star, married the present Mrs. Tellegen at Rutherford, N. J., Dec. 17, 1922. The latter's complaint stated that the couple have one 4-year-old child, Tex Tellegen.

Mrs. Tellegen stated in her complaint that she and her husband, now a motion picture actor, separated March 20, 1927. She accused Tellegen of unfaithfulness and stated that last Aug. 20 he had admitted it to her. She asked for the custody of their son and for such other relief as the court might see fit.

COOLIDGE SEES NO REASON TO RAISE TARIFF ON CORN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 — (AP) — President Coolidge does not regard the possibility of raising the tariff on corn as a very urgent matter and the report of the tariff commission on the question will be handled through the usual course and final decision will be reported in due course on the merits of the case.

LABOR "RACKETEERING" CASE IN KANSAS CITY COURT

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 26—(AP)—A drive against "racketeering" in building construction and the cleaning and dyeing trade here brought labor leaders and members of the Cleaners association into court today for arraignment on indictments charging assault and malicious destruction.

Attacks on contractors who refused to use union labor exclusively, the bombing of a contractor's home and bombings of cleaning and dyeing establishments which refused demands of the Cleaners association the basis of the indictments returned yesterday in which ten men were named.

Eight of the ten had been arraigned tonight and their trials tentatively set for November 12.

The beating of one contractor and the damaging of the home of another by a bomb was the basis of two indictments returned against Frank J. Peterson, secretary of the building trades council. He was charged with assault with intent to kill and with malicious destruction of property. He pleaded not guilty and was released on $15,000 bond.

Bombings in the cleaning and dyeing trade war were laid at the doors of Samuel Maiden, secretary of the Wholesale Cleaners association, and Aaron Schultz, cleaning shop proprietor.

John M. Deuchler and Edwin Watson, business agent and former business agent, respectively, of the painters union, were charged with assaulting a contractor.

TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES OF POLITICAL CORRUPTION

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 26—(AP)—Investigation of political corruption charges made against democrats of St. Joseph county in a story printed in both the South Bend Tribune and the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel was deferred until November 8 after a brief hearing held today by Judge Orlo R. Deahl of the St. Joseph superior court. Five representatives of the two newspapers had been summoned by Prosecutor S. F. Schwartz but they were not examined.

The story that prompted the investigation charged that the democrats were collecting campaign funds from liquor law violators and under-world residents of South Bend.

BORAH FAVORS EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26—(AP)—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, declared in a statement today that he was "thoroughly in favor" of an extra session of congress to deal with the farm relief problems through the passage of a tariff bill to increase duties upon agricultural products and of a marketing measure to create a more satisfactory farm marketing system.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

DUBLIN, Oct. 26—(AP)—The Irish Free State is to form a volunteer defense force in addition to the regular army and national reserve, the minister of defense, D. Fitzgerald.

ROME, Oct. 26—(AP)—Marquerite Durand, who was the companion of General Cesare Rossi, Italian political exile, at the time of his arrest at Campione, near the Swiss border last August, has been released from prison.

LONDON, Oct. 26—(AP)—Rear Admiral Ernest A. Taylor, retired, who last January criticized the American attitude at the tri-partite naval conference at Geneva, took up arms again in behalf of a powerful British navy.

LONDON, Oct. 26—(AP)—Sir Abe Bailey, South African diamond magnate and noted sportsman has arranged for an endowment for the Royal Institute of International Affairs, which has a branch in Australia and one in Canada.

SAMARKAND, Turkesta, Oct. 26—(AP) — A merciless struggle against polygamy and the paying of "kalim" or ransom for moselm brides, has been started by higher communist authorities throughout the Kazak, Uzbek and Tadjik Republics in Central Asia. A special society to fight these Mohammedan practices was organized.

MURDER CASE DEVELOPING INTO A POLITICAL TRIAL

TOULOUSE, France, Oct. 26—(AP)—The murder of his illegitimate son, a 17-months old baby, by Count Pierre Marie Raymond De Crouzet Rayssac is developing into a political trial. Count Crouzet Rayssac threw the child into a canal on January 12 last, and after the finding of the body the next day admitted his guilt, saying:

"I lost control of myself, and, acting like an automaton, committed the frightful crime with which I am reproached."

The mother of the child was a maid employed by the count's mother. The count's family is of noble lineage and wealthy.

Immense crowds surrounded the Toulouse court house during the progress of the trial, most of the people clamoring for the guillotine for the nobleman who had confessed to the killing of his son after betraying a servant employed in his ancestral home. More subdued were the murmurs imploring clemency, the crime being attributed to irresponsibility amounting almost to insanity.

Judge Charrier, who was presiding, warned the spectators against manifestations, and police precautions have been taken.

REPORT OF REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN FUNDS COM.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26— (AP) — The republican national committee reported to the house special campaign funds committee today that there had been collected a total of $3,911,580.20 for the campaign but that $1,049,641.79 was collected for the state republican committees and was returned to them. In addition, the national republican treasurer collected and paid to committees in several states $550,431.48.

For the entire campaign the national committee received for its own use $2,261,506.93 and expended $2,123,894.64, leaving a balance on Oct. 24 of $137,811.29. The democratic report filed yesterday merely reported that the national committee had received $3,065,308 and had expended $2,951,038, leaving a balance of $114,006. An item of $500,000 in the collections represented a loan to the committee.

16 YEAR OLD BOY AS RADIO OPERATOR FOR EXPEDITION

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—Sixteen year old Erie T. Palmer, Jr., whose amateur radio activities once were halted by his father because he almost forgot to eat and sleep, is going to South America as the radio operator of a scientific expedition.

He is to be in charge of the communication facilities of the Brazilian scientific expedition to the Amazon valley, which sails tomorrow afternoon. The expedition intends to search for a lost city.

Last October, when Eric's health began to break because of his devotion to radio, his father decided to intervene. Upon the elder Palmer's recommendation, the radio commission cancelled the boy's license. It reissued on his birthday in January upon his promise to give part of his time to things other than radio.

YOUTHFUL ELOPING COUPLE HELD IN STAMFORD

STAMFORD, Oct. 26—(AP)— Youthfulness was the betrayer of an eloping couple today, when a motorcycle officer noticed a Massachusetts car, driven by a youth who the patrolman believed should have been in school, stopped the car and questioned the couple. They admitted they were Dorice Loss, 16, and Arthur Webber, 17, both juniors of the Quincy, Mass., high school and were eloping to New York city to be married. The Webber boy was driving his father's car. The boy and girl were held by the police to await the arrival of their parents.

DEATH OF BRIGADIER GENERAL J. R. MCQUIGG

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 26—(AP)—Brig. General John R. McQuigg, national commander of the American Legion in 1925, died at his home here late tonight after a year's illness.

The general, who led the 112th engineers, 37th division to France during the World war, served three terms as mayor of East Cleveland and was a prominent attorney and business man. He was 62 years old.

Smith Feels Strong In So. New England

Thinks Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut Are All Right.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith spent virtually all of today getting ready for the democratic invasion he will lead tomorrow into Pennsylvania which with 38 votes, ranks second only to New York in the electoral college.

The governor has not yet disclosed the subject he will discuss tomorrow night in Philadelphia where he will make his one and only personal appeal to the voters of the normally republican Keystone state. He will leave here at 1.30 p. m., over the Pennsylvania lines for Camden, New Jersey, where he will detrain and after a motor parade through that city move across the Delaware river into Philadelphia.

The democratic nominee for a few minutes today took time out from work on his Philadelphia address for a conference with press correspondents in his suite at the Biltmore hotel. The nominee appeared in the best of spirits and showed no signs of fatigue from two days campaigning in southern New England where he was cheered and cheered in every city visited.

He was reminded by the correspondents that when leaving Boston he had predicted that Massachusetts was lined up under the democratic banner and then asked:

"How do you feel in regard to Rhode Island and Connecticut?"

"I feel all right about it" he answered. "I think all three states are all right."

"Do you see the feeling there has been somewhat of a trend toward you in the last few weeks?" one correspondent inquired.

"I certainly think after Monday night there has been a decided change," he replied. "I think the republican candidate hurt his cause with his Madison Square Garden speech."

"The socialism statement?" his questioner pursued

"Yes," the nominee replied.

"What was your impression as you looked out over that crowd in the arena in Boston?"

"It certainly was encouraging," he answered. "It cannot be that these people cheer the way they do and then vote the other way. I could not understand that. I thought the Hartford reception was a wonderful reception, too."

GOV. SMITH PICTURED AS FEARLESS AND EFFICIENT

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 26—(AP)—Governor Smith was portrayed to the citizens of northern Minnesota by Senator Joe T. Robinson tonight as "a frank, fearless and efficient" leader with a record for championing progressive reforms "unparalleled in political history."

He recited in considerable detail the legislation advocated by his running mate during his four terms as governor of New York and emphasized that of hundreds of appointments made by Smith not one was ever rejected by the New York senate despite that that body usually was controlled by the opposition party.

Senator Robinson also renewed his attack upon the Madison Square Garden address of Herbert Hoover, declaring that the republican nominee's characterization of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill "as state socialism will terrify no one who possesses sufficient intelligence to understand the reactionary spirit which animates the republican candidate for president."

TWO AMERICANS AMONG 38 KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Oct. 26—(AP)—Two Americans and 36 others were killed when the Simplon Orient Express, one of the world's most famous trains, bound from Bucharest to Paris, crashed into the Hermannstadt-Bucharest Express near the town of Rece at 2 o'clock this morning. From 20 to 30 persons were seriously injured.

Many of the injured, it is feared, will die. Twenty-one of the dead are Rumanians.

The crash was attributed to a defective switch.

PLANS TO INTRODUCE NEW TALKING MOVIE DEVICE

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—Reports current in Wall street today that the Eastman Kodak company, of Rochester, N. Y., plans to introduce a new talking movie device to be distributed through the Radio Corporation of America encountered general denials by interested officials. The reports were ascribed to advices, said to have emanated from Rochester, that such a device has been developed in the Eastman laboratories and will be marketed before Christmas.

Zeppelin To Start For Germany Sunday

Ground Crew Ordered to Stand by at 5 P. M. Sunday—Mid-West Flight Off.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Balked by bad weather in their effort to sail the Graf Zeppelin into America's middle west, officers and crew of the big airship prepared tonight to refuel their craft for the return trip to Germany.

Naval station officials announced that a second crew had been ordered to stand by at 5 p. m. Sunday to walk the Zeppelin out of the hangar and weight off for the homeward voyage.

Lieut. Commander Wicks, U. S. N., in charge of hydrogen and inflating the craft, said he was ready to pump 735,000 cubic feet of blaugas and 140,000 cubic feet of hydrogen into the Zeppelin's fuel and lift cells and that he would have her ready by noon Sunday.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, the dirigible's commander, reluctantly abandoned the westward cruise plan before noon today. Cross-hangar winds have held this ship indoors since she landed here from Germany and examination of the weather maps today convinced Dr. Eckener that it would be dangerous to try a flight today.

When he came here from Germany, he explained, he intended to stay but 14 days. If he outstayed that period, he said he probably would encounter unfavorable conditions at the end of his return flight. During the days of waiting here he said many times he was anxious to take the Zeppelin into the west and exhibit her powers to America's people.

While Sunday was set as the tentative date of departure for Germany, Dr. Eckener said Atlantic weather conditions would determine the sailing date. Previously he had said he expected the Atlantic crossing would require not more than two and a half days.

"We are prepared to show," the commander told The Associated Press, "that Atlantic crossing can be made at short intervals. To that end I prefer not to prolong my stay in this hospitable country for more than about two weeks at this time."

He added that he would make the inland trip in America on another voyage.

"I bitterly regret the failure to show the Graf Zeppelin to your mid-western cities," he said. "Our visit to the American interior is postponed but not abandoned. We shall look forward to making it when our ship has been proven by another round trip over the Atlantic."

HOOVER MISQUOTED ON THE "OPEN SHOP"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26— (AP) — Charging that the position of Herbert Hoover on the "open shop" had been deliberately misrepresented in a pamphlet distributed by the labor division of the democratic national committee, W. N. Doak, director of the labor bureau of the republican national committee, today issued a statement in which he declared that Hoover did not make remarks attributed to him in the pamphlet issued by the democrats.

The Doak statement, addressed to all labor bodies, said Mr. Hoover was quoted as telling the senate labor and education committee on May 14, 1920, that "the principle of individual freedom requires the open shop," in the pamphlet which was issued by George L. Berry, chairman of the democratic labor division.

A review of Mr. Hoover's testimony before the committee, Mr. Doak's statement recited, "will disclose that Mr. Hoover did not make the statement accredited to him by Mr. Berry."

CONVICTION IN ALBANY BASEBALL POOL CASE

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—William J. Pringle, a former internal revenue agent and alleged secretary-treasurer of the so-called Albany baseball and stock market pool, was convicted by a jury in federal court today of using the mails to conduct a lottery and of conspiracy to so use the mails.

He was continued in $25,000 bail to appear next Wednesday before Judge Thomas D. Thacher for sentence. The maximum penalty that may be imposed is ten years in prison—two years on each of four counts of misuse of the mails and two years for conspiracy—in addition to $10,000 fine.

Pringle offered no defense testimony. His attorney, Paul Bonynge, summing up, told the jury gambling devoid of other elements of crime was punishable under state but not under federal statutes. Federal Attorney Tuttle called the pool an "octopus," reaching out to ensnare small wage earners," and said Pringle was one of the "higher-ups" who attempted to protect themselves while allowing the "little cannon" to go to jail.

Norwich Suburban Day

Suburban day is synonymous with "Opportunity." Never was a better opportunity afforded the people of eastern Connecticut for advantageous buying than on Saturday when Norwich merchants put on their Suburban day sales. Quality plus low prices is the aim of the merchants and those who wish to make economical purchases cannot afford to miss these sales.

Large stocks, quality merchandise, variety of selection and courteous treatment of patrons predominate the Suburban day sales. These sales are events which call for the considerate attention of those who have been waiting for a favorable time to fill wants.

As Always, Norwich Merchants Give Service.

WHITE ASSAILS TAMMANY RECORD OF NOMINEE SMITH

Emporia, Kan., Editor Charges That the Democratic Presidential Nominee "Shows a Lack of Moral Intelligence" in His Defense of His New York Legislative Record—Contends That Gov. Smith's Public Career Reflects the "Deadly Blight of His Tammany Association."

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 26—(AP)—Continuing his assault on the "Tammany record" of Governor Smith is an address here tonight, William Allen White, noted Emporia, Kas., editor, charged that the democratic presidential nominee "shows a lack of moral intelligence" in his defence of his New York legislative record.

"He voted with Tammany for the after-midnight saloon in towns and villages," said Mr. White, who spoke under the auspices of the republican national committee. "Today, as a candidate for president, he justifies his vote for the after-midnight saloon in towns and villages because he said he was voting according to the wishes of the constituents. He lived at that time in a district maggot-eaten with saloons—a Tammany district. Of course, Al Smith would think an after-midnight saloon was a good thing.

"It is bad enough to vote for an all-night saloon as a young man, but as governor of New York and candidate for president, to defend the vote for the after-midnight saloon shows a lack of moral intelligence that comes from the deadly blight of his Tammany associations."

Mr. White declared that after Governor Smith's "Tammany saloon record" had been printed and after he had defended that record "the people saw how dead to moral sense he was in that defense."

"Thus does the Tammany tiger tag Smith in his new career," he continued. "He may try to close the door of his political past, but he cannot put out the cat."

The Emporia editor then referred to Governor Smith's published eulogy four years ago of the life of the late Charles Murphy, Tammany leader, saying:

"At that time Charles Murphy, the boss of Tammany, died worth two million dollars accumulated from what is known as honest Tammany graft. The New York Times under date of April 26, 1924, printed Boss Murphy's biography telling how he saved $500 in two years as a cross town street car driver, and in 1878 opened a little saloon on 14th street, known as Charlie's Place. . . . By 1890, he was the owner of four prosperous saloons making large profits. At that time he was an active worker in the Tammany organization to which he was an election district captain."

Mr. White then quoted a statement of Governor Smith in the same newspaper in which the life of the Tammany leader was held up as "a lesson and example to the youth of our country," and said:

"Now is that kind of a man who holds up to the youth of this land as a shining example a Tammany saloon keeper-boss, the kind of a man to put in the white house to control the destinies of 100,000,000 people.

"Let us look at Smith's Tammany saloon record as it passes in review. With the Tammany point of view, as governor of New York, he advocated the repeal of the New York state prohibition enforcement law. He signed this Tammany saloon bill as governor when the president of the United States requested him to uphold by the constitution and as governor to enforce the prohibition law.

"Smarting under criticism of his policy of nullification he declared last year that he hates parts of the American constitution. And now, ten weeks ago, he publicly defends all his Tammany saloon votes in the legislature as good votes—not upon the moral issues involved, not appealing to the conscience of the people, but because those votes are sustained by Tammany Hall and therefore made a majority.

"Here is a man as 'an example to the young,' and now you are asked to put this Tammany candidate into the white house.

"He says that he will enforce the Volstead act. Will he enforce the Volstead act in the white house as he enforced it in the governor's chair where he led the movement to repeal the law providing for enforcement? Or will he push through in spite of the constitution which he hates, his state dispensary system which will allow various Tammany Halls in the great cities to control the liquor business in graft and corruption."

Mr. White's speech was the first of several in the south and east.

AMERICAN CAN CO. LOSES $3,900,000 SUIT AGAINST GOVT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—A $3,900,000 suit by the American Can company against the United States government, tried before a one-man jury, resulted today in a verdict for the government. The jury retired ten months ago. Federal building officials said the lapse of time between the retirement and the verdict set a record.

The suit involved income tax payments made under protest by the company and its subsidiaries in 1924. The government demanded that the company pay approximately $4,901,000 on "profits" alleged to have accrued to it in 1917 through a rise in value of 1,700,000 boxes of tinplate purchased in 1916 at $3.60 a box.

The company agreed that the tinplate had increased $7 a box in value during the period covered by its 1917 income tax return, but contended it had the right to hold the material under an "inventory constant account." Counsel for the company held that the gain in inventory value probably would be offset by a reaction.

When the case came to trial counsel for both sides, to avoid certain legal technicalities, agreed to try the case before a one-man jury subject to instruction by the court. Judge Goddard appointed his bailiff, Michael Hartigan, 84-year-old retired policeman, as the jury.

20 YEARS SENTENCE FOR A 14-YEAR-OLD BOY

QUEBEC, Que., Oct. 26—(AP)—A 14-year-old boy was sentenced today to 20 years in the penitentiary after his conviction on a charge of manslaughter in having killed his father three weeks ago.

As Chief Justice Sir Francois Lemieux pronounced the sentence upon Rodolphe Petrin, the boy gave no indication that he realized the extent of his punishment. He smiled as guards led him to a cell.

Charles Petrin, the father, who was a farmer at St. Flavien, Que., died of a fractured skull three weeks ago while he and the boy were driving in the family carriage. The boy took the body home and reported his father had died from a kick from the horse.

An autopsy revealed, the crown contended, that the man had died from a blow on the head with an empty stone jar in the hands of his son.

FAMOUS TEXAS GUINAN IS MISSING FROM HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 26—(AP)—Texas Guinan, whose racy "come-on's" in New York's night clubs won her a hearing in Hollywood's "talkies" has disappeared, but no one tonight seemed to know anything of her whereabouts.

Marie Prevost, screen star from whom Texas leased a nobby bungalow in Beverly Hills for three months and paid only two months rent, said the famous hostess had gone back to Gotham's night rendezvous.

Roger Marchetti, Texas' legal adviser, said his client had left "only temporarily" and would be back shortly to appear for several damage suits in which she is involved.

The victory was decided by the audience which gave 354 votes to the Yale team and 154 to the negative debaters.

TWO WOMEN DIVORCED FROM THE SAME MAN

DANBURY, Oct. 26—(AP)—One of the worst marriage tangles in the history of the superior court here was dissolved today, by Judge Edwin C. Dickinson, when he granted divorces to two women, who were married to the same man.

In May, 1921, Powell Chandler, a public accountant, then about 46, married Helen E. Bayes in Fulton, Ga., and moved to Danbury, where he secured employment. By this union two children were born. In April, 1925, he married Marie L. Goodman at Newark, N. J., but lived with her only a few days. A child was born and she demanded that Chandler support it. Chandler explained that she would have to see his wife in Danbury, as he was already married and had two other children. A meeting of the two wives followed and a short time after, Chandler disappeared.

It is believed that the much married Chandler is now residing in England and has a wife and child there also.

BODIES OF YOUNG COUPLE FOUND IN AUTOMOBILE

WARREN, Ark., Oct. 26—(AP)—The bodies of Ethel Mae Baker, 16, high school senior of Warren, and M. J. Powell, mechanic, of Oak Grove, La., who disappeared from here last Saturday, were found in an automobile by the roadside two miles east of here today by Constable Bob Hoyle. A coroner's jury late today brought a verdict of death by strangulation for the girl and suicide with a pistol for the youth.

The car in which they were found had crashed against a tree after plowing through underbrush, apparently having run off the road during a struggle between the man and the girl, police said. An empty bottle labeled "ether" was found on the floor of the car. A small automatic pistol was found near his body.

The couple disappeared from her home after Powell had come here to "settle arrangements for their marriage," her step-father, H. O. Butts, told police. He had opposed the match.

ALLEGED FRAUDULENT REGISTRATION IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—An additional grand jury will sit next week to consider evidence gathered in an investigation of alleged fraudulent registration in New York city, District Attorney Banton announced today. Mr. Banton said a request to this end had been made by Attorney-General Albert Ottinger.

Several hospital registration lists and 700 names registered in the Bronx were being investigated in addition to registrations in other parts of the city, it was disclosed. The New York county supreme court refused an application to have 65 inmates of St. Francis home in East Fifth street removed from registration lists.

In Brooklyn, Miss Sally Kramerwas arrested on a charge of false registration. She testified yesterday that State Senator Philip Kleinfeld, democrat, of Brooklyn, illegally gave her a certificate of literacy but she failed to identify Kleinfeld.

He was born April 25, 1857, in Belleville, Canada, the son of Pierre and Marie Rock James. Surviving him are: one daughter, Mrs Samuel Bergeron of Norwich and four brothers, Emery James of Montreal, Canada; Philip James of Stafford Springs; Alexander James of Groton and Joseph James of Winsted.

Additional men are being employed by Contractor M. H. Jones to rush the construction of new sidewalks in the city before cold weather sets in. Present construction is being made on an appropriation of $4,000 voted for a continuation of the work at the special city meeting Monday night. It had been estimated that construction to the extent of $8,000 could have been done before cold weather but the city meeting cut this appropriation in half. As soon as the present additional appropriation is used up, work will stop until next year. Today excavations for sidewalks were started on the south side of Valley street and the west side of High street bounding state property on the Windham street school. A total of 700 feet of linear sidewalk will be built along this property with the walk on the Valley street side to be eight feet wide and that on High street six feet wide. The laying of new sidewalks at this point is part of a project to develop the state school property into what promises to be one of the most attractive and spacious school grounds in this section. Prior to the building of the addition to the Windham street school the state purchased a large tract of land bordering on Valley and High streets. Half a dozen residences were removed from the tract which has now been graded and made ready for grass seeding in the spring.

WESTERLY

CENTRAL FALLS DRIVER TOOK CHANCES WITH BRAKES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 26—In the Third district court, Judge Oliver H. Williams on the bench, Friday morning, George B. Bojax, a Syrian residing in Central Falls, was arraigned on complaint of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown charged with operating an automobile on Broad street Oct. 23 when the auto was not equipped with at least two power all brakes. Town Solicitor Ferguson stated that Bojax had gone to Mystic and had purchased the auto. He was told that the brakes were not in good working order. Apparently the driver chose to chance it for when crossing Broad street, Westerly, the police officer thought the car appeared to have been in an accident and signalled the driver to stop. Reaching for the emergency brake, the driver brought the auto to a stop and later tests showed that traveling 20 miles per hour 123 feet were required in which to stop and 80 feet with the emergency. Judge Williams found the accused guilty and fined him $25 and costs, which was paid.

Other court business was disposed of as follows:

New writ entered before calling of the docket—Ernest Panciera, et al., vs. Joseph Friedman, if unanswered, continued two weeks.

Judgments entered—Clarence E Roche vs. William Champlin. Judgment for the plaintiff to recover $154.15 with costs.

A. L. Castritius company vs. Edward C. Regucci, et ux. Judgment for plaintiff to recover $24 and costs.

Civil docket—The action in book account John O. Mills vs. Mabel E Bickelhaupt and vs. John Haas. Judgment for plaintiff to recover $19.20 and interest $3.42 and costs from Mabel Bickelhaupt. As no evidence was presented against Haas, he was discharged.

The democratic rally in Pawcatuck Thursday evening was delayed nearly an hour by the non-appearance of the speakers and then but two of the three scheduled arrived. The delayed speakers explained their tardiness by stating that they had been to Hartford to see the democratic nominee Al Smith. The rally was held under the auspices of the Pawcatuck Smith-Robinson club, with Joseph H. McGuiness in charge. Through hoarseness the first speaker addressed the nearly 200 assembled from the sidewalk and the second and last speaker from the Metropolitan hotel veranda.

District Deputy George McKenna of Mystic installed Thursday the officers of St. Michael's council, No. 2467, Knights of Columbus, at a meeting held in the Community house. The officers are: Michael Spellman, grand knight; William Sylvia, deputy grand knight; Peter Grilla, chancellor; Francis O'Connell, recording secretary; Daniel Cogan, financial secretary; Timothy J. Connors, treasurer; Joseph Ballata, warden; Tuti Sanquedolce, inside guard; James Sasa, outside guard; Joseph H. McGuiness, trustee for three years. Following the installation a smoker was enjoyed. Refreshments were served. Entertainment was furnished by Anthony Toskas, acrobat, and Myles Brennan and Maurice McGuiness, who sang.

A halloween costume party was attended Thursday evening by members of the Westerly Boat club and guests in the club house at Thompson's Cove. The hall was decorated in orange and black, with pumpkins, cornstalks and jack-o-lanterns. Mrs Thomas Moore was general chairman, and Robert Loomis supervised the decorations. The Shenard & Swanson orchestra of New London played for dancing, also provided cabaret novelty numbers. Two extra entertainers accompanied the orchestra. Mrs. Lewis R Greene, wearing a costume representing "Queen of the Night," was awarded the women's prize, and George Jackson, representing a skeleton, was given the men's prize. The judges were Rev. G Edgar Tobin, Mrs. Frederick S. Ople and Mrs. Lewis A. Joslin. A lunch of cider, doughnuts, cheese and coffee was served.

FUNERALS

John G. Campbell

The body of John G Campbell, 72 former Ashaway resident and expert line maker, was brought to Westerly on the 1:20 express from Summit N. J., where his death occurred last Monday. The body was taken to Oak Grove cemetery, Ashaway, for burial. He is survived by a daughter in Atlanta, Ga., a daughter in Providence, R. I., and a son, Alfred, in Summit, N. J.

Mildred D. Whipple

The flag on the pole at Westerly high school was at half mast Friday out of respect for Miss Mildred D. Whipple, a graduate. The funeral of Mildred Dorothy Whipple, daughter of Wesley O. and Carrie B. Rowley Whipple of Westerly, was held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family home. Rev C. A Burdick of the Seventh-day Baptist church officiated. Many relatives and friends were in attendance and the floral tributes were exceptionally beautiful. The bearers were Alton, Kenneth and Donald Rowley, Daniel J. Driscoll, Clarence Pickering and Harold White. Burial was in Riverbend cemetery, Westerly.

James Burchall of Fall River has been in Westerly and Pawcatuck during the past week, installing machinery in the William Clark mill of the American Thread company in Clarkville.

Alexander Blake is among the Westerly football fans attending the game in New Haven today (Saturday).

Capt. H. Russell Burdick returned to Westerly Friday morning from a short visit in Boston. On his arrival by train in Boston at the South station he found vast crowds assembled to see Al Smith leave the city for Providence. As Captain Burdick passed between the rows of closely drawn policemen, he remarked to them that he had not anticipated such a reception.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. B James and daughters, Norma E. and Helen, and son, Preston, of Beaver River Valley, were motor visitors with friends in Pawcatuck Thursday.

Miss Jeannie N. Smith was in Boston Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Snyder have returned home from a vacation visit by motor in Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Prof. Brune of the North Stonington road left Westerly Friday on a business trip to Somerville, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Nichols and daughter, Margaret, of East Providence have been recent visitors with Westerly relatives.

Thomas J. Bannon has returned from a vacation in Vermont. Illness prevented his continuance of vacation trip over the Canadian border.

NOANK

RAKING LEAVES EXPENSIVE STUNT FOR LEO MACGRATH

Leo MacGrath was raking leaves in the yard on Shipyard avenue as the mean wind was blowing them down. It was near noon Thursday when MacGrath thought he was working too fast. He felt his leg getting warm but kept right on working and singing away. Soon smoke was coming from his pocket and he found his trousers afire. Running by was M. Steward who said, "Do you want the fire company?" "No!" was the answer. Deer Steward got a pail of water and put out the fire. MacGrath was mad, for he burned up a $5 bill. He said, "To think a match could send a five dollar bill up in smoke! That is a day's pay lost!" The fire company was not needed to put out the blaze on MacGrath. Now his friends call him "Hard Luck Leo."

Evening of Cards

Whist and pinochle were played in D. of A. hall Thursday evening by the Whirlwind basketball team and friends; seventeen tables being in play. At 8 o'clock the whistle was blown by M. Balerstrine to start playing. Walter Burdington was in charge of the scoring. At 10 o'clock the cards were collectioned by George Patterson. Whist prizes were taken by Mrs. Harold Butson, 49 points; low score Miss Roberta Buddington, 13 points, she received a powder set. Elbert Palmer having 66 points got a safety razor. He said that is what I need! I've been on a fishing trip for a week and look as though I am ready to join the House of David! Thanks, fellows!" Eugene Mallet was holding too many two-spots and kept moving around table No. 12 all the evening. His score card read, only 6 points. He took home a new necktie. At pinochle, it was a real battle. With Jack Ellis and Elbu Rathbun it was neck and neck to the end; each had 1400 points, so had to cut the cards and the lucky fellow who won was E. Rathbun, getting the ace of hearts while his rival held the 9-spot of diamonds, getting a box of Noble cigars. Keith Ebbetts found the deck had too many 9-spots and not enough aces for him. He won the low prize. It was a pair of hunting knickers. Miss Nellie Grant of Bushy Point went back with the ladies highest score, a silk umbrella. Doughnuts, cake and coffee were the lunch provided by Cook Eugene Butson and his kitchen aides. The sum of $30 was cleared to help the new team formed in the village to pass away the winter nights by playing basket ball. The money is toward new suits, the colors to be blue and white with a white W on the jerseys. This is the first year for several new players and some are from the Boy Scouts team that set a record winning games last year. A manager was elected, Midget Daniel Roberston, while Cannonball Marks will be the floor general, overseeing the players. Billie Crane will be coach—an old-timer at the Indian game, coming from Michigan college a few years ago and making his home in the village. He wants his players to be in bed at 10 o'clock, and run 5 miles a day during the basketball season. No smoking is the rule, the first one caught gets the bench for one month. Coach Crane says he wants a winning team and players full of pep, not a wheel chair to get around in. Now bring on the Fairville Whirlwinds Jr. for the first game in that village, or Noank! The players are Snappy B. Chesebro, Midget Roberston, Lankey Clark, Giant Sweet, Cannonball Marks, Radio Buddington, Broad Jump E. Butson, Water Boy Frank Eldredge.

Had Fainting Spell

Edward Ashby was getting his breakfast ready Thursday at his home on Front street, opening a can of milk when he fell to the floor without a word to his son Edgar. Neighbors were called in and a doctor was sent for. It was seven minutes before he came to; the doctor said it was a fainting spell and it will be several days before he will be out and around on his route.

The house of Cus Thompson is being repaired and painted.

Harry Robertson was in Saybrook Thursday.

Albert Banks has returned from a short visit at Edgartown, Mass.

Will Attend Game

Miss Alice Main has left for New Haven for a few days' visit with friends. Today (Saturday) she will attend the Army-Yale football game in the bowl. Miss Main has a cousin playing in the backfield of the Army team whom she has not seen in five years.

STONINGTON

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS HOLDS OCTOBER MEETING

The October meeting of Stonington branch of the League of Women Voters was held in the Free Library Friday evening. The chairman of the republican town committee spoke on the topic of "Marking Ballots."

Nina circle, Daughters of Isabella, held a masquerade ball in the Community house Friday evening. The hope chest made up by the members of the council was given away at this event.

Thomas H. Shanley of Providence was a caller on Wednesday.

Charles Palmer is spending a few days in Boston.

Chapman Tech of New London and Stonington high school football teams will play this Saturday afternoon at Owens field. This is not a league game.

A force of men is employed in this section, hooking up the new automatic train control system, and linemen of the S. N. E. Tel. Co. are changing the wires over.

Dr. James H Weeks has been appointed a sub-chairman for Stonington in the Hoover-Curtis Legion by Thomas R Ball of Old Lyme, who is chairman of the 20th senatorial district drive for membership of the Legion. This Legion has been organized to enroll throughout the nation one million contributors of $1 each to the republican campaign fund.

Mrs. Fred J. McNally of Belden, Mich., is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Robert Edgar.

Bishop E. Champion Acheson will pay an official visit to Calvary church Sunday. He will preach at the 10:30 service and confirm a class.

Roger Kenyon is spending the week-end with relatives at Old Mystic.

Mrs. Annie T. Kenna was in Providence Thursday.

Armistice Day Plans

At the regular meeting of James W. Harvey post, No. 54, American Legion, held in Fort's hall Wednesday evening, arrangements were made for the Armistice day parade to be held at 7 o'clock p. m. Invitations have been sent to the Pioneer Hook and Ladder company, the Neptune Engine company, Stonington Steam Fire Engine company, Stonington Fire district, Stonington Fire police, the Women's Relief corps, the Red Cross, the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, to participate in the parade which will be led by the Stonington band as has been the custom in the last few years. Poppies will be sold on the borough streets, under the auspices of the local Legion post.

PRESTON

The grange held its meeting Tuesday evening. It being Neighbors' night, the program was to have been furnished by Mystic and Franklin granges, but owing to the severe storm no one was present from Franklin. The following program was given: Chorus singing, grange; reading, with encore, Mildred Slater; song, Softly Now the Light of Day, grange; impromptu talk, Rev. George Clark; vocal duet, Lydia Foote and Charity Pendleton; song, It's a Gay Old World grange; vocal duet, two members of Mystic grange; anecdotes, Sidney Hall and Rhoda Brand of Pachaug; song, Lord, Dismiss Us With Thy Blessing, grange. Visitors were present from Mystic, Little River, North Stonington and Pachaug. A beautiful bouquet of carnations was presented Mildred Slater by Mr. Brooks of Mystic. Sandwiches, doughnuts, cheese and coffee were served. The next meeting is to be Officers' night and it is expected that each officer will give one number on the program.

Mrs. Emily Merritt and daughter, Ruth Ennis, spent last week with Miss Abbie Stanton.

Bran muffins

The recipe makes the best you ever ate

2 tablespoons shortening, ½ cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup sour milk, 1 cup Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, 1 cup flour, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder.

Cream shortening and sugar together, add egg. Mix and sift flour, soda, salt, and baking powder. To creamed mixture add ALL-BRAN, then milk, alternately with sifted dry ingredients. Pour into greased muffin tins, and bake in moderate oven (370° F.) for 30 minutes. Yield: either 8 large or 18 medium size muffins. If sweet milk is used instead of sour, omit soda and use 3 teaspoons baking powder.

WAIT until you see those muffins as they come from the oven. Wonderfully light and fluffy — never soggy. And when you break one open and let a lump of butter melt in that tender texture, get ready for a taste experience such as you never had before. No other muffin ever had such a rich, nut-like flavor.

The fine thing about eating these wonderful muffins is the health they bring you. For that cupful of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN helps supply your eliminative system with bulk and fiber that prevents constipation. So many foods in our diet—meat, eggs, milk, sugar, fats—lack this necessary roughage.

But muffins are not the only food where you can get healthful and tasty results by adding ALL-BRAN. Put it in dressings. Sprinkle it in soups. Mix it in griddle cake batter.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is equally effective for health when eaten as a cereal. Doctors recommend it. But be sure you get the genuine Kellogg's. It is 100% bran and furnishes "bulk" in generous quantities. Part-bran products, at best, can only be part-way effective. Just eat two tablespoons of ALL-BRAN daily (chronic cases of constipation, with every meal). Delicious with milk or cream, fruits or honey added.

Grocers everywhere sell Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Use it and you'll free yourself from constipation. Also from the use of habit-forming cathartics. For Kellogg's ALL-BRAN works as nature works. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Guaranteed! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

DANIELSON

PROVIDENCE MAN BADLY INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 26—Raymond Burgess, 34, Providence, was taken to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam this afternoon, after he had been apparently seriously injured in a motor vehicle accident on the Providence highway just east of the junction of Stearns and Reynolds streets, near the John W. Gallup farm. Burgess was believed early this evening to be suffering from internal injuries.

Burgess was operating a big tank trunk of the J. McCormack Asphalt Distributing company of Providence and was en route with a load for application to the new state highway between Danielson and Brooklyn when the big machine went off onto the shoulder of the newly constructed state highway, pulled itself out of control on the soft shoulder and plunged head on into a tree. Burgess is believed to have sustained his injury when he was thrown very forcibly against the steering wheel. Charles Blanchard, also of Providence, who was riding with Burgess, was thrown off the seat and out of the machine by the crash and sustained a painful injury to one hand. Burgess was taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson to await the arrival of the ambulance that took him to the hospital. The front end of the big truck was wrecked. State Officer Leslie Gordon of the Danielson barracks checked up the accident.

It was said this evening that the brakes on the tank truck had just been re-lined and presumably were in good condition, but as Burgess applied them to slow down the progress of the vehicle they failed to hold and that he drove off the hard-surfaced part of the new highway to slow the machine down, only to have the wheels on one side sink into the soft shoulder and force the machine out of control.

This Saturday brings the annual Tag day of the Danielson Civic federation. To those who know what this organization is doing, and about everyone here is interested in public matters is fully aware of its activities, it would appear almost like useless reiteration to set down that it is doing a work never before attempted in this town and therefore never approach in effectiveness. The Civic federation maintains a visiting nurse service, makes life more worth living for the stricken and unfortunate, holds health clinics every month and does innumerable good things that this town would miss mightily were they discontinued. Only once a year does it ask anything of the public, and that day this year is Saturday of this week. Last year generous people gave approximately $600 to the representatives of the federation on Tag day. It is hoped to at least equal that record this year and great will be the joy if it is exceeded. Members of the Civic federation work unselfishly and without pay in the interest of unfortunate humanity. No questions are asked when a suffering soul needs attention. It is given generously and graciously. Danielson people have come to regard it as an honor to have even a tiny share in this great work, and that is why mention is made today what the Civic federation is going to do tomorrow, with the aid of liberal souls.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Emt and Mrs. Mary Quinn of Bridgeport.

Three Killingly cases developing from raids by state officers on Thursday were disposed of today before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court. Joseph St. Claire, whose place is on a farm near South Killingly, was fined $100 for keeping with intent to sell and $25 for an actual sale, with costs, the total assessment against him being $158.87. Nisiford Laprise of Elmville was fined $200 and costs on a count charging an actual sale, and with costs his bill was $221.87. Arthur Edwards, Elmville, an occupant of another tenement in the house where Laprise also lives, was charged with keeping with intent to sell and with an actual sale, and was fined $25 on each count, with costs, a total of $71.87. It is understood that the fines were smaller in Edwards' case largely because he is an amateur in the liquor selling game and had done very little business.

Officials of Quinebaug Pomona Grange expect one of the largest gatherings of members of the year at the special meeting to be held Saturday evening with Wolf Den Grange at Abington. The fifth degree is to be conferred in the afternoon and the sixth degree at the evening session, when state officers will be in attendance. An interesting program of entertainment has been arranged, and a supper is to be served in the interim between the sessions.

At the funeral home of A. F. Wood funeral services were conducted by Rev. Albert Abbott of the Methodist Episcopal church for Mrs. Jane E. Matteson, who died in Auburn, R. I. The body was taken to Rockville for burial in Grove Hill cemetery. Relatives acted as bearers.

In addition to the Killingly cases growing out of yesterday's liquor raids that were disposed of today, others were before the Putnam city court, as told of in the news from that city this morning. The cases developed in Plainfield through raids will be before the town court there next Tuesday morning, while in Thompson cases are scheduled to be heard at dates in the near future. A wealth of intoxicants of various kinds were brought in from the raids by state officers will be held until the cases are finally disposed of and then destroyed.

A wedding of local interest in Wauoskeet at Ste. Anne's church on Monday of this week was that of Miss Loretta Bernier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bernier of that city, and Raymond Lemieux, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Lemieux of Danielson. The very pretty wedding was followed by a reception and breakfast at the home of the bride's parents.

Hundreds of members in Christmas clubs of Danielson banks have only a few more payments to make before they will cash in on their thrifty habits of nearly a year past. It is difficult to gauge as October draws to a close just what the releases to these people in early December will aggregate, but it likely will be in the neighborhood of $100,000. Past experience has shown that a great deal of this money goes to paying Christmas shopping bills, but it also has been clearly established that many people save through the Christmas clubs to deposit after the holidays a very considerable amount of their club checks in more or less permanent savings accounts.

The first snow squall of the season in Danielson put in its appearance this afternoon. It didn't amount to much, but was suggestive of what is to come.

Capt. Harold E. Greene and Bernard Caffery will be among the Danielson contingent attending the Yale-Army football game at New Haven Saturday.

Mrs. Laura J. Gorman, returned from a visit with friends at Marlboro, was among those who attended the demonstration for Governor Smith on Boston common Wednesday evening.

Gerard Chartier, '29, has been selected for membership in the symphony orchestra at Assumption college. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Venerand Chartier of Hawkins street.

D. Fred Kenworthy, registrar of voters, stressed the fact today that no more sessions of town officials to admit new voters will be held prior to election. Those who have reached their 21st birthdays since October 20, when voters were last made in Killingly or who will reach their majority prior to November 6, should have filed applications to be made not later than October 3, and there are no such applications pending.

Dr. Warren A. Tanner of Academy street, who underwent an appendicitis operation at the Day Kimball hospital a fortnight ago, continues to improve daily and is now well on the road to recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Adams, both natives of Killingly, celebrated their 62nd anniversary at East Hartford recently, and were given a surprise visit by Robert Tyler Relief corps and Rodman corps of East Hartford.

A meeting of the members of Mary A. Livermore Tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war, was held in G. A. R. hall last evening and preparations made for the annual inspection to be held at the next meeting.

Mrs. William Martin of Mechanic street will have the members of the Ladies Prayer circle at her home for a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Lillian E. Bailey, president of the Department of Connecticut, W. R. C., headed a delegation of local members of the McGregor Relief corps, and was in charge of the program this afternoon at Relief corps day at Putnam's soldiers' home at Noroton Heights. Mrs. Myra Frink of Brooklyn and Misses Florence Leach and Helen Packard of the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston had parts in the program.

Another successful rally was held here last evening by the democrats, who will continue to show real activity to the very close of the campaign. A feature in last night's short parade to the hall was a real live donkey, and red fire flashed and flared here for the first time in the present campaign.

Mrs. J. C. Witter, Miss Katherine D. Aylward and Miss Helen E. Aylward will be in New Haven Saturday to attend the Yale-Army football game.

The Missionary society of the Baptist church met this afternoon with Mrs. E. E. Allen of Main street.

PLAINFIELD

FAREWELL CLUB PARTY FOR GUESTS FROM CUBA

Mrs. Augusta Nolan entertained at bridge at her home Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Denniston Charlton who were to leave Friday for their home in Cuba. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Denniston Charlton, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Payne of Jewett City, Mr. and Mrs. John Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Phillips, Mrs. Teresa Sullivan, Mrs. Henry Fontaine, George Lawrence Krauss. The prizes were won by Miss Teresa Sullivan, Mrs. Denniston Charlton, Mrs. Lloyd Phillips, John Bradford, Lloyd Phillips and Denniston Charlton. The hostess, assisted by her sister Miss Helen Hawes served chicken salad, salteens, olives, ice cream, fancy wafers and coffee.

Funeral services for Laura Dupont were held Thursday at 9 o'clock at St. John's church. Burial was in Sterling cemetery. She leaves her mother and two older married sisters. She was operated on for appendicitis at a private hospital in New London October 18, failing to rally. She died Tuesday.

A surprise shower was given at the united Protestant church in Sterling recently for Miss Alice Hawes of Sterling and Herbert Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Phillips of Plainfield. The wedding is to take place Saturday November 3. Miss Hawes went over to the church to help with an entertainment rehearsal and found a company of seventy-five or more. The evening proved enjoyable with singing, instrumental music, etc. Cake and sandwiches were served and many useful gifts were received. Miss Hawes is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hawes of Sterling.

Miss Florence Jones of Westminster is visiting in Plainfield.

FUNERAL
Jeremiah Sullivan

The death of Jeremiah Sullivan, in his 89th year, marks the passing of one of the oldest residents in the Flat Rock section of the town of Plainfield. Mr. Sullivan was born in County Kerry, Ireland, May 10, 1840, the son of Jeremiah and Catherine Sullivan, and was the last of his family. He came to this country when a young man, May 4, 1864, and located in Plainfield, being a resident of this town 64 years. For 56 years he had lived in the house where he died.

At All Hallows' church in Moosup, he was united in marriage with Margaret Coffey, who died 12 years ago and whose death was a great shock to him. Five children were born to them, Mary, who died when young; Margaret, a teacher in the Plainfield schools; Daniel and James, of Worcester, and Simon, who lives at home.

Mr. Sullivan was a bright active man and until his last illness was always busy about the work of his farm. The esteem in which he was held is most beautifully expressed in a letter to the family in the following terms:

"He was in all truth a dear and loving father, an ideal neighbor and friend, highly respected and revered by all who knew him. His exceptional love for his family was the most remarkable and admirable of his many virtues; and God rewarded him in this by endowing the family with unusual love for him. How truly did the terms 'Home, Sweet Home,' apply to his home. It was an abode of peace, happiness and love in a superlative degree."

The funeral services were held at St. John's church, solemn requiem mass being sung by Rev. Fr. John Landry, with Rev. Fr. J. C. Mathieu of Grosvenordale, deacon, and Rev. Fr. Ludovic Paradis of Occum, subdeacon. The bearers were James and Augustus Coffey, Jerry Downing and Dennis Sullivan of Plainfield, Michael Shea of Jewett City, and Michael O'Neil of Ludlow, Mass.

There were beautiful floral tributes and numerous spiritual bouquets. As a tribute of respect, the schools in the village were closed during the funeral service. Burial was in the family plot at St. Mary's cemetery, Norwich, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. Landry.

Parisian judges still get 10 days off each summer to shear their sheep, under a traditional custom, because in old days each judge was a landowner and wool figured in his income. None own sheep now.

PUTNAM

STIFF FINES GIVEN TO LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, October 26—With the court room and staircase leading into the judgment room of the city of Putnam filled to capacity, Judge M. H. Geissler disposed of the four liquor cases brought into court as the result of raids conducted in this city Thursday afternoon and evening by the local and state police.

The first offender of the Volstead act was Eugene Rayno, who was arrested Thursday afternoon when Captain William Jarvis, Officers Durand, Sponcey and Chandler of the Putnam police and Officer Theodore Strand of the state police entered his place on the corner of Church and Providence streets and took possession of a three ton truck load of home-made beer and a quantity of hard liquors. In court this morning through his counsel, Irving R. Miron, Rayno pleaded guilty to a charge of owning and keeping with intent to sell and sale of intoxicating liquors. He received a fine of $100 and costs on each count. His brother, Joseph, a partner in business also pleaded guilty. For his offense he was forced to pay a fine of $100 on each count in addition to costs of the court. Eugene Rayno, stated to the court that he owned the business and he signed a waiver, permitting the officials to dispose of his contraband.

Peter T. Murray, who conducted a liquor establishment at 102 Arch street was trapped in the dry net on Thursday evening when State Officer James Carmody of Danielson barracks and Officer Ben Durant of the Putnam police gained entrance to his home and found several cases of beer and hard liquors in his possession. Murray pleaded guilty to owning and keeping with intent to sell and also pleaded guilty to the retail of the intoxicants. He was fined $200 on the first two counts and received a suspended sentence of thirty days in jail and was ordered to leave the city by Nov. 1. He agreed to do so, but was unable to raise his fine and was taken to Brooklyn jail to work out the conditions of his penalty for the violation of the law.

The largest catch made Thursday by the dry squad was at the little shoe store on Providence street owned by F. Labbosiere, where in the rear of the retail house a saloon was being operated by Alfred Bardier. Sergt. George Laird of the local police and State Officer Emil Castagna of Danielson barracks constituted the raiding party. A patron was found in the place at the time the officers entered but was allowed to go. The haul consisted of a three-ton truck loaded with beer and other brands of intoxicants, mostly home distilled. Bardier was charged with owning and keeping, intent to sell and sale of intoxicating liquors. He entered a plea of guilty to all three counts and received a fine of $400 on the charge of sale and received suspended jail sentences of 30 days on each of the remaining counts.

Joseph King of Canal street, whose appearance in court this morning was his second offense of the prohibition act was arrested Thursday evening by State Officer Gordon of Danielson barracks, Officers Durant, Becard and Dubreuil of the Putnam police when a raid was conducted at his home, and evidence in the form of liquors and beer were obtained by the officers. In court this morning King was charged with owning and keeping, intent to sell and evidence of the sale of liquor was obtained upon him by the prosecuting attorney. He pleaded guilty to all three counts.

King's wife with her three children, a boy of 8, a girl of three and a three months old baby all hugged close to her side heard sentence passed upon their father who only four months ago was arrested on the same charge and was released with a light fine and a warning of a more severe penalty in the event he was arrested the second time for the same offense. When asked by the judge what his occupation was King answered, "I buy hens and pigs and sell them at a profit". The judge inquired as to what amount of profit he obtained in his swine and poultry venture and King snapped back, "I make enough to support my family". The judge unsatisfied with the answer, inquired further into the case and proved that the defendant was depending upon the sale of his liquor for a living and was not attempting to obtain work. King told the court he was not the only bootlegger in the world and was not the worst, this phrase bringing from Judge Geissler a sentence of thirty days in jail on each count in addition to costs of court, with a reminder of a state's prison offense in the event he was arrested a third time.

A number of teachers and parents from Putnam attended the fall meeting of the Windham County Parent-Teachers association held Wednesday evening at Plainfield. Mrs. Beatrice Wilbur, a teacher at the Israel Putnam school of this city and president of the association presided at the meeting.

A week end holiday was afforded the children enrolled in the schools of the city today, as schools closed for the quarterly meeting of the state teachers convention which was held in Hartford. Nearly every teacher in the city attended. A number of the instructors remained in Hartford, where they will leave Saturday morning for New Haven to attend the Yale-Army football classic.

Miss L. Maria Hircox died in her 84th year at the Day Kimball hospital Thursday evening after a prolonged illness of many months. She is a native of Woodstock and has lived there all her life.

Several Putnam residents made the trip to Willimantic Thursday to witness the ovation paid the democratic nominee for the presidency Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York. All returned early in the evening, satisfied they had obtained a fleeting glimpse of the nominee and had received the customary thrill of witnessing the characteristic wave of the famous brown derby.

Earl Ballard, ticket agent and clerk at the office of the New Haven railroad in this city has left for an extended visit in Reno, Nev. He will return about the first of the year.

State Policeman Gordon of the Danielson barracks sustained a severe injury to one of his fingers while he was carrying liquor evidence from the home of Joseph King on Canal street Thursday afternoon, when the officers of the state and local police conducted raids in several houses in Putnam. Officer Gordon was rendered medical treatment for his injury at once and is not serious.

Raymond Burgess of Providence who was injured in an automobile collision in Danielson today was reported late this afternoon as being in a serious condition, suffering from internal injuries. Details of the accident are given in the Danielson column.

As the date draws near final plans for the celebration of Armistice day in Putnam are reaching their climax and indications are that Putnam will see its widest observance of the day since the signing of the document that placed the world at peace on Nov. 11, 1918.

The day will be observed on Nov. 12, as Armistice day falls on Sunday. Mills, stores and all schools in the city will close. A parade will be held, starting at 11 o'clock, in which all civic, military and fraternal organizations, including school children will take part. The plans call for speaking exercises immediately following the parade and will be held at the Putnam high school field. In the afternoon there will be a football game and in the evening a semi-military dance.

A meeting of the general committee will be held on Tuesday evening Oct. 30 at 8 p. m., in the chamber of commerce rooms to make further arrangements for the passing of the day.

Members of the Putnam high school football team will leave Putnam tomorrow afternoon for Worcester, where they will attend the Holy Cross and Alabquette football game.

State Highway Commissioner and Mrs. John A. Macdonald have been spending a few days with Mrs. Macdonald's mother, Mrs. William Johnson of Church street, previous to their annual winter trip to Florida.

Workmen have been engaged in cleaning up the fire ruins of the large barn formerly used by the Linderman Motor sales of Main street, as a repair shop which was destroyed by fire in July. It is not known whether or not the one time livery stable will be rebuilt or not.

WOMAN ATTACKS STATE OFFICERS WITH AN AXE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, October 26—Several cases growing out of the sale of intoxicating liquors were brought before Justice Percy P. Tourtellotte in town court in North Grosvenordale this morning as the result of an eastern county wide series of raids conducted by the state and local police Thursday afternoon and evening.

On the Thompson racket were the names of Sophie Gondos, storekeeper in Quinebaug, arrested by Troopers Nolan and Carmody of Danielson state police barracks. She was charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and actual sale. Leonard Mantell of North Grosvenordale, charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and actual sale. Leonard Mantell of North Grosvenordale, charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and actual sale, caught in the nets of Troopers Carmody and Nolan. Mrs. Odian St. Germaine of North Grosvenordale, charged with owning and keeping and intent to sell and actual sale.

Stanley Yezestemski of North Grosvenordale was arrested by Danielson officers in the final raid of the evening. A quantity of liquor was found and the owner placed under arrest and charged with the counts similar to the other Thompson offenders.

Both Officers Carmody and Nolan narrowly escaped from severe and perhaps fatal injuries when they commenced their raid of the Yezestem farm house. In entering the place the defendant's wife became enraged and defied the officers to search her property. Both officers proceeded and found two large glass jars filled with wine and alcohol and as they were about to leave the frightened woman seized an axe and wielded it at Officer Carmody, missing his head by a small margin and striking the glass jar, destroying five gallons of evidence. The woman aided by a young boy continued the battle with a knife, flatirons and other weapons which were within reach to throw at the officers. She was calmed, and her husband who is employed in Webster was arrested and brought to the Putnam police station.

As all cases were unprepared Justice Tourtellotte ordered the cases continued until next Wednesday morning, Oct. 31.

JEWETT CITY

NEW FIRE APPARATUS RECEIVED FROM BOROUGH

At a regular meeting of the firemen at the engine house Thursday evening, although informal and open, yet there were certain features that had to do with the formal receiving of the new LaFrance engine from the borough officials. Invitations sent out by Chief Lionel Boucher included those to the borough and town officials, newspapermen, and past foremen. Fire Marshal G. H. Prior was a guest, ex-officio, and there were interested representatives of the borough's textile concerns. The engine and chemical truck was removed from the service floor and tables were set for the 50 guests. A fine supper was served by Mrs. H. E. Paul, the menu including: Home baked chicken pie, mashed turnip, mashed potato, celery, olives, pickles, Parker House rolls, cake and coffee.

Remarks were listened to with much interest from Chief Boucher, Ex-Chief Thomas Wakeley, Fire Commissioner John McDermott, Warden Edmond J. Jodoin, Fire Warden Geo. H. Prior, Superintendents Walter Richardson of the Ninigret division of the Fisk Tire Co., and William I. Duggan of the Ashland Cotton Co. Mr. Prior reviewed the 30 years of achievement by the A. A. Young, Jr., Fire Co. Chief H. L. Stanton of Norwich, is sponsor for the opinion that the borough of Jewett City is among the finest equipped small towns in the state, and when it comes to the local fire possibilities should be able to handle with its modern apparatus and fine water pressure almost any ordinary problem that might arise in the ever present fire menace.

Manager J. F. Barnett of the Finn theater has secured the wonderful production "Lilac Time." None of the French war picture screens in existence has anything on Colleen Moore in Lilac Time.

Thursday was the first real early winter day. Following a hard frost in the early morning a stiff breeze from the north all day brought out overcoats and heavy wraps.

The borough sent a good quota to Plainfield and Willimantic Thursday to see Governor Al. Smith. In the latter city several were rewarded with a handshake from the smiling nominee.

This month marks the ninth anniversary of the Ashland club inaugurated for the purpose of promoting harmony and content among the employees' organization of the Ashland Cotton Co. Welfare Superintendent "Hal" Chase has made good in the grade, and as time goes on, he, with the best interests of the company always in the fore, proves the right man in the right place. His report, and those of Treasurer Charlie Cornell and Secretary Agnes Corby were of interest and covered in detail the many branches of the past year's social and business activity.

Much of interest was heard in the pleasing short address by Lewis M. Carpenter, the company's treasurer. William J. Duggan superintendent of cotton, added remarks of interest concerning the textile industries. "Doc" Gingras, as president, with Agnes Corby, secretary and Charlie Cornell, treasurer were all re-elected unanimously, the president for his 8th consecutive term. The directors' board comprises seven members at large were presented by the president and letters were read. Mrs. Emmouth reported a missionary meeting which she attended in Wrentham, Mass., hearing an address by a missionary from Turkey. Several short extracts concerning work in Japan, Africa and India were read by Mrs. Everett Gallup. An article was read by Mrs. William Allyn regarding the work of Mrs. Charles Lindbergh in the Near East college in Constantinople. A story entitled "Dorothy Woolworth Entertains" was read by Mrs. Finegan. The little girl is the daughter of a missionary in Turkey. A pleasant feature of the meeting was the presentation of a pieced quilt cover from Mrs. Ackley. Although unable to attend the meetings she takes an active interest in the work. The meeting closed with the hymn "Blest Be the Tie" and the Mizpah benediction. The members served sandwiches, cookies, cake and tea, and enjoyed a social hour.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

When Herbert Hoover spoke in New York he clearly set forth his position in regard to government ownership and operation. He expressed his general disapproval of it and he stands against it. He is for less government in business and from the experience which this country has had with government ownership and operation there are strong reasons for believing that he represents the sentiment of the country. He is against some of the policies in this respect that are supported by Alfred E. Smith. He believes those policies lean too strongly toward state socialism.

It is an interesting and timely endorsement of Mr. Hoover's views which is made by Myron T. Herrick, ambassador to France. Ambassador Herrick not only knows the story of government ownership and operation in this country but he has seen it at work in Europe. He knows from study that it is undesirable, and he says with telling effect, "The experience of Europe having been under my immediate observation and study for many years past I rather shudder at the thought that there should be any prospect in America for government ownership and operation while Europe stands out as such a dismal failure in this regard. The ownership, control and management of the railways and other instrumentalities by the government have proved such a dismal failure as to need no comment."

This country has had unfortunate experiences enough in the attempts which have been made at government ownership and operation to put all thought of such a thing out of mind. Government activities in this direction speak for themselves. It is possible to protect public interest, and such should be done, without putting the government into business with all its extravagance and inefficiency, while no government should think of taking away the initiative of private enterprise by setting up government competition. Mr Hoover is for the encouragement, not strangulation, of private enterprise, with due regard for the proper protection of the public's interest in natural resources.

PLEASING NICARAGUA

"Now that we have seen the justice with which those in charge of the American supervision of the elections are proceeding, and the generous and laudable protection they give us, we who desire an era of peace and constructive work for Nicaragua should agree to accept the same supervision for future times. For my part I offer that the liberal party will accept willingly the intervention of the United States at the next presidential election in the same form and manner as was established by the Stimson agreement."

This communication by General Moncada, presidential candidate of the liberal party in Nicaragua was sent to Senor Benard, candidate of the conservative party. That it represented the feeling of the latter is shown by his response when he said: "I entirely agree with your idea."

Nicaragua hasn't held its election, but preparations for it have been underway for months. Those preparations have been watched with keen interest by the people of Nicaragua. The letters show that they have been well impressed and it is a real accomplishment when the candidates of both parties agree so readily to what is being done for Nicaragua. They not only endorse but they appreciate, and this attracts attention because of the great amount of talk that has been indulged in politically in this country because of the action of this government in responding to the appeal to insure a fair and free election in that revolution ridden country.

Our aim was to be of service to the Central American country. From what has been done our efforts are meeting the situation. They are getting the endorsement of both sides before election day, and nothing could augur better for an open and straightforward opportunity of giving expression at the ballot box when election day comes.

ABOLISHING SUBMARINES

According to Lord Cushendun, acting British foreign secretary, it is the belief of Great Britain that submarines could be done away with without endangering the protection of the nations. That was at least the proposition that was put before the French in the recent efforts for a further limitation of armaments. The British were willing to have all underwater vessels abandoned. France was not and the compromise was that scagoing subs would be eliminated.

This explanation was given in connection with a statement that was made concerning the Anglo-French accord, and it reveals an interesting attitude relative to the submarines.

While the Washington naval agreement was being negotiated there was a desire that the submarines be abandoned. At that time France was absolutely opposed to it. It was not willing to discuss such a possibility. It took the position that the submersibles are vital for the protection of its coast lines and it was not willing to give them up because they made a valuable line of defense at low cost compared with some of the other war vessels.

France has stood firm in that respect and it doesn't appear that it wavered greatly in its compromise under the British pact. However, inasmuch as it has been brought to realize the advantage of abandoning the ocean going subs it is not impossible that it may some day reach the conclusion that all may be given up provided the other nations are ready and willing to do the same thing. Not so long ago this government was represented as being willing to consider the abandonment of submarines if the others would.

Each move that is made in such a direction helps to crystallize sentiment and even though Lord Cushendun sees no promising outlook for further disarmament at the present time it is not to be forgotten that the Washington agreement will be up for revision in 1931.

ABSENTEE VOTING

Right at this time no little interest is being manifested in absentee voting, because it is being employed by large numbers who are away from home or going to be away on election day.

Already a number of people now in Norwich have voted by mail and sent their ballots to their respective states to be counted election day. They are not to be deprived of their suffrage because they are due to be away from home election day. It naturally calls for a bit of formality and the adherence to the provisions of the law, but it is an appreciated provision for voters away from home on business or on a visit.

How generally it is recognized that the voters are entitled to this privilege is reflected in the fact that absentee voting is now permitted in 44 of the 48 states. There are only four states where there is no such provision, those states being Connecticut, Indiana, Kentucky and Pennsylvania.

Laws in the different states are by no means uniform. They vary greatly, but there is a disposition to allow voting when away from home on election day, provided such voters would be entitled to vote if they were at home.

The justice of such a provision seems clear. Many are away from home at all times. It would be a hardship for them to return home election day just to cast their ballots, and yet they ought to have a chance to participate in election, under proper safeguards. It seems a bit unfortunate that voters from so many other states who may be in Connecticut election day can exercise their right to vote, while residents of Connecticut, who may be in any of the other states on election day must lose their vote because we have no absentee voting law. If absentee voting can be satisfactorily accomplished in other states it ought to be possible for the same privilege to be extended to the people of Connecticut.

WHY NOT THINK SAFETY?

One day this month an employe in a Washington building that has elevator service quit for the day, went to the elevator door and rang the bell. Evidently he didn't get quite as quick a response as he had wanted. Whether there was a register in the hallway showing the location of the elevator as it moved up and down is not disclosed. Perhaps there was not, for the man tried the elevator door, found that it responded to his pull and slid it open so that he could look into the shaft.

In this position, which cannot fail to be regarded as dangerous, he was not satisfied, but pushed his head into the shaft in an endeavor to satisfy himself concerning the car. He was looking down. The car was up and descending, and crushed him before he knew what had happened.

It was a most distressing accident, one that will call for an investigation as to the safety appliances concerning elevator doors and the like, but it is clearly one of those cases where, even though it ought to have been impossible for him to do it, the man should have refrained from placing himself in evident peril. Perhaps there will be a safety device on the thinking apparatus some of these days.

Mr. Smith says that the charge of state socialism made against him is an old one. Old or new, he doesn't seem to be able to shake it off.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Those who were fortunate enough to hear the other night James M. Beck deliver his masterly speech over the radio must have been impressed by the clearness of his ideas and the beauty of his diction. His subject matter was not of the controversial order. It was a statement of Mr. Hoover's services to Belgium during the World war as a food administrator. He did not enter into any of the disputed points between the two political platforms. His voice was clear and resonant but not any more so than his thoughts and the elegance of his entire speech. The writer was reminded of that masterful book he wrote—clearly the best during that terrible struggle—entitled "War and Humanity." It was along the lines of the peace pact recently negotiated at Paris through the efforts of Secretary Kellogg. This book was very widely read directly after the war.

This great book of James M. Beck brings vividly back to our minds the horror of that terrible strife. And the farther we get away from it in point of time the more thrilled are we to ask what was it all about? What did it amount to? What great principles either of righteousness or humanity occasioned the explosion of the aggressing party. In most wars even in the middle ages we can see some clearly defined reason. But thus far we can discover nothing of the kind that underlay the World war. It came to an astonished and unprepared world like an explosion of dynamite. Even the young schoolboy knows why the Revolutionary war was fought and what was gained by it. There is no question in anybody's mind why Abraham Lincoln called for troops in 1861 and what great principle was involved. We know equally well what great humanitarian result followed. But not so the World war.

As a great people we never looked forward to the outcome of a presidential contest with such keen interest as we do to the decision that will be made on November 6th. The great mass of our people are not so keenly alive to the sectional matter of farm relief, because we have had such questions before, and they have been intelligently handled. America is disposed to do the fair thing to the western farmers, and on this question there is no difference of opinion. On the protection of our great industries, I mean, of course, adequate protection, the two great parties stand substantially on the same basis. But wherein they most radically differ in this contest is not over an economic but a great moral question, and that is prohibition. For a convincing argument we do not look either to the emotionalist or fundamentalist, but to the scientific economists like Professors Irving Fisher and Henry W. Farnum of Yale. One who is able to apply the law of percentages to criminology as it was before the 18th amendment and what it has been since, will see what prohibition has done.

Are we not justified in believing that Almighty God is just as much interested in the welfare of the American people as he was in the Jewish nation during their national existence? The laws that were to govern their political activities were very plain. Fidelity to their Creator and what He stood for was rewarded by success; but deliberately turning down the principles of his kingdom was followed by punishment. This was no arbitrary ruling, but simply cause followed by its inevitable effect. Here is the principle of natural law just as reasonable and inevitable as shadow following the obscurity of light. It has been so in the entire history of civilization. Nations that have been industrious, morally upright, not only insisting on the right to live themselves, but also in giving to the other fellow the right to live, are those that survive.

While there is reason for regretting that religion is not taught in our public schools, as it once was, we suppose that some other things are that were not thought of once. As a matter of fact the reading of the Bible and especially the New Testament, never hurt any child, no matter what version was used. It was infinitely better than some of the mental trash that used to be in some of the earlier reading books. Was any child ever hurt by reading such sublime sentences as these: "I love them that love me, and they that seek me early shall find me," or "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Along some lines however our public schools have very much improved in these later years. For instance how much is done today to impress upon the youth the need of bodily cleanliness. What attention is now given to throat, eyes nose and to any other bodily imperfections!

Prof. J. P. Berkely of Newton Theological seminary in a recent address on "What the Pupil Needs," showed clearly that both time and strength are wasted unless the attitude of the child is toward the things taught. The mental attitude of the child should be understood. There is much in the Old Testament that the child ought not to know, and whatever lesson is taught should be drawn from that which comes in line with the needs and experiences of the child. For that reason they ought to have their special lessons that should appeal to the life they lead. His lecture also on "What the Teacher Needs" showed that she was a failure unless she was acquainted with the mental life of the child and knew its needs.

Speaking on "Religious Education in a Rural Parish," the pastor of a rural church in the northern part of the county recently told that when he came to that field he found that there were foreigners who spoke a dozen different languages, and they could not understand one another. They lived a clannish life, one race having nothing to do with another. In fact they were living in a state of silent hostility to one another. They were poor, ignorant, and unaccustomed to what we call the ways of civilized life. The speaker said that the saddest feature was that the children did not know how to play, and they never laughed. This deplorable condition was brought to the attention of the church. They were visited, the children were taught how to play, the women were shown how to do their work. Then there were socials when the people were brought together, and the result was amazing. It was a response to kindness, and this is religion.

We can hardly fail to admire the courage of men who attempt to make non-stop flights across the Atlantic. These words are written as it is about decided that Captain MacDonald and his "Gypsy Moth" have perished. There is a type of mind that feels this way about facing such dangers: why will men tempt Providence by risking their lives by such hazardous feats? Why not wait until navigating the air has been mastered? But of course the answer is, how will the air ever be mastered except by flying, each person adding something to the science of flying? This country would never have been discovered if somebody had not been brave enough to sail across the ocean. You and I would not be here if somebody had not been daring enough to attempt navigation. The world progresses only through courage and the blood of heroism.

Three or more planes make the trip between Paris and London every day.

TARIFF NEEDS OF INDUSTRIAL CONNECTICUT

"The very existence of Waterbury's industries in particular, and industrial Connecticut in general, depends without question on the continuance of the republican protective tariff," said Edward O. Goss, president of Scovill Mfg. Co., Waterbury, in a public statement.

"The consistent republican adherence to the policy of restricting foreign competition, in industries that could not survive the protection now referred to by our democratic friends as a competitive tariff, offers excellent reason for the continuance of the republican party in power. The wage earners of this state must not be misled by non-vital issues.

"It is very evident that Connecticut's industrial payroll, running as it does into millions of dollars, presents a stumbling block to the theory of those who argue for a 'competitive' tariff. For example in a single industry—the brass business—what could be more disastrous to our labor than the proposition of unrestricted competition from European nations, whose wage levels and standards of living would enable them to undersell American products in our own American market? How long could Connecticut industries survive under such a policy?

"It is a very simple proposition. If industry is retarded by tariff thinking, the worker at the bench feels the process just as much as the executive in the office. The worker's common sense may be depended upon. It is he who would feel directly and harshly any lowering of labor or production costs in our highly developed Connecticut industries. The Connecticut republican representatives in Congress have always been consistent and steadfast in their support of this manufacturing state's interests and in tariff legislation. No other section of the country is more concerned with a continuance of this attitude than ours. We must not permit dangerous experimenting with this policy.

"The welfare of several thousand families here in Waterbury, as well as thousands of others in other parts of Connecticut, is so closely linked with the protective tariff that we must guard it in principle and in practice. It is the backbone of our prosperity and comfort—elements in our everyday lives that the employes of our foreign competitors know little about.

"The interests of everyone in Connecticut will be best served by the policy expressed in the republican platform."

Hoover and Tariff Needed for Good Wages

"We believe in maintaining the wages of our people, and this can only be done by the election of Herbert Hoover and a continuance of the American protective tariff," was a statement made today by Willis F. Hobbs, president of the Bridgeport Hardware Manufacturing Corporation, in an interview.

Mr. Hobbs reviewed experiences of his company under protective and low tariffs. He said: "There have been a great many things said by both sides in regard to business conditions under the republican and democratic administrations of the past years. There have been many things said by the democratic speakers in regard to the tariff, and in some of the things which they have said cannot be substantiated by facts.

"I have been in the manufacturing business in Connecticut for over 48 years and have been through in that period all kinds of business conditions. There seems to be a sort of fatality attached to democratic administrations of government affairs which has a very depressing effect upon business.

"Whether this is because of the psychological effect of the change or whether it is because the democratic party has been so jealous of the republican success in handling the affairs of the government, and consequently they have felt it their duty to take steps to break down that success when they have come into power, or whether it is the fact that they are so confident of their ability to improve conditions that they go at it blindly and perhaps spitefully to show what they can do, is a question rather difficult to answer.

"The fact is, however, that it is invariably the case that when the democratic party have control of the government, they have invariably broken down the stability of business.

"One of the most important factors affecting the business of this country, not only that of the manufacturers and merchants but of all classes of labor, is the question of tariff.

"It is absolutely necessary to have an adequate protective tariff on all goods from other countries coming into this country in competition with goods manufactured in this country in order that the business of this country may be stabilized and labor assured of steady employment at wages commensurate with the living conditions which our people are entitled to and have been accustomed to for many years.

"In our own business, that of the manufacturer of mechanics' tools, we have seen conditions under democratic administration which have made very serious depression, especially when foreign goods were allowed to come in under low tariff—conditions so that the manufacturers have been obliged to curtail their production and lay off large numbers of employees because of lack of business.

"We have had such times and continued to give employment to as many of our employes as possible, adding very largely to our inventories by piling up stocks of finished goods, employing a portion of our force on part time and taking back others who had been laid off on other part time in order to minimize as far as possible the distress occasioned by the times, and in many cases we have it necessary to dispose of these goods—thus manufactured at a loss.

"Our democratic friends seem to be determined to reduce the tariff regardless of consequences.

"If the mechanics and all classes of working people of the United States could realize what that means and realize that it would be sure to happen under democratic rule and that the tariff would be maintained and increased under the republican administration where it was found necessary in order to protect our American workers and enable the manufacturers to maintain the American wage for the American worker, it seems to me there would be no question as to their casting their votes for the party which is pledged to maintain American protection.

"Foreign competition now in some of our lines is such that goods are being imported into this country and sold at retail for prices far below our actual cost of manufacture, and in these cases it will be necessary for tariff to be increased and it can be readily seen that if it were decreased it would be fatal to the industries and workers of this country.

"We believe, in maintaining the wages of our people and this can only be done by the election of Herbert Hoover and a continuance of the American protective tariff."

Competitive Tariff Dangerous

"A competitive tariff that attempts to scientifically determine between the wages abroad and in the Orient with those in the United States, which ignores profit, will give much of the market right here in this country to foreign cheap labor," declared General Clarence R. Edwards, war-time commander of the famous 26th division, in an address at a republican rally at Naugatuck this week.

General Edwards pointed out what appeared to him to be the vast difference between the republican and democratic platforms. He said the republican tariff plan was a "prosperity tariff," with even more protection in prospect, as was already proved necessary. Against this, he said, the democratic platform calls for a "competitive tariff."

"For forty-[illegible] years," he said "I served on the active list of the army. Twelve years of that time, I was chief of the bureau of insular affairs, corresponding to a foreign colonial department, with civil duties, during which I helped write the tariffs for the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico and San Domingo. I know something about the subjects of tariffs.

"I found there was nothing occult about it; the schedules were empirical formulas as to each item. I will admit, as was first attempted under President Taft, that the tariff itself should be determined by a commission pledged to real protection, with schedules changed as conditions changed, the standards of living the guide.

"For the last ten years, I have been the president of a large manufacturing concern. I cannot forget what happened to this country after the democratic tariff which President Cleveland condemned, but which became law. On Feb. 24, 1914, with the Underwood tariff law in operation, the unemployed asked Governor Walsh of Massachusetts and Mayor Curley of Boston to throw open armories and other public buildings for sleeping purposes, and the distribution of food for those out of work.

"There is no question in my mind that had the war not broken out, every city would have had bread lines and soup kitchens. And after the war, with the 1920 deflation which crippled or ruined business generally, I cannot forget the 20,000 veterans walking the streets of Boston, scantily clad. Six millions idle until the emergency tariff was passed in 1921. And since, no fair man can but admit that there never has been such prosperity and wealth so generally distributed."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Prohibition the Real Issue

Mr. Editor: Prohibition is the issue because of all other issues relating to the coming election it is the one thing that touches our national conscience, threatens our national felicity and our constitution which is the palladium of our liberties. We do not forget that there are minor issues in this campaign such as tariff and farm relief and taxation but these touch the country only in local spots, but the liquor question has universal and in the human depraved appetite has a country-wide existence and monied advocates who are working for dear life to promote the traffic.

Argument counts for nothing with these men and their followers. Henry Ford's sincere words in favor of prohibition and the success it has proved in his manufacturing concern are worth more, surely, than a "Norwich Voter's" who today addresses a letter to you in condemnation of prohibition and informs the public that he intends to support the man with the derby hat.

Alas! To what base uses have hats descended!

This is not a time when the republican party and the American people should consider lightly or treat with apparent apathy the election of a president who is pledged to alter the fundamental law so as to lay open our homes to the ravages of the greatest enemy of mankind—strong drink.

A BULLETIN READER

Norwich, Oct. 26, 1928.

Bigger Than Poor Man's Consumption

Mr. Editor: Glancing over the paper this morning I came across the article entitled "Talks on Electric Service."

I am going to give my idea on the subject.

Mr. Smith, a working man lives in a six room cottage and last month he consumed 32 kilowatt hours. His bill last month at 10c per hour was $3.20. Under the new rate the initial charge for six rooms would be $1.65. He gets five hours with the initial charge and the remaining 27 hours at .63 would be 81 cents. So $1.65 plus the 81c would make his bill under the new rate $2.46. Since his bill last month was $3.20 and under the new rate $2.46 he is benefited by the difference which is 74 cents.

Mr. Brown, who lives on Easy street in a 14 room house consumed 32 kilowatt hours last month. His bill was $3.20, same as Mr. Smith. Under the new rate he would have to pay $2.45 for the initial charge. That includes the use of five kilowatt hours. The remaining 27 hours at 3 cents would be 81 cents and his bill under the new rate $3.26. Mr. Smith's bill is increased six cents.

Yes, it is true that the poor man is benefited by the rates, if he uses all that. But in most cases the poor man hasn't the electrical appliances to consume so much. The average family that uses electricity for lighting and ironing purposes consumes about 20 kilowatt hours per month.

Therefore if the poor man has the appliances to consume 32 kilowatt hours he surely is benefited by the new rates.

A HOUSEWIFE

Norwich, Oct. 26, 1928.

Where it Leaves the Merchant

Mr. Editor: I am very much pleased to think I am helping in my humble way Satisfied Customer to enjoy the benefit of appliances furnished him and installed in his house by the city of Norwich Gas and Electrical department on the deferred payment plan. He says if I paid my help decent wages it would help out some. I am paying $44 for 40 hours at present writing. (Of course this does not amount to much along side of $5,000 a year for running the gas and electric end and $5,000 for a sales manager and $3,000 a year for a cashier). I also have to furnish not only the capital to run my own business but have to pay taxes to help furnish the capital to pay for the comfort of Satisfied Customer who has the privilege of paying me back at his own sweet will. This is prohibitive for me as I have to pay my rent and stock bills every 30 days and taxes and light bills when due, also help every week, whereas the municipal merchandising department has the benefit of the taxpayers' money to pay the help, display room and fixtures installed for use. It is the least of Satisfied Customer's concern whether the merchants in that line that are up against the rotten comes as he gets what he wants and pays for petition of the gas and electrical department are driven to the wall as long it at his own convenience. If the department was any benefit to the taxpaying owners it would be one thing but as near as I can figure out the inside help and Satisfied Customers are getting the whole thing.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 — There has been occasion heretofore in this column to comment on the amazing amount of information packed between the covers of that handbook of Washington official and political life, the Congressional Directory.

It is safe to say that no work of reference with the exception of the telephone book gets half the attention the directory knows in this city of half a million or more folks where substantially the only business and the only really popular indoor or outdoor sport is politics. From the president down through the whole official life list to the humblest sub-section chief in an executive department; from the army of Washington news writers to the last lobbiest to hop off the train, nobody is without his copy of this diverting work.

Autobiographical Records

Of all the governmental and other information jammed into the close printed pages of the directory, the biographies of senators and house members is the most entrancing reading. The fact that they are virtually autobiographies throws a flood of light on some of the statements they contain.

The average space required by the senatorial autobiographers runs around 15 or so lines; but there are notable exceptions—in both directions. Tyson, democrat, of Tennessee, for example, serving his first term in Washington, needs 42 lines of biography, the existing senate record for length, while Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, at the other end of the scale, takes just half a line. "T. H. Caraway, democrat, Jonesboro," to sum himself up. Copeland, democrat, New York, is Tyson's runner-up with 33 lines.

Representative Blanton, Texas, democrat, is in a class all by himself for length of biography, rating 62 lines. That's the most the directory has to say of anybody in official life. Caraway holds the open challenge low wordage championship of the book, beating Delegate Sutherland of Alaska in brevity by one word. The Sutherland personally contributed sketch reads: "Dan A. Sutherland, republican, fourth term." Senate runners-up of brevity are Couzens, republican, Michigan, 2 1-2 lines and Shipstead, "farmer-labor," 1 3-4 lines.

Individual Distinctions

Tyson's account of himself is largely filled with his military record at West Point, in the Spanish and World wars and in the national guard. He's the only former general in congress. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, a World war artillery major, uses less than one line on that aspect of his life, and his cousin from Missouri, Jim Reed, boils a long and hectic political career down to a total of eight lines.

Senator Norbeck of South Dakota classifies himself as a "Roosevelt republican," the only one in the book, and adds that he's a "well digger by occupation." Brookhart of Iowa says he's a "farmer, teacher, lawyer and soldier" out of political life; Copeland discloses he was "commandeered" by the late Mayor Gaynor of New York as commissioner of health; Heflin, Alabama, says he abandoned the law years ago on election to congress "and has since devoted himself to the study of public questions"; Blease claims fame as the "only South Carolinian who has been mayor of his city, senator of his county, speaker of the house, president of the senate, governor of the state and United States senator."

YOUR HEALTH

LIP READING TRAINS THE POWERS OF OBSERVATION

By Alice G. Byrant, M. D., Boston

The hard of hearing do not want special legislation; they do not want to be segregated; but they do want thoughtfulness, and the intelligence of a consistent unity of life in order to direct their forces for the achievement of their rightful education and successes.

Lip reading is a great onward movement in the new education of the hard of hearing.

The hard of hearing through lip reading secure their unhampered and rightful places in the great school of life.

Professional students of the problems of the hard of hearing are stressing the fundamental values of lip reading.

Lip reading for the hard of hearing means clear understanding, clear thinking and clear expression.

The hard of hearing should have the initial advantage of a common pupilship.

The education of the hard of hearing is not well balanced when lip reading is omitted.

The hard of hearing through lip reading become astute trainers of the powers of observation.

Through lip reading the hard of hearing will have richer living contracts with their comrades. Without lip reading they become intellectually maimed.

A keen sense of interest, sympathetic observation and long continued drill are fundamental for the mastery of lip reading.

Lip-reading for the hard of hearing is no longer a luxury—it is a necessity. It should become, also, a habit.

The hard of hearing as co-partners in the accepted educational scheme have the right to expect their full share in the school curricula.

Lip reading must be brought within the reach and understanding of the hard of hearing within and without the schools.

Without lip reading, the education of the hard of hearing will not give full measure of returns; it will be a lessened education, and, indeed, a costly education.

The hard of hearing school children untrained in lip reading have been long enough innocent, helpless and unguided shareholders in the plant of education.

Lip reading bridges over the untrodden pathways between the [illegible] of hearing and normal hearing individuals.

The hard of hearing without lip reading will trail behind as interpreted in processes of class repeatings.

Without lip reading the activities of the hard of hearing are hampered, successful competition and participation in life's endeavors are lessened, and they partake of the crumbs of knowledge.

Arm Chair Journeys To Other Lands

Seat of Turkish "Fundamentalism"

TREBIZOND, Turkey, (AP) — With divinity schools in Constantinople being changed into refugee camps, public health stations and pottery kilns, and with the closing of many mosques throughout the land, Trebizond sits by the shores of the Black Sea and waits for the day of judgment.

Here Turkey's "fundamentalists," some 30,000 strong, strive to keep faith with the old Moslem customs which "civilization" is killing.

The rest of Turkey may have abandoned the Koranic precept of washing head, neck, arms and feet five times a day before each prayer and may have abandoned the prayers as well with the new excuse of "business prevents." The fundamentalists still wash religiously, still obey that Koranic law of giving one-fortieth of their yearly income to the needy.

It was the fundamentalists of Trebizond, sturdy fishing folk and coalminers, who alone in Turkey put up a fight against the abolition of the fez. Though they lost the fight, they have adopted the least hatlish hats they could devise; amorphous home-made caps with visors turned to the back, so hat worshippers may remain covered in the mosques as of yore and still be able to touch bare foreheads to the prayer rugs.

It was sturdy Trebizond women, too, who took to umbrellas to hide their outraged faces when a new prefect, hot from Angora, ordered them to discard their veils.

Though the religious marriage ceremony is merely optional now that Turkey has adopted the new civil code, copied on that of Switzerland, the fundamentalists consider themselves unwed until the hodja (Moslem priest) has blessed them with verses from the Koran.

They still consult a hodja, as every good Moslem did in the old days, on every problem of daily life, such as "Should I get my wife a new dress?" or "Shall I sell my fish to a Christian?" The hodja, searching through the Koran, finds an answer for every such question as well as for weightier moral problems.

Even when the government completes the task now under way of translating the Koran from its intricate Arabic, which only priests and scholars understood, into a simple Turkish, Trebizond intends to leave its interpretation to the holy men even if the government executes its most recent threat of unturbaning them.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after cold or flu. Money refunded if not satisfactory after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Little Talks on Thrift

REWARDS THAT COME FROM THRIFT.

"The first and best victory is to conquer self," said Plato. "To be conquered by self is of all things the most shameful and vile."

The first step in thrift is "to conquer self." Until this self-conquest has been made we will never change our habits for the better.

We may realize the folly of wastefulness and extravagance. We may wish that we might get out of the way of always being behind financially. We may realize in the honesty of our own hearts that we are doing ourselves a grave injustice by the neglect of our physical well being. We may know that we are allowing golden opportunities for self-improvement and advancement to be neglected. We may have a clear viewpoint of all of these attitudes. But until we apply the Plotonian test in our rules on conduct we are "conquered by self" which is "of all things, the most shameful and vile."

Perhaps we have not thought all the way through these personal problems. In neglecting to save money or practice other phases of thrift, we have not realized, possibly, the great harm being done to ourselves mentally and spiritually. We have thought only of the material phases.

It is well for us in this fast and fascinating era to listen across the ages to the voice of Plato, reminding us of the glory of victory over self and the shame of a conquest won by by our own follies.

Those who practice thrift may rest assured that not all the values accruing to them can be measured in terms of dollars. They may find inspiration in the concept that they are gaining what is more priceless than gold — a strong character, a sturdy will. — By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift.

Sunday Morning Talk

Beauty

The traveller on the road to Heaven will naturally turn his thoughts to the miracle of creation after having feasted his soul on the majesty of God, and satisfied his heart with the certainty of Fatherly love and watchful Providence. He will desire to trace nature to its source and lifting his hands above the gloom of earth to touch the garment hem of the creator.

God has laid the foundations of the earth in beauty. Man often ornaments the outside and leaves all rough and crude within, but the work of God is perfect and the most secret places display the taste of the Supreme Artist.

Every tint of sunrise and sunset, every flush of color to be found in the myriad flowers scattered over the earth are to be seen among them. Truly God hath built for man a palace on beautiful foundations.

Not alone for utility is all this beauty spread out as we see it the beauty of the flowers. Here in America God has been practically lavish with these treasures.

The beauty of the autumn leaves in their gorgeous color should lead our thoughts up to the Creator and maker of all these beauties which He has so lavishly surrounded us and may we at the decline and passing of our lives like the autumn leaves go up with that beauty of soul taken in passing and that only He can impart.

Thus the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork. Thus is earth carpeted and roofed with beauty from stone to sky, from cloud to clod all is faultless.

FUNERALS.

Laura Dupont.

There was a large attendance of relatives and friends at the funeral of Laura DuPont, held Thursday morning at 8:15 o'clock at her home, in Plainfield. At 9 o'clock there was a high mass of requiem at St. John's church, Plainfield, Rev John H Landry, celebrant. Among those present were relatives and friends from Baltic, Taftville, Norwich, Montville and New London and a delegation from the Society St. Jean de Baptiste.

Miss Teresa Sullivan had charge of the musical program and as the processional rendered Chopin's Funeral March. At the offertory Miss Sullivan sang O Salutaris and as the waiting hymn she sang Face to Face. At the recessional Miss Sullivan sang Some Sweet Day.

The burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield. Father Landry conducted the committal service. The bearers were Aurelius and Rudolph Lavalle, Lucian Joliceon, Alphonse and Joseph Bernier and Amy Fournier. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Undertakers Shea and Burke had charge of the funeral arrangements.

TWO PETITIONING WIVES GET DIVORCES SOUGHT

In the superior court short calendar session at New London Friday morning, Judge John Richards Booth granted divorce to Mrs. Jessie C. Thomas of New London from William Edward Thomas, a former New London resident, who is now in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. She was also granted custody of a minor child. The divorce was granted on the grounds of intolerable cruelty. The marriage of the couple took place Feb. 28, 1926.

On grounds of intolerable cruelty, Laura C. Perry of Oakdale was granted divorce from Luther L. Perry of Mystic and was allowed change of name to Laura Coleman. The couple was married Jan. 1, 1926.

COMPANIES COMPETING TO GIVE ELECTRIC SERVICE

Residents in the vicinity of Lantern Hill in Ledyard and North Stonington and representatives of the Eastern Connecticut Power and the Mystic Power companies appeared before the public utilities commission at Hartford Friday morning in an attempt to reach an agreement whereby one or the other or both of the companies will furnish electricity to these residents. The commission directed the companies and residents petitioning for the service to give further study to the matter.

NORWICH TOWN

CHOWDER SUPPER ATTRACTS PROFITABLE PATRONAGE

A clam chowder supper was served Friday night in the vestry of the Methodist church to a large number. The tables were filled twice and some of them three times before all were served the delicious chowder made by A. D. Zabriskie. The tables and the vestry were gay with flowers and Hallowe'en decorations. The supper was in charge of Mrs. Richard Carter, assisted by Mrs. Harold Rose, Mrs. Daniel Wheeler, Mrs. Arthur Fulton, Mrs. Lewis Aldrich, Effie Ladd, Gertrude Brown, Ines Edmiston, Muriel Rose, Virginia Ward, Margaret Phillips, Doris Rose, Mildred Carter, Louis Aldrich and Mrs. A. D. Zabriskie. A social followed the supper in charge of Mrs. Louis Aldrich.

Scouts Going On Hike.

Good Turns was the subject of the talk given Thursday night by Scoutmaster Potter at the meeting of the Boy Scouts connected with the Methodist church. There was an attendance of 14. At the roll call each Scout had many good turns to report. The opening ceremony was in charge of Patrol Leader Donald Waterman. The scoutmaster was assisted in the game period by Ralph Smith. If the weather permits the Scouts will go on a tracking bike this (Saturday) morning. In the efficiency contest Arthur Bennett still has a lead of 10 points.

PRE-ELECTION DISORDERS REPORTED IN HONDURAS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Oct. 26—(AP)—Honduras went "dry" today for seven days as a measure to prevent disorders in connection with the presidential election. The voting will take place next Sunday.

Two American warships arrived today at north coast ports and another is expected Saturday at Amapala to watch events.

A group of Honduran political exiles residing in Guatemala were found on the other side of the border armed and threatening to invade Honduras. They were arrested by Guatemalan authorities.

FIRST TASTE OF WINTER IN THE ADIRONDACKS

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Oct. 26—(AP)—This section of the Adirondacks had its first taste of winter today with the mercury remaining below the freezing point since daybreak. The cold snap was accompanied by snow flurries throughout the day. The snow was expected to aid the hundreds of deer hunters now in the region.

NORWICH MERCHANTS START SUIT AGAINST GAS & ELECTRICAL DEPT.

Twenty-five Norwich business houses which claim that the competition of the city gas and electrical department is on the point of driving them out of business in the sale of gas and electric appliances and equipment have brought suit in the superior court against the city and the board of gas and electrical commissioners and are seeking an injunction to restrain this city department from dealing in, selling and installing such equipment and appliances.

The petitioners further allege that the gas and electrical department has no legal authority to engage in the line of business that they complain of.

Papers in the injunction proceedings, which were forecasted some time ago in The Bulletin, have been drawn by the law firm of Brown and James and have been served upon the five commissioners, Joseph P. Connor, William H. Cruickshank, Jeremiah A. Desmond, Jacob Munz and Samuel Goldberg, and upon the city clerk, Weston C. Pullen.

The following names appear as plaintiffs in the suit:

Carl W. Brown, Carl W. Brown, Inc.; William F. O'Neil and Charles D. Yerrington, Jr., doing business as the O'Neil Electric Co.; The Eaton Chase Co., Walter H. Nelson; Carl W. Sharpe; Helen B. Hardy, doing business as the J. P. Barstow and Co.; Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald; James Hourigan, Joseph W. Hourigan, Michael H. Hourigan and John A. Hourigan, doing business as Hourigan Bros.; The Silberman Furniture Co.; Phillip T. Harry, George Leven and Alfred Goldenberg, doing business as the Franklin Hardware Co.; Horace F. Corning; Hyman Burchman, doing business as the Thames Hardware Co.; Harry Cohen, doing business as the New York Electric Co.; Carl E. Berkoff; The Plaut-Cadden Co.; Robert J. Cochrane; Emil O. Zahn; George F. Ring; Thure W. Dahl; S. Alpheus Gilbert and Walter E. Gilbert, doing business as the Gilbert Furniture Co.; Eldon F. Tripp; Andrew H. Breed; John Porteous; Clarence E. Swain and Interstate Furniture Co., all of and doing business in the town of Norwich.

The writ and complaint in the suit read as follows:

Said plaintiffs are engaged in the business of dealing in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment in the said city and town of Norwich and are taxpayers in the said city and town.

The defendant, the said City of Norwich, by virtue of the authority conferred upon it by the statutes of the state of Connecticut, has engaged in the generation, distribution and sale of electric current and the manufacture, distribution and sale of gas, within the said city and town of Norwich.

Said City of Norwich by and through its board of gas and electrical commissioners has for a long time past and now is engaged in the business of dealing in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment in the said city and town of Norwich.

Said city in so dealing in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment is exceeding the power, authority and privileges conferred upon it by statute and is acting in so doing without legal authority.

The said city in dealing in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment has entered into competition with the plaintiffs and is now competing with them on an unfair and unequitable basis. The plaintiffs by reason of said competition have lost profits which would have accrued to them from the conduct of their said business. If said city is permitted to continue to so deal in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment, the plaintiffs will be obliged to discontinue dealing in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment and will thereby be deprived of the profits which they would make from the conduct of their said business.

The plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

The plaintiffs claim an injunction restraining and enjoining the said city and the said commissioners from dealing in, selling and installing gas and electrical appliances and equipment.

City Will Reply

The suit is returnable before the superior court in November and the next legal move in the case will be the filing of a reply by counsel for the city, after which there will be other legal moves before the matter comes to a determination before the court.

There will be no immediate effect upon the operation of the gas and electrical department, it is expected, but the move by the Norwich merchants will operate as a test case for other public-owned companies such as those in Wallingford, Jewett City, Groton and Norwalk, which follow the practice of selling equipment and appliances.

The gas and electrical department claims it is selling appliances in order to further the distribution of gas or electricity. Section 490 of the general statutes, revision of 1918, page 202, chapter 30, relative to "Municipalities may establish gas and electric plants," is practically the main section of the statute which deals with the matter in dispute, whether or not the gas and electrical department has the right to sell electrical appliances, etc. The section reads:

"Any town, city or borough may under the limitations of this chapter, construct, purchase, lease or establish, and maintain within its limits, one or more plants for the manufacture and distribution of gas or electricity for furnishing light for municipal use, and for the use of such of its inhabitants as may require and pay for the same. Such plants may include suitable lands, structures, easements, water privileges, stations, gasometers, boilers, engines, dynamos, tools, machinery, pipes, conduits, poles, conductors, burners, lamps, and other apparatus and appliances for making, generating, distributing and using gas or electricity for lighting purposes."

JERSEY CATTLE HERD LOST IN BOZRAH FIRE

Fifteen head of registered Jersey cattle, including one bull, belonging to Charles N. Brush, and a stallion belonging to Abner Bennett, were burned to death Friday afternoon about 2 o'clock when the barn on the Brush farm in Bozrah, near Fitchville, was totally destroyed by fire. One hundred tons of hay also went up in smoke, but two horses, three cows and a heifer were saved. The loss is estimated at over $5,000.

The Yantic fire engine company responded with its apparatus and about 18 men to the call for help, but the barn was about burned down by the time they got there. However, by the use of water from a well, they kept the farm house wet and as the wind was blowing away from the house, this was saved.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It was discovered by a farm hand when he opened the barn door and it spread so fast that there was little chance to get the stock out. The barn was 101 by 50 feet.

OPEN HOUSE HELD BY REV. AND MRS. MYRON E. GENTER

Clergy and parishioners of the Norwich district of the Methodist Episcopal church, were guests Friday afternoon and evening of District Superintendent and Mrs. Myron E. Genter, at their residence, No. 56 Williams street. Rev. and Mrs. Genter held open house throughout the afternoon and evening from two until ten o'clock.

During the evening a musical program was given by George Guile, violinist, and his sister, Mrs. Williams, pianist. Mrs. F. G. Way of East Glastonbury was heard in delightful vocal solos and there were readings by Mrs. Robert A. T. Bliwood of New London. Rev. and Mrs. Genter were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Way and Miss Alice Smith, the latter of New London. Refreshments were served.

GRAND COMMANDER INSPECTED COLUMBIAN COMMANDERY, K. T.

A large number of Knights Templar turned out for the annual inspection of Columbian Commandery, No. 4, K. T., held at Masonic temple on Friday evening. The inspecting officer was Right Eminent Grand Commander Clayton W. Rowley of Hartford who officiated in place of Grand Inspector Thomas W. Morgan who was unable to be present. Rt. Em. Grand Commander Rowley was accompanied to Norwich by a number of Knights Templar of Hartford.

A chicken pie supper in the banquet hall at 6:15 preceded the work of the local commandery and the inspection.

H. G. L. Halloween Party

A delightful halloween party was held Friday evening at the home of Miss Betty Sargent at East Great Plain by eleven members of the H. G. L. club. The members dressed in fantastic and spooky costumes masqueraded in the barn, where an initiation service took place, and also treked about the section of the town for the benefit of the residents. A number of halloween games was the order for part of the evening's entertainment and refreshments were served. Those present were Betty Sargeant, Elizabeth Whitehead, Frances Hill, Mary Llewilyn, Nancy Pitcher, Lois Drurie, Helen Spicer, Eleanor Sargeant, Marion Krohn, Mrs. F. W. Krohn and Mrs. Herbert Gallup.

Next Week at United Cong. Church

The Charitable Circle of King's Daughters will meet in the junior department rooms of the church school at two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, to tie quilts. Those attending are asked to come provided with a basket supper.

DUWELL CLUB HELD SMOKER FRIDAY NIGHT

The winter season of events of the Duwell A. A., opened Friday night at their rooms with a very successful smoker and general good time, which is the forerunner of other affairs for the coming season.

Several matters were taken up at the meeting which will be of interest to the sport lovers of Norwich, the most important being announcement of the expectation of obtaining the endorsement of the A. A. U. to sanction the club's indoor amateur boxing shows. Another matter which was taken up and which should meet with the approval and hearty cooperation of those that can and will help, is the community barrel burning arranged for Thanksgiving. This is something of an innovation, and although the barrel burning is nothing new it means that the barrels and boxes, etc., may be donated to the club instead of some gang going out and getting them as they have done for many years.

After the meeting lunch was served by the club's dairy men, John Williamson and Ed Duro. Tea was served by Linus Charnetski and Johnny Keeley.

A fine program of entertainment was arranged by Ellsworth Kramer starting off with a series of motion pictures of the Memorial day speed boat races by Joseph A. French. A three round boxing exhibition between Freddie Besade and Sheik Leonard followed. The popular Venetian String orchestra furnished music and Ed Duro stepped a minuet and Micky McDonald a clog. Fred Berberick and Lawrence Ferri gave a whistling act and the Duwell's own quartette rendered several numbers.

WILL FILE NEW MOTION IN M'COOK LAND SUIT

After a long conference between Attorneys Hugh M. Alcorn, state attorney for Hartford county and Attorney Gross of Hartford, counsel for the heirs of the Eliza T. McCook estate and State Attorney Arthur M. Brown, of this county representing the state, a motion of argument of demurrer went off the list at Friday's short calendar session of the superior court before Judge John Richards Booth in New London. The motion was in the case of the state against the McCook heirs in which the state is attempting to acquire through condemnation proceedings land of the McCooks at Crescent beach for the purpose of adding to the Seaside sanatorium property.

Many local and county lawyers were on hand to hear an anticipated battle of words between the noted counsel on both sides but after the conference it was announced that the McCook counsel would file a new answer soon.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY HELD FOR TED MURPHY

Ted Murphy was pleasantly surprised Friday evening at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. F. Sullivan, in Groton, in honor of his birthday. The house was prettily decorated in orange and black. During the evening games were played and a feature was the apple ducking contest which was won by Mr. Murphy. Solos were rendered by J. L. Sullivan and singing and dancing were also enjoyed. There was a large birthday cake with candles. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

GAVE VAUDEVILLE ACTS AT UNCAS-ON-THAMES

Through the courtesy and kindness of the manager of the Palace theatre, Mr. Levison, the patients and staff at Uncas-on-Thames were delightfully entertained Friday afternoon with several of the acts of vudeville now playing at the theatre. Members of the troupe were transported to the hospital in cars donated by William R. Frisbie of the Reo garage.

TOUCHDOWNS BY FAGAN AND MARKS WIN FOR ACADEMY OVER WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 26 — Norwich Free Academy made a great second-half finish here this afternoon to defeat Westerly High, 13 to 6, and tie for the lead with Stonington high in the bitter Eastern Conn. Western Rhode Island Conference race. After outplaying but not outscoring the locals in the first two quarters, the Norwich outfit swung into its offensive stride soon after the whistle in the third quarter and climaxed a march down the field with a pass from LaCroix to Fagan, that covered about 20 yards and netted the score. The other score came in the latter part of the final period on a line thrust from the one-yard mark by Jack Marks after a strong march of 70 yards.

For the entire first half the two teams matched their main running stars, Marks of Norwich and Green of Westerly, in a succession of broken field runs that ran anywhere from 10 to 35 yards but the final punch once within the shadows of the opposing goal was lacking in both outfits. Innumerable times Green and Marks galloped through the enemy's line, and it required the second line defense to bring them down. The work of these two boys was about even in these periods. Green contributed the longest and most spectacular dash, however, when he tore through for about 35 yards and, but for the clever work of Archie Brock, Norwich safety man, would have had a score. Brock, the only obstacle between Green and a score, dodged an interferer and brought his man to earth.

In this first half the aerial play of Westerly was brilliant while the Academy worked but one pass and that for little damage. The Academy's throws were hurried and the one pass that did go through was caught by Brock off his shoelaces.

The Academy was within the 20-yard mark thrice in these two periods while one of Green's long runs put Westerly in real scoring position at one time. Academy forwards went awry, being intercepted on two occasions, while Westerly found the Norwich line tough to penetrate.

The second half, however, was a different story. Buck LaCroix, Academy captain, had returned to his old post at left halfback in the closing minutes of the first half and again came on the field after the intermission. His play seemed to electrify the team and insert the necessary dash that was lacking previously.

The Academy received the kick-off and Fagan ran it back five yards to his 26-yard line. LaCroix went through for 15 yards and a first down after two plays and Marks dashed off 20 more yards after two successful line plays and the ball was fairly deep into Westerly territory. The Academy found a first down at the line and after three more line plays had gained about seven yards, placing the ball near the Westerly 20-yard line with four down, three to go. LaCroix hurled a pass to Fagan off to his right and Fagan went over the line amid a heap of tacklers. The extra point was easily blocked.

Westerly took the kick-off but began to lose ground steadily thereafter before the now-confident N. F. A. team. Fox and Hertz spilled up the third play after this kick-off beautifully, giving the locals a loss of ten yards before Westerly punted to the Academy's 20-yard line, Brock going down almost in his tracks.

Westerly got a break here when a high pass went way over Berghinzo's head as he was about to punt on last down, the ball rolling almost to the goal line. Chet picked it up and ran it out ten yards but Westerly took the ball on downs, only to lose it by the same method but ten yards from a score. Marks and Kahn smeared the last play in this set. The Academy punted on second down and the quarter ended

Norwich intercepted a forward after three downs on her own 30-yard line, and then a steady march started for the Westerly goal line, Marks going over on a fourth down. Everyone in the Wildcat backfield reeled off gains in this uninterrupted journey. LaCroix kicked the extra point, making what was really the final score.

The rest of the game was without unusual happenings with play between the 40-yard lines for the most part.

The Academy line put up a strong game throughout, giving the Westerly team a busy afternoon. This was not noticed so much, perhaps, in the first half when the Academy attack was not functioning but it was Fox, or Mish, or Hertz, or Kahn, or Berghinzo, or in fact any of them that was in breaking up plays. The backfield for the Red and White, as related, functioned like a unit in the second half, while Marks was the stellar defense performer.

Green, of course, led the Westerly boys but Stenhouse and Captain Rae also played well.

Summary:

N. F. A.	Westerly High

Wildcat Scratches

The first "extra-point" came to the Academy in this game but only by the barest of margins. Buck LaCroix's drop kick was a short looping thing that bounced on top of the crossbars and tripped over. The team seemed to enjoy this as much as the two touchdowns.

It was a cold day but really the first suitable day for the fall sport.

The officiating was about the best that has been seen hereabouts for a high school tussle. Everything went off smoothly.

The crowd was quite large, tending to show that this year's new league is creating more interest than the old four team affair ever did.

Stonington, which was tied for the league lead today by the Academy's victory, had a big delegation on hand, including Coach O'Brien. Unfortunately, the Academy-Stonington game here Nov. 17 is not a conference game. The Academy's quota of league tussles is taken up with Chapman Tech, Westerly, Windham and Bulkeley.

After the Academy scored the second touchdown, Coach Whitney replaced his two capable but small guards, Fox and Mish, with Wojtasiak and Armstrong, who held up their end well for the rest of the distance. Aside from these the only Academy substitutes were Taylor, who replaced Tombari when the latter injured his arm and Capt. LaCroix, who took Sherry's place in the second quarter.

There was no organized cheering on either side.

This defeat puts Westerly in a bad way towards the league title. However, Westerly still has a league battle with Stonington among others and there is hope.

The cross-country run excited quite a bit of interest but Cotter, first man and from Westerly was the only one to get any kind of a cheer.

Westerly has a football scoreboard but nobody chalked up the points.

Green is some nice broken field runner and a couple of times got away for long gallops, once almost for a touchdown. Incidentally, a hard tackle by Brock, safety man, and the only one between the Westerly back and a score, showed nice work. Brock eluded one interferer to nail his man.

The Academy's next game is with Windham next Saturday at Willimantic. It is a league tussle and, of course, figures prominently in the race for the Wildcats.

League Standing

The Academy's victory over Westerly Friday tied Stonington for the lead in the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic League race. Stonington, however, plays Chapman Tech today and there is bound to be some settlement of this tie before nightfall. Bulkeley climbed out of last place by defeating Windham, the latter now occupying that position. Summary:

	W.	L.	T.	Pts	Pct.
N. F. A.	2	0	0	4	1.000
Stonington	2	0	0	4	1.000
Westerly	1	1	0	2	.500
Bulkeley	1	2	0	2	.333
Chapman Tech	0	2	1	1	.000
Windham	0	2	1	1	.000

YALE AND ARMY ARE VERY EVENLY MATCHED

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 26—(AP)—With final practice session at the Yale bowl today, behind closed doors, the Yale and Army elevens put the finishing touches to their training for the clash tomorrow. When the whistle blows for the opening kick-off two of the most evenly matched gridiron squads in the east will get into action.

The Army gridders took the bowl field for two hours this afternoon. Following their session, the Eli eleven were put through their paces and light signal drills and punting and passing took up the two hours workout. Coach Stevens put Loud and Miller in the signal drill today and it is probable that these men will start in the Army tilt tomorrow. It appears that Stevens will hold in reserve Garvey and Decker as Yale is not particularly strong in reserve power, and some of the first string men are not in the best of condition.

The Army squad is a little handicapped by injuries to the regulars and it is probable that Captain Sprague, hurt in the Harvard game, and O'Keefe, the West Pointers' flashy quarterback, will be used but very little during the game.

The West Point Cadets will arrive in New Haven about noon tomorrow and will parade to the Yale bowl from the campus at 12:50. At 1:30 at the bowl they will give their annual drill on the field. The game is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock.

The Army clash this year will mark the 28th meeting between these elevens. Yale has won 17 of the 28 clashes, Army four, and six resulted in tied scores. The Army defeated Yale in 1926 for a 23 to 0 count, while the Eli squad won last with a 10 to 6 score.

WESLEYAN TO CLASH WITH AMHERST TODAY

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 27— (AP) — Wesleyan freshmen will oppose Amherst freshmen in football at 10:15 tomorrow morning in the opener of Amherst week-end in sports. Fifteen minutes later the varsity soccer teams of the rival colleges will play. In this Wesleyan's chances are not regarded as good as Amherst has in its lineup eight men from last year's team which won the championship in the Little Three. Wesleyan had to build around three veterans. Amherst has the better record so far this season, although Wesleyan has been coming fast.

The varsity team will meet Amherst on Andrus field at 2 o'clock in the first of the Little Three series. The Sabrinas have had a successful season thus far, losing only once in four starts and then to the strong Haverford aggregation, and defeating Bowdoin, Middlebury and Hamilton Wesleyan has lost two of her four games, once to Columbia and to Connecticut Aggies, and winning from Bates and Rochester.

HOW TRADITIONAL RIVALS IN TODAY'S GAMES STAND

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—They may not win this time but Nebraska, Minnesota, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Yale and Harvard over a period of years have rolled up a lop-sided lead over the traditional football rivals which they encounter tomorow. Here is the present status of the rivalries to be renewed in games which promise to hold considerable interest for football fans in various parts of the country.

Nebraska has won 14, Missouri 6, and one game was tied in rivalry begun in 1882.

Minnesota has won 16 and Iowa 6, since 1901, no ties.

Virginia has won 5, Vanderbilt 3 and two were tied, since 1895.

Pennsylvania has won 8, Navy 3 and one was tied, since 1888.

Yale has won 17, Army 4 and 6 were tied, since 1893.

Harvard has won 26, Dartmouth 6 and two were tied, since 1883.

GRAHAM AND LaBARBER MATCHED FOR TITLE FIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26—(AP)—Bushey Graham, bantamweight champion of the National Boxing association, and Fidel LaBarba, former flyweight title holder were matched today for a world's championship fight at the Olympic auditorium here November 26.

The bout, a ten rounder at the championship weight of 118 pounds, will mark the second meeting of the pair. LaBarba won by a somewhat decisive margin over the champion here several weeks ago.

Graham's title was not at stake, however.

AGGIE TEAM IN FINE FETTLE FOR TODAY'S GAME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Oct. 26—Twenty-two Connecticut Aggie football players, coach and manager, left here this afternoon for the gridiron contest with Vermont university at Burlington Saturday. The game between the two members of the New England conference looms as one of the biggest objective games of the year for the Connecticut Aggies and especially because the two interstate elevens are meeting for the first time in history. Contrary to former beliefs, every member of the Nutmeg squad is in the pink of condition and it is very probable that every one of the regulars will start the game.

Vermont received two crushing defeats at the hands of Princeton and Boston university and only up to last Saturday were they able to score on an opponent. They lost that game with Union, 7 to 6. Connecticut has played three games to date and in all of them no opponent has been able to score. In the first, Wesleyan went down to an overwhelming defeat by a score of 35 to 0. The last two games were scoreless ties, the first being with Maine and the second last week with Lowell.

Two of the Norwich boys, Marty Gilman, regular right guard for three years, will start the game at that position, and Pheno Tombari, who has been recently made into an end, will start at the right end position.

The lineup for the Aggies is Wilson, le; Hawkins, lt; Calacurelo, lg; Knaut, c; Gilman, rg; Capt. Sayers, rt; Tombari, re; Ryan, qb; Fisher, lhb; McCoomb, rhb; Harger, fb.

KOZIOL KNOCKS OUT DARUSE IN THE SECOND ROUND

(Special to The Bulletin)

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 26—Al Koziol of Norwich, Conn., being heralded by Boston sports writers as the unquestioned lightweight amateur champion of New England, knocked out Tony Daruse of Brockton in the first minute of the second round at the Arcadia arena here tonight. Koziol who was supposed to fight a return bout with Tommy Rogers of Brookline, Mass., knockout king but he had to take on Daruse when Rogers refused to meet the champion.

Koziol goes to Boston Saturday where he will meet an opponent to be picked by the Commercial C C matchmaker for whom he is fighting. Al was given a tremendous ovation as he entered the ring tonight and also as he left it. Sports writers who have followed the amateur boxers concur in the opinion that Koziol is one of the best if not the best amateur lightweight in the country.

AGGIE HARRIERS RUN AGAINST HOPE A. C. TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Oct. 26—The newly organized cross-country team representing the Connecticut Aggies will face the Hope A. C. of Westerly, R. I., in their third meet of the year at Storrs Saturday. The team is under the tutelage of Crack Coach Paul Bitgood. The Aggie harriers defeated Clark university at Worcester last Friday and the week before were handed a defeat by Wesleyan. The Aggies will be represented by Charles Dittrich of Waterbury, James Bottomley of Milford, James Ewin of Tyron, Pa., I. C. Barnes of Wethersfield, Charles White of New Haven, Edwin Monstream of Hartford, William Kirkpatrick of Storrs, Sherman Frost of New Haven, George Jackson of Storrs, George Pinkney of New Haven and James Elliott of Pomfret.

JACK JOHNSON TO BE WITNESS IN GRAFT CASE

CHICAGO, Oct. 26— (AP) —Jack Johnson, former world's champion pugilist, was subpoenaed today as a witness to appear before the special grand jury investigating election terrorism and graft.

The subpoena was issued after a voluntary witness testified that he had been promised a place on the police force in return for financial contributions to the democratic campaign fund. Sheridan A. Bruseaux, grand jury investigator, declared the witness testified he handed Johnson a check for $100.

Schwartz Off for Paris

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—Izzy Schwartz, recognized in New York state as the world's flyweight champion, sailed tonight for Paris where he will meet Spider Pladner, of France in a 15 round bout next month. The fight will be a non-title affair since Pladner has agreed to come in overweight.

OVER TWO MILLION EXPECTED TO SEE FOOTBALL CLASSICS TODAY

(By F. G. Vosburgh, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—Some of the best things the present season has to offer in the way of football entertainment, will be offered tomorrow before capacity crowds certain to total approximately a half a million persons in the east alone, where 44 games are on the schedule.

The banner attendance of the day is expected at Yale bowl, when Yale and Army clash. Two of the season's strongest undefeated and untied teams meet there in a colorful setting born of a rivalry dating back to 1893.

A rough computation shows that ten of the biggest games of the day will be witnessed by 395,000 persons.

Assigning the conservative average of 3,000 attendance to each of the remaining 34 games among which are included such features as the Columbia-Williams, Brown-Tufts, Georgetown-Duke, Bucknell-Gettysburg, and Boston college vs Boston university affairs figures climbs to 497,000.

Army has disposed of two major foes in Southern Methodist and Harvard but just squeezed through the first of these engagements. Yale trimmed Georgia and trounced Brown impressively a week ago. Yale won last season by four points and has had the Indian sign on the cadets most of the times they have met. Garvey for Yale and Cagle for Army, elusive, backs, seem likely to be the centers of attention.

Dartmouth is being favored over Harvard largely because of the gazelle-footed Marsters and a tricky forward passing attack, and a strong Pennsylvania team is picked to beat the groggy Navy eleven which eked out its first victory in four starts at the expense of Duke last week.

Carnegie has a clear record of victories while Pitt met defeat at West Virginia's hands.

New York university is favored over Colgate.

Fordham, victorious over Holy Cross after losing to New York university is favored over a Washington and Jefferson team. Lafayette, probably because of its record marred only by a score through tie with undefeated Bucknell last week, is given a slight edge over West Virginia.

Princeton is figured to beat Cornell by those who have been inclined to take Gil Dobie's sad stories seriously. The Tigers did it last year at Ithaca, when relations were resumed after a lapse of 20 years although the Red team gave them a score at the start.

Syracuse will depend on the same team that lost by a point to Nebraska to down Penn State's eleven and retaliate for the Nittany victory of last year at Syracuse. Holy Cross and Marquette revolve in different sectional orbits and there is little dope available.

WESTERLY HIGH HARRIERS BEAT OUT ACADEMY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 26—Westerly high triumphed over Norwich Free Academy in cross country here today by the slender margin of three points, 26 to 29. Cotter of the home team continued his streak of finishing first over the three mile course, negotiating the distance in 15 minutes, 16 2-5 seconds. Rose of Westerly was second, 200 yards behind Cotter while Navick, the first Norwich man, was third, about 100 yards in back of Rose. The other leaders finished as follows: Fusaro, W. Peck, N, Lyons, N, Robinson, N, Baynes, N.

WINDHAM FALLS BEFORE RUSH OF BULKELEY TIGERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 26—Bulkeley high turned back Windham of Willimantic at Mercer field here this afternoon, 12 to 6 in a closely contested game. This was Bulkeley's first victory in the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island league and moved them out of the cellar, Windham replacing.

Lewis Throws Jones

PHILADELPHIA Oct 26—(AP)—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, claimant of the heavyweight wrestling championship, defeated John Paul Jones, of Texas, in a one fall match at the Arena tonight, after applying three headlocks. Jones was groggy after the third application and was pinned to the mat after 45 minutes and 32 seconds of wrestling. Jones relied largely on arm locks and twice threw Lewis out of the ring. He weighed 205 pounds, Lewis 230.

Lizzies Defeat Greeneville

The Elizabeth street school eleven defeated Greeneville school 13 to 0 Friday afternoon at the Academy campus. A. Kirstein scored the first touchdown and Buster Mirandi the second. Mirandi on his own five-yard line broke through the Greeneville line and threaded his way through the entire team for 95 yards for a touchdown. Delrmery, Dekoven, L. Kirstein and Sikorski featured for the winners.

Goodyear vs. Jewett City Sunday

Goodyear is to play the Jewett City soccer team in Jewett City Sunday afternoon. Goodyear has beaten Jewett City one game and also J. B. Martin last week, so a big game is expected.

YALE-ARMY GAME EXPECTED TO BE CLOSE

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 26—(AP)—The last October whirl of the football campaign tomorrow will offer the biggest testing process so far for the championship aspirations of colleges anticipating something to be thankful for the Thanksgiving.

From coast to coast and border to gulf the pigskin pack will be on the warpath in full cry.

Probably 2,000,000 spectators will watch tomorrow's frays in all sections of the nation's football fronts, with 500,000 alone massed along the eastern sidelines. Several times that many will hear the radio accounts of several games broadcast over networks of stations. The Yale-Army tracas is in this category, focusing national attention as a spectacular crowd of some 75,000 jams its way into the big New Haven bowl for the annual clash of Cadet and Eli.

The fortunes of the Army this year are attracting more widespread attention than ever before, not only because "Biff" Jones' soldiers have drawn opposition from so many areas but also because West Point has a formidable contender for national championship honors. These aspirations may be jolted by the Bullodge tomorrow, as they have been in former years, but it will take a stalwart Blue defense to repell the thrusts of Cagle and Murrell behind the powerful Army forward wall.

Another tussle of gridiron titans is booked at Iowa City, where McLain, Iowa's big Indian fullback, will lead the Hawkeyes into the thick of combat with Minnesota's Juggernaut, featuring two of the middle west's outstanding ball carriers in Hovde and Nagurski.

This battle features a program that brings all of the "big ten" schools into contest with each other for the first time. It may turn out to be the deciding game of the conference struggle.

Similar in the new "big six" array of the Missouri valley area, Nebraska and Missouri, ancient rivals as well as outstanding title contenders, meet in a crucial conflict at Lincoln.

Moving a few kilometres westward, the experts find another decision tilt on hand at Boulder where the University of Colorado and University of Utah, two teams so far unbeaten in the Rocky Mountain conference, meet in an all-important affair.

The south probably is prepared for some additional shocks after the events of the last week, which saw Alabama knocked out of the running by Tennessee and South Carolina swamped by its old rival, Clemson. Among five of the other outstanding championship contenders in the southern conference, playing tomorrow, Georgia is favored over Tulane, Vanderbilt over Virginia, Florida's high scoring machine over North Carolina State, Georgia Tech over North Carolina university and Tennessee over Washington and Lee. But old man upset may keep up rolling along and strike a telling blow in any one of these contests.

The southwest will have its attention occupied by such important conference games as Texas-Rice and Texas Aggies-Arkansas as a means of getting more of a line on the title prospects.

On the Pacific coast, Stanford leading the conference clan, has a prospective day of ease in playing with Fresno, as preparation for the big clash with Southern California next week. Washington, still reeling from the effects of a bad beating at the hands of Oregon university, tackles the Oregon Aggies, while California's idea of a day's workout is to meet the rugged Olympic club stars.

The inter-sectional angle, is pretty well submerged by these vital sectional affairs but Marquette travels half way across the country to meet Holy Cross at Worcester while Duke emerges from the south again to try its luck against the Georgetown juggernaut.

POETRY

A History in Colors

Crowding to the Golden Gate in the roaring days
Heavy came the gold-ships on their eager ways.
Round about the Horn they came, where the great winds rage,
And others pressed behind them in a trailing white-sailed fan,
With every mother's son aboard dreaming golden dreams
Of washing mighty fortunes from the glittering mountain streams.

Smudging all the splendor of the lovely morning skies,
Like drifting smoky pillars, the pitch-black fountains rise,
And men of twenty nations who are colored into one,
Are working in the blackness that is blotting out the sun.
Toiling for a treasure where is never any lack,
Molten treasure, flowing treasure, but black—black—black—

All amid the dazzling sunshine, citrus groves now stand,
Rich and sweet and glowing, in that sweet and glowing land.
Oranges on the hill-slopes, oranges on the plains,
And orange-tinted are the hands, brown above the stains,
Brown and lithe and clever, as they gather in the feast
Of orange globes of lusciousness to send the waiting East.

—Ruth Aughtitree, in Christian Science Monitor

Prairie

Across the sombre prairie sea
The dark swells billow heavily.
Are the looming ridges near or far
That heave to the smooth horizon bar?

The russet reach of grassy roll
Sickens the heart and numbs the soul
The thin wind gives no air for breath,
The stillness is the pause of death.

This width was never shaped to be
The home of man's mortality.
A breathless vacuum of peace,
Where life's spent ripples spread and cease.

No end, no source, its spaces know;
Wide as the sea's perpetual flow
Is its dead stand—dull wall on wall
Of sullen waves unspiritual.

God give me but in dream to come
Back to the pine-clad hills of home,
Back to the old eternity
Of placid, all-consoling sea.

—Herbert Bates

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Helpmate (breaking it gently)—I think it only fair to tell you, John, that for some time past I have been thinking of you in the past tense.—Judge.

"Oh, splendidly. I never find him at home and he never finds me out."—London Mail.

First Girl—Tell me, dear, what do you think of Bertie Blank?

Second Girl — Well, I think he'd make a pretty fair first husband.—London Calling.

Maud—What would do you if you spent five evenings with a man and he never attempted to kiss you?

Marie—I'm afraid I'd lie about it.—Montreal Star.

Cop on Shore—I'm going to arrest you when you come out of there.

Man in Water—Ha-ha! That's a joke on you. I'm not coming out. I'm committing suicide.—The Farm Journal.

Fisk—Can you let me have a week off. I'm all in.

Weatherby—But you just had a two weeks' vacation.

Fisk—Yes, that's the trouble. I must have another week to recover.—The Pathfinder.

Motorist—I clearly had the right of way when this man ran into me, and yet you say I was to blame.

Local Constable — You certainly were.

Motorist—Why?

L. C.—Because his brother is mayor, his father is chief of police, and I am engaged to his sister.—Toronto Telegram.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS

Sebequanash council, No. 11, voted in one paleface at its regular meeting Wednesday evening in the Buckingham Memorial. Members were present from Hiawatha and Minnehaha councils of New London. A report was read from the Great Council. It was also voted for the council to take part in the armistice parade, joining with the Minnehaha of New London. Sister Vine of New London assisted at the degree work and a vote of thanks was given her for her excellent work.

UNITED WORKMEN

In Odd Fellows' building Wednesday night Norwich lodge No. 12, celebrated the 60th anniversary with a chicken pie supper which preceded the programme of the evening.

Mrs. William Crowe, Jr., was heard in several solos, there were readings by William Manning and the speakers included Charles P. Bushnell, deputy of the lodge, John Trant and Chester Eriesehman of Hartford, also John Radigan of Hartford, who represented the grand master.

Mr. Radigan gave a historical sketch in which he spoke in part as follows:

The first fraternal beneficiary society in America was organized by John Jordan Upchurch at Meadville, Pennsylvania, on October 27, 1868. The name given this society was: "The Ancient Order of Workmen."

For nearly five years this was the only organization of its kind in this country. Then others began to be formed until today there are over one hundred associations furnishing life insurance to their members. Up to January 1st of this year these societies had paid to the beneficiaries of their deceased members over four thousand million dollars. The A. O. U. W. alone has paid to the families of its deceased members nearly three hundred million and two hundred and fifty thousand widows have been the recipients of its benefits.

Almost exactly ten years after its foundation the A. O. U. W. came to Connecticut and instituted Momauguin lodge, No. 1 in New Haven on October 4, 1878. Two charter members of this lodge are still living: Ex-Mayor Fred B. Farnsworth and Emil A. Gessner, the druggist. They are still members of the order.

Many other lodges were soon instituted in the state. They were all under the jurisdiction of the grand lodge of Massachusetts until October 17, 1901, when the grand lodge of Connecticut was instituted. In 1915 the grand lodge of New York merged with Connecticut and in 1922 New Jersey and in 1923 New Hampshire.

All grand lodges of the A. O. U. W. throughout the United States and Canada are celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the order and of the institutions of fraternal life insurance in this country.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

The fourteenth annual convention of the Catholic Ladies of Columbus was held in South Manchester Oct. 12 and 13.

The convention was informally opened by Mrs. Eileen Strange, who turned the meeting over to Mrs. Margaret Dutton of this city, state president. Rev. Fr. Ready, chaplain of Gibbons assembly, South Manchester, delivered the address of welcome to the delegates. The degrees were then exemplified by Mercier assembly degree team, their splendid showing being appreciated by all. Entertainment was furnished by the Wandering Minstrel troupe which is very well known around Norwich and vicinity.

All assemblies seemed to be in a flourishing condition.

Miss Ada Ruth of New Haven was appointed editor in chief of the prospective state paper which will be issued quarterly, thereby making it possible for the various assemblies to know what is being done by other assemblies of the state.

On invitation of Mercier assembly the state convention of 1929 will be held in Norwich.

Election of officers then followed the officers being installed by Honorary State President Mrs. Rearden as follows: State president, Miss Margaret Crane of Hartford; state honorary president, Mrs. Margaret Dutton of Norwich; state vice president, Mrs. Lillian Mahoney of South Manchester; state secretary, Miss Rose Gibbons of Shelton; state treasurer, Miss Lucy Murphy of Norwich.

Directors—Miss Helen Ward, Danbury, Miss Brynes, Rockville; Miss Annie Mullivan, Thompsonville; Miss Margaret Sullivan, Norwich; Mrs. Irene Passmore, Baltic; Mrs. Elizabeth Bree, New Haven; Mrs. Annie Hanley, New London; Miss Sweetland, Hartford; Miss Mary Taylor, Bridgeport; Miss Halpin, Derby; Miss Mercier, South Norwalk.

LADIES' AUXILIARY, A. O. H.

At the regular meeting of the Ladies' auxiliary, No. 54, held Wednesday evening, Miss Nellie McCarthy was unanimously re-elected president for the third term. Her associate officers were also unanimously elected, as follows: Miss Catherine Coughlin, vice-president; Mrs. May V. O'Neill, recording secretary; Mrs. B. Williams, financial secretary; Miss Margaret Dwyer, treasurer; Mrs. Margaret Barrows, mistress-at-arms; Mrs. Annie Brooks, chairman of the standing committee; Mrs. Nellie O'Neil, sentinel, and Mrs. Annie Connelly, chairman of Irish History. A joint installation of all four societies will take place in November.

Plans were made for a halloween social for the members, with Mrs. Annie Brooks in charge, assisted by Mrs. Julia Brock, Mrs. M. V. O'Neill, Mrs. Elizabeth Fitzgerald, Mrs. Margaret Barrows, Mrs. P. O'Neill and the Misses Catherine Toomey and Cornelia Tobin. The members will be in costume and music will be furnished for dancing, after which a supper consisting of potato salad, cold meat, rolls, cakes, assorted cookies, pickles, ice cream and coffee will be served.

Mrs. Annie Connelly will be chairlady of the next whist and pinochle in the officers' series, to be held soon.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

Sedgwick W. R. C., No. 16, met at the Buckingham Memorial Friday afternoon with Mrs. Althea M. Brown presiding in the absence of the president. Several officers and members were absent, having gone to Noroton. The regular reports were read and approved.

The next sewing society will be Nov. 14 at the Buckingham. There will be another whist soon. Mrs. Coombs of Edgartown was present at the meeting. The corps closed with the salute to the flag and singing America.

ST. JEAN BAPTISTE UNION

An evening of whist and pinochle was conducted Thursday at the Buckingham Memorial by Lafayette council, No. 207, at which the following were those to take prizes:

In pinochle—Ladies', first, Mrs. John King; second, Miss Stella Guertin; third, Mrs. Everett Fielding; gentlemen, first, David Kane; second, Everett Fielding; third, L. J. Gladue. In whist—Ladies', first, Mrs. Brunette; second, Mrs. S. Sabourin; third, Miss Yvonne Sabourin; gentlemen, first, Mr. Weber; second, Mr. St. Laurent.

COUNCIL OF CATHOLIC WOMEN

Honored by the presence of Right Rev. Maurice F. McAuliffe, D. D., and highly congratulatory telegrams from Rev. John J. Burke, head of the National Catholic Welfare conference, Miss Mary G. Hawkes, president of the National Council of Catholic Women, and Miss Agnes Regan, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, the eighth annual meeting of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women, held at the Hotel Bond, Hartford, Saturday, Oct. 20, was most inspiring for the Catholic women of Connecticut. Three hundred women, representing all the counties and over 30 towns in the state gathered for an all-day session. The three important matters of business were the completion of the permanent scholarship fund; ways and means of supporting the National Council of Catholic Women, and International Relations. Mrs. Herbert F. Fisher, state chairman of the permanent scholarship fund, reported that to date $9,991.57 had been contributed towards the goal of $20,000 needed to establish a permanent scholarship for a Connecticut girl at the National Catholic Service school in Washington. A few other pledges which have been sent directly to Washington and are not yet recorded in Hartford raised the total contribution made by the Hartford diocese to $10,329. At the last annual meeting of the National Council of Catholic Women, it was announced that the Hartford diocese was the first diocese to pass the $10,000 mark in the annual campaign.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

On the last day of June of the present year the Knights of Columbus had 67 member organizations in Connecticut with a total membership of 18,118, according to the annual report for the fiscal year ending on that date. The Nutmeg State ranked second of the New England states in the strength of the Knights. Massachusetts came first of the New England states with 164 councils and a total membership of 55,596. Rhode Island ranked third with 24 councils and 7,715 members; Maine fourth with 44 councils and 5,898 members; New Hampshire with 20 councils and 3,515 members; and Vermont with 19 councils, 4,049 members. In the entire country June 30, there were 2,526 councils and 662,486 members of the organization, according to the report.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange, No. 172, met in Steiner hall, Wednesday evening, with Albert W. Lillibridge, worthy master, presiding. A harvest supper was served at 6:30 o'clock, with about 86 patrons partaking. The menu consisted of meat pie, mashed potatoes, mashed turnip, pickles, cabbage salad, rolls, apple pie, cheese and coffee. The supper was served by Division D, Mrs. Eva Higgins, chairman. The third and fourth degrees were worked in full form on several candidates during the evening. One of the pleasing features were the tableaux in charge of Mrs. Dorothy P. Rogers. Mrs. Rogers deserves much credit for her part in this work as she has made it a most beautiful part of the degree work. Many visitors were present from other granges in the state, also two state officers. State Deputy John Hollowell gave a very interesting talk and they were more than pleased to listen to remarks by Past Master Jewett of Little River, who was master of Norwich grange some years ago. A total of about 125 were present at the meeting. There is to be a masquerade social at Scotland Road hall for an old-time social and get-together. All grangers and friends will be welcome and there will be refreshments and dancing, with Mrs. William S. Murray, chairman.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Pulaski Hall Dance

A large attendance is expected tonight at Pulaski hall, where Fred Thumm and his orchestra are holding forth.

Fred and his band of merrimakers, seem to be pleasing the patrons more than ever this season, with a soft and subdued brand of dance music.

There has been a marked change, since the re-opening of this hall, and it is the policy of the management to keep this place of dancing on the very highest standards.

For tonight the features will be "Nagasacki," "You're a Real Sweetheart," "Moonlight Madness" and "Jeannine."

There is plenty of parking space police protection, great music, so come along, and bring a friend.

Palace Theatre

Bebe Daniels' admirers will feel that she has made the most spectacularly thrilling picture of her career when they see "Hot News," which opens tomorrow at the Palace theatre.

Abounding in adventure, suspense, thrills, humor and romance, it will appeal to people in all walks of life as one of the most entertaining films this popular star has ever made.

The story deals with the exploits of a newsreel camera girl who steps into her father's business at a crucial moment and saves him from ruin by "scooping" the other newsreel services at every turn.

The director of the picture traveled a long way to direct the drama of bleak environment and primitive passion. He is Victor Seastrom, of Viking ancestry born in Sweden, as, incidentally, was Miss Gish's leading man, Lars Hanson. Since being in America, however, Seastrom has learned as much about the western desert as a real native—and Hanson knew all about it from watching western films in Sweden—and his riding tricks, learned in the Swedish cavalry service, rival those of any cowboy hero.

The story is a vivid romance of the plains, with Miss Gish in the role of a delicately reared Southern girl suddenly thrust into the rigors of a primitive land. The cast is a notable one, including Dorothy Cummings, the "Madonna" of "The King of Kings," Mantague Love, famous screen villain, William Orlamond, noted character actor, Edward Earle, popular screen hero, and others of note.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week an entertainment was held at Breed hall for the benefit of the poor of St. Mary's parish. The same week and in the same hall there was a republican rally and the speaker was Gen. Hawley who spoke on the currency question. J. Theodore Webb and Miss Lillie M. Osgood, both of this city, were united in marriage at Christ Episcopal church, that week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of October, 1878, are as follows:

Monday, Oct. 21, 1878—The entertainment given by Norwich amateurs for the benefit of the poor of St. Mary's parish in Breed hall on Saturday night, was a fine performance throughout and in every respect a perfect success. The audience filled every seat in the hall.

Frost fishing is now in order.

The liveliest thing on the street yesterday was real estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Halsey and E. R. Thompson, Esq., were registered at Geneva, October 1st.

No one has yet been able to explain the massive fascination the front steps of a church have for a young man just at the close of evening.

Tuesday Oct. 23, 1878—It is the duty which every republican owes to himself, his party and his country, to fully inform himself on the issues of the hour. He cannot do this more thoroughly in the same space of time than to attend the grand rally of his party, tomorrow night, in Breed hall. Let there be a full turnout. Gen. Hawley's exposition of the currency question in Hartford, last Friday night, was most masterly. His address to us cannot fail to prove highly interesting and instructive.

The muddle of the Preston school board in the choice of school visitors has been settled by the selection of the following gentlemen: Aaron Lucas, Mason S. Hewitt and N. S. Wentworth. Aaron Lucas was appointed chairman and N. S. Wentworth, secretary. The right of minority representation was not questioned by the democratic caucus of that party.

The store of Mr. Danell Brown of Preston City was entered by burglars, on last Sunday evening, while Mr. Brown was at church. The thieves entered by breaking a window and carried away the money drawer containing about $5 in cash. The thieves are suspected to be the same ones that have been robbing hen roosts and bee hives in that neighborhood.

Wednesday, Oct. 23, 1878—Gospel temperance meetings are being held this week in the West Side Tabernacle. They are conducted by the Rev. H. Montgomery, assisted by William Hurd, the reform man of Dover, N. H.

Mr. Augustive Jardine who was so severely injured by premature discharge of a cannon on Mystic Island, in the summer, is likely to recover his sight.

Apple producers are shipping their stock to the New London market where the prices range much higher than in Norwich.

Those desiring to join a new military company are requested to meet in Steiner's hall, Thursday evening at half past seven o'clock.

The remains of Mr. William Trolan were buried from the Second Congregational church at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The Rev. Mr. Palmer officiated.

Yantic station seems to be the great apple depot of the county. The fruit is brought in by farmers from the adjoining towns, whence it is shipped to various markets.

Thursday, Oct. 24 1878—An exceedingly pleasant social event that had been anticipated for several weeks past, was the marriage in Christ church, yesterday noon, of Mr. J. Theodore Webb and Miss Lillie M. Osgood of this city. Rev. Dr Gleay read the beautifuul marriage service of the Episcopal church. A bridal tour will be to New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

A kicking horse amused Water street yesterday afternoon. One gentleman offered to bet the animal could kick the eave trough off any building in the street, but the water was not sufficiently large and the horse did not feel encouraged to try.

The storm yesterday was the severest of the autumn. It was estimated by a citizen who came down Broadway in summer shoes that over twelve inches of water fell inside of twenty minutes.

Friday, Oct. 25, 1878—A Norwich hunter brought in a string of 20 squirrels on Wednesday. He would not tell where he bought them, so it will be useless for any of our aspiring young Nimrods to try to discover the locality in which he hunted.

Mr. Dorrance Ladd of Colchester picked from a pear tree in his garden, several full blown blossoms, Wednesday. The tree is a patriach, one-half of which was killed by a stroke of lightning six or seven years ago.

The Hon. John T. Wait, Col. David Torrance and Charles H. Pine, Esq. will address the republicans of Greeneville at Union hall this evening.

Husking bees are very popular in the country towns.

The First National bank declares a dividend of 3 1-2 per cent. payable on and after November 4th.

Mr. C. C. Haskell of this city, presented the Greeneville Congregational church an elegant pulpit Bible last week.

The slating of the new Catholic church has been completed and the windows are now being inserted.

Saturday, Oct. 26, 1878—Columbian Commandery, No. 4, K. T., to the number of about 60 and a large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral of the late Austin Brewer yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. William S. Palmer, pastor of the Second Congregational church, has prepared a handy little parish directory, containing the names and addresses of all his parishioners. It is a convenient book of references in making pastoral visits.

At the funeral services of the late Miss Fanny Roath aged 89, which took place in this city day before yesterday, there were in attendance among the friends, three persons, whose ages aggregated 273 years. They were all born and have always resided in Norwich.

The Up-Town Mission Circle will give songs and recitations and hold a sale of a few useful articles at the chapel of the First Church, Saturday afternoon at half past three o'clock. Six genuine costumes of heathen lands will be worn.

If the cause of failure is known there is hope of success later on.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

It is only natural that Warner Bros., who brought Vitaphone to the world a scant two years ago, should bring to the screen the first all-talking motion picture with spoken dialogue and sound effects throughout.

"Lights of New York," the initial venture in the new medium of complete spoken lines in every scene from beginning to end, marks a new page in history of screen drama. It is in itself an important step as the invention of the motion picture camera and as wide a departure from the established silent screen as the first cinema was from the legitimate stage.

Concentrated experimentation and investigation has marked the time since the first showing of Vitaphone talking films. Warner Bros.' Hollywood Studios have been constantly active, improving and expanding this innovational device and the result of months of labor is seen and heard in "Lights of New York," in which Helene Costello and Cullen Landis portray the leading roles.

Bryan Foy, Vitaphone director and supervisor for Warners, has been successfully directing short features and subjects. During this time the idea grew in his mind to make a feature length production in which all the characters spoke their lines without a single break or letdown. It was decided through conferences with Jack L. Warner, chief executive, that an original story by Murray Roth and Hugh Herbert would serve as a forceful vehicle to make the first feature length Vitaphone production a reality. It was a daring undertaking, but they knew it was the next step in the swift development of the film industry. The result is the astounding achievement seen and heard on the screen in "Lights of New York," directed by Byran Foy.

The entire cast of prominent players have had both stage and screen experience and in support of Helene Costello and Cullen Landis appears Gladys Brockwell, Mary Carr, Eugene Pallette, Wheeler Oakman, Tom Dugan, Tom McGuire, Guy D'Ennery, Walter Percival, Jere Delaney and Robert Elliott.

"Lights of New York" comes to the Broadway theatre starting tomorrow evening at 7 and 8:45 p. m., for a run of 4 days.

Christian Science Services

Wednesday evening meeting 7:45. The reading room, 40 Main street, is open every day except Sundays and legal holidays from 2 to 4:30 p. m.

FRENZIED EFFORTS TO SELL CAUSED SHARP BREAK IN PRICES OF STOCKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The long predicted reaction in the stock market came in the last hour of trading today, when a flood of selling swamped the facilities of the exchange and frightened investors made frantic efforts to sell out before the closing gong. A long list of stocks closed 5 to 14 points lower. The ticker dropped far behind the transactions and did not print the last transaction until 47 minutes after the close. Total sales exceeded 4,500,000 shares.

The selling was regarded in some ear marks of a "bear" raid, timed to take advantage of the heavy week end profit taking and touch off a large volume of stop loss orders. Particularly effective in shaking "bullish" sentiment was heavy selling in General Motors and Du Pont, both of which have just reported excellent earnings. General Motors was carried down 4 and Du Pont 14 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

The selling was regard din some quarters as a belated reaction to the new high total of brokers' loans and a call money renewal rate of 7 1-2 per cent, the highest since October 17. The rate was advanced during the session to 8 per cent as banks called $20,000,000 in loans to meet week end currency requirements.

The bulk of the day's news was decidedly favorable, and the market maintained a firm undertone until the selling movement swept everything before it in the last hour.

Several corporations reported excellent earnings for the third quarter, in addition to the long list yesterday. Charles M. Schwab chairman of the Bethlehem Steel corporation told the members of the American Iron and Steel Institute at their fall meeting that American prosperity would go to heights far above anything yet experienced and that fundamental conditions remain sound.

The liquidation was directed particularly against the high priced issues. Automotive shares as a group were carried lower, although Jordan touched a new high at 18 1-2 on rumors that W. C. Durant, who is returning from Europe tomorrow plans to merge it with another company. Studebaker dropped 4 5-8 points to 74 1-2 and closed at 76. Murray Corp. fell to 106 1-2, a net loss of 7 1-4. Chrysler dropped 7 5-8 points to 136 in heavy selling but recovered 2 points.

Kennecott stood out as a strong point in the coppers, rising more than 5 points to a new top at 123 1-8 and closing at 120. American Smelting touched a new top at 272 7-8, then cancelled its gain. Anaconda, Calumet and Hecla, Cerro De Pasco, Howe Sound, and Granby sagged from fractions to 2 points, in the face of a rise in export copper prices to 16 cents.

Merchandising shares reacted after sharp gains. Best & Co. mounted more than 7 points to a new high price at 99 1-4, but lost part of the advance, while Macy climbed more than 9 points to a new top at 173, but reacted to 165 1-2. Montgomery Ward soared about 13 points but had left a net gain of only a fraction at the close.

Most oils were carried lower by an 11-point drop in Atlantic Refining. Barnsdall A, Sinclair Consolidated, and Pan American shares fell away from 1 to 2 points. Superior eased after touching a new high at 11 7-8. Shell Union was a strong point, crossing 31 to a new peak price.

Western Union was a strong feature of the early trading, mounting more than 3 points to a new top at 191, but falling back to 184 at the close. Steels were generally carried lower. U. S. falling 3 1-2 points. Crucible 4 3-4, and Bethlehem more than a point. A. M. Byers jumped to 158 1-4, then sagged to 152, a net loss of 2 points. Allied Chemical and Dye fluctuated widely, going ahead more than 8 points, then reacting for a net loss of 3 3-4 points.

American International fell 7 points on official denial of merger negotiations for U. S. & Foreign Securities. American Bank Note, American Tobacco, Atlas Powder, Commercial Solvents, Cushman's Sons, Davidson Chemical, General Electric, Gold Dust, International Cement, Mathieson Alkali, Rossia Insurance and Timken Roller Bearer, were among shares receding from 3 to nearly 8 points.

Rails turned generally heavy, although September earnings statements have been largely favorable. Texas and Pacific tumbled 13 points in a few sales.

Despite the stiffness of coal money again today time money rates were unchanged, and bankers continued to regard the credit flurry as merely temporary, pointing to the easing of the fall commercial and agricultural requirements, the increase in the loans of banks on securities collateral on their own account, and additional gold imports. Relatively easy money rates are predicted for the rest of the year.

Commodity markets were generally steady, wheat advancing slightly on speculative buying and reports of increased exports.

Foreign exchanges were generally easy, sterling sagging below $4.85 and approaching the gold import point.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

The Kitchen of My Dreams

We have a nice apartment,
And a cozy one and yet
(Hang Jim and) We are happy
In spite of me with kittenish)
We're paying every penny
And making payments owed
For a wee home in the country
On a winding country road.
In just a few we'll have it—
But a thousand years it seems—
That wee home in the country
With the kitchen of my dreams.

It's a white house, gently shadowed
By the elms upon the lawn.
Oh, the robin songs will greet us
In that first enchanted dawn!
There's a brook where little children
Will some day love to wade,
And there's one running to the house
For bread and marmalade.
There's a fireplace wants lighting,
There are chairs by the door
And blue-and-gray linoleum
Upon the kitchen floor.

There's curtains at the windows—
And my heart with gladness fills;
I see instead of city streets
The wary and friendly hills.
And while for us he patiently
The gray-hooded waits
With my blue-checked apron round
Jim is wiping cups and plates;
On the rows of shining dishes
The spring-sweet sunlight gleams—
And oh, the Gear contentment
In the kitchen of my dreams!

TRANSFORMING RURAL TOWNS

Dear Editor and Members: They informs us that the changes all things, except it does, but we ourselves help to do a good part of it. Automobiles have brought the greatest changes to our small towns and even in the larger cities. Many horses have had to give way and take a back seat, but many business firms who discarded their faithful horses to be replaced for trucks and etc, are turning their eyes once again back to the old stand by, the faithful horse. The automobile age has transformed the picture of many small towns. The changes in some places are almost complete, in others the battle is still on.

And today in some places a blacksmith shop, with its earthen floors, with blackened rafters, with the roar of its bellows, and facts lying around, is almost a curiosity. Not many years ago every community in any size had four, and supported at least one or more blacksmith shops. Upon rainy days the smithy was a busy man for farmers from the outlying districts would gather, bringing jobs of work, and exchange story yarns. For many years I saw one conducted next to my home in Southern and many a horse I saw was made some times before it was ready to be his new set of shoes or a wagon tire.

While the happy man went his way with his goods to him all newly shod, regardless of how badly he was taken on it never mattered as long as the money was newly good.

Today the same shop stands, but it has been converted into a garage, where touring cars and trucks are housed. In front stands a gasoline pump to fill the tanks of wheezing Lizzies, at the left of the door still sits the old stone, which has held in place many noisy chipping wheel.

Still on another street a new shop stands, and the anvil rings out daily.

In Jewett City the blacksmith shop still stands, which has been a landmark for many years but has been repaired and over the door swings an electric sign "Garage".

Which is the sign by many other signs, as time as there are horses there must be blacksmith shops. But as you drive through different sections you will observe where not only blacksmith shops, but old grist mills, which used to grind out the golden grain, even old cider mills, which once brought forth the orchards most tempting juice, even many old style horse sheds have been discarded, have been converted into garages.

However, the motor age has not left the horse a mark. Thousands of them still do their duty in the good old horse and way. Still in some sections bridges are being constructed to replace the old ferry, credit is due to the auto age.

Today many can recall when only a few years back ice was delivered in town here with a one horse lumber wagon. Today it rolls around from house to house in a high powered motor truck. Still you and I can see many other changes taking place. Even ourselves are changing. The wonderful stamp that George M. Cohan handed to the public, in his clever way is "Life is a funny proposition after all" No truer words were ever spoken. As we look back and ponder over the past, perhaps the motor age will only be a small item of what our future more modern inventions will produce. Incidentally, the automobile era has proved to the rural resident every bit as enterprising and progressive as our city cousin.

Looking back it seems only a few years ago when our town had five mails coming into the village. All were owned routes drawn by horses. The most outstanding one which will not fade from our memory, was the Lilly Hill, with its broad shape which the body rested upon and driven by a spirited fiery horse owned and driven by Monroe Whitman making a trip daily to Norwich and back. Mr. Whitman now lives in Mystic and in this day delights in telling yarns of his daily trips. Now the mails are condensed into two daily, which are delivered by auto.

Only a few miles from here steps are being taken to have an aviation field. If our forefathers could come back and cast their weather eye they would scratch where the hair is thinned and stroke their wrinkled chin, and say in their old "soft way of theirs: All right you win; will wonders never cease?

FIRST SUNDAY SCHOOL

Dear Social Corner Friends: Here is something interesting so am sending it to you.

The first Sunday school in Maine and probably the first in New England, was organized at Winthrop, on the 17th. Churches of many denominations had been in existence for a century and a half, but no especial attention had been given to the instructional religious training of children. The Sunday school at Winthrop was opened as an experiment and it was a very successful one. Soon other schools were opened throughout New England.

Following the footsteps of this town, Massachusetts adopted the idea of the Sunday school, and the plan spread rapidly. The original Sunday school building, and is still in existence to-day.

come greatly exercised over the question of slavery and intemperance. As a matter of fact, the first sermon against slavery had been preached at Winthrop many years before. The question of intemperance had become so important that several societies had been organized to influence men to other ways.

The proponents of the abolition of slavery and the suppression of intemperance had become disgusted by the attitude of the existing parties to such an extent that they decided to form a party of their own.

A convention was called at Strong and the foundation of the party laid that six years later elected Abraham Lincoln as president of the United States.

Abolition of slavery and the suppression of the liquor traffic were the main platforms of the party.

BALSAM FIR

TWO WEEKS IN "THE LAND OF THE SKY."

Editor and Social Corner Readers: The shower continued all night, and as Mr. Ray said, the Little Pigeon would be a roaring torrent. We found it so, for we could plainly hear its roar nearly a mile away, as it rushed down the steep side of the mountain. The walled sides of the gorge through which flowed most of the water, prevented it from spreading out onto the more level land. As the road that we have to take before commencing the ascent of Chingman's Dome led along and across the river several times, we had to postpone the ascent until the stream became its normal self. After a night's rest were were up to drink in the fresh mountain air and to view the wonderful picture that opened up before and around us from an elevation of more than 2,800 feet.

A good substantial breakfast was soon announced. Mrs. Ray beating on the big brass kettle, summoned us and the three boys from the still, to be seated at the table, while the two daughters, and Mrs. Ray kept our plates well filled with tasty venison steak and most delightful corn meal flapjacks, followed by light snow-white biscuits and wild honey. Each one was served with a pint cup of coffee, black and strong enough to float an iron wedge.

After breakfast we were invited by Mr. Ray to look over his 60 acre farm, mostly planted to growing crops of the various grains and five acres of tobacco. Before we leave the door, Mr. Ray shouts out, with a voice like hidden thunder to the boys yet seated at the table: "What air ye loiterin round that air table air now yew hev dun filled yer bellys? Yeou know them air dubs the hev got few be run off afore dite as Bill Slocum will be hyar afore the sun hev left the peaks of the Smokies, tew take them air tew barrels uv corn sperits an another air that tew year old apple-jack over in the further still house. Git air a long drive tew Knoxville as he hev tew go by Sevierville tew make out his load! Then he won't git tew Jim Condon's till tomorrer nite, providin' he don't run afoul uv env revenuers." Each one reaches for his rifle, where they are suspended on a six pronged pair of deer's horns, leaving two rifles belonging to Mr. Ray. On one we noticed eight notches cut on the stock near the breech, and three others further up. Asking what they represented, this was his answer:

"These hyar tell the number uv rebels, besides sum blood hounds old trusty killed afore we jined the old Mounting Skouts. We ambush'd them frum the tree tops and thickets. These hyar (pointing to the three) air the number of revenuers thet got in ther way uv hit, when hit war loaded and went off."

After looking over the farm we were invited to the still house, three in number, with a capacity of three or four barrels of liquor a day or night. "I jist want tew show heow yeuns hyar in the mountings try tew git an honest livin', as hit mount be."

The balance of the day was passed about the premises, Mrs. Ray attending to household duties, while Janet, and Fidelia were busy in the weave room, a building separated from the cabin. We look in and there we see two looms, on one, being operated by one of the girls, was several yards of home spun jeans; on the other was nearly a beam full of linen, fine enough for a Sunday shirt. The wool and flax were products of the farm. The wool was washed, carded, spun and wove by hand. The flax was converted into the finished product from the raw material, all by hand.

While one of the girls was weaving the other was busy at the wheel, twisting the long thread from the carded tow. Then again we see her filling the spools and quills for the warp and filling. All of this process we watched with interest.

After dinner Mr. Ray told us of his being in the battle of Fort Saunders. "Yes I fit with Burnside an' helped tew lick Jim Longstreet. After I left the skouts. Wa'st I proud uv thet air blew suit with shinin' brass buttons. I war brave as nuff fer hev fit any durned rebel from Jeff Davis down tew old Stun Wall Jackson or Bob Lee. Heow we slaughtered them air rebels. If we hadn't er stopped killin' 'em as we did, thar wouldn't er hen 'nuff uv 'em left tew buried the dead ones. As hit wor we kivered up sum uv 'em an' not very deep at that, so as they could rise easy at the resurrection; but I reckon the Lord won't holp 'em very much as they hain't uv the Kingdom uv Heaven, as ye seemt say. I reckon General Burnside wor the biggest general that ever lived; an' he wor so tender hearted as a child. Yeou he cried when Colonel Sanders died who wor shot by a rebel sharp shuter. Wounded fust, then died. He wor buried at the dead uv nite, like as they sed wor Sir John Moore, no drums nors shotin'. My youngest boy air named Ambrose arter the general. Heow the general got on his horse, like he growed thar, with his slouch hat an' side whiskers. He wor a pictur."

The evening was spent in a game of cards, Seven Up, or High, low, jack. We were retiring early next morning. After breakfast we commenced making preparations to make the ascent of Chingman's Dome, as the Little Pigeon was near normal and fordable. Our luggage was securely strapped to the horses, their shoes were examined and we were ready for a start, but not until Mrs. Ray had arranged a package of eatable that required no cooking, such as both wheat and corn bread, doughnuts and a large piece of well roasted and seasoned venison. Mr. Ray's donation was a generous bottle of "peach and honey." The girls gave us each a fine linen handkerchief of their own handiwork. With God-speed and best wishes from the family we were happily on the way amid the shortening shadows of the Smokies as the sun was just illuminating the valley 2,000 feet below.

As soon as we had reached an altitude of 4,500 feet where we stopped for lunch and rest here was a clearing that gave us an unobstructed view for miles in either direction. By now the sun was warm, the air invigorating, and the scenery enchanting. Casting one long lingering look behind at the indescribable beauty of scenery, we mounted and soon were passing through a labyrinth of stately forest trees. The wagon road was winding, up hill and down dale, for a few miles before we came to the ridle path. We passed several cabins of the mountaineers, making occasional stops for a drink of water, and questionings as to our errand in that section. The land was fertile in the narrow valleys between the spurs and was planted, mostly to corn for use in the still; garden products flourished near the cabins. Another rattler disputed our passage; as the guide said, "He wor a whopper," lay coiled in the middle of the road. Before we had time to think, Trew had, with a quick and straight aim dispatched his snakeship, and had jumped from his horse and cut off his nine rattles, giving them to Mr. Blakeslee as a souvenir. "Ef we don't put spurs tew our horses, darkness will beat us tew ther top uv the dome. See them air black clouds an' mist hanging over the valley? Hit have been a hot day down thar I reckon, an' they air ketchin' a powerful lightnin' storm," says Trew. With quickening speed we thought to outride what seemed to us strangers, a fast approaching downpour of rain. "What air ye afraid uv," asked Trew, "that air storm air more than 2000 feet below us, and cain't git up hyar no how."

Now hastening, we were soon on crest of Chingman's Dome, 6,660 feet above tide water. Such a scene as came to our view here is beyond my power to describe. Below us more than 2,500 feet we see the black cloud of a thunder storm; heard the deafening peal of thunder quickly followed by a most vivid zigzagging forked lightning. We feel the concussion the same as if you were standing near a cannon being fired. Where we stand the sun is bright and warm, not a cloud above us, not a leaf stirring on the mountain's brow, the great dome lifted its majestic crest in an unpaled sunshine, while the trees in the cove were tossed by a wind that raged on a lower level, as if it issued from Aeolian caverns in the depth of the range. It was a wild aerial panorama.

The shower passed; soon the mist began to creep up the side of the grand old dome. "Less you-uns want ter eat yer grub in the dark and blunder 'round findin' a place tew pitch our tent, yew all better step propper lively, fur God ermity don't hold back the black ernite tew suit weuns." Soon a fire was kindled and the smell of good coffee greeted us. The rye biscuit and the wheat and Indian doughnuts given us by Mrs. and Miss Keener at the cross roads, were somewhat dry, but with the hot coffee and evaporated milk they were made quite eatable. With a slice of the roasted deer meat sandwiched between slices of bread, from good Mrs. Ray, w' made out a very nice supper.

As soon as we finished eating the guide says, "This air no place tew pitch our tent, fur the nite; as afore mornin' we won't hev blankets 'nuff tew keep us warm. Jist foller me an' we'll git a place that air safe frum change uv air whar I hev ben many times afore."

We followed the trail below the crest some 150 feet and soon came to an ideal camping ground that had been occupied before by sightseers.

After securing and caring for our horses by the light of a torch we pitched our tent, laying our rubber blankets under us and the woolen over us. Soon we were wrapped in the arms of Morpheus on the dizzy heights of Chingman's Dome. The experiences and wonders seen in the next few days will follow in the next article. (To be continued.)

CARING FOR RAG RUGS.

Dear Members and Editor: It seems good to see the page so full of nice interesting letters, as they have been in the last few weeks. It gives one a grand and glorious feeling to see it so.

Here are a few hints on keeping rag rugs nice: If you want to keep them attractive they must be washed before they become soiled and this washing must be done carefully. On bright fall days rugs will dry quickly on the line.

Before washing the rugs thoroughly shake them and then put them in thick lukewarm soapsuds and wash by lifting up and down. They may be washed in a washing machine or if by hand a scrub-brush will help dislodge the dirt. Rinse the rugs thoroughly in several waters or hang them on the line and rinse with a hose.

Rugs will be sticky and the colors dull if soap is left in the fabric. Avoid ringing the rugs, but hang them dripping on the line. Pull them straight so that they will dry in shape.

When washing large rag rugs the housekeeper will save strength if she lays the rugs flat on the floor of the porch or on a large kitchen table, and scrub them with a brush and thick soapsuds.

Thin rugs, if dipped in water containing a little starch just before hanging to dry, will keep their shape better.

Do any of the sisters make wall paper borders? If there are any that do not know how I will tell you how you can learn. It is very fascinating work as well as profitable work. They are made from beads and wall paper, and easily sold. I can give you the address of the firm that will send you a sample and directions how to make them. They do not buy them from you. They sell the material. From the sample they send you can make them very easily. The beads can be bought anywhere and use any kind of wall paper.

A FINE FACE LOTION.

Editor and Friends: We are having some fine fall weather. Hope it lasts.

They are writing about face lotions. Well the best of anything I know is to take some salt and cooking soda and put a little in the warm water that you bathe your face in. It takes off tan and removes all from the face, leaving the skin soft and satiny. It is wonderful for the bath as well. And for the hair there is nothing better than Cuticura soap. It removes dandruff, makes the hair grow and makes it soft and glossy.

Now in housecleaning: Well most people use all kinds of soap powders and soap, but one should never use it on glossy paint. Some clear hot water and a soft cloth removes all grime from the paint and it is still fresh and glossy. In washing windows I never use Bon Ami. I wash mine with hot water and pine soap. Then rinse them with hot water; stand them cornerwise to drain. When dry polish them with tissue paper. It makes them bright and glossy. Never use anything on white or enameled beds but warm water and polish with tissue paper as other things remove the pretty gloss. I have tried all of these so I know they are all right.

Aries: Your cards came this morning. They are lovely and many thanks.

Kochia: Hope you and your son are fine. Nails thought you were going to write that poem. I had a friend copy it for me and I sent it in last week but it wasn't printed. I suppose there wasn't space, but hope it comes out this week.

Ann Tenna: Suppose you will be going to your winter home soon.

Keziah Doolittle: We have not heard from you in a long time or are you like some of the others. They say there isn't room, but never mind, come to the front once more.

Velvet: Wish I were going with you on that Mohawk trail trip.

Providence Rose, Icavilla, Kansas Lilly: Where are you all, and where are our home folks?

Hope all the sick ones are better. Kind regards to all.

HAMPTON OF OTHER DAYS.

Dear Social Corner Members: Leaving the burned town building in Hampton of other days we fin a story and a half house with ell to the south occupied and owned by Silas Tiffany and family consisting of Diantha, his wife, son, Henry, wife and daughters, Di, Mary Ann, Frances, Sarah and son, Robert. The eldest daughter lived with an aunt in New York. Frances taught one summer—as mentioned before. Sarah taught many years was considered a fine teacher. Henry and Robert assisted the father.

In the ell was a stove—and fire in the stove set the town building on fire, but the main part of the house was saved. We school children the day after the fire were looking around and found a ham that had been roasted by the intense heat. I do not remember who found it, or who gave me a sample, but do remember how delicious it was. I never tasted the likes before or since.

There used to be a sign in the store as follows: "If you do not see what you want, ask for it." I thought it queer but was finally told one could get not goods there as in many other places. Mr. Tiffany (Silas) said to his wife: "Diantha, I'm not feeling well, poach me half a dozen eggs." He lived to marry a second time, Miss Kimball, and had two daughters by her; only one lived to grow up. The family moved to Willimantic, had a grocery store there and owned what at one time was called "Merrill House" on Walnut street. Miss Sarah taught in the old Natchaug school. The family moved to Worcester. Robert and niece, Di, are all there is left of family.

The next building was Lyndon T. Button's barn, a little back from the street, where horses were kept to let to people desiring to go to Willimantic or Danielsonville, as then called, to get millinery, as there were no cars then. Mr. Button's brother, Worthington, lived in New York, and he drove a span of horses and carriage (or coachman did), to Hampton and they were kept in this barn. Edward Cleveland of Hartford did the same. I can not say whether Henry Abbott, whose father lived quite a little distance to the south of the hill kept his team there or not, but do remember the nothing equal to thier turnout in Hampton, and undoubtedly this they all enjoyed.

One of the coachmen, upon hearing for the first time a tree toad, asked Mr. Lyndon T. Button the name of the bird singing, which quite amused Mr. B.

I would like some member to tell me where to find the "Inquiry." Few lines like this:

"Tell me ye winged winds that around my pathway road,
Do ye not know some spot where mortals weep no more?"

Kochia: You are quite right. I've no desire to knock down a telephone pole with an auto. But I'll ever remember the rough, narrow way over the hills.

HOW TO MAKE MARBLED PAPER

Dear Social Corner: Marbled paper can be used in making gifts for Christmas (and other occasions) such as lamp shades, lining for envelopes, wall panels and screens, covering boxes and post cards. It is interesting work as no two designs are exactly alike. If you wish to dip a large piece of paper the bath tub is the best to use for holding the colors. But smaller pieces of paper can be dipped into the dye in a dish pan or laundry tub. One can use any light colored paper and you will need to buy a ten cent can of oil paint of red, yellow, blue and green (one can of each color) and a flexible steel bladed knife, a little turpentine or kerosene.

Have four saucers in each of which you place a small quantity of one of your color paint. That is one saucer for red, one for blue, one for yellow, one for green. Put a teaspoon of paint in the sauce, now pour on some turpentine or kerosene to half fill the saucer and mix with paint, dissolve each color thoroughly and separately, being careful not to mix them. Now fill your dish pan with cold water to within two inches of the top. Have the paper smaller than the size of the pan. With the knife dip up some blue and shake it off upon the water, wipe the knife on an old rag and repeat with other colors. Now stir the water vigorously with the knife and at once dip the paper down upon the water, lift at once and place aside to dry, painted side up.

The more quickly you dip and lift, the better will be the design. The paper must not be wet before it is dipped. A small quantity of silver or gold powder may be sifted over the dip if you wish a more elaborate looking design. The marbled paper is prettier after it dries. Do not judge it while it is wet. Other shades of color may be added if you find the work worth while and any children of paper may be used. Some colors spread over the water while others stay nearly as placed, so it is necessary to stir the water to blend the colors.

Here's a toast to my friends, near and far,
With affection, wherever they are:
"May their nerves ne'er grow weak!
May they find all they seek!
And their consciences be left with no scar!"

"Oh, I wish that summer were here."
Sighed a youth to a maid who stood near.
"I'd get my canoe,
And my phonograph, too:
Couldn't you do the rest—it's Leap Year?"

There was a young lady from Lynn,
Who died at a fashionable inn:
They charged her a quarter,
For a glass of iced water,
Just think what a bath would have been!

A gleam of hope is better than an electric light. As ever

RECIPES FROM GUESS WHO?

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I am sending in the following recipes for trial.

Ribbon Cake: 1-2 cup shortening, 1 1-2 cups sugar, 1 cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 egg whites, 3 cups flour sifted 3 times, 3 teaspoons baking powder.

Cream shortening with 1 teaspoon of cream, then add sugar, milk, flour sifted with baking powder (sifted 3 times), stir carefully beating so that it would be heavy, last beat egg whites stiff, fold them in. Have a nice shaped layer pan that will take the 3 layers in one batch.

Tomato Pie: Cut green tomatoes into pieces about the size of a nutmeg (not slices) as will fill two quarts. Put into this one-half pint of water and one one-half pints of brown sugar. Cook all slowly, for about seven hours (the secret of success is long cooking) then put in colander and drain off the juice. Thicken the juice with flour, thickening to the consistency of navy. Flavor this with one and one half tablespoons lemon extract and salt to taste. Put back the tomato and allow to cool before making pies. Bake with 2 crusts, dotting the mixture quite generously with bits of butter before putting on top crust.

Polish a La France: 4 eggs beaten together, then add 3-4 lb. of sugar. Beat again until very light, remove beater. Add 1-2 level teaspoonful sa.t, 3-4 lb. flour, 1 level teaspoonful baking powder, 3 1-4 pints of Gilt Edge flour, baking powder, salt, 1-2 level teaspoon of powdered mace or nutmeg. Add 1-2 cupful of shredded citron peel and 1-4 lb. melted butter, when melted, in a large baking pan (with a central opening. Pour butter out and stir into the batter, then pour batter into mold. Bake in a steady, fairly hot oven for 1 1-4 hours, taking care to turn cake several times. This mixture is a thin batter and requires a slower oven than the usual cake. When done place on plate on which it is to be served. Serve with chocolate sauce, which is made as follows:

Put one level cup of sugar into a sauce pan, add one cup of milk, one fourth cup of butter, and boil together until "half done", ten minutes, if boiled hard add 1-4 cake bitter chocolate in fairly small pieces. Stand until entirely melted (but do not boil. Add 3-4 teaspoon of vanilla and pour over cake one spoonful at a time. Sift powdered sugar over the top before carrying to the table.

This cake can be used for a pudding. I always use an orange syrup with it or rum sauce when used for a pudding.

GUESS WHO

CLUB NO. 2 MEETING ENJOYABLE

Dear Corner Friends: In spite of the threatening weather, a goodly number ventured out to Club No. 2. All seemed to enjoy their dinner and the little entertainment of reading, spelling and a good sing. Mary B kindly played the songs and all entered into it as though they enjoyed each song. Different ones selected. Several brought their sewing blocks for quilts crocheting. I think it's a day we all look forward to, both to our own club and visiting others. Several went from Norwich to visit Club No. 1 today and they surely had a lovely day.

Kitty Lou: I was sorry when you said you thought best to stop your letters in the Corner on account of some thinking you wrote too long ones. Now to me the subject, you will admit, can't be done in a short letter. I find lots of good in them to store away for future use. Just you keep on for others beside myself like to read them. Where would our page be some weeks if Kittie Lou wasn't doing her part? You will always find some one to find fault with what one does. Just pass over the fault finders, they have to pick on some one. If it was me they were picking on I would say better we who don't care than on those who would care to keep the pen pushing. With your helpful hints I have since spoken to several and say hope you keep writing.

Aunt Rosa: Hope your cold is better. Hubby has gone down the line putting the shutters on and closing up the houses for winter.

Aunty No. 1 and Sister Ready: We miss you both but the sick must be cared for.

A number of years ago Mandy marked a pack of playing cards for me to tell fortunes by. We had passed many pleasant evening trying our luck. Ace of hearts was the wish card, ten of diamonds was money.

I would be glad of a copy if anyone has the list.

Bonnie: Did you get out to Maplewood with your flowers. What a nice visit we few last ones had club day.

Nespa: Was sorry to read of your loss of husband. You have the kindest sympathy from the club.

Also, Aunty and Uncle No. 1, in the bereavement at your home of the sister. Am glad you have sisters ready to help out in the home.

Whirlwind: Was glad to see you at the Pythian grand session. It surely was a nice one. Everybody and everything was pleasant enough out Monday evening and Tuesday all day. It's time I said by by.

CALLA LILY

TO CLEAN PORCELAIN

To the Social Corner and Members: About two weeks ago, Topsy asked what to use to clean a white porcelain bath tub and sink. I use turpentine or kerosene, with excellent results.

Saturate a cotton flannel cloth with either one, and go over the tub or sink to be cleaned, thoroughly. Last, use hot water, to which soap powder and a few drops of ammonia have been added.

Never use any of the scouring powders on porcelain as that dulls the enamel, which cannot be restored.

I will sign myself

ELECTA'S DAUGHTER

Miss Mary Elizabeth Rickard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rickard of Fifth avenue, New York city, was married to Reginald Dorsey Mohun, in New Canaan. Among the guests were Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the republican nominee for the presidency, and her son, Allan.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Dear Social Corner Members: The following are a number of household hints, which should prove helpful to you:

To destroy roaches, saturate small pieces of cotton in peppermint oil and place it at night where the roaches are troublesome. It will kill them.

Toughness of angel cake is often due to the fact that eggs are not beaten properly. They should be beaten so stiff that they will stand alone.

Celery should never be omitted when serving poultry and roast beef without potatoes browned under them never taste the same.

In roasting meat do not salt before putting in oven. Salt extracts the juice.

Ham which has been boiled in a bag, and kept in it, will remain moist and tender to the last slice.

A roast of veal is greatly improved if larded; this prevents it being dry and tasteless when cooked.

To test milk, dip a well polished knitting needle into a pitcher of milk and quickly withdraw it in an upright position. If the milk has only a small proportion of water this will prevent even a drop of milk adhering to the needle.

When baking cookies use a large dripping pan. Turn it upside down or bottom side up and place cookies on the bottom of the pan. They bake quicker and do not burn as easily as when placed in the bottom of the pan.

The secret of frying fish crisp and brown without either eggs or bread crumbs is to dry it well, dredge both sides with plenty of flour and plunge in boiling hot fat. Be sure your fat is boiling and that there is plenty of it.

Use adhesive tape for labeling your jars of canned meats and fruits as it will stick and not fall off.

Late Tomatoes—When it is too late in the season for tomatoes to ripen. Pick them with long stems and dip each end in paraffin (melted). Let them dry, place them in the cellar where they will dry and ripen evenly and deliciously.

When making pickles from cucumbers put up in brine. A few green grape leaves added to the water they are heated in will cause the cucumber to retain their green color. If green leaves cannot be secured green grape twigs will do.

When canning any kind of acid fruits that will corrode the metal tops, just before putting the metal top on pour a little melted paraffin into it and turn it slightly on the side and around so the paraffin will make a coating on the entire inside. This makes the top last longer and prevents the fruit from coming in contact with the metal.

WHAT IS FLETCHERISM?

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: If you ask a number of people what Fletcherism is, some of them not so many as you might think, for Fletcherites are becoming very common nowadays, will reply with a vague recollection of Gladstone's advice to his children that Fletcherism is chewing every mouthful of food 32 times. Most of the others, speaking out of an acquaintance with the literature of the subject, will reply that it is a complete new method of eating, the rules for which are:

First: Wait for an appetite, even if you have to skip a meal or two or three meals to get it.

Second: Never eat when you are hurried, worried, angry or unhappy.

Third: Consult the appetite before eating and eat just what is demanded at the time.

Fourth: Hang on to every mouthful of food that is put into the mouth as if it were the last you expect to get. Give it your whole attention to the exclusion of anything else there may be to come. Taste it until there is no taste left in it, enjoy it for all it is worth.

I have heard one or two persons say Fletcherism is the philosophy of life. I have seen and read in magazine articles and in letters to the newspapers how, paradoxical as it may seem, by merely following their appetites and consulting their tastes in the matter of food, they were gently and imperceptibly led, without forcing or self-denial, to forsake gross gluttonous habits for lives of the most abstemiousness. They have told us how they lost all desire for liquors, coffee, tobacco, tea, condiments and elaborate culinary concoctions and how they grew to appreciate the delicate and subtle flavors of such elemental foods as potato, rice and dry bread.

Some say, especially a skeptic, how can the indulgence of the animal appetites lead to temperates when history shows they have always, from the beginning of time led to gluttony.

A man once asked Mr. Fletcher the above question, adding immediately afterward. "Why, if I followed my appetite, I would never pass a saloon, and I should go to bed with boots on every night."

"Suppose you try it and see."

The end of the matter was the man agreed to take a test. The stipulations were that he was to surrender to every one of his impulses to take a drink without a struggle. The one condition of the test being to make sure that the impulse sprang from a physical demand and not a mental craving; that he was to order his glass without the slightest qualm of conscience, and that when he got it, instead of drinking it down at a gulp, he was to sip it, literally "smacking his lips over every drop."

In a few days he called on Mr. Fletcher with his report. "Fletcher," he said, "you're right. I take off my hat to you. I've followed your directions and I'm blessed if I've been able to get away with enough to fill a pint bottle in three days."

"So you see," said Mr. Fletcher, "that it was a restless mind that gave you the alcoholic 'appetite.'"

KITTY LOU.

VISIT TO DEVIL'S HOPYARD

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: How any one who has a car or feet can stay at home while such glorious foliage is in sight is hard to understand.

On Thursday, Idealive, Rebe, Ruthina, Maybug, Lady Lou and myself took "our car and chauffeur" which consists of a hired taxi and started for the Devil's Hopyard.

The last passengers had just got seated when one of the sisters was so anxious to be on the way got so strenuous that she broke the glass in the car door. You can imagine how much she enjoyed the trip after that.

We stopped in Norwich to get the glass replaced and although the guilty party tried to pay the bill, she was not allowed to do so.

We saw a number of our Norwich sisters while waiting. It was getting toward noon so we went to New London and had our dinner at the Palace.

On arriving at the Hopyard we were certainly delighted. In a way it brought California back to me, because we took so many trips up in the mountains and cooked on outdoor stoves.

The falls were a delight and I am sure there will be a picnic there next summer.

After enjoying seeing a female party enjoy their lunch and cigarettes, and they were not young females at that, and a little farther up another female party drinking from a bottle—at a spring—we enjoyed the sweet fire flowers, lovely stream and foliage and then continued on to Colchester. At this point our driver took a new road to Willimantic and home by way of Norwich. We passed by Olum's and Lonesome Pine's homes and I imagine many more. Nine hours of pleasure we will never forget. A day in the open fields and hills is certainly my greatest joy and one who loves nature will surely enjoy the Devil's Hopyard.

On Monday, augmented by Ester, Clarinda and Tempest, we gave a welcome home to May Bug at Pecktum's inn, lunch at 1 p. m. and cards in the afternoon.

On Tuesday, I had the pleasure of entertaining the ladies that gave me the dear little watch when I went to California, at lunch. I hope they enjoyed it as much as I did. I have had a four-days trip to Maine and visited my home town, Hampden, and I have never seen the country so gorgeous, every tint of red and yellow that can be produced and as Maine has 2,505 lakes and many rivers, its scenic beauty is unsurpassed.

When I think of what I have seen of our country the last year, I certainly have been repaid. It is a wonderful country. I have never seen in Spain, Italy or Australia anything to beat crossing Mexico, Arizona and California, the stone formations and vegetation, over the mountains and through the canyons, the immense yucca and at their feet red and yellow cact; that looks like small homes with fireplaces. I think if one could exploit South America they would find wonderful things. I have never been on the east coast but twice on the west and at one time have seen 13 volcanos afire.

From my high window I can look over Westerly and it is sunset and beautiful.

Sisters, get out of doors all you can if it is only in the dooryard. I don't know of anything that will clear the mind like it; such a sight just now. The leaves are blowing down the 50-foot cement road and it looks like a race to see which will get there first. They look like mice at play.

I was much pleased with Aris' verse:

"I hate to be a kicker,
I like to live in peace.
But the wheel that does the squeaking
Is the wheel that gets the grease."

FINE PROGRAM AT CLUB NO. 6 MEETING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Over 60 gathered at the Wequistequock chapel on Tuesday for the meeting of Club No. 6, and a royal good time they had. Sumac and Pyrethrum did all they could to make it a success. Delicious meat pies with salads, rolls, pickles, cakes, pies, cheese, fruit and coffee was served in abundance. The program was fine with songs, readings, recitations; a guessing game and a straw vote. May B. Zuleika, American Girl, Nancy Peck and Pyrethrum's daughter and niece taking part. This read the history of the chapel. Sumac had to leave at 1 o'clock to work at the grange and had charge of something there in the evening, so imagine she was "all in" next day.

Prairie Chicken: Hope you got home O. K. You sure made some effort to come.

Roma: Suppose Betty Buick is one of the family now. After making plans for several days, the mister and I were all ready to start on a five-day trip Wednesday morning, and Tuesday night got word that the one who was to keep house for me was unable to leave home, so today I am washing and ironing curtains instead of sporting. I think there is quite a bit of truth in the old saying: When it rains porridge, my dish us usually bottomless up.

Cosmos: Received your letter and we think if we were C. we should take our Sundays off alone, or he may get drowned. Heard the same thing happened to you the other day.

May B.: Hope you decide where to go, then go and enjoy every minute.

Sarah Y.: Was glad to meet you in Norwich and hope you soon will feel like yourself again.

Connie: Had hoped to see you at the fresh ham supper, but everything came out as usual.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Wonderful Picture at Y. M. C. A. Sunday at 4 P. M.

The unusual and truly wonderful feature moving picture, D. W. Griffith's "America" will be shown at the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium in two parts: the first part on the coming Sunday at 4 p. m., and the last part on Sunday, Nov. 4. This is a most romantic story; the story of the sacrifices made by our forefathers during the Revolution; it is inspiring and thrilling beyond description; it is absolutely correct historically, showing the causes that made necessary a great sacrifice.

The film shows the old house of burgesses in Virginia where sat Washington, Patrick Henry and Jefferson, the founders of the republic; also the magnificent ride of Paul Revere, said by the New York Herald to be the most thrilling scene ever filed. Other scenes include the gathering of the American patriots at Lexington and Concord; the surrender of Cornwallis, and the inauguration of the first president of the United States. This remarkable picture is bound to impress all who see it with the touching fact that men have said the most precious price that we might have the America we have today, and it should kindle within the heart a love of country that is greatly needed in these significant days.

To this service, both men and women are cordially invited, and boys and girls fourteen and over will be admitted.

Connecticut College Concert.

Two of the country's well known composers who also review concerts for newspapers of their respective cities have written of Sophie Braslau's singing in the following terms:

"Sophie Braslau is one of those gorgeous girls with October shadows in her low voice and lovely, palpitant tints in her leger-line tones. She puts all the dark broodings of fall into her Russian songs, and she spreads a warm sunlight over her Italian and English numbers. She has sung here often but never as well as she did last night"—Harvey B. Gaul in the Pittsburgh Post.

"You cannot compare the voice of Sophie Braslau to the tone of just one 'cello. You will be right as far as the timbre is concerned, provided the strings are swept by the bow of a Casals. But when you consider the amazing volume of this superb contralto, you will have to liken it to a whole choir of 'cellos, playing in marvelous unison. Her gift for interpretation, and especially dramatic interpretation, comes near to being unrivalled on the concert stage today."—James H. Rogers in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Slater Hall Concert

Subscribers to the Slater Hall Concert course of 1928-1929 are anticipating heartily the coming of the second number of the series, the recital by Harold Bauer, master-pianist, next Friday evening, Nov. 2.

Mr. Bauer comes in place of Frances Nash, who was engaged for that evening but who has cancelled all American dates to spend the season in the foreign concert field. The committee was glad to include Miss Nash in this year's program as she is probably the most outstanding of the young American woman pianists of today, but it was with very great pleasure that they announced the substitution of Harold Bauer, of international reputation, who is considered by the whole music world one of the greatest of the master pianists of this generation—an artist whose greatness is appreciated not only throughout our country but throughout Europe as well. His career has been an interesting one and in its story is found evidence of the marked recognition which he has received not only from the laity and the critics of the music-loving public but from contemporary artists and from governments as well. His is a prestige equalled by few of his colleagues.

The Bauer concert will be followed by two other delightful ones—the first on Jan. 18, by that famous and extremely popular Spanish guitarist, Andres Segoria, and on Friday, March 8, by a recital by Merle Alcock, the leading contralto of the Metropolitan Opera company.

Because of a slight misunderstanding, the committee wishes to make clear the fact that all subscribers who now hold course tickets have no further obligations but that all others who are interested and have not subscribed should be urged to take advantage of the offer now being made for the remainder of the course—$4.50 for the three concerts, and to make their pledges immediately to Mr. Achibald

ROMOLO, COLCHESTER FARMER, IGNORES AUTO LAWS AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 26—Pasquale Romolo, 34, a farmer residing at 4 Road Box, 56, Colchester, was arrested this afternoon by Traffic Officer Thomas Cavanaugh charged on three counts with violation of the city and state motor vehicle laws. Romolo drove his automobile past an automatic traffic signal on Bank street that was set at danger and when the officer stopped Romolo it was discovered that the driver had neither license nor proper registration.

Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh is in Allentown, Pa., where he is a witness in a case of fraudulent obtaining of money. He will be absent from the city about a week.

Harold Jackson, colored, of Port Chester, who stole an automobile in New London last summer and who later broke jail only to be recaptured was sentenced in the superior court at Middletown yesterday to not less than three nor more than six years in prison. On the second count Jackson was sentenced to not less than two nor more than six years in prison, so that he will have to serve at least five years before set at liberty.

A large number of graduates of Yale and followers of the gridiron will go to New Haven tomorrow to witness the battle between the Bulldog and the Army. Many graduates were disappointed in being unable to procure tickets.

AUTO BUMPS TROLLEY CAR BACKING FROM DRIVEWAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 26—The trolley car due to leave New London at 7:15 o'clock this afternoon for Norwich was late in arriving here because of an accident on Main street, near Richards street. The car was speeding along when an automobile in backing from a driveway, backed against the car resulting in three windows being smashed. None of the passengers were injured.

Harry Jewett, 35 West Cole street, reported to the police tonight that while his automobile was parked in front of his residence last night a thief stole a spare tire.

POLICE CHECKING UP ON PANZRAM'S STATEMENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 26—The police give but little credence to the statement made by Carl Panzram, who is held in the district jail, Washington, D. C., that he murdered a youth on the outskirts of New London six years ago, principally because no one ever found the body that Panzram claims he abandoned a short distance from the highway after strangling his victim and secondly because a report was never made of the disappearance of the youth supposed to have been slain. However, Panzram has made a definite statement of his alleged slaying of the youth and has forwarded it to the New London police. The letter received by the New London department, written while Panzram is being held a prisoner at the Washington district jail on a charge of burglary, is as follows and was written Oct. 6th:

"I make this statement voluntarily. I murdered a young boy, 16 or 17 years old, in the summer of 1922 about two miles south of New London on the Boston Post road right close to where the beach road forks from the Boston Post road, about two or three hundred yards from where the road forks, going south on the post road is the place. Right there is a side road leading into the post road. On the right hand side of that road I left the body of the murdered boy with his own belt still tied around his neck.

"This boy's name I don't know but he was a Jew and he told me that his home was in Brooklyn, N. Y., where his uncle was a policeman at that time.

"If there is anything more you want to know about this case that I can tell you, I will.

CARL PANZRAM

"P. S. I am just a bit in doubt as to whether the town was New London or New Haven, but of the rest I am positive. I have killed a number of people in different places and some of the facts escape by memory. I can't remember 'em all. For 18 years I have been going around murdering people and now I think it's about time for some one to murder me. Here's luck to you.

C. P."

The letter was written with the knowledge of the police of Washington, who have communicated with the New London police stating that the former authorities will cooperate with the New London police in the event that the latter deem the statements made by Panzram as being true.

The location of the countryside where Panzram declares he murdered the youth is apparently in the vicinity of Moosbroker's corners, Waterford, as the description of the murder spot tallies with the location of the corners.

Gideon Pelletier, captain of the Salem, Mass., police and Lieut. William Murray, of the Massachusetts state police, are in Washington, endeavoring to determine whether Panzram was the slayer of Henry McMahon, 12, who was killed in Salem six years ago. The mystery of his murder has never been solved. Pelletier and Murray have questioned Panzram at length, but he has refused to answer any of their interrogatives. The officers will remain in Washington several days in an endeavor to find out whether Panzram is the slayer of the Massachusetts child.

There is little or no change today in the condition of Thomas C. Dillon, real estate and insurance dealer, who is seriously ill at his home on Montauk avenue.

The cold of last night and today caused a spurt in the coal business for throughout the entire day all of the coal dealers were kept busy filling small orders of fuel.

NEW LONDON, Oct. 26—With an unprecedented number of voters registered, New London faces a shortage of voting machines and unless things change, voters of the Third ward will have to use the old-time paper ballot. Registrars are of the opinion that as things stand now this method of relieving the condition will be an absolute necessity.

The first snow of the year in this city fell at 1 o'clock this afternoon. It was little more than a suggestion of a flurry yet served to warn everyone that overcoat days are here.

Walter J. Barry, at the Guilford sanitarium, is reported as improved today. He was injured Monday morning when the car he was driving overturned at Madison and it was first thought that he might not live.

At the annual fall meeting of the Connecticut State Teachers' association, held this morning and afternoon in Bulkeley high school, more than 450 elementary teachers were present. About 250 of this number were from out of town. The meeting opened at 10 o'clock and a general discussion of school subjects took place. Prominent speakers were present and set forth the advantages offered by certain studies in grade schools.

More than 250 witnessed the laying of the cornerstone of the new Robert Fitch high school in Groton this morning. An impressive program marked the ceremonies, which were opened by Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of the Groton Heights Baptist church.

GREENEVILLE

Mrs. Richard Stephenson of New Jersey is spending a few days at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brittain on Rosewell avenue. Mrs. Stephenson was formerly a resident of Greeneville.

James Gordon of Fishers Island is spending a few days at the home of his father, William A. Gordon of Fifth street.

Mrs. George Swanton and son Robert J. Swanton, Mrs. Michael Shea and Terry Shahan motored to Hartford Thursday afternoon to witness the Al Smith celebration. The trip was made in Mr. Swanton's machine.

The public school children received a day's vacation Friday, owing to the teachers' conventions which were held at New London and Hartford. Most of the teachers of Greeneville grammar school attended the Hartford sessions.

Mrs. Harold Desmond and Mrs. James Quinn journeyed to Willimantic Thursday afternoon to see Al Smith.

A very successful Halloween supper was given by the Ladies Aid society at Greeneville Congregational church on Thursday evening in the dining hall of the church. The room was very attractively decorated for the occasion with Halloween novelties, such as paper witches, pumpkins, black cats with streamers of orange and black, etc. On the tables were orange candles and when the supper was being served the waitresses lit the candles adding to the pretty effects. The menu consisted of cold meats, cabbage, salads, baked beans, relishes, rolls, doughnuts, apple, squash and pumpkin pie, cheese and coffee. The supper was in charge of Mrs. Jennie Young. Those assisting in the kitchen were: Mrs. Frederick C. Sears, Miss Elizabeth Brown, Mrs. George Mitchell, Mrs. Charles Levitsky, Miss Nellie Hayes, Mrs. Paul Zahn, Mrs. Thomas Haslam and Mrs. Elizabeth Pedrick. The waitresses were: Mrs. George Turner, Mrs. Hugh Finlayson, Mrs. James Service, Mrs. Jabez West, Mrs. Emil Bausch, Mrs. Earl Christman, Mrs. William Murray, Mrs. Howard Rydholm, Mrs. James Semple, Mrs. Charles McMillan, Mrs. Albert Dilworth and Mrs. George Geer. Mrs. Levi Gorton and Mrs. Edithe Welson were on the reception committee. Mrs. Frank Quinley, who was assisted by Mrs. James Service, had charge of the decorations. The waitresses wore paper hats with Halloween designs.

George Swanton of Providence is spending the week end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Swanton of North Main street.

John McClafferty of Southbridge is spending the week end at his home on Hickory street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Casey have returned to their home on Ninth street after spending a week with relatives in New York state.

Miss Leana Hoar spent Friday at New London where she attended the teachers convention.

Joseph Sulman Honored at Brown

Joseph Sulman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Sulman of 35 Summer street, New London, a freshman at Brown university, has been selected to membership in the Brown university orchestra as a first violinist, having successfully passed the try-outs, which were on a competitive basis. Mr. Sulman was formerly a pupil of Prof. Herbert Rich of this city.

EXPECT NORWICH VOTING TIME TO BE LENGTHENED AN HOUR FOR ELECTION

In view of the big increase in the number of voters in the town for the coming state and presidential election on November 6 next, the Norwich selectmen are to call a special town meeting for Thursday, November 1 in order that a vote may be taken to lengthen the time for keeping the polls open by one hour.

At the present time the state law provides that polls may be open from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. in state and national elections, this provision having been passed by the legislature, but Norwich took advantage of an exception which was allowed and by vote in an adjourned annual town meeting on Oct. 10, 1921 voted to make the closing hour 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The legislative provision referred to is as follows:

"At the electors' meeting at which candidates for national or state offices are to be balloted for, the polls shall remain open from 6 o'clock in the forenoon until 6 o'clock in the afternoon for the reception of ballots. Any town, city or borough may, under the provisions of section 388 of the general statutes as amended by chapter 60 of the public acts of 1919, provide that the polls shall open at any hour not later than 9 o'clock a. m. and close not earlier than 5 o'clock p. m. for state and national elections, and not earlier than 2 o'clock for town elections."

Norwich voted for the 5 o'clock closing hour in 1921 and is tied up to this until the vote can be rescinded and the 6 o'clock hour set, which will be the purpose of the special meeting that is to be called.

Judging from the flood of new voters who were made this year, the extra hour will be needed, especially in the first or central district, where there is approximately registration of about 4,900 men and women, who will have to vote at the rate of 7 per minute if all come to the polls during the 12 hours from 6 in the morning to 6 at night. This, of course, is figuring on a 100 per cent vote, which is a thing that never happens.

Four voting machines will be used in the central district polling place at the court house and will be enough to handle the voters easily, but the voters should remember that early voting is one way to avoid a jam at the finish with a possible loss of the chance to cast their ballots.

Taking the registration figures from the last city and town elections, it is shown that the total number of men and women in the town of Norwich who will be entitled to vote will be about 12,000. There were 2,261 new voters made this month, which add about 20 per cent to the number formerly on the list.

Approximate figures of the number of voters in the different districts, which are subject to deductions and revision for removals and deaths, are as follows:

Dist.	Men	Wom.	T'l.
1	2,618	2,344	4,962
2	1,138	757	1,895
3	999	835	1,834
4	668	641	1,309
5	944	502	1,446
6	474	371	845
	6,841	5,450	12,291

ENTERTAINMENT REALIZED $100 FOR POQUETANUCK GUILD

"Her Busy Day," a farce in one act, was presented before a full house at the parish house at Poquetanuck Thursday evening under the auspices of the Women's Guild of St. James church by the following cast of characters: Cora Allen, an up-to-date domestic, Miss Helen Gromko; Ethel Newwed, a young housekeeper, Mrs. Fred Miller; Mrs. Knowser, her next door neighbor, Mrs. Naomi Gallup; Barbara, an itinerant peddler, Mrs. Arthur Smith; Katie Farmer, Mrs. Knowser's hired girl, Mrs. John Taylor; Patrolman Eagle on the beat, Robert McClure; Freddie, a school boy, Orrin Harris, Jr.; Happy Jack, a tramp, Carl Holdridge; Tom Bluffer, a no-money down man, Paul Holdridge; Nick Prior, the grocer's boy, Arthur Smith; Mike Doley, in love with Katie, William Mitchell; Clarence Newwed; Ethel's husband, William B. Mitchell; Solomon Levi, a Jew peddler, John H. Taylor.

The parts were all well taken and received well merited applause, especially the song by William Mitchell and John Taylor, who were accompanied on the piano by Mrs. William Mitchell of Norwich. Excellent music for dancing after the play was furnished by the Mohegan orchestra of Norwich. The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. Charles Harkness, Mrs. Alanson Fuller, Mrs. Arthur Smith and Mrs. John Taylor.

A harvest supper was served before and after the entertainment and was in charge of Mrs. Arthur Smith, Mrs. Alanson Fuller, Mrs. Robert McClure, Mrs. Fred Nicolai, Mrs. George Bogue and the Misses Peck. The waitresses were Mrs. Appleton Main, Mrs. Henry Hart, Mrs. Mary Harris, Mrs. Anna Smith, Mrs. Ora Geer, Mrs. Arthur Barrett, Mrs. William B. Mitchell. The cashier was Mrs. Charles Harkness. Mrs. Robert McClure had charge of the cakes and pies and the ice cream was in charge of Mrs. Jennie Williams, Mrs. Henry Sauer and J. Guy Ayer. The tickets were in charge of William McKelvie, Fred Nicolai and Fred Miller. The supper, play and dance were all well attended, people being present from Plainfield, Yantic, Greeneville and surrounding towns. The guild cleared $100 above expenses.

RED CROSS WAR AGAINST ACCIDENT DEATHS IN STATE

War to the finish has been declared by the American Red Cross against accidental deaths in Connecticut.

This announcement was made Friday by local Red Cross chapter officers who say that during the next twelve months the organization will intensify its first aid and life saving campaign in the state to reduce the useless waste of life by accidents both on land and in the water.

While nearly 1,600 persons in the state received special training in first aid and life saving from the Red Cross during the last year, attempts will be made to double or treble this number during 1929.

With accidental deaths in the U. S. averaging nearly 90,000 a year and still mounting annually, officials are mustering their forces for a concerted drive. Not less than eighty per cent of these deaths can be prevented, they say by spreading knowledge of first aid and life saving. A severed artery, it is pointed out, will quickly bleed a person to death; but the application of a simple tourniquet will save him. Likewise a person may stay unconscious in the water for a considerable time, and while apparently drowned he can be revived by the prone pressure method of resuscitation.

These two instances are said to be typical of dozens of ways for saving lives in emergencies by applying the knowledge of first aid and life saving.

Through its chapters in the state, one of which is located in practically every county, the Red Cross will offer through the year instruction in first aid and will train swimmers in methods for recovering drowning persons from the water and reviving them.

WOMAN'S WRIST BROKEN IN FIGHT WITH NEIGHBOR

Found guilty of breach of the peace, Mrs. Philopena Barile of Thames street, was fined $10 and costs in the city court Friday morning. She was accused of throwing a neighbor, Mrs. Sadie Bruno, down a flight of stairs. In the fall Mrs. Bruno received a broken wrist. It is said the women engaged in an argument and that Mrs. Barile pushed the other woman down the stairs. The affair occurred about a week ago.

ABSENTEE VOTERS SEND BALLOTS BY MAIL

Several voters in states which allow "absentee" voting have already appeared before Town Clerk Harold S. Burt in order to swear in their vote before him as a notary public before they mailed the ballot back to the state and town where it was to be cast.

Voters in New York, Massachusetts and Illinois are among those who have appeared before the town clerk for this method of casting their votes while they were away from home.

VIOLIN INSTRUCTOR GAVE RECITAL AT COLLEGE

LOSES DIVORCE SUIT IN WORCESTER COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 26—The divorce suit brought by Anna Madzynska of Worcester, a former resident of Norwich, Conn., against Joseph Madzynska, also of Worcester, was dismissed by Judge Harry H. Atwood after a hearing in probate court here yesterday.

The marriage of the couple was at Norwich, Feb. 8, 1915, and they last lived together at Worcester. The wife charged cruelty, intoxication and non-support. She sought the custody of their three children.

Musicians at Men's Class

An instrumental and vocal quartette from the South Manchester band will play Sunday at the session of the Men's class of the Central Baptist church. There will be a baptismal service at the morning worship. The morning message will be by the pastor.

TAFTVILLE

At the Taftville Congregational church next Sunday morning, the pulpit will be supplied by Rev. Charles H. Reeves of Norwich Town. After the morning service there is to be a business meeting of the members of the congregation to take some action on the acceptance of one of the candidates for the pastorate.

Taftville had its first flurry of snow of the season Friday afternoon.

Dr. George M. Thompson was the examining physician at the regular monthly Rocknook Well Childs conference held Friday afternoon at the Red Cross rooms in the Ponemah building under the auspices of the United Workers of Norwich.

The annual meeting of the Taftville chapter, American Red Cross was held Thursday evening at Ponemah hall. The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: Chairman, Frank B. Ricketson; vice chairman, Bryan Hanlon; secretary, Miss Elsie Heap; treasurer, Miss Agnes M. Malone; home service committee, Bryan Hanlon, George N. Beardow and Archie J. Molleur; nursing activities committee, Mrs. George F. Blood, Mrs. James Graham, Mrs. David W. O'Brien, Miss Elsie Heap and Mrs. Howard R. Call.

There was a democratic rally held Friday evening at the Parish hall on Merchants avenue, with addresses in French and English. The speakers were Hon. Gaston Tise of New York, Hon. Adrien Cousineau of Fall River, Mass., William M. Citron of Middletown, candidate for congress and John F. Hennon of Jewett City, former deputy collector of internal revenue.

A whist for the benefit of Loyal Victory lodge, I. O. O. F. M. U. was held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Margaret Hunt of Norwich avenue. The ladies prizes went as follows: First, Miss Isabel Thompson of Norwich; second, Mrs. John Hall of Greeneville and consolation, Miss Lillian Holden. The first prize for gentlemen went to Mr. Scovel of Greeneville, the second to Fred Thorpe and the consolation to Leonard Partridge of Norwich. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lamphere of Norwich were presented a cut glass fruit bowl in observance of the 14th anniversary of their wedding. Mrs. Margaret Hunt was also remembered with a gift as the occasion was her birthday. During the social hour which followed, cards, a piano solo was given by Miss Myrtle Schmidt of Bilnville; a piano and saxophone duet by Miss Dorothy Hunt and John Gunderman, refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee being served later.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert P. Hoyle moved Thursday from North Third avenue to their new residence which they recently purchased on Liberty street, New Bedford, Mass. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoyle took an active part in village life and had many friends here. Mr. Hoyle was a member of the standing committee of the Taftville Congregational church.

To allow the teachers to attend a conference at New London, all the grades of the Wequonnoc school enjoyed a holiday Friday.

Miss Helen C. Aberg of North Third avenue has been a recent visitor in New London.

BANK GETS FORECLOSURE JUDGMENTS FOR $38,178.07

Two judgments, aggregating $38,178.07, were entered in favor of the Savings Bank of New London against Abraham and Rose Bronstein, formerly of that city and now of New York, by Judge John Richards Booth at Friday's short calendar session of the superior court in New London.

One judgment was for $17,121.80, which comprised $11,000, the face of the note; interest of $596.84; insurance paid by the bank in the sum of $117.60, and taxes paid in the amount of $5,408.36.

Sidney H. Miner, realtor, valued the property at the corner of Green and Pearl streets at $13,000. He said the building was part brick and part frame. The first Monday in November was set as the date for the owner in equity to redeem and Wednesday, November 7, as the day for subsequent encumbrance. Jefferson O. Bailey holds a second mortgage.

Another judgment was for $19,456.27, comprising $12,000, the face value of the note; interest of $630; insurance paid by the bank in the sum of $138; and taxes paid in the amount of $5,271.27.

Mr. Miner valued the property in this case, located at 23-27 Tilley street and at 37-39 Tilley street at $17,500. The first Monday in November was set as the day of redemption. No subsequent mortgage was on this property.

Attorney Alfred Coit represented the bank; Attorneys Perry J. Hollander and Foster K. Sistare, appeared for Jefferson O. Bailey, and Judge S. Victor Prince for the Bronsteins.

Takes Briefs on Argument

Judge Booth took the briefs on an argument of demurrer in the case of Balk against Fox, et al.

Allowance to defend in the sum of $50, $25 to be paid now and $25 on the day of trial was ordered in the divorce case of William H. Eccleston against Laura Cook Eccleston.

Judgment by default for failure to appear was entered against Clarence H. Gilmore and George L. Sisson in the case of J. C. Nichols against the two defendants. Judgment on the same grounds was entered in a second case involving the same persons.

Judgment by default for failure to appear was entered against the defendant; George J. Gould, in the case of Weeks against George Sullivan and Gould.

Policeman Changes Name

Patrolman Carlos Selesnitzky of the New London police force was allowed to change his name to Carlos Stone. Modification of judgment in regard to the custody of Joseph X. Du Mond, Jr., of Lyme, was granted, when Attorney Morgan told the court that a previous court order had given mother of Evelyn L. Du Mond of New York, the child for six months in the year, but that she had re-married and sent the boy back to his father, Joseph X. Du Mond.

Mr. Morgan said the youngster was of school age now. Judge Booth granted the modification and told Attorney Morgan to write the mother and make agreeable arrangements.

A number of motions went off the list.

COURT CASES ARE GIVEN ASSIGNMENTS FOR TRIAL

The following assignments of court cases for trial in the superior court at New London before Judge John Richards Booth have been made:

Tuesday, Oct. 30, at 11:30 a. m.: Nellie Mitchell Whitehead vs. Warren M. Whitehead, Pereira, et ux, vs. Vargas.

Wednesday, Oct. 31, at 10:00 a. m.: Rosa S. Wilcox et al., trustees vs. John H. Wilcox, et al. Dodd, Adm., vs. Sobanski, et al.

Friday, Nov. 2, at Norwich, short calendar, bar meeting and assignment of cases.

Wednesday, Nov. 7, at New London, (Special), Sandford vs. Fitzgerald, et al.

MONTVILLE BOX COMPANY SUES ON CANCELLED ORDER

Suit in the superior court on a claim for $6,000 damages has been brought by Robertson Paper Box company of Montville against the Rabbor Company, Inc., of Norwalk involving a cancelled order for the manufacture of paper boxes.

The plaintiff company claims that it received an order on Dec. 29, 1927 from the defendant company to make 200,000 paper robe boxes with a like number of slipper holders, bands and robe stiffeners, at the price of $105 per thousand sets. The contract provided for the delivery of first shipment by April 1, 1928, but on Feb. 9, 1928 the Norwalk company gave notice that it would not need the new boxes until June or July. On April 14, the Norwalk company cancelled the order.

The Montville company claims to have expended $1,000 in labor and material in preparing to make the boxes, and to have lost a profit of $4,000 which would have been realized from making the boxes at the total cost of $21,000.

The suit is returnable in November.

THE BLUE HELMET IS FOR HERBERT HOOVER

The Blue Helmet, the Boston magazine printed in the interest of the American Negro soldier of all wars, has come out in favor of Hoover for the presidency. Quoting Governor Fuller's statement that "Hoover is a great humanitarian, whose heart will never cease to beat for Americans, regardless of race, creed or color," the magazine says, "therefore, colored America's electorate in Massachusetts and the nation should choose him as the candidate to be elected president of the United States."

Clifton Monroe Mason, a graduate of the West Side schools and who was once a student at the Academy, is the political writer of The Blue Helmet.

SALVATION ARMY IN NORWICH MADE 29,495 SERVICE CONTRACTS IN YEAR

Through the courtesy of the Porteous & Mitchell company who generously contributed the valuable display space of one of their store windows, The Salvation Army of Norwich has put on an appealing display in which a Salvation Army lassie symbolizes "an angel of light". The display vividly portrays the Salvation Army worker bringing light, hope and cheer to the unfortunate sufferer, and Christmas joy to poor little children.

On a panel on one side of the window is a picture showing a number of children whom the Salvation Army made happy with a Christmas dinner at which Salvation Army workers are in attendance at the table. Below the picture is an inscription which reads: "To hungry and neglected children she is an angel of light." On the opposite corner of the window is a panel upon which there is a picture showing a poor old mother in bed and the Salvation Army worker ministering to her needs. The panel bears the inscription: "Truly she is an angel of light." One side wall of the window is adorned with a large American flag and the opposite wall is covered with a Salvation Army emblem with a center star upon which is inscribed: "Blood and Fire." In the center of the window a Salvation Army lassie is standing with her right hand pointing to a pedestal upon which there is a flashing light torch, and right near it is a large panel upon which is written the following inscription: "She is constantly bringing light, cheer and hope to the needy of this community. Thousands have seen her enter their homes, as an angel of light, to visit the sick, the sorrowing, the fatherless or motherless children, the needy of any race, colour or religious creed. She brings light and hope to the wayward son behind the prison bars and comforts the erring girl in those dark friendless hours in the maternity hospitals. She is truly an angel of light to anyone in need."

The background of the window shows a panel bearing the Salvation Army appeal poster with the words: "Let's all help! The Salvation Army maintenance appeal." A United States regulation flag upon a spear top pole standing immediately behind the main panel completes the appealing display.

The Salvation Army appeal committee is very much indebted to the Porteous & Mitchell Co., for generously donating the valuable window space. The committee feels that a large number of people who daily visit the Porteous & Mitchell Co. and the multitude of pedestrians and automobile traffic in front of the store will be greatly interested with the humane story which the display pictures to the eye and the appeal it makes to the heart. They also feel that, it being a mail campaign, this vivid manner of appeal will greatly influence and stimulate the desire of contributing to this worthy cause.

The following is a report of some of the service rendered by the Salvation Army organization in Norwich during the last year. Appeal Treasurer John R. Tarrant when shown the report of the Salvation Army service in Norwich during last year said: "The many hundreds of people who have been given help as shown by the report will certainly feel the truth of the window display in the Porteous & Mitchell Co.'s window and there is no doubt but that they consider the Salvation Army lassie an angel of light as she enters their home."

During the past twelve months the aggregate number of service contacts amounted to 29,495. Four hundred and fifty one families have been helped in various ways as follows: 71 families with groceries, 5 families with coal, 6 families with furniture, 180 with shoes, 141 with clothing and 48 with Christmas dinner baskets. In additional to the family relief work the local Salvation Army has been called upon to render a considerable service in caring for the needs of homeless men and sometimes women. In this branch of their work they have been able to help 256 persons with meals, 144 persons with lodgings, 50 individuals with clothing and one special case with transportation. In addition to the above 125 poor boys and girls were cared for last Christmas with toys, candy and other good things to make their Christmas a cheerful one.

A large part of the captain's time was spent in visiting the poor and needy and the report shows 357 hours were spent last year in this work in which time the captain and his wife visited 1450 families and made ten visits to the hospital. A great number of people were reached and cheered in their time of sickness and sorrow many of whom are the very poorest of the community. Although the captain has spent very busy days caring for the needs of the poor and suffering and furnishing material aid he found time, as the report shows, to conduct over 900 religious services during the year some of which are conducted on the street corner and the others in the meeting hall at 10 Cliff street. Practically every night in the week there is a service being conducted either in the interest of the boys and girls or for the adults. The records show the aggregate attendance at all inside services amounts to 9719 and the estimated aggregate attendance at the outside services is over 10,000 making a grand total of all services conducted of over 20,000 people.

L. M. Crandall who was the chairman of the 1927 campaign remarked when looking over the above report: "Certainly the Salvation Army has accomplished a great deal in our community with the amount of money the kind friends of Norwich contributed to its maintenance fund. It is gratifying to me, and I am sure to every individual who worked on the last campaign, I sincerely hope the kind friends in Norwich will respond promptly and even more generously than they did last year when I had the pleasure of serving this community as chairman of the Salvation Army appeal."

Perfect refrigeration is such a comfort!

Planning menus, marketing, entertaining—these three duties of the home-maker are vastly simplified when she has a General Electric Refrigerator.

And more important is the pleasant feeling of security—the absolute knowledge that her family's food is always fresh and wholesome. Even in winter, scientifically correct refrigeration is vital. Kitchens are warm all the year round, and food, to be wholesome—to be safe to eat, needs to be kept constantly at a temperature below 50 degrees.

The General Electric Refrigerator is different from all others—it is truly "years ahead" in design. All its mechanism is sealed in an air-tight steel casing, which is up on top, forever safe from dust and difficulties. It never even needs oiling.

The General Electric Refrigerator is guaranteed to give you perfect refrigeration—quietly, automatically and economically! Come in and see this most modern of all refrigerators. You may buy yours either for cash or on deferred payments.

43,000,000 MEN AND WOMEN QUALIFIED TO VOTE NOV. 6

An Increase of 14,000,000 Over the Vote Cast in 1924—With the Tremendous Increase in the Number of Women Qualifying, Political Leaders and State Officials Agree That the Women Will Hold the Balance of Power—For 1928 Connecticut Shows Registration of 623,973, Against 400,295 in 1924.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28—(AP)—Forty-three million men and women, by far the largest number ever registered, have qualified to participate in the battle of ballots at the presidential election on Nov. 6.

The total marks an increase of nearly 14,000,000 over the vote cast in 1924 and makes the figures of former years appear small in comparison.

From coast to coast and from the Canadian border to the Rio Grande, statistics gathered by the Associated Press tell the same story—that of unprecedented determination of voters of both sexes to participate actively in the contest of 1928.

All of those entitled to vote will not do so, however, for a study of the vote of other elections has shown a considerable percentage not exercising their privilege. A conservative estimate based on other years would indicate the stay-at-home vote at 15 per cent. The estimated increase in actual votes cast nevertheless would be about six and one-half million over 1924. This would make the estimated vote more than 35,500,000, compared with 29,091,417 four years ago.

One of the surprising results noted in the 1928 tabulation is the tremendous increase in the number of qualifying women voters. Political leaders and state officials generally agree that the women will hold the balance of power. Every state has shown a startling jump in the female registration. It has been impossible to ascertain the total number of women entitled to vote but, based on the known segregation of registration, it is estimated that in the larger cities women will cast between 35 and 45 per cent of the total vote. The percentage probably will be smaller in towns and rural sections.

Registration by States

Following is the registration by states, compared with the vote in 1924:

Statement by Clerk of House

William Tyler Page, clerk of the house of representatives, who for many years has made a close study of election figures, estimates that the potential number of voters "may not exceed 45,000,000" and that the totals vote will be about 38,000,000. In a statement prepared for the Associated Press, he says:

"The total number of votes cast in 1924 was 29,091,417. The number of citizens of voting age in the United States, according to the census of 1920 was 54,421,832. No doubt the number today is much greater, but this does not determine the number of persons entitled to vote. Registration and other qualifications in the various states are prerequisites to voting.

"The figures showing the total number of registered persons in the United States are not available. After eliminating all persons 21 years of age and over who are disqualified for one reason or another, the potential number of voters may not exceed 45,000,000.

"There are no bases upon which the number can be computed with any degree of accuracy. The age basis is inaccurate and in the absence of a grand total of registered persons any discrepancy between the number of those voting and those not voting is conjectural.

"Reports throughout the country of greatly increased registration indicate a total vote at this year's election of 38,000,000."

Estimates Poll of 37,000,000

Simon Michelet, president of the National Get-Out-The-Vote club of Washington estimates a popular poll of 37,000,000. He believes the women's vote will be about 4,000,000 more than in 1924.

There are a number of reasons for the marked increase in registration. The injection of the prohibition and religious issues into the campaign accounts for a large part. The radio undoubtedly has also contributed, due to the greatly increased use of the air route by political orators to reach the electorate. Treasurer Gerard, of the democratic national committee, recently estimated the democrats had spent $500,000 on radio. The republicans also have spent huge sums.

Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the republican national committee, attributes the increase largely to women.

John J. Raskob, chairman of the democratic national committee, says it is "most important to the future well being of our country to note the increase."

The "solid south," which is experiencing the thrills of a vigorous presidential campaign for the first time in years, has qualified more voters than ever before. Registration in the southern states is different than that which prevails in other sections of the country. South Carolina, for instance, has a re-registration every ten years. In most of the south, once the voter is registered the registration holds good as long as he plays his poll tax. Payment of the poll tax, however, is not always a fair criterion to measure the registration and the voting. In Arkansas, 245,687 persons paid a poll tax in 1924. Yet the total vote cast for president was only 138,532.

Texas Watched Closely

Texas, which is being watched closely by both republicans and democrats this year, has no registration of voters. Governor Moody estimates the voting strength at 1,500,000 but expects a vote of only 800,000, based on past experience. The poll tax receipts issued in 1924 were 1,195,239.

In New Mexico, the first real registration in its history has been put into effect this year and the lists are being purged in keeping with the provisions of the new election code.

New York, the home state of the democratic presidential nominee, which is the scene of an intense battle for the prize of 45 electoral votes, has shown an enormous jump in registration. Both major political parties are claiming the benefit of the increase. The total "up-state" potential vote in the Empire state, which is normally republican, is about 19 per cent over the 1924 figures. In the City of New York, a consistent democratic stronghold, the registration leaped from 1,600,113 in 1924 to 2,028,654 this year, an increase of over 34 per cent.

Monarch Home State

California, the home state of the republican standard bearer, also has shown a substantial climb. The vote of four years ago was 1,331,776 and the 1928 registration is 2,313,816. The registration there is now divided as follows:

Republican	1,525,751
Democratic	592,761
Prohibition	17,746
Socialist	12,872
Declining to state	164,959
Miscellaneous	1,327

Pennsylvania, bulwark of republicanism for generations, which was visited Saturday by a democratic presidential nominee for the first time in years, has kept company with other populous states in the east in the steady upward registration trend. The 1928 figures are 3,943,000, compared with the vote four years ago of 2,144,853. Philadelphia has registered this year 824,046 men and 206,453 women compared with the vote of 338,579 males and 141,743 females in 1924.

The following table showing this year's registration by sexes in other large cities furnishes food for thought for the politically-minded:

City	Men	Women
St. Louis	204,789	157,076
St. Paul	81,013	68,992
Baltimore	188,168	139,119
Portland, O.	77,742	67,317
Duluth	26,396	23,244

Chicago shows a registration this year of 1,386,531, compared with the vote of 1,064,998 four years ago.

So-Called Foreign Vote

The so-called foreign vote, center of conflicting claims by the rival major parties, will be the largest in history, according to the foreign language information service of New York city, which has completed a survey of 883 publications printed in sixteen languages. The total number estimated is 7,500,000, compared with 6,200,000 in 1920.

In some states, notably New Jersey and New York, there have been charges of fraudulent registration. Boards of election have thrown out many thousands of alleged illegal registrants, with the possibility that the list will be further reduced before election day.

While the huge registration is being acclaimed on all sides, there is a fly in the ointment in that it is well within the realm of probability that the final result will be late. In the event of a close election the public may have to wait a full day until election boards can tabulate the enormous floods of ballots. In New York city, hundreds of new polling places have been created and provisions have been made to allow those standing in line to register their votes if they are unable to enter the polling places before the closing hour, 9 p. m.

MRS. CONSTANCE WILLIAMS TO SUPPORT GOV. SMITH

BOSTON, Oct. 28—(AP)—U. S. Senator David I. Walsh, democratic nominee for re-election tonight made public a letter sent to him by Mrs. Constance Williams, of Hamilton, daughter of the late republican senator, Henry Cabot Lodge, in which she announced her support of his candidacy and that of Gov. Smith for president.

Mrs. Williams said in her letter that she had signed the nomination papers of B. Loring Young, Senator Walsh's republican opponent, "under a total misapprehension of his public record."

AIRPLANE FORCED DOWN NEAR ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 28—(AP)—The airplane piloted by Captain William N. Lancaster which left Port Washington, N. Y., for Hampton Roads, Va., today, made a forced landing near Atlantic City, N. J., naval officers here were advised.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

BRUSSELS, Oct. 28—(AP)—The newspaper Soir says today that it is reported the engagement of Prince Olaf of Norway, and Princess Martha of Sweden, sister of Princess Astrid, wife of the Belgian crown prince, will be announced shortly.

PEKING, China, Oct. 28—(AP)—Chinese reports from Fenchow, 50 miles southwest of Taiyuanfu in the province of Shansi, say that 3,000 persons have died of a plague in 20 towns of the vicinity. The situation was said to be serious with the disease out of control.

FIVE MURDERERS FEASTED AT OHIO PENITENTIARY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 28—(AP)—Five murderers for whom death is but a matter of days feasted at the Ohio penitentiary today with John Sabo, of Akron, the "kid of murderers' row" on the occasion of his twenty-first birthday.

Gleaming electric lights dispelled the drabness that seeped in from the dismal day outside the prison walls. Under the lights the five companions gathered with the condemned Sabo around a well laden table and there indulged in the philosophic thought, "our happiness comes in fleeting moments such as these, so why prolong the years?"

The last of Sabo's money—$30 in the penitentiary treasury—was used to purchase the banquet food. He said he wanted to give his fellow condemned a little bit of happiness before they go to the electric chair.

Sabo was the gayest of the six and his smile was augmented by a brilliant necktie. This youth, who was convicted of killing an Akron man heaped upon his guests, a menu of chicken, noodles, sweet potatoes, biscuits, yellow and brown gravy, stuffed peppers, pear salad, mashed potatoes, apple pie ala mode, candy, coffee, lemonade and cigars, and last of all, huge slices of birthday cake with twenty-one candles.

At Sabo's right was Stanley Hoppe, of Toledo, who must die Friday for the slaying of a seven year old girl.

Across the table was Everett Koon, miner, who is to die November 5 for the murder of a man at Marion.

Three Negroes sat at Sabo's left. One was John Bradshaw, charged with the murder of a Columbus woman; the second was Joseph Weaver, sentenced for the slaying of a Cleveland watchman; the third was John Rucker, charged with the murder of a man at Cincinnati during an attempted holdup.

The dinner and cake were prepared by "Mother" Thomas, wife of the warden, aided by two prison chefs.

SENTENCED FOR DROWNING HIS ILLEGITIMATE SON

TOULOUSE, France, Oct. 28—(AP)—Count Pierre Marie Raymond de Crouzet Rayeac has been sentenced to serve ten years in prison for throwing his illegitimate son, 17-months old, into a canal. He was convicted on a plea of guilty and sentence was passed on him yesterday.

The mother of the child was a housemaid employed by the count's mother and because of the sociological aspects of the case, the trial attracted immense crowds. The majority of the people who surrounded the court clamored for the death sentence, loudly demanding that the count be sent to the guillotine.

A plea of insanity was advanced by the defense and in his testimony the count said:

"I lost control of myself, and acting like an automaton, committed the frightful crime."

Alienists summoned by the court testified that the murderer was perfectly lucid and entirely aware of the nature of his act. The murder occurred January 12 last. The body was discovered the next day and the count at once admitted his guilt.

FATALLY INJURED WHILE RETURNING FROM A DANCE

DANBURY, Oct. 28—(AP)—Evelyn McDonald, 16, of this town, was fatally injured early this morning, at Brookfield Center, while returning from a dance, with six other persons. A car, operated by Harold E. Richardson, of Danbury, skidded on the wet pavement and crashed into a tree. The girl, who was sitting in the rear seat, was not thrown out, and just the manner in which she struck her head against the tree fracturing the skull, is unknown. The state police investigating the crash believe that in some way at the time of the striking of the tree, her head violently hit it also. She was taken to the Danbury hospital, where she died two hours later. The driver of the machine was held by the police, charged with reckless driving.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA REPUBLIC

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 28—(AP)—One hundred cannon thundered forth today from the Prague garrison to announce the tenth birthday of the Czechoslovakian Republic which Woodrow Wilson helped bring into the family of nations on October 28, 1918. Simultaneously a great marble monument to the author of the historic fourteen points facing the main railway station which also bears Wilson's name was decorated with wreaths as the Czech National flag waved beside the Stars and Stripes.

Throughout this week of celebrating the United States and American visitors will come in for particular honors. Czechoslovakians have not forgotten that it was on American soil that the independence of their country was first declared by the now president T. G. Masaryk.

PROTEST SHUTTING OFF RADIO DURING GOV. SMITH'S SPEECH

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—General Henry T. Allen, chairman of the National democratic veterans bureau, today reported that war veteran patients in Edward Hines, Jr., hospital, Maywood, Ill., and at the National Home For Disabled Soldiers in Wisconsin, had protested to him against the shutting off of hospital radios during the broadcasting of Governor Smith's campaign speeches.

One patient at the Illinois hospital wrote, the general said, that "when Governor Smith mentioned the veterans bureau in his speech at Chicago, the radio was promptly silenced by the hospital operator until the governor had disposed of that subject."

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENT FATAL TO GIRL STUDENT

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 28—(AP)—Rose May Bawsoti, 15, of Genoa, a business school student was killed instantly today and Frank Gadsby, 41, an uncle, of Auburn, perhaps fatally injured when a Lehigh Valley passenger train struck their automobile at a state road crossing in Fleming.

No "Sham Battle" On Dry Law, Smith Says

Declares That if Elected He Will Take the Matter to the American People.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The throttle to the already rapidly moving campaign machinery will be opened a notch wider tomorrow by Governor Alfred E. Smith who will crowd four formal addresses into the last lap of his drive for the presidency.

This number is greater than he has yet attempted by the democratic standard bearer within the same [illegible] and in these speeches, all [illegible] will be carried to all corners [illegible] nation by radio, he will make final appeals to the American people.

The governor, who for weeks has been on the road on a tour which carried him as far west as the rockies, has selected as his final battle ground territory which has been solidly republican since 1916. It embraces the states of Maryland, New Jersey and his home state of New York, and in this section where the opposition party has held a whip hand for years he will preach a democratic gospel until almost the hour when the voters start for the polls.

The three states have a total electoral vote of 67. Of this number, Maryland's eight were found in the democratic column for Wilson in 1916. The 45 held by New York and the 14 credited to New Jersey, however, have been steadfastly in the opposition camp since the split in republican ranks which swept the democrats into power 16 years ago.

The governor, who today was resting at the home of John J. Raskob, chairman of the democratic national committee, at Claymont 11 miles from here, will start his final drive by invading Maryland. He has arranged to leave Wilmington in his special train at 1.15 p. m. This will put him in Baltimore an hour and 45 minutes later.

The program in the Maryland city calls for an hour's parade which will start from Mt. Royal station and carry the nominee through the business district.

After this he will rest at the Hotel Belvedere preceding his address which will be delivered in the same auditorium where Woodrow Wilson was nominated on the first successful democratic ticket since the days of Grover Cleveland.

From Baltimore, the nominee will return to New York. Here after a day's rest his schedule calls for an address in Newark, New Jersey, one of the cities invaded by Herbert Hoover, his rival for the presidency, in his drive for the Atlantic seaboard states.

The other two speeches by the democratic candidate will be made on home territory, one in Brooklyn and the other in New York city.

The speech in New York will be on Saturday night at Madison Square Garden, where Hoover's voice also has been heard in the present campaign. Beyond this no plans have been announced for the governor, although it is possible he may spent election eve in a tour of New York's East Side.

The drive which the democratic nominee will close this week is the last half of what he has described as the "Battle of the Atlantic Seaboard." This fight, as he has put it, started last Wednesday when he headed a democratic invasion into Massachusetts, a normal bulwark of republican strength.

There as in the state of Rhode Island and Connecticut, he was the center of cheering throngs, and last night in Philadelphia, another stronghold of the opposition was cheered and cheered until he declared that although the chairman of the meeting had said something about "Republican Philadelphia," he was unable to distinguish it.

In the Pennsylvania city the new chieftain of democracy tore into his republican enemies and accused them of attempting to spread the word that if he were elected he would be unable to accomplish the things for which he fought.

In replying to the statement by Charles E. Hughes that he was fighting a "sham" battle on prohibition, the nominee said he had been told in New York state he never would accomplish his ends and answered by referring to his records.

"If I am elected president, I shall take this matter to the American people," he declared.

In Boston, the governor met Mr. Hoover's charge that his views on water power, prohibition and farm relief constituted state socialism by declaring that if he were a socialist, Mr. Hughes, Vice President Dawes, Frank O. Lowden and other prominent republicans also belonged to the socialist party, as they, on one of the subjects or the other, had expressed views similar to his.

Graf Zeppelin Has Started Return Flight

The Airship Left Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., at 1.54 A. M. Today.

NAVAL AIR STATION, Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 29—(AP)—(Monday)—At 1.25 o'clock this morning the Graf Zeppelin started moving slowly from the hangar here to begin the return flight to Germany.

At 1.35 the dirigible had cleared the hangar and all danger of tearing on the steel walls was past.

The passengers crowded against the cabin windows, their faces pale blots against the ship's silver flanks.

Shortly before midnight Joseph D. Jessel, New York dress manufacturer, was injured when his automobile went over a bank as he was coming to take passage on the airship. He was treated for abrasions of his face and continued on here, ready to leave if the ship could be walked out.

A last minute addition to the paying passenger list was William Ullman, son of Jessel's partner.

The midnight revised passenger list did not mention the name of Lady Grace Drummond Hay, journalist who came from Germany in the airship and who had been expected to make the return trip.

Started at 1.54 A. M.

NAVAL AIR STATION, Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 29—(AP)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin took off on its return flight to Germany at 1.54 a. m., today.

Dragged, tail first, from the hangar at 1.35 the greatest of all airships lifted easily into a moonlight night and was soon but a vanishing smudge against the stars.

On the trip started this morning it was expected to follow the northern great circle course and with the aid of favoring winds to complete the flight in about 50 hours.

SEVEN PERSONS WERE KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING

HANOVER, Maryland, Oct. 28—(AP)—Seven persons were killed here late this afternoon when their automobile was struck and demolished by a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train.

Those killed were Emil Ashman, 47, Mildred Ashman, 18, his wife, Baby Ashman; Mrs. Mamie Kirby, Mrs. Ashman's mother; Mrs. Sallie Kirby, Mrs. Kirby's mother-in-law; Mrs. Mary Shriver, 25, and Catharene Shriver, 22 months old.

Henry T. Snyder, of Baltimore, engineer of the Washington Express which struck the automobile which was stalled at the crossing, said that he saw the car when he was about 50 feet from it, and that he applied his brakes but could not stop.

Mrs. Shriver and her baby were caught on the pilot of the locomotive as was the gasoline tank of the demolished car. The gasoline burst into flames and burned the woman and her child almost beyond recognition.

Three of the others were thrown clear of the automobile. The remaining two were pinned in the wreckage and were burned when it also burst into flames.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28—(AP)—The famous Guadalupe shrine was visited today by more than 200,000 Roman Catholics from towns in the federal district and neighboring states to commemorate "the feast of Jesus Christ, the king."

COLLEGE STUDENT KILLED MEN FOR THRILL IN SPECTACULAR HOLD-UPS

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 28—(AP)—George Harsh, youthful college sophomore who admitted to police he killed two men "for a thrill" during a series of spectacular holdups, and his alleged confederate, Richard Gray Gallogly, 18 year old freshman, today were held incommunicado in the city jail. Police announced evidence in the case probably would be submitted to the Fulton county grand jury Tuesday.

Gallogly, whom Harsh implicated in his confession to police detailing the series of holdups, was returned here today from Athens, Ga., where he was arrested yesterday. The youths were not permitted to talk to each other.

While Harsh, according to A. Lamar Poole, chief of detectives, has made a "full, honest and truthful confession," in which he took full blame for the killings, and declared Gallogly was the driver of the car they used for the holdups, counsel has warned the youths not to talk further, and police declined to permit them to be interviewed.

Additional evidence to substantiate Harsh's confession was obtained today, Chief Poole said, when a .45 calibre automatic pistol police say he used in the slayings was found at his home. A similar automatic was taken from Gallogly's car at Athens when he was arrested.

While Harsh was still telling police details of the series of holdups, county authorities set in motion legal machinery to obtain an early indictment. The solicitor general's office announced the grand jury would be requested to return true bills against the two youths charging robbery of seven or more business establishments, in addition to murder indictments for the slaying of E. S. Meeks a grocery clerk, and Willard Smith, manager of a suburban drug store.

The youths, who were students at Oglethorpe university here, are members of wealthy and prominent families. Harsh, the son of the late George Harsh, wealthy shoe manufacturer of Milwaukee, Wis., made his home with a sister, Mrs. J. S. Dicoway, wife of a broker. His mother was expected here tonight. Gallogly is the stepson of Dr. Worth E. Yankey, a prominent physician and is a member of an old family here.

Harsh's alleged confession stated the series of robberies which resulted in a pair of murders, was committed for a "thrill" and that both he and Gallogly were under the influence of liquor when the holdups were staged, police said.

The series of holdups covered by the confession extended over a period of less than three weeks, beginning on Oct. 5 when the pair robbed a drug store and a coffee shop, both in the vicinity of Emory university.

Other robberies were staged the following night, and on this occasion the first of the two murders was committed. Two drug stores and a barber shop were successfully held up before the pair entered a grocery store where they met with resistance from L. V. Ellis, manager, and Meeks. Opening fire in making his escape, Harsh shot both men, wounding Meeks fatally, the confession said.

Ceasing their activities for more than a week, while police sought Roy Dickerson, an escaped bandit, as a suspect in the series of robberies, Harsh and Gallogly sough "new thrills" on the night of Oct. 16. This time they entered the drug store managed by Smith, and again met resistance from both the manager and his assistant. Though mortally wounded, the manager opened fire and before Harsh made his getaway he received a hip wound.

It was that wound which led to capture of the pair. The trousers which Harsh wore on this last venture were sent to a cleaner where police found them, blood smeared and with a bullet hole in the hip.

With this evidence Harsh was arrested and after denying all knowledge of the series of crimes, finally made the "complete confession" announced yesterday by the police.

HOOVER IS NOT CONCERNED OVER OUTCOME IN NEBRASKA

The Republican Presidential Nominee's Decision to Eliminate Nebraska From His Itinerary Has Caused Surprise in Some Political Circles—Changes Made in Schedule of Mr. Hoover's Western Trip.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover has added another speech to the itinerary of his trip across the country to California to vote. It will be delivered at Pueblo Colorado, on the night of November 3.

This has involved an entire change of schedule from St. Louis to Ogden, Utah, a change which will take the republican presidential candidate directly across Missouri and Kansas, through Colorado and to Salt Lake City, en route to Ogden.

The address at Pueblo, the home city of Dr. Hubert Work chairman of the republican national committee, will be delivered in the public square near the railroad station and will be broadcast to the mountain states. It will be his only speech in those states during the campaign and will be of less than half an hour's duration.

The Salt Lake City stop will be for 15 minutes only during which Hoover will greet Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, and other republican leaders there. The Utah leaders probably will accompany the candidate to Ogden, where there will be a half hour halt while the special train is being switched over to another railroad line for the run to Palo Alto.

Under the first schedule announced several days ago, the nominee would have returned through Nebraska, Wyoming and a part of Utah. It was explained at his headquarters today that the change had been made because the candidate went through those states on his first trans-continental trip and because there had been considerable demand that Hoover visit Colorado.

The decision to eliminate Nebraska caused some surprise in political circles here because that is the home state of Senator George W. Norris, republican independent, who last night at Omaha advocated the election of the democratic presidential candidate.

At Hoover headquarters it was said that no concern was felt as to the outcome in Nebraska and also that the change of itinerary to carry Hoover into Colorado did not mean that there was any apprehension about the result in that state.

After stopping at Cumberland, Maryland, and Louisville Ky., the nominee to make speeches there, the Hoover special will reach St. Louis about 7.30 p. m., next Friday and the republican standard bearer will begin speaking at the coliseum at 8.30 p. m. His address will be carried to the country over a nation-wide radio hook-up and will consume about an hour.

Leaving St. Louis at 11 p. m., the special will cross Missouri during the night and reach Pueblo at 7 p. m. Nov. 3.

Arriving at Oakland, Calif., about 12.45 a. m., Nov. 5 the train will skirt San Francisco, proceeding to Palo Alto over the Dumbarton bridge arriving at 1.30 p. m.

Hoover will go directly to his home on the Stanford University campus and late in the afternoon, probably at 5 p. m., he will make his last appeal to the voters from his study speaking into a microphone and with his voice carried from one end of the nation to the other by a national broadcast chain.

CHICAGO GANGSTER WAS KILLED BY POLICEMEN

CHICAGO, Oct. 28—(AP)—George Kosteneck, 35, alleged beer runner, and gangster, was killed by police today when they interrupted what they thought was a robbery. Later, however, police said, that Kosteneck was "on business" for Joe Saitis, leader of one of the factions fighting for control of the south side beer distribution.

A police squad driving past a soft drink parlor noticed the door was open and stopped to investigate. Detective Thomas Curtin entered the place and found Kosteneck threatening the bartender and eight customers, including a park policeman in uniform, with a sawed-off shotgun.

Curtin entered Kosteneck's office and a quarter adult members of the party wearing black shirts as well as the junior fascist organizations.

Mussolini in his message addressed to the fascist of all Italy said "the eighth year of the fascist revolution has come to an active end with imposing works destined to remain in this age as a demonstration of our fidelity, our strength and our work. Two thousand eight hundred and two public works have been inaugurated in order to celebrate by deeds and in silence the great enterprise which in October, 1922 liberated the Italian people and created a new regime in Italy and in the world.

"These works are 566 roadways, 337 school buildings, 399 waterworks, 45 improvements, 63 naval constructions, 79 sanitary works, 371 public buildings, 860 other undertakings and a number of other works of less importance. The simple list of figures stands clearcut apart from all outcry either at home or beyond the frontiers. Behind these figures are the hands, the money, the life and the well-being of the fascist people.

MAN KILLED AND STATUE OF EMILE COMBES DEFACED

ROCHEFORT, France, Oct. 28—(AP)—One man was killed and two wounded today when police broke up a demonstration against the unveiling of a monument to the late Premier Emile Combes. Before the combatants had been separated the nose, chin and ear of the statue had been smashed with hammers.

Edouard Herriot, minister of public instruction and of fine arts, had just concluded a eulogy on te premier of France during the troubled years from 1902 to 1905 which saw the expulsion of the "teaching congregations" and the passage of the law generally known as the separation of the churches and state. The demonstrators broke through the strong police lines and began their assault on the statue.

Supporters of the principles of Combes met them and a free-for-all fight began. The police after firing several shots in the air took more direct aim. Jean Guirand, a naccountant, was killed by a bullet through his heart and two others were shot. Ten persons were arrested.

Today's demonstration follows the recent decision of the government to incorporate in the 1929 budget two articles for the recognition of certain religious groups and to provide for the restitution of property confiscated under the Combes regime.

POLICEMAN SHOT DEAD IN ATTEMPT AT ARREST

DETROIT, Oct. 28—(AP)—Clarence J. Hans, 27, professional swimmer and a local patrolman, was shot to death here tonight when he attempted to arrest Therman Hoover, 45, who went on a rampage with a gun after a quarrel with his wife.

Locked out of his home, Hoover shot out the door panels with an automatic shotgun, seriously wounding his step daughter, Marguerite Smith 16, and his own daughter, Virginia May Hoover, 4.

Hans arrived as Hoover was crashing through the door and was killed during an exchange of shots. Hoover then fired the last shell in his gun at Mrs. Hoover, who was fleeing from the house with the two wounded girls and two other daughters, but missed. A crowd of neighbors attracted by the shooting overpowered Hoover and he was taken to a nearby police station.

SIGHTED AIRPLANE 185 MILES NORTHWEST BERMUDA

SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE "MARCH ON ROME"

ROME, Oct. 28—(AP)—With deeds and not words, as exhorted by Premier Mussolini, all Italy today celebrated the sixth anniversary of the "March on Rome" which brought the fascist party to power. The deeds were the inauguration of nearly 3,000 important public works. The only words were a brief message from the premier outlining these undertakings and calling for general support.

Mussolini himself opened the motor road between Rome and the bathing resort of Ostia. His message was read to the Roman militia after they had passed in review by the secretary of the fascist party. Similar brief ceremonies were held in every province and were attended by the million and

"Today's demonstration follows the recent decision of the government to incorporate in the 1929 budget two articles for the recognition of certain religious groups and to provide for the restitution of property confiscated under the Combes regime.

FIVE ICE MANUFACTURING COMPANIES ARE MERGED

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—Five ice manufacturing companies, four in New England and one in New York, have been merged under one control, it was announced today, to form what was said to be the third largest ice company in the United States. The new unit, organized under the laws of Massachusetts will be known as the National Service companies.

The five companies involved in the merger are: Metropolitan Ice company of Somerville, Mass.; New England Cities Ice Companies, a holding company; Rhode Island Ice company of Providence; Southern New England Ice company of Boston, and Hartford, Conn., and Westchester Service corporation, Yonkers, N. Y. Their combined ice sales last year totaled 1,375,[illegible] tons, and coal sales amounted to 111,[illegible]370.

Properties include 27 modern artificial ice plants with daily capacity of 1,855 tons; natural ice reserves with storage facilities sufficient to provide for an annual harvest of 1,365,000 tons, more than 50 centrally located ice delivery stations and 11 yards for rail distribution of coal.

PROMISE OF EFFECTIVE TREATMENT FOR PARESIS

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 28—(AP)—A new discovery in the field of mental diseases which physicians termed important has been announced by University of Wisconsin scientists in connection with a meeting of the Central Neuropsychiatric association.

It was "drug 115" which they said held high promise for effective treatment of paresis of the central nervous system. It was developed by Dr. A. S. Lovenhart, pharmacologist, and Dr. W. P. Lorenz, psychiatrist, in the state school laboratories.

"Drug 115" is the same preparation now being tested in Africa by Dr. Warren Stratman-Thomas, also of the University of Wisconsin, as a cure for African sleeping sickness. Dr. Stratman-Thomas cabled reports of initial successes in administration of the drug coincident with the discovery by the two doctors who worked with him that it would gradually cure paresis.

A woman to whom the drug had been administered was brought before the convention and the mental physical specialists were told that she was suffering, when she entered the hospital, from such delusions as a desire to burn her home, the belief that she was the only pure spirit in the world.

NO CONGESTION EXPECTED AT POLLS NEXT WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 29—Windham will stand by the voting machines and the customary polling hours of from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. for the elections on Tuesday, November 6, it was stated today by town officials. This means that six voting machines will have to accommodate 6,543 voters on the increased list of 1928. No trouble is expected, however, if the electors abide by the slogan to "vote early." It is believed that at least 5,000 votes will be cast on the sixth. The six voting machines will be placed as follows: One in the first district; two in the second, one in the third and two in the fourth. The second and four districts always register the heaviest balloting in state and national elections.

Disposal of the continued case of George L. Shepaum of this city, charged with evasion of responsibility after an accident, was made in police court Saturday morning when the accused was found not guilty and the case discharged. Testimony was to the effect that several weeks ago Shepaum was driving a car on Windham road and the machine struck and injured John D. Prince, resident of the thoroughfare. State witnesses were John Prince, Daniel A. Maine and Mrs. Maine of 400 Windham road and Sergeant Grant Sombria of the police department. After the accident, it was testified, Shepaum asked Mr. Prince where he wished to be taken and the latter indicated the home of Dr. Charles A. Jenkins, nearly opposite the Maine residence. Mr. Prince got out of the car and walked into the Maine home. Mrs. Maine called Dr. Jenkins who ordered the man taken to St. Joseph's hospital. Mrs. Maine testified that Mr. Prince was badly cut and was alone when he came into the house. Shepaum testified on his own behalf that he was proceeding at a slow rate of speed at the time he struck the man. He said that before leaving Mr. Prince he told him that if there was anything further he could do for him he, witness, could be found at his place of business. Prince said that he was dazed by the impact and could remember but little of the mishap. A statement signed by him was read by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Frank P. Fenton.

Later in the day Prince instituted civil proceedings against George L. Shepaum and his wife, claiming damages of $6,000. Property in the name of the defendant and his wife on South Park street was attached by Constable Ralph J. Lussier and the case is returnable before the Windham county superior court the first Tuesday in December. The accident occurred on October 10.

OBITUARY

Miss Ellen Keating

Miss Ellen Keating for many years a resident of this city, died at her home, 30 Manners avenue this morning at 6:45 o'clock. She was the daughter of the late John and Bridget Connolly Keating. Surviving her are, three nieces, the Misses Mildred and Gertrude Smith of this city and Mrs. Carl Carney of Bradenton, Fla.; one nephew, John Keating of Bradenton and a cousin, Miss Mary Anna Keating of this city. The deceased was a devoted member of St. Joseph's church.

The organization of the subscribers to stock in the metal screen manufacturing plant that is to locate here, is to be made at a meeting of the subscribers to be held in the chamber of commerce rooms Monday afternoon, with the inventor of the product present. Matters of business to come up at this meeting will include the preparation of papers for incorporation naming the two directors who will represent the local stockholders upon the board and deciding on the name of the new company. It will take six weeks for the machine buildings to complete for the machine builders to complete the special type of machine necessary for manufacturing the new product. Requests for territorial sales franchises are already being made and within four months from the time of starting operations it is indicated that a sales force of at least 50 persons will be in the soliciting field.

Arthur Cyr of 251 Main street, was arrested about 11 o'clock Saturday night on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, by Constable William D. Kelley. The arrest was made on the North Windham road in the vicinity of the country club grounds. Cyr was released until Monday morning under bonds of $200 furnished by Max Brettschneider.

Five speakers of note are to discuss the issues of the campaign at the big republican rally to be held in the town hall Monday evening at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the Windham Republican club. Mrs. Henry A. Farnam of New Haven, a native of Belgium, who was in that torn country during the trying days of the World war and the months of post-war reparations, will extoll the merits of Herbert Hoover from a humanitarian standpoint. Mrs. Farnam is the wife of an American and is now a citizen of this country. The other speakers will be Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of Maine; Ernest E. Rogers of New London, candidate for lieutenant-governor; George H. Cohen of Hartford, assistant U. S. district attorney and Mrs. Alice P. Merritt of Hartford, a member of the Connecticut state senate. The B. P. O. Elks band, C. N. C. Wheeler, director, will be on hand to provide music and will stage a concert on Lincoln square from 7:15 to 7:45 o'clock. Another entertainment will be provided by the Hoover Girls of New Britain, who have been singing campaign songs and otherwise entertaining all over the country, including Madison Square Garden, New York.

Funeral services for Charles R. Buell were held at the late home in Columbia this afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. Mr. Howell officiated. Burial was in the West street cemetery, Columbia. Arrangements were in charge of Avery and Van Zandt.

Michael Kley, manager of the immigrant service and citizenship bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company will deliver an address on The New Immigration and the Old World at the regular meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club to be held Monday noon, instead of Tuesday at the Nathan Hale hotel.

The 90-ton boulder, with a height of nine feet and diameter of ten feet has been moved a distance of 75 feet to the desired location on the old training grounds at South Coventry and is now ready for the installation of the memorial tablet. The relocation of the boulder was accomplished by a hydraulic engine and derrick. The Men's club of South Coventry has voted to defray the expense of $300 for this work. The bronze tablet will contain an inscription of the date of relocation, history of the old training grounds and of men of the part that residents of Coventry have taken in various conflicts under the Stars and Stripes. The Spanish-American war field piece given to the town some time ago by the war department is to be assembled and placed alongside the boulder, completing a most unique and effective war memorial on the historic grounds. The preparation of the boulder was in charge of a committee of the Coventry Men's club with Royal M. Rose, chairman.

FRENCH-AMER. REPUBLICANS HOLD ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 28—A highly enthusiastic luncheon and rally of some 125 workers and guests was held at the Nathan Hale hotel at 1 o'clock this afternoon under the auspices of the Windham County French American Republican club association. The speakers introduced by Attorney Harry S. Gaucher of this city, chairman of the meeting, were: George H. Cohen of Hartford, assistant U. S. district attorney; Dr. William L. Higgins of South Coventry, candidate for secretary of state on the republican ticket; Richard P. Freeman of New London, candidate for re-election to congress from this district; Alfred Walcott, of Norfolk, candidate for U. S. senator and Philippe Erard, prominent French-American orator and former public office holder of Springfield, Mass.

Prior to the luncheon the workers and guests were introduced to a receiving line including: Mayor Charles A. Gates of this city, A. Linn Weatherhead and Charles B. Pomeroy also of this city, candidates for representatives; Andrew T. J. Clarke of Canterbury candidate for senator; William S. Hunter of Killingly, candidate for representative; Dr. William L. Higgins of South Coventry; Senator Walter C. Brown of Ashford; Richard P. Freeman of New London and Fred Walcott of Norfolk.

District Attorney Cohen was the first speaker. He touched mainly on the subject of prosperity, asking his hearers to assure themselves that prosperity under republican administration was not a "myth" by establishing a comparison of the general conditions of this country and others of the world. He credited this prosperity to economical administration and the protective tariff and warned against a democratic change in this tariff and in our immigration laws. He concluded by extolling the wide experience of Herbert Hoover. Chairman Gaucher then briefly reviewed the history and designated the purposes of the French American Republican Club association of which ex-Senator Urgele A. LaFrance of Plainfield is now state chairman.

Dr. William L. Higgins reviewed progress made in Connecticut by the republican administrations. He spoke of Lafayette in connection with the sympathetic cooperation that has always existed between the French-speaking people and the United States. He gave figures to show the tremendous financial improvement of this state since 1915 when Governor Holcomb took office and at which time the financial condition of the state was deplorable, according to the speaker. "Connecticut now leads all other states in the matter of state institutions," he said and then mentioned the huge building programmes that have affected the institutions at Cheshire, Mansfield, Norwich, the tuberculosis sanitarium at East Lyme, the Women's farm at Niantic, the state college at Storrs and the proposed new insane asylum in Fairfield county. He also mentioned the great growth in improved highways, representing expenditures of over $100,000,000, and all without any increase in state taxes. Over two and one half millions of dollars have been set aside for the care of World war veterans in the state and at present the Widows' Pension fund is issuing checks for over $35,000 monthly.

Congressman Freeman said that women were especially interested in the protective tariff expounded by the republican party because to them it represented a protection of American industry to a degree that they might continue to maintain their standard of living. He accused the democratic party of not only conducting a "whispering" campaign but also a "whimpering" campaign, and quoting from Hoover's acceptance speech in which he affirmed that he was strongly in favor of religious tolerance, the speaker blamed the democrats for injection of the word religion into the campaign. He said that this was done to confuse the voters until after November 6. He then spoke on the wholesale tax reductions. Although three million names were stricken out of the income tax lists, the receipts from this form of taxation increased by three billions of dollars. The national debt was cut from 24 to 17 millions, saving the nation 300 millions on interest. This great saving was pointed out as being sufficient in a few years, to complete the gigantic projects of making the Mississippi river safe and building Boulder Dam. Mr. Freeman attacked the "Tammany" administration of Governor Smith in New York state and said that New York's state debt had not only failed to be reduced but had actually increased under Governor's Smith administrations. He explained the tariff situation, stating that the purpose of it was not to get revenue but to protect American industry from competitive merchandising. He predicted that in the event of Smith's election, the south, with a controlling majority, would cause a lowering of the tariff in its revision, and thereby open the country to foreign marketing. It would mean the closing of plants here, or at least the lowering of wages and the consequent lowering of the standards of living. He said that the plan of the republican party was to cause tariff revision where a change was deemed necessary for the best interests of agriculture and some forms of industry, including New England textiles.

Senator Walcott, who was introduced as a personal friend of Herbert Hoover gave graphic accounts of the resourcefulness, the energy and success of Hoover in his great humanitarian works throughout the world. He mentioned incidents in which he was affiliated with Hoover and therefore had an intimate knowledge of what was being done. Among other great achievements he told how Hoover saved the wheat crop for France when all her men were at the front trying to repulse the Germans who were within 60 miles of Paris. This was done by putting thousands of German prisoners into the fields. Again he told of how Hoover saved the muskrat industry in Louisiana during the Mississippi flood by ordering immense rafts to be floated over the marshes. When the muskrats began to die from exposure and the Arcadians complained, Hoover had them spread large quantities of straw over the rafts and the furry animals thrived under this protection. He otherwise lauded the post-war work of Hoover and at the conclusion of his talk received a salvo of applause.

Mr. Erard's talk proved a vehement plea for Hoover and the republican party and was delivered in French. His talk was frequently interrupted by outbursts of applause as he praised the merits of Hoover and of the protective tariff which is part of the platform of

The funeral of Peter James was held with a solemn high mass of requiem in St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Rev. J. J. Papillon was celebrant; Rev. H. C. Belec, deacon and Rev. E. A. NOANK

HOOVER CLUB FORMED BET WITH BROWN DERBY CLUB

It is claimed that Noank is a republican town yet all the months have gone by and no Hoover club has been formed; so Friday evening at the Aunt Sarah Peabody club rooms on Cedar street, about 20 good republicans gathered to see who would be the president of Happy Hoover club; they did not want the Brown Derby club to get ahead of them. Order was called for by Chairman Rollin Rathbun and the gathering elected officers; President, Billie Scott; ice president, Elihu Rathbun; treasurer, Keith Ebbetts; secretary, B. Bracci. President Scott explained the rules and said Hoover buttons are to be displayed at all times on the coat lapel. If any member has not the button to show he will be fined 50 cents. Rule No. 2, Get out and get busy with the voters, talk to them on election day and tell them to vote for Happy Hoover for our next president (if Smiling Al Smith doesn't get all the farmers and women to vote for him). Rule No. 3, Take off hats at all meetings. A bet was made between the Brown Derby club and the Happy Hoover club. If Al Smith wins Nov. 6 the Happy Hoover club will give the members of the Brown Derby club a chicken pie supper and have a six piece orchestra to dance by. If Happy Hoover beats out his rival Al Smith for the chair in the white house, the Brown Derby club members will take the Hoover club to a show in New London and give a dinner at the Crocker house. The meeting nights will be once a month. All the members of the club there are 20, have Hoover's picture on their automobile and at their homes hanging in the window. After the meeting hot dogs and potatoes with marble cake and coffee were the lunch. The motto of the club is "We are for Happy Hoover at all times, win or lose." Every one sang as the piano was played by Albany Camerey "Over There."

Linton Wilcox has returned from a short visit with friends in Worcester.

Shots Came Too Close

Earl Samson and Fred Larkin were over to Palmer cove after the yellow fish known to all sporty fishermen as smelts and in a row boat were catching them fine. Nearby was woods and they saw several hunters go in there after pheasants. Soon several shots came close but the man in the boat kept right on catching fish. Soon a bullet hit along side the boat, almost hitting Earl Swanson in the back. They did not know if the hunters were practicing to join the army but the shots and shells were some close. Anyway, it was time to get out so the two fishermen pulled a fast stroke for shore to get out of the range of sharpshoters from out of town. They got 450 smelts and one weighed 1 lb. and was 16 1-2 inches. The hunters hindered the two young fishermen from breaking the record in catching smelts. The record to date is 1500 in 7 hours held by champions Rollin Rathbun and Billie Lucy.

The weather in this village has been freaky and cloudy half of the day, ther the wind was blowing and it got dark and in the west part of the town were flurries of snow while the sun was shining on Main street. So many kinds of weather in one day! Thursday it rained with the sun and moon out, and it hailed. Many of the halistones were large as marbles. Thunder and lightning is a sign that the summer's backbone is broken and cold weather is near. The glass that fishermen study to tell what the weather will be a few days ahead was low Friday, meaning a cold wave and ice at night.

Jack Smith of Harvard college is spending a few days in the village.

Randall Davis, of Central Village has returned after several days' visit with his sister in Willimantic.

Miss Adelaid Prentiss is ill at her home with a grip cold.

Mr. Smallwood has bought the home of Rudolph Swanson.

Mrs. Henry Fontaine attended the teachers' meeting in New London Friday.

The Friendly Indians met Friday evening at the parsonage of the Congregational church.

COLUMBIA

LAWRENCE HUTCHINS WAS A SKILLED MUSICIAN

(Contributed.)

Lawrence Hutchins, son of Henry Hutchins of Columbia, who was killed in Flint, Mich., last week while defending a girl who was being forced into an automobile, was a well known musician of Columbia. He was organizer and president of the Columbia band, in which he played the saxophone. He belonged to the Y. P. S. C. E. orchestra and for several years to A. E. Lyman's professional orchestra. He was always ready to help in church work, especially in connection with music. When Rev. F. C. Williams held outdoor services at Columbia he was one of the orchestra which he was one of the orchestra which A. E. Lyman. His removal from Columbia about a year ago was a great loss to his musical friends, and the news of his death brings an added sense of loss, with the pride that one of their number showed himself a hero, even to death.

In Flint Mr. Hutchins took an active part in music and church, as he did at home, and had already won many friends, as was attested by the large number who crowded to attend the services at the First Congregational church. He was always trying to do his duty, and to the last he died doing his duty to protect womanhood.

He was killed by a blow of the fist of the brother of the youth who was attacking the girl. The blow broke the artery at the back of the neck, causing almost instant death. Melvin Rasking, who struck the blow, is awaiting trial for murder.

A Compromise with Quality never makes a Bargain

WOMEN of today have become keen buyers, and they realize that quality means economy. This is evidenced in the fact that the Maytag, the world's finest washer, leads all others in sales.

The Maytag is different, because numerous basic patents protect its vital and original features of design; because the vast resources and tremendous production facilities of the world's largest washer factory make the finest materials and the highest-grade workmanship cost less per unit. Maytag perfection is protected by more than 544 individual factory inspections on each washer.

The seamless, cast-aluminum, heat-retaining tub and the Gyrafoam action wash the grimiest clothes clean without hand-rubbing. The Roller Water Remover, with a flexible top roll and a hard bottom roll, gently, but thoroughly removes both soap and water evenly from all parts of the garment and spares the buttons. There are a score of other Maytag advantages.

For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with inverted gasoline motor.

DANIELSON

TWO YOUTHFUL VANDALS RAID CHURCH POOR BOXES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 28—(AP)—Two youthful vandals raided St. James' church in Danielson and St. Joseph's church at Dayville during the early hours of Saturday morning and obtained approximately $20 in loot from poor boxes and votive stands. One of them, Ralph Shippee, of Elmville, son of Giles Shippee, has admitted his part in the affair, and the other, William Culley, 20, also of this town was at large today and being sought by both Connecticut state officers and Rhode Island troopers.

Skeleton keys were used by Culley and Shippee in gaining entrance to the two churches, through the vestry doors. Neither at St. James' church here nor at St. Joseph's at Dayville was anything known about the robberies until the churches were opened Saturday morning.

At St. James' church the young vandals carried away the votive stands, which are of brass, took them over into the Horse Hill district of the town and smashed open, probably with a hammer, the money boxes, where parishioners who light one of the many candles the stands hold, deposit small coins as offerings made at the time of supplication to the Divine Being for such spiritual favors as they may desire. The two stands probably yielded about $10. Having been rifled, they were thrown into the woods, where they were recovered following young Shippee's confession of his part in the robbery.

At Dayville wooden poor boxes believed to have contained about $10, were wrecked when broken into with a hammer. Sacred vessels in the churches were left unmolested and the tabernacles undisturbed, it was understood this afternoon.

A clue to who might be accountable for the breaks was furnished when Giles Shippee reported his Ford sedan stolen from the garage in which it was kept at Elmville some time during Friday night or the early hours of Saturday morning. His admission that his son, Ralph, also was missing carried with it a suggestion to investigators that there might be some association between the disappearance of the car, the absence of the boy and the robberies, and this proved to be a correct analysis.

It has since developed that young Shippee and Culley took Mr. Shippee's car without permission, used it in going about as they had to in robbing the churches and then made off with the machine for Providence. In that city, some time before daylight Saturday morning, the car went "dead," and they abandoned it, at Olneyville square. During Saturday Shippee came back to Danielson on a bus, was given a grilling by state officers and finally revealed the story of the robberies. He was at liberty today in his father's charge and is expected to be in court Monday.

Culley, believed to be in Providence today, has a record in the courts and will eventually be rounded up. This young man's father is now serving a state prison sentence for a statutory offense.

OBITUARY

Edward Riley

A death at The Haven in Abington during the early hours of this morning was that of Edward Riley, 41, a native of Brooklyn and a resident of that town practically all of his life. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Riley, old time residents of Brooklyn. Mr. Riley leaves two brothers, Charles, of Brooklyn and Thomas of Newport, N. H., and a sister, Mrs. Della Park of New York. Another brother, James, died ten months ago today.

Mrs. Michael Espinosa

Announcement Saturday morning of the death during the preceding night of Mrs. Julia Espinosa, 39, wife of Michael Espinosa, at the home in East Brooklyn came as a great shock to all the relatives and friends of the family. Upon retiring Friday night Mrs. Espinosa was apparently in her usual health. During the night she complained of suffering a chill and asked her husband if he would bring her a glass of water. Her condition became alarming and immediately more serious and before a physician could be summoned she had expired. Heart disease was given as the cause of death. Mrs. Espinosa, a native of Italy, had spent practically all of her life in this country. In addition to her husband and ten children, the oldest of these 17 years of age and the youngest five months old, Mrs. Espinosa is survived by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Milone of the Green Hollow road, and by brothers and sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Woodworth, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Barnett and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Anderson were among those from Danielson who attended the Yale-Army football game at New Haven Saturday.

Relatives and friends here have received announcements of the marriage of Miss Gladys Louise Jones, daughter of John Stapleton Jones of Claremont, N. H., formerly of Winsted, and Thomas F. Head, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Head of Winsted and a grandson of Michael Head of Academy street. The newly married couple will make their home in Winsted, where the groom's father is engaged in business.

Announcements relative to the All Souls day and All Saints' day services were made at all of the masses at St. James' church today.

The past week and the Westfield Congregational church was represented at the Older Boys' conference in Middletown by Alden Danielson, Russell Danielson, Francis Hammett, Bertram Hammond, Leta Keech and Raymond Mayhew.

Miss Gladys Cook was at New Haven Saturday to attend the Army-Yale football game.

Miss Helen Cronin of Academy street and a teacher at Plainfield High school spent the week end in New Haven, attending the teachers' convention Friday, and the Yale-Army football game Saturday afternoon.

Antonio Longo, former Connecticut Aggie football star, whose home is here, was at New Haven Saturday for the Yale-Army game.

Police of Rochester, N. Y., were sending telegrams into this territory today seeking to locate Stanley Thompson, father of Joseph Thompson, 16, being held in Rochester as a vagrant, the telegrams said.

Officers and enlisted men of the medical detachment and headquarters detachment of special troops, stationed at the local armory left this morning for Hartford where they were the guests of the headquarters company of the 43rd division in a field day and outing.

Arthur Burgess of Providence who was injured in an automobile casualty in Danielson Friday evening when an oil truck which he was operating crashed over a fence, was reported as improved by the officials of the Day Kimball hospital this afternoon. Burgess sustained internal injuries, body bruises and a fracture of the leg.

District nurse tag day was observed in the borough Saturday and the early hours of the morning found the tireless youngsters campaigning the streets in search of contributors to aid the cause of humanity within the town. It is evident that the cause was recognized as there appeared on every passerby a little white tag indicating he or she had donated to the support of the public nursing. The exact figures as to the total amount netted were not obtained Saturday evening.

Much reconstruction work is taking place on Main and North Main streets among the property owners, with a vew of improving the civic appearance of Danielson. Two of the foremost improvements attracting the eye of a visitor are the new homes of the Eastern Connecticut Power company and the Brooklyn Savings banks, the latter nearing exterior completion and furnishing the passersby with an idea of what a beautiful and elaborate specimen of modern workmanship it will be when completed. Staging that adorned the outer portions of the new building while the masonry work was in progress have been removed and the colonial banking house now stands out, the greatest civic improvement added to Danielson's business section in many years

LOCAL MAN BADLY BURNED BY GASOLINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 28—Euclid Beausoleil, son of David Beausoleil of Sawyer district was severely burned about the face and body Saturday forenoon when a woolen shirt which he was wearing became saturated with gasoline and caught fire, burning for several minutes before his father could extinguish the flames that were fast enveloping his body.

Both the father and son are the operators of a cider mill in the Sawyer district. The heavy frost that prevailed Friday evening had frozen a water pipe in their plant and upon setting to work Saturday morning, they discovered their water power had been temporarily shut off. They attempted to thaw out the pipe by the use of a gasoline torch. The younger Beausoleil, while in the process of thawing out the pipe, spilled the gasoline on his clothing and while working with the torch, a gust of wind caused the fire to ignite his shirt. Beausoleil ran about, fanning the blaze and causing himself to be severely burned. He was treated by a local physician at his home, as he was unable to be removed. His parents said today that his condition was improved over that of Saturday evening, but his condition is still critical.

Deferred mail service was again received Saturday morning, when the New London-South Worcester combination mail and freight train running over the Norwich branch, and carrying the New York business mail, came into Putnam nearly three hours and a half late.

The trouble department of the Putnam branch of the Eastern Connecticut Power company has solved the problem that has confronted radio listeners west of the Quinebaug river for the past fortnight. The trouble was found to be in an electric street light bulb in front of the home of Dr. Harry Thompson on Woodstock avenue. The bulb was loose in its socket and caused the power to fluctuate, sending out noise of various descriptions that was received in the radio loudspeakers in the vicinity. The search for the trouble was conducted for several weeks before found, and cause was attributed to a boy amateur with a code station transmitting messages on obsolete apparatus. Electrical Engineer Ray Sherman of the power company is responsible for the locating of the trouble.

Lieutenant Allan A. Thayer, West Point, '28, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thayer of King street returned to his home in this city Saturday evening after witnessing the Yale-Army gridiron classic in New Haven during the afternoon. Lieut. Thayer will return to his post of duty at Fort Ethan Allen, Burlington, Vermont, Monday morning.

Captain William Jarvis of the Putnam police was in receipt of a telegram communication from A. J. Kavanaugh, chief of police in Rochester, N. Y., informing him of a Joseph Thompson of Killingly, a 16 year old vagrant, who left his home and secured transportation as far as Rochester. The boys parents live in Killingly and were overjoyed to learn of his whereabouts.

Leonard Beausoleil of Hartford, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Beausoleil of Sawyer district was a Sunday visitor in Putnam.

E. A. Meinken of New York is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Padgett of Fremont St.

Miss Bella Simon of New York city is the guest of her parents Mr. and Msr. Paul Simon of Church street.

Capt. Edward F. Perry of the medical detachment of Danielson, whose home is in Putnam accompanied his command to Hartford Sunday where they were the guests of the headquaters company of the 43rd division.

Several "D X" radio fans of this city were up early Friday morning to listen to the radio communication between station WGY of Schenectady and Australia, which was broadcast. Local reception was excellent and all reported the distant talk seemed like a local telephone call.

Local banks are in receipt of sample forms of paper currency that will be in circulation by the federal government after July 1, 1929, replacing the present money bills. The new certificates will be but 2 11-16 inches wide by 6 5-16 inches long. According to information the bureau of printing and engraving in Washington is now working on the new designs of money that will be placed into circulation after the first half of next year is passed. The present money will be supplanted with the smaller notes regularly until all present size currency is called back to its source redeemed and destroyed. No doubt several will encounter difficulties with the use of the new bill folds, as change drawer, wallets and other keeping instruments will have to be redesigned to meet the dimensions of the new money.

Schools of the city, reopened this morning after a week end holiday, because of the state teachers convention, which took place Friday in Hartford.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward S. Quinn of Boston have been visiting with Dr. Quinn's mother and sister, Mrs. Catherine Quinn and Mrs. Bertha Knibbs of Main street.

Capt. William Jarvis of the local police was in Willimantic today on municipal business.

F. Gordon Caffery of Providence, spent Sunday with his mother Mrs. J. F. Caffery of Pomfret street.

Mrs. Edith Huett of Weathersfield has been the guest of relatives in this city recently.

Mrs. Antonette Scarf of Rockville is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Magnat of Providence street.

Gilbert F. Perry of Worcester spent Sunday with his parents City Engineer and Mrs. George W. Perry of Providence street.

BURGLARS ENTER PAINT SHOP OF FRANK FRINK

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 28—Burglars through a cellar window entered the sign shop of Frank Frink on Lee street during the hours of Saturday evening and caused considerable damage to Mr. Frink's painting equipment which is stored there. Mr. Frink discovered the break this noon time when he entered his place of business and found his colors, brushes and drawing boards scattered on the floor and a number of them destroyed.

The break was referred to Officer Benoi Durand of the Putnam police who made an investigation of the affair. Officer Durand believes the burglars intended to loot the drug store of Joseph A. Gagne, thinking the cellar window in the rear of the Seder block led to the basement of Mr. Gagne's establishment. A glass window, large enough for a man to crawl through, was punctured. Finger prints and track marks of newly purchased shoes and other evidence was obtained by Officer Durand, who will continue the investigation.

A delay in work material necessary for the re-enforcement of the Providence street bridge, which is now closed to traffic, is all that is preventing the contractors from commencing the task that will strengthen the structure and prolong its life for several years. The New Haven bridge contractors in possession of the contract have arrived in the city and started the preliminary stages of reconstruction of the span. Piers are being built of concrete under the bridge which, when completed, will support eye beams and other girders. The bridge has been closed to traffic since late summer and the absence of motor cars crossing over it, have caused the floor boards to become moss covered.

JEWETT CITY

RIVAL CANDIDATE SAYS IT WITH HONEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 28—Miss Margery Brewster is the efficient nominee for republican representative and Chief Lionel Boucher has been selected to run as state representative for the local democratic party. At the firemen's celebration the past week Mr. Boucher was presented a package by Miss Brewster. When the wrappings were removed the gift was found to be a pound box of native clover honey, stored by the Italian bee colony on the historic Brewster farm. The gallant chief in his brief remarks of acceptance expressed himself as hoping if his opponent proved the winner that he might be the first to offer congratulations in what will be a strenuous but certainly amicable contest.

TURKEY BUYERS FIND SMALL SUPPLY TO BANK ON

Turkey buyers have been taking a turn through the farming districts the past week with a view to advance Thanksgiving purchaser. Hardly a local farmer, with fortune in his favor to the extent that he has a few birds left is looking for the commission market. Local poultry dealers will have to buy more than a half ton of Vermont and New York state birds to supply the local trade, in addition to taking over every native in sight, with a few demanding the famous bronze breed from Rhode Island. Time was when the late John C. Hawkins, deemed it only a fair season when he bought and resold from 3 to 5 tons of Griswold raised turkeys.

He bred a special white turk that was sold at a fancy price in Providence and Boston and strangely, the dealers demanded that these white ones from Hawkins' hill be left unpicked.

On account of a freight wreck at New London, the morning mail did not arrive Saturday until 9.15. The Bulletin correspondent in Jewett City notified the Connecticut people, who, willing to favor their patrons in the borough, had a coach driver get the local bundles, so that the over 600 papers due here at 6.30 were less than three hours behind schedule.

Motorists report slippery driving on account of a coating of wet leaves on parts of the state road Sunday morning.

Saturday before sunrise the mercury fell to 24, the coldest yet. Pans of water left for the hens in their coops were frozen a half inch thick.

It is with regret that many patrons of the Connecticut bus lines learn that certain reorganization is to mean changes in the local drivers. In the case of George Atwood of Norwich who will be transferred, many pleasant acquaintances have been made. Wherever he goes his clearance card must read courteous, careful and dependable.

A party of local people visited the sub-base Saturday and was highly entertained in an inspection of the S-10. The party was taken from stem to stern by a courteous and well posted Jackie. The S-10 being a counterpart of her sister sub the S-4, some startling things were pointed out in the several compartments, that had to do with the ill fated ship that was rammed and sunk by the Paulding off Provincetown.

The trip to the base was made in an automobile, that could hit her off at a 70 mile clip. And that is far from all. The party then took a long airship ride from Roode's field down over the town at an altitude of 3,000 feet. Can you beat it? All within a few hours.

Club Has Varied Program

When Pachaug Community club met in Grange hall with C. Frank Morgan presiding, the attendance was 95. The committee in charge of the program were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Terry, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Geer and Miss Susie Morgan. The evening opened with community singing, with Miss Susan Terry at the piano, reading, Mrs. Ethel Krug, vocal solo, Mrs. George Briggs, accompanying herself on her auto-harp, piano solo, Susan Terry; reading, Rhoda Brand, accordion solo with encore by Mrs. Frank Krug, reading Rev. Harold Arnold; banjo solo, with encore by Russell Brand; solo by Mrs. Briggs; pantomime Wanted a Wife. Cast, Frances Montgomery, Mrs. Minda Morgan, Miss Susie Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Stetson, harmonica solo, Mary Lewis with encore, M. H. Bartlett gave a very interesting description of his tour to Maryland and other historical points. The program closed with an auto harp solo by Mrs. George Briggs. Sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee were served by the committee after which there was a social hour of games and dancing to music by Mr. Brand and Frank Morgan with Romeo Pepino, prompter. For November the committee is Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilcox, Miss Elsie Lord and Fred Edmond. The December committee is Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Bartlett and Miss Margery Brewster.

The A. C. G. club conducted a Halloween dance in Rioux hall the other evening under the direction of Harriet McCluggage, Loretta Alley and Ruth Savles.

Miss Jean Burleson attended the Yale-Army game in New Haven Saturday.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

TOWN HAS OVER 2300 VOTERS MAJORITY LIKELY TO VOTE

(Special to The Bulletin)

CANTERBURY GREEN

NEW PASTOR AND WIFE GIVEN FORMAL WELCOME

At Grange hall recently a reception was given by the parishes of Westminster and Canterbury for Rev. Harry Small and family. A committee of arrangements included members from both churches. They were W. Robinson, Malcolm Wibberly, Mrs. Hiram Hawes, Mrs. Clinton Frink of the Green and Charles Barstow and Mr. McLeod of Westminster. Both churches were also represented in the receiving line. With Mr. and Mrs. Small and their son, who had come from New Haven for the reception, were Deacon and Mrs. Hale Bennett, Deacon and Mrs. Charles Barstow, Deacon Arthur Edmond and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hart. The Centerbury ladies wore carnation bouquets that were presented by Frank Whiting of Jewett City. Music was furnished by a Canterbury orchestra. Cake, coffee and ice cream were served. Mrs. Lotta Dodge of Plainfield gave reminiscences of her early days in connection with the church and Sunday school. Rev. Mr. Ayer and Mrs. Merritt Hawes sang two duets in a pleasing manner and the visiting clergymen, of whom there were six—Rev. William C. Prentiss and Rev. George Browne of Plainfield, Rev. George Reese of Central Village, Rev. William Williams, Wauregan, Rev. E. P. Ayer of Branford and Mr. St. John of Canterbury Plain—all spoke words of welcome, to which Rev. Mr. Small responded. A verse of a familiar hymn sung by all and benediction by Rev. Mr. Ayer, who had supplied at both churches during the summer, closed the evening. The affair was largely attended and most successful in promoting good fellowship among these and neighboring churches.

A union service of recognition of the new pastor is being planned for Sunday afternoon, Nov. 4. This will take the place of the usual conference held at Canterbury in the fall.

Meetings of the Ladies' Aid society were resumed Tuesday after an interval of several weeks, when Mrs. Hiram Hawes entertained the society. The next gathering will be in three weeks with Mrs. Small at the parsonage, the usual fortnightly date falling upon election day.

Schools in town closed Friday for the annual teachers' convention held at different cities in the state.

WHEN you meet one of those romantic but unobserving individuals who bemoan what they call "the lack of big opportunities" in this modern day and age, tell him he's worrying about old-fashioned opportunities of the horse-and-buggy period.

Tell him more New Englanders struck it rich during the past ten years than during the first ten decades of New England's economic development as the school-room, workshop, money-mart, and playground of the nation.

NEW DISCOVERIES IN AN OLD INDUSTRY

Then if he craves facts, tell him this!

Certainly shoemaking is one of New England's oldest and most competitive industries, yet we know of a youthful shoe manufacturing company, founded late in 1915, which has already risen from nothing to national leadership in its line. This company has been discovering up-to-date opportunities by using modern facilities for finding out the facts, by applying modern methods of distribution, merchandising and advertising to the age-old business of making and selling shoes for women.

Less than a year ago, when this company wanted to issue nearly a million dollars worth of bonds, nearly savings banks gobbled nearly all of them as investments for their own funds before the date of issue had arrived. Here's what a famous national banking house reported at the time:

"The — — Shoe Co., incorporated in September, 1915, is the largest producer in America of Goodyear Turn Shoes of any type. The company has never had a strike or other serious labor problems and the policy of constant co-operation as applied to labor, advertising, and customers has reacted to the benefit of the company."

Before this company made shoes, they studied what features their part of the public liked best in footwear. They planned to make the best shoes for their chosen market. Before they advertised, they studied how their salesmen and dealers could best make their advertising go to work as soon as it went to press.

SUCCESS—LEADERSHIP!

And so it happened that last year a million women came back for more shoes made, advertised and sold under this New England company's trademark. Today more than 10,000 shoe dealers are selling their shoes. They are national leaders!

This company was one of the first to become an associate member of the New England Council. To them this was another of these modern opportunities. It's now an opportunity which is open to you, to your firm and to your business association, an opportunity to help promote the economic welfare of all New England and to share in the mutual benefits which are bound to result from the co-ordination of many able minds, all intent upon progress. Write to us about it. THE STATE TICKET

Connecticut has every reason to be deeply interested in the election of the state ticket which has been presented by the republicans. It should be interested and should seek to place these men in office because it means a continuance of that highly successful administration which we have been getting.

Connecticut should not only appreciate such public service but it should endorse it. There is no better method than through a return of the administration to office. Connecticut needs such efficiency. It needs men of true and tried policies for the handling of its responsibilities.

Standing at the head of the ticket is John H. Trumbull, now governor of the state. It is an office in which he has served to the great credit of the commonwealth as well as to himself. He has insisted upon state business being conducted just as closely as possible to the manner in which it is done by private enterprise. He has not only stood for it but he has accomplished it. Waste has been reduced, needs have been met, bills have been paid, benefits have been obtained. Connecticut stands today with its indebtedness practically wiped out, with large public improvements to its credit and with steadily increasing economy and efficiency. This has been due to the manner in which the state's affairs have been administered, because of the well entrenched policy of pay-as-you-go. Connecticut needs two more years with John H. Trumbull in the governor's chair.

For the lieutenant governorship, Ernest E. Rogers of New London is admirably fitted for the office. He knows his state, he has the ability and he has shown his mettle in the years which he has served so satisfactorily as treasurer of the state.

Dr. W. L. Higgins of Coventry is well acquainted with Connecticut in many ways. Years of service in the legislature and offices held in his own town and county make it certain that he would prove a most efficient secretary of state. It is an office to which he is entitled if any public servant can be so regarded.

For state treasurer, Senator Spencer of Suffield, is conscientious, able and well chosen. He would be an excellent successor for Treasurer Rogers, being well fitted for that office in every respect.

Comptroller Salmon has served with such distinction in that office that it is for the interest of the state that his services be retained. He is in close touch with all its details and is a most valuable official.

Having before them tried and experienced men, men of affairs, men of standing, men of integrity and ability, the thoughtful and appreciative citizens of the state regardless of party should see that they are elected by substantial majorities.

PROMISING EVERYTHING

While engaged in making some elaborate promises which have been put forth for campaign purposes, Candidate Smith served notice recently that if he got the chance he would do away with the "official spokesman" at Washington. That was intended as a criticism of the present administration and was advanced in the belief that some political benefit could be attached to such a promise.

Instead of dealing with interviewers as other presidents have done, as the result of experience, he would give the impression that he would hasten to the front porch at every request and tell fully and freely everything that was asked. Such was of course nothing but talk. It simply showed his lack of knowledge of what he was talking about. He must have realized in Boston how quickly such a statement reacted against him when he was questioned concerning the contest of Senator Walsh and, either because he was caught off his guard or really meant what he said, declared that he never heard of any senatorial contest there.

Senator Walsh was an enthusiastic worker for him in Houston, has labored in Smith's behalf since and was active in the trip through Massachusetts, and yet when the man who would do away with an official spokesman, do his own talking and permit himself to be quoted at all times got a chance to speak for a friend and supporter he declared he didn't know anything about such a contest. Someone later reminded him of his error and he tried to fill up the gap but he had been shown the error of making wild promises.

Because just such things have happened to men who have been elected to the presidency, it has become necessary for the adoption of some method of protection against just such direct quotations. Whether it is the official spokesman or something else, it is one of those safeguards that prevents just such disturbing and painful statements as Mr. Smith rushed into at Boston. Those are things which even display the bad judgment of making a lot of rash promises.

THE SALVATION ARMY APPEAL

It is at this time of the year that there comes the appeal for funds to finance the work of the Salvation Army for the ensuing year. It is an effort which follows the successful results since it was adopted. For years it was the practice of the Salvation Army to seek funds here and there throughout the year, much of the time of its officers being taken up with solicitations. That greatly reduced the time which could be devoted to the work of the organization.

The idea of raising the funds during a brief campaign has made its appeal during the past several years and it is certain that it will be equally successful this week. It is a business-like method of meeting the problem.

Norwich is always deeply concerned in such work as is done by the Salvation Army. It realizes that this organization comes in much closer contact with many than any other and is therefore able to reach those who need its ministrations. It has seen this work grow. It has aided in the securing of a citadel and it has generously provided the means whereby aid and relief have been furnished to those in need of it. The poor, the sick and the unfortunate are constantly finding in the Salvation Army, a real cause for thanksgiving, a real shelter in the time of storm.

The goal in the present campaign is $5,000. With that sum available it would be possible to increase and extend the work. It would permit the Army to operate at the highest degree of efficiency. The good work of the past stands out as a telling endorsement of the local activities. That such will insure adequate contributions for a continuance is to be expected. Norwich backs up what has been tried and found worthy.

DESPERATE AS THE WORST

Within the past few days the news has contained the story of the shooting of a boy in his early teens by one of his companions of the same age, because he had "squealed" about robberies in which they were concerned.

There are many who are disposed to threaten such dire consequences in their efforts to prevent others from doing which would evidently displease them, but happily it is seldom that they actually carry out such threats.

These youngsters had been engaged in several breaks. They had evidently been inspired by the activities of real gangsters and when the 13 year old participant learned that one of the trio had confessed and involved the others he sought revenge. He showed the spirit of the older and fearless gangster. He got a gun and shot his friend dead. He has now confessed to what he did but under a technical plea of not guilty faces a trial for manslaughter.

Evidently this boy, not yet out of grammar school has been making a study of unworthy ideals. He has been impressed by what criminals have done. He had surrounded himself with companions and had operated under the idea that whatever others did could be done by them. He followed that practice as if he had a right to rob and kill. One might get the impression that he didn't know the difference between right and wrong. He was as desperate as they make them, and now he faces more serious trouble than he had expected.

Such a young criminal presents a pathetic figure. It is a case where he will be given every possible consideration but it is apparent that his crime is too great to be overlooked. He is in fact at a point where he must be brought to realize the error of his ways and where steps must be taken to see that the public is given adequate protection against such a young and heartless desperado. The real unfortunate part is that he was not turned away from such a bent before he had taken the life of another. His age will not be a sufficient reason for turning him loose to practice on others.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Well, the radio commission shows it isn't afraid to change its mind when it seems wise.

The death of the author of Granstark, George Barr McCutcheon means the passing of a writer whose books have been a source of great pleasure to millions of readers of romance.

The democratic national committee says there is "no man better qualified to measure the political stature and ability of a public official than Charles E. Hughes." Mr. Hughes prefers Hoover for president and comprehensively tells why.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Cucumber may be sliced and fried like egg plant.

Winter radishes are excellent boiled and served with butter sauce.

When cornmeal is partly boiled pour into shallow tins and bake until well-browned.

Fill cored apples with nuts, cinnamon and sugar and bake them.

Cherry or berry pies will not run if a lightly beaten egg with a little flour added is mixed with the sugar used in them.

Spiced cranberries are a fine cold weather dish.

Spicing slightly gives waffles a different taste.

Addition of a little vinegar to the water when poaching eggs will prevent spreading of the egg and the breaking of the yolk.

Cornmeal adds variety to breakfast cereals.

Soak canned cocoanut in milk for half an hour before using and it will taste like the fresh product.

Hot spiced grape juice makes a splendid beverage for children.

Pork chops are fine served with baked apples.

To quickly soften hard butter place over it a small inverted basin which has been rinsed out with very hot water.

The centerpiece on the dinner table should be low enough for the guests to see each other across the table.

Always put the egg beater and potato-masher in cold water after using them. It will help greatly in the washing process.

If the family is large, use two pans when cooking fritters or pancakes. They will save time and always keep a supply on hand.

Chloroform will remove paint from any kind of dress goods.

Ammonia and water in equal parts will remove varnish from furniture.

Wash brick tiles with a cloth saturated with vinegar and they will look like new.

White spots caused by water on a polished table may be removed with camphorated oil.

A teaspoon of baking soda to one pint of water will remove finger marks from white furniture.

WHEN THEY WON'T BURN.

If the flame is poor on your gas range, boil the burners in a strong solution of washing soda and water. It may only mean the burners are clogged with accumulated grease, and a good, thorough cleaning will do the trick.

MUDDY SHOES.

When polishing shoes in bad weather, put an extra amount of polish along the joint between the uppers and the soles. It will make them waterproof and prevent mud from caking on the leather.

POACHING EGGS.

When poaching eggs have the water boiling, add the eggs and turn out the fire. The eggs will retain their shapes and when congealed may be easily removed from the water with the aid of a skimmer or pancake turner.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

In these days of water waves, marcels and "setting" of permanents it is less expensive if one's hair does not have to be washed each week. If you will wash your comb and brush more frequently you will find their cleanliness will carry away much of the dust and soil from your hair and cause it to be shampooed less frequently.

Oftentimes depression is dut to our being in a mental rut. Monotonous indoor work and lack of recreation give a drab tone to many lives that could be made bright and zestful by a better management of time and effort. Even the busiest of us has an hour or two a day to use as she pleases, or at least she should. This free time must be spent thoughtfully in order to extract from it the maximum recreational value.

WINTER FURS.

Fur scarves, of flat fur or asveral sable skins, also are a revival. They are varied in form and are worn according to the taste and idea of the individual. Handbags of flat fur are widely shown.

Cloth suits with fur-lined jackets are a fall style that is proving successful. The flat, short-haired furs are used, the combination of black shaved lamb and red or dark blue being especially popular.

There are some ackets of cloth that imitates fur. A few, perhaps the newest, are made of undyed sealskin.

This fall's short fur jackets should be double-breasted, with narrow collar.

TO HOLD PAPER

A net shopping bag may be hung in the cellarway and hold pieces of wrapping paper and paper bags. Then the usual hunt and rummagine are avoided, as one can see through the mesh and what one wants immediately.

THE HANDY HOOK

A hook hammered into the end of the broom handle will be convenient as a hanger and also convenient for small uses, such as reaching elusive window-shade cords and pulling boxes of unbreakable supplies down from high pantry shelves.

A DOUBLE PURPOSE

Newspapers spread on the floor under the worn rug or carpet will keep the floors much warmer in winter. If you suspect moths to be prevalent in the house to which you have just moved spread newspapers under the rugs as a preventive. It seems as if the newspaper under the floor covering proves beneficial no matter when used.

A REFRIGERATOR PURIFIER.

A small box of coke or charcoal in the corner of the refrigerator acts as a deodorizer, absorbing all sorts of smells and helping to keep the food fresh. The charcoal or coke should be renewed every three weeks.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Heavy silk crepe is one of the most important fabrics for fall.

Velvet will be a leading fabric for coats for dress occasions.

The tendency to lengthen the right side of the hat brim is one of the new millinery features.

New gloves of antelope are shown for afternoon wear, with colored leather flowers in place of stitching.

A long collar, which starts under the belt at the left of a dress and runs into a scarf at the right of the neck is a fashion noted on some of the newest dresses.

A black velour hat that turns off the face and dips over the ears has a narrow front bandeau of shaved lamb.

Just the thing for the boarding school boy or girl is a blanket, which has four gay stripes at either end in four different colors.

A taupe printed velvet uses the long tunic theme with pointed ends finishing it. It is slightly fitted, in semi-princess manner.

A hat made on the lines of the very becoming beret is developed in beige chenille, which is crocheted closely and firmly.

Suitable for the first cool days is a coat of very fine wool in soft reds and fawns, with a very small pattern, and trimmed with a narrow border of beaver fur.

An evening gown of satin brings to notice the new color which is just the shade of ripe prunes. It is just another instance of the smartness of dark colors for evening wear.

The square neck of a slate blue velvet frock has a lace tie attached at the center of each side. The lace ties in a slip-knot, with its ends hanging to the waistline.

GIRDLES NOT WIDE

Wide girdles which swathe the hips are comparatively rare in the collections of this winter. Redfern sometimes uses the idea, however, as in a green satin evening dress with a full skirt which hangs in cicular petals. The girdle is wrapped Greek fashion in front. The bodice is loose with modified neckline and generous arm holes.

GRAY GROWS POULAR

Gray is making a strong bid as replacement for beige, although the change is not yet assured. Jane Regny uses gray and blue frequently in her winter collection. One two-piece costume has a blouse of gray wool angora trimmed with the same navy blue stuff as the skirt, which is made with unpressed umbrella pleats.

TWEED ABOVE AND BELOW

Tweed, always so popular for fall wear, makes its appearance this season in a new guise—the smartest of shoes are made of this sturdy material. To wear with these shoes, in order to produce harmony in the general ensemble, there are delightful little hats of tweed.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Unbleached muslin is a splendid material with which to cover the ironing board, as there is no lint to come off in pressing suits or woolen materials.

An easy way to bleach sheets is to stretch them on the line, and each time the sunshine dries them turn the hose on them. This will save your taking them down each time to wet them.

Never spinkle silks. Most of them will spot and remain spotted until laundered again. After washing, wrap them in a Turkish towel and let stand until the proper dampness to iron.

WASHABLE BOOK COVERS

It is a good idea to cover books and reference volumes that are in general use around the kitchen with oil cloth or some other washable material. Then, if anything should spill on these covers, a little soap and water will clear up the damage.

Washable covers are practical for children's books also. Almost any child can start out with apparently clean hands to look sta book and manage to smear it with all kinds of finger marks and little smudges. It is well to know that the marks on the covers can be removed as easily as the dirt from their hands.

TOWELS THAT WASH

Unlike many materials, linen face towels present no laundering problem in this day of cosmetics. The preparations which daughter and mother alike employ to keep their youthful appearance do not—because of the peculiar properties of flax, "set" in linen towels. They may be laundered snow white.

PLUMBING AID

A new kind of metal cement is on the market that when mixed with water is soft as putty but it hardens like metal when cold. It can be used to fix plumbing leaks, on the car or wherever metal cement is required.

A LOVELY LIGHT

A lamp which is not only beautiful in itself but casts a most lovely light has a bowl of cloudy chystal, delecately etched, and a shade of silvery white parchment with small silver dots scattered over its surface to form a border.

NEW TABLE DECORATIONS

For the fall and winter table a particularly striking decoration consists of a tall bowl of black glass and two extremely tall candle sticks of the same. When the bowl is filled with silver flowers, the effect is truly lovely.

FADED CARPETS

To brighten faded carpets, wipe them with warm water to which ammonia has been added in the proportions of one tablespoon to a quart of water.

AUTUMN COLORS

Brown in all its varied range of tones is unquestionably the most significant and important color of the new season and is especially effective in the new mauve brown tone, which, as the name implies has a certain violet cast.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Mrs. Zzarina C. Conlan, a Chickasaw-Choctaw, was the organizer and president of the first Indian Territory Federation of Women's clubs.

Suffrage has been denied the women in Switzerland. The women presented a series of three petitions but all were turned down by the state councils.

The Medical College for Women in Tokio, Japan, has graduated 1,200 women, and at present there are more than 800 women enrolled as medical students.

Miss Edna L. Johnson of the University of Colorado has found that X-raying potatoes before planting produces more potatoes in the hill than otherwise.

Mrs. William F. Blackman of Winpark, Fla., is writing a historical and biographical account of Florida women who have played a notable part in the history of that state.

DISCOVERIES

A double boiler is splendid for warming biscuits, rolls and muffins, especially those a trifle dried out.

HARDENED SHOE POLISH

A little turpentine poured over the hardened shoe polish wil make it fit for use again. Let it remain on the polish for about an hour to soften.

RECIPES

Fudge Squares: Beat the yolks of two eggs. Add one-fourth teaspoon of salt and one cup of sugar, then one-fourth cup of melted butter and two squares of chocolate which have been melted together in a saucepan over hot water. Add one-fourth cup of flour, one teaspoon of vanilla, one cupful of nut meats, and lastly the egg whites beaten stiff. Bake in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes. Cut in squares. These are excellent for tea or with fruit for a simple dessert.

Apple-Raisin Cake: Cook together one cup of sliced apples and one cup of molasses for 20 minutes. Add one scant cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one egg, well beaten, one cup of sour milk, one teaspoon of baking soda dissolved in a little hot water, one teaspoon of cinnamon, half a cup of raisins, the juice of half a lemon, and enough flour to make a rather stiff batter. Bake in a loaf pan in a moderate oven for about 45 minutes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Facts on Prohibition

Mr. Editor: In reply to the letter by "A Voter" who asks "Has prohibition made such great strides toward righteousness and lawful living?"

Let me state a few facts about what prohibition has done.

Drunkenness decreased: Commitments to prison for drunkenness decreased 53.3 per cent.—U. S. Census Bulletin 3-5503A, 1926.

Arrests for drunkenness decreased 500,000 per year.—Report of commission on alcoholic liquor traffic of 68th congress.

Alcoholic insanity reduced 66 per cent. in first three years. Deaths from alcoholism less in six dry years as compared with six wet years by 3,800 a year, or 19,800 persons in six years. —U. S. Census Bulletin 3-5503A, 1926.

Salvation Army drink cases reduced from 50 per cent. to 1 per cent.—Commander Evangeline Booth.

In old saloon days there were over 175 Keeley and Neal institutes for the care of drunkards. These are all closed for lack of patronage except one small one near Chicago.—National Enquirer, June 26, 1923.

Crime decreased: Every age group has fewer commitments in proportion to population in 1923 than 1910.

Rate of decrease in commitments for all crimes is 27.7 per cent.—U. S. Census Bulletin, 3-5503A, 1926.

Economic conditions improved 1920-1928: Savings bank depositors increased by 26,000,000 persons.

Amount in savings banks increased by $9,500,000,000.

New life insurance since 1920, $51,000,000,000.

1918-1925 the country's wage accounts increased $8,000,000,000.—Girard Trust company, Philadelphia.

Less poverty: Applications for relief reduced 50 per cent.—Salvation Army, report from 30 cities.

More milk and meat used: Milk, year's consumption increased 600,000,000 gallons, 2,400,000,000 quarts; meat, per capita consumption increased from 139 to 165 pounds; sugar, grapes, vegetables, grain, all report similar increases.

U. S. dry ships most popular: "For every person who goes on a foreign ship because they are wet, two persons sail on American ships because they are dry."—Gen. A. C. Dalton, general manager of U. S. emergency fleet.

These facts speak for themselves in the past eight years.

A Norwich Tombstone

Mr. Editor: On a recent visit to Norwich, I visited a few "spots" linked with boyhood recollections of 40 years or more ago, and one of them was to the old city cemetery on Oak street, just to see if that little brown tombstone was still standing—and sure enough—there it stands still displaying the inscription "born in 1648-died in 1839".

Yours very truly,

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28—The Bystander feels inclined to poll republican and democratic spell-binders in search of an authentic definition of the "whispering campaign" phrase so ardently used by both sides in the Smith-Hoover presidential ruction.

If recollection serves, Senator Joe Robinson is entitled to patent rights. He first used it in a campaign speech. Since then, however, it has been adopted into the campaign vocabulary extensively and bids fair to be the chief catch phrase of the 1928 presidential election contest.

In most of the campaigns of the last two or three decades—and no doubt before that—although the Bystander has no personal knowledge dating more than 30 years back—there have been undercurrents of gossip about the respective presidential candidates. They rarely, if ever, got into print save by inuendo. More often than not these tales were whispered about for malicious purposes and had to do with alleged human frailties of the candidates.

They were in all truth whispering campaigns and when Senator Robinson swung into action to denounce what he charged was an organized attack of this undercover character on Governor Smith, this observer, at least, supposed that was what he meant by the phrase "whispering campaign."

Hoover and Whispering

Comes now, however, Chairman Work of the republican national committee with a charge that a "whispering campaign" is or was about to be launched against Herbert Hoover on the theory that he had lost his American citizenship and eligibility for the presidency because his name once appeared as that of a voter on a British precinct list or something of the kind. Dr. Work called upon his democratic colleague, Johnny Raskob, to join him in denouncing this alleged impending flank attack and the state department simultaneously published a virtual transcript of Mr. Hoover's going and comings abroad for years back to show that he was continuously of official record as American citizen.

It is quite clear that had Hoover ever sought to vote in England, he would have found it a trying business to become a subject of His Britannic Majesty. The fact that his name appeared as a potential voter because he owned a house in London at the time would not have helped him a particle.

Newspaper Inquiry

Investigation shows that the way all this came about was that a newspaper, name withheld, asked the state department to check up on a report it had that Hoover had once been registered as a voter in England. Obviously if it was true, the biggest sensation of the campaign was impending. Equally obviously, however, no information as to Mr. Hoover's passport records or other official data on his status while abroad could be given the inquiring newspaper without Mr. Hoover's personal sanction. That is a matter of routine governmental policy.

So Mr. Hoover was duly advised by telephone of the inquiry and personally consented to publication of the letter answering the inquiry. The republican national committee did not figure in this exchange at all. Subsequent Hoover-Work conferences no doubt produced the Work statement in re an anti-Hoover whispering campaign.

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it, to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles. Or, to prove

CHILD TRAINING

THIS MATTER OF TRUTH-TELLING

Edith Lockridge Reid

"Dorothy told me that the dog grabbed her dress and tore it, but I saw her climb the apple tree and snag it as she came down." Mrs. Allen looked worried and resentful as she related her trouble.

"Why do you think she told you that?" asked Grandmother, who appeared placid and confident, as if she might be able to analyze the situation from a more detached viewpoint than the mother could.

"Oh, I know why she told the lie, for that's certainly what it was, although I regret to admit such a fault in my own daughter," replied Mrs. Allen.

"Why was it?" asked Grandmother, still more keenly interested in solving the problem.

"Well—I told her if I ever found out that she climbed that scraggly old tree, I'd punish her," answered Mrs. Allen.

"What reason did she give for climbing it?" continued Grandmother.

"Oh, she had some excuse—about putting a baby bird back in the nest, or something of the sort," replied Mrs. Allen.

Grandmother was thoughtful for a few moments. So was Dorothy's mother. There seemed to be several points here that should be considered before censuring Dorothy too harshly or unfairly. Grandmother was the first to speak.

"I do not believe Dorothy would have told you this untruth if she had not felt the threat of punishment hanging over her. While she might have expected your displeasure because of tearing her new dress, she would only have had that offense to think about. As it was, the regret of tearing her dress was submerged in the fear of having to pay a penalty for climbing the tree. I have never known any child-problem to be settled in a satisfactory way by threatening punishment."

Grandmother had been firm and convincing. Mrs. Allen was rebuked.

"After all," thought the latter, "the desire to save that little bird was a matter of greater concern than the child's dress, and it is not strange that saving the bird seemed of more importance to Dorothy at that moment than minding her own mother. Perhaps she was not so much to blame as I. I was cross about the damage to her dress, and frightened her. She did not tell a premeditated lie nor deliberately plan to deceive me. She was afraid when I confronted her with the fact that she had broken a command."

This is only one instance of many that could be cited to bring out reasons for untruthfulness in children. Sometimes over-excitement causes a child to tell, impulsively, something that is not true. Then pride forbids admitting the fault and the first statement is stubbornly adhered to. Exaggeration is usually the result of a desire to tell a bigger story than a playmate. Many children crave notice and applause. Often a lie is told to get out of a difficulty or to avoid performing some duty, and very often children have heard their parents use similar tactics to break engagements that were undesirable.

At least, the truth-telling habit should be cultivated in children. This cannot be done by threats of punishment nor by means of the hard and fast command to be truthful, but only by establishing a respect for the spirit of truth.

Stories That Recall Others

Same Fix

He was too small to be in school. He seemed very lonesome since his playmates were gone. While he sat with his head bowed and a downcast look on his face a shaggy, dirty little dog ran up to him whining. The dog was friendless and forsaken also. "Aw, doggie," called the little lad pathetically, "I'll play wi' yo'. Me and you are in the same fix."

Long Distance Call

Billy, age three, has parents who believe in preparedness. The other day they took him to the family physician, who gave him a thorough examination, including, of course, the tests with the stethoscope.

After they left the doctor's office, Billy's father asked him, "what part of the examination did you like best?"

"Oh, I liked the part where he put me over the telephone, but he didn't say 'hello,'" said Billy.

MT. CALVARY CHURCH HAD MORTGAGE BURNING

The congregation of Mt. Calvary Baptist church on High street is rejoicing in having the church free from mortgage debt and in celebration of that event recently held formal services for the burning of the mortgage. This had been carried at $1,600 since 1922 but has now been wiped out, under the leadership of Rev. William C. Pittman, the pastor.

After congregational singing which opened the special services, the invocation was given by Rev. Mr. Gantt of A. M. E. Zion church, and the scripture was read by David Millikan of Grace Memorial Baptist church. A selection by the choir was followed by the address by Deacon Samuel Lacy upon "The Accomplished Task of the Church."

Preceding the formal burning of the mortgage, there was a selection by the Mt. Calvary quartette, reading by Mrs. Louise Hall, selection by the choir, solo by Alfred Perrin, and remarks by city pastors.

Hot chocolate and chicken sandwiches were served at the conclusion of the program.

Speaking of the successful close of the effort to wipe out the mortgage, an official of the church said:

"We are proud to say that under the leadership of our dear pastor, Rev. Mr. Pittman, and by carrying out his plans and advice we the people of Mt. Calvary worked together and lifted the burden that we were laboring under and the church has accomplished more in the three years than it has in a number of years. With many disadvantages as a Moses or a born leader, Rev. Pittman looked ahead and brought us through safe. We are proud to say after installing a heating plant for the comfort and benefit of ourselves and visiting friends we can say we are free from all debt and can welcome our friends with open arms for which we give honor to Pastor Pittman who has striven to save souls as well as bring our church out in good financial condition.

WEEK OF SOLEMNITY IN ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

November is devoted by the Roman Catholic church to special remembrance of the dead. This week will be one of solemnity, beginning with Wednesday, the 31st of October, the eve of All Hallows (all saints) which is a fast day as is the vigil of every holy day. Thursday, Nov. 1st, the services will be in honor of all the saints, known and unknown. In St. Patrick's church that day the masses will be at 5, 7 and 8 o'clock. In preparation for the feast, confessions are to be heard Wednesday, beginning at 3 and 7 p. m. Friday, Nov. 2nd, is the feast of All Souls, when the hours for masses will be 5.30, 7 and 8. Confessions the previous day will be from 3 to 6 and from 7 to 8.

Making the announcements at the 7.30 mass Sunday morning, the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May spoke of the opportunity which this season affords those who would assist their dead, so greatly loved in life, yet oftentimes apparently forgotten by the living. The communion of saints is a belief of great consolation to Catholics, who know that death is not all—that the church militant here can aid the church suffering, those unhappy souls detained in a probation state until rendered worthy to see God, to join the church triumphant. Their state at present may be ours sooner than we realize, the preacher declared, while urging the people to take advantage of the time for special prayer for their dead. The church will remain open until 8 p. m on All Souls' day, Friday.

It was the 22nd Sunday after Pentecost, the gospel read being Matthew 22, 15-21, ending "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's." Monsignor May, assisted by Rev. John J. Reilly, gave holy communion to a large number, including the members of the Rosary society. Mrs. Jeremiah Lynch, president. Sunday afternoon, at 3.30 the same society, the Children of Mary and Immaculate Conception Sodality, preceded by the members of the Holy Angels' sodality dressed in white, marched from the basement chapel to the upper church. Here there was benediction of the blessed sacrament and 15 new members of the Rosary society were formally received by Monsignor May. Beautiful music by the choir, directed by Organist Henry J. LaFontaine, was a feature of the well attended service, which opened with congregational singing of the favorite hymn to the Blessed Virgin, "Mother Dearest, Mother Fairest," and concluded with choir and congregation singing "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name." Throughout the day the altar hangings and vestments were of white and the three altars were adorned with white and gold chrysanthemums.

SUICIDE THEORY FAILS IN DEATH OF TUDISCA

Information that the late Giuseppe Tudisca, Pawcatuck Italian, had been planning to return this week to his wife and family in Italy is taken to indicate that there is small probability that his death was suicidal. His body was found floating in the Mystic river a week ago.

Tudisca was a member of the Italian Fascisti and was one of the men who were attacked in New London on Columbus day, for which assault six local Italians are now awaiting trial in the criminal superior court. When the body was found three theories were advanced: First, that he had been murdered as an aftermath of the local fascisti and anti-fascisti outbreak; secondly, that, prompted by fear, which followed the disturbance, or despondent, because of ill health, he had taken his own life; and third, that he had died from heart failure or other natural cause and that his dead body had fallen into the river.

The last theory was scouted by his relatives and intimates, who said that he had no business being near the Mystic river, and the autopsy which was performed on his body failed to show any indication that heart failure had been responsible for death.

The autopsy likewise showed that there was no water in the lungs, which was taken to indicate that the man was dead before his body entered the water. Evidence of some irritating agency was found in the man's stomach and the state chemist is now making an analysis of this agency to determine whether or not it was poison. If it is found that it was poison, according to the state police, it was either taken by Tudisca with suicidal intent or he was deliberately poisoned and his body thrown into the river.

The fact, however, that he had completed all arrangements to return to Italy even to the extent of booking passage, in the opinion of his friends and relatives, precludes the possibility of suicide and leaves only the theory of murder before the authorities. There were no marks of violence found upon the body, and in the event that the analysis of Tudisca's stomach fails to produce evidences of poison, it is probable that the cause of his death never will be known, nor the mystery of it ever solved.

SALVATION ARMY SPEAKERS AND BAND SPEND BUSY DAY IN NORWICH

There was a large attendance at the community service held Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church under the auspices of the Salvation Army in its annual budget campaign.

Col. Walter Jenkins, from the national headquarters of the Salvation Army located in New York city, who was the speaker on the evening, gave a stirring address and the South Manchester band and male chorus delivered a splendid program of vocal and instrumental selections. Col. Jenkins, who is an officer with 46 years' experience in Salvation Army work and is national secretary, assistant to Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army, spoke before the assemblage upon the topic, Christ Is Our Salvation. He was introduced by Brigadier Albert E. Bates, divisional officer of Connecticut western Massachusetts and Vermont with headquarters at Hartford.

In part Col. Jenkins spoke as follows: I am wondering whether you people here are properly sheltered. Some year or two ago we were startled by the Mississippi river breaking its bank and the water rushing down through the valley. The water covered a wide area, making a large number of people homeless, many of whom perished. A little while later we read about the breaking of the dam near Los Angeles. What a stir it gave to out hearts. Only a few months ago our hearts were again stirred when we read about the hurricane, which swept over Porto Rico and up through Florida, leaving in its wake great destruction. Two thousand, eight hundred people perished in this hurricane.

All these people were trusting to some shelter, but before the fury of the gale their shelter proved to be shelterless. There is no man or woman who does not have some kind of shelter, but unfortunately in the stress of the hour of the storm I fear many of them find the folly and weakness of trusting to unsufficient shelter. We need a shelter if we have a guilty conscience. Some people with guilty consciences try to quit it or stop it, that is the guilt of one's conscience. We may drink to quit it. They carry about them some guilty experience and they don't know where to escape. The shelter they have gone to has not been the proper one to quit its scourge. We need a shelter. There is a shelter. We got to get rid of it. They try this and that to overcome the power of sin. Sometimes they get their shelter.

Jesus Christ, our savior, is equal to the answering of every plea of conscience. He's got a way of quieting it. The religion of Jesus Christ comes to a man and corrects the wrongs. The salvation of Christ does that. It makes a black heart white. Does your shelter do that to you? Thank God there is such a one. There is sufficient refuge in Christ. I wonder whether you have found that refuge. I wonder how many are rejoicing in the sufficiency of the refuge that Christ provides. There is salvation in Him—salvation from sin and death.

SOUTH MANCHESTER BAND PUT IN FULL DAY HERE

The South Manchester Salvation Army band consisting of thirty musicians, who in their daily walk of life are merchants, teachers and artisans, but who give their entire spare time to the service of the Salvation Army, left South Manchester at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, arriving here at 10:30. The band proceeded to the Johnson home and Rockrock Home on the Norwich Town green and played several sacred selections. The first service of the day in which the band took part was at Norwich Town Congregational church, rendering several vocal and instrumental selections. Colonel Jenkins, national secretary of the Salvation army and the second ranking officer in the organization, gave a thrilling religious address.

At the same hour at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Brigadier A. E. Bates gave a talk on the tenth chapter of St. John's gospel, on the verse: "Other sheep I have that are not of this fold. Them also I must bring and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." A quartette of the band, composed of Harold Turkington, Howard Leggett, H. Lyon and Lester Larder, sang several sacred songs.

At the First Baptist church at 10:30 the Salvation Army Hartford trio, consisting of Adjutant Alfred and Mrs. Pickering and Captain John Sarer, sang several religious selections. Adjutant Heard was the speaker at the service.

Trip to State Hospital

At 12:45 the band arrived at the state hospital, where they were the guests of Dr. Elijah S. Burdsall, superintendent of the institution. The band was immediately conducted to the staff dining room where they were served with an excellent luncheon consisting of home baked bread, roast beef, sweet potatoes, creamed parsnips, boiled potatoes, cream and coffee with mince pie as dessert. Dr. Burdsall joined the officers at the table and proved a very friendly host. Dr. Burdsall bears his forty-six years very lightly, looking more like a man not past thirty-five. However he feels greatly the responsibility of his charge and speaks very enthusiastically about his work. In a conversation with Colonel Jenkins, who attended the luncheon, Dr. Burdsall said that the work which he is doing is a great happiness to him as he is able to help a part of humanity who need all kindness and humane consideration. Dr. Burdsall said that the state hospital comprises 71 buildings of various kinds, that they house over 2,200 inmates and with over 450 people making up the doctors, staff of attendants and nurses and other workers in the institution. To give an idea of the work connected with the institution Dr. Burdsall said the food consumption for one day is of a vast variety and of great quantity. The milk consumed per day is at least 900 quarts, the meat used per day is more than 2,500 pounds; the bread baked daily in the hospital baking plant, which is one of the finest in the country, consumes eight barrels of flour. The quantity of vegetables and fruit used daily is in equal proportion. The inmates attend church service every Sunday morning with a local minister officiating, and every Tuesday evening they are given a moving picture show in the large auditorium which has a seating capacity of over 1,000 people.

As the band lined up at the table Brigadier Bates asked them to sing grace which was rendered very impressively. Campaign Secretary E. J. McCabe in a few chosen words thanked Dr. Burdsall for his kind courtesy and hospitality and for the fine luncheon which the officers and men enjoyed greatly after the strenuous forenoon effort. After luncheon the band led by D. Burdsall, Col. Jenkins, Brigadier Bates and band leader David Addy marched around the hospital grounds and played several lively marches. As the beautiful music spread over the hospital grounds and over the Thames river reverberating in a musical echo through all the buildings, the inmates who were too ill to attend the concert in the auditorium crowded around the windows receiving the band with shouts of joy and handclapping.

At the auditorium about 1,000 patients with their attendants were able to be present at the concert. As the beautiful music filled the great hall the audience was greatly moved, some of them shed tears, while others shouted with joy. They all felt the effect of the music, which speaks the language of all people and appeals to the heart of all mankind. As the band appeared on the stage they were given a great ovation. Dr. Burdsall joined the band on the stage and his appearance brought a round of great applause. In a few words Dr. Burdsall introduced Colonel Jenkins and Brigadier Bates who received a cordial greeting. Brigadier Bates thanked Dr. Burdsall for the privilege of permitting the South Manchester band and the Salvation Army offering their services to the hospital sufferers. He said that the Salvation Army and the band are very happy to be able to bring a little joy to the sufferers. The speaker received a very enthusiastic response when he humorously said that the band in order to play well must be well fed, and inasmuch as Dr. Burdsall provided a generous luncheon the band was primed to do their best. The concert began with a march, followed by a well rendered vocal hallelujah in which the entire band participated. A particularly pleasing number followed, entitled: "American Melodies Number One"—a Salvation Army composition. Brigadier Bates elicited another round of applause when he said that all the men in the band worked in various vocations and during Sunday and most evenings they offered their entire spare time to the service of the Salvation Army without receiving one cent of pay. The inmates of the hospital greatly enjoyed the old American melodies which brought to some the recollection of times of old. A specially fine solo was rendered by Robert Richardson on the sousaphone, the largest instrument in the band. Harold Turkington, bandmaster of the South Manchester high school, played a very fine piano selection which was greatly appreciated. A male chorus followed, entitled: "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," led by Chorus Leader Fred Clough.

Colonel Jenkins was introduced by Brigadier Bates as the second highest ranking officer in the Salvation army, with a service of forty-six years of untiring effort in the cause of humanity. Brigadier Bates said that a great deal of the success of the organization is due to the unstinted sacrifice and labor of Colonel Jenkins. The latter gave a short address speaking in highest terms of both Hoover and Smith, one of whom will lead the great American nation in its Christian march in the next four years. The speaker spoke of the great heart of the American nation and of the religion and morals which urges them on to a great destiny. Colonel Jenkins also spoke of the great service which the American people render to humanity. The concert ended with a lively march amidst great applause from the entire gathering. As the audience rose Mrs. Colonel Jenkins gave the benediction. Dr. Burdsall expressed his great delight over the success of the concert and the pleasure it afforded to the men and women under his charge.

Trip to Uncas-on-Thames

At three in the afternoon the band arrived at Uncas-on-Thames and were received by Dr. Robt. G. Urquhart who acted as host in the absence of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell. Dr. Urquhart conducted the band to the lawn in front of the men's infirmary where about 30 bed patients were greatly cheered by the music. Those who could make their way to the windows came forth to enjoy the concert. The band opened with a march entitled: "Rock Ferr." Brigadier Bates made a short address offering the Salvation Army cheer to the sufferers and called upon Adjutant Pickering who offered a prayer for the welfare of the patients. The next number played by the band was a musical selection entitled: "My Jesus," followed by a Negro spiritual chorus entitled: "Good News." Robert Richardson rendered a solo on the sousaphone and Chorus Leader Fred Clough led the band in a vocal number entitled: "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." Colonel Jenkins followed with an inspiring religious address offering hope and consolation to the sick and sufferers also assuring the patients that both he and the band were happy to be able to render a little service for the pleasure of the patients.

Adjoining the men's infirmary is a building housing 120 ambulatory patients. These patients crowded all the windows of the building and greatly enjoyed the concert as evidenced by their enthusiastic applause.

At another wing of the sanatorium where the women's infirmary is situated the band played several musical numbers which were equally enjoyed and appreciated. The first number was a chorus: "Silver Threads Among the Gold." At the touching music the women patients were affected to tears of joy. "Standing in the Need of Prayer" was the next number rendered, Bandmaster Addy led the song with the band joining in the chorus producing a thrilling effect. The music was varied with a snappy march followed by a vocal number entitled: "Jesus Thou Art Everything to Me," which was led by Brigadier Bates. The concert finished with "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," led by Chorus Leader Fred Clough. Adjutant Heard gave a prayer before leaving the grounds.

Hugh Campbell, father of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, attended the concert and expressed his great delight at the pleasure afforded to the patients. Mr. Campbell added that it was indeed an inspiring afternoon. Dr. Urquhart in behalf of Dr. Campbell and the patients thanked the band for the pleasure and recreation afforded to the patients and assured them that the concert was greatly enjoyed by the patients, staff and a large gathering of visitors who stopped to listen to the band.

Concert at Union Square

The band arrived at Union Square at 4 o'clock and took its place upon the city band stand put up for the occasion. City Treasurer Charles Colt, in behalf of his honor Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, who was unavoidedly absent, welcomed Col. Jenkins, Brigadier Bates and the South Manchester band to Norwich. Mr. Colt praised the work being done in Norwich by the Salvation Army and expressed the hope and confidence that the people of Norwich will generously contribute to raise the $5,000 which the organization needs to carry on its charitable work during the coming year.

The concert opened with a march entitled: "The Advance," Harold Turkington accompanied by the band gave a cornet solo entitled: "Jesus is Strong to Deliver." Mr. Turkington is one of the finest musicians in the state and his rendition was greatly enjoyed. A Negro spiritual song entitled: "Little David," was the next vocal number. It was conducted by Chorus Leader Fred Clough with the bandleader leading the song in which the band joined in chorus producing a beautiful effect. "American Melodies No. 2," a Salvation Army composition, was the next number offered. The selection was thrilling with martial music. Adjutant Heard was called upon to give a word of testimony. The adjutant has a very powerful voice which filled the entire square and was heard by all the people around the square. The next musical number was: "Saints of God" followed by a male chorus: "Hark the Gospel News is Sounding," which was very charmingly rendered by the entire band.

Before the concert finished Col. Jenkins gave a word of inspiration to those who work in the interest of humanity. The colonel spoke of God's love for mankind and that the Salvation Army invites and receives the sinner with hope for his regeneration and repentance. He also thanked the people of Norwich for the generous support which they are giving the Salvation Army organization. A large gathering of people and an equally large number of automobiles lined the entire square, and the band received generous applause after every number rendered. The speakers were equally well received.

At 6 in the evening at the Salvation Army headquarters, 10 Cliff street, three reels of moving pictures were shown by Louis M. Crandall, chairman of last year's campaign. The pictures portrayed some of last year's activities of the Salvation Army. Prominent in the pictures was Brigadier A. E. Bates, Adjutant Pickering, Band Leader Addy and his famous Salvation Army band, Campaign Secretary E. J. McCabe and Howard Ludlow of the Y. M. C. A. who supervised the young people's outing and took care of all sports and athletic events.

LUNCHEON GIVEN FOR MENTAL HYGIENE COMMITTEE

Mrs. John P. Huntington, representing Norwich, attended last Thursday, a tea given by Mrs. Leonard Daggett at her home in New Haven, to the educational committee of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene which inaugurated the state-wide educational program of the committee. Dr. Lloyd J. Thompson, clinical director of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, first explained the need for professional guidance in attaining mental health. Dr. Thompson believes there are few homes where there is no difficult child or schools or colleges where no students are in some way maladjusted.

Miss Hester B. Crutcher, executive secretary of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, then discussed the educational work of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, whose main tenets are protection of the public from charlatans, disseminating of general mental hygiene knowledge by the recognition of mental hygiene as a public health problem, and by the study of and adaptation to community needs, and third, work with interested organizations.

Twenty members of the committee were present, representing 11 cities and towns, and a lively informal discussion of problems followed the two talks.

NORTHFIELD CLUB MET WITH HANOVER CLUB

The fall meeting of the New London county Northfield club was held Saturday with Mrs. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover, with Mrs. Harry E. Langworthy of Westerly, the president, conducting the business meeting.

After devotions by Rev. Mr. Stone and some items of business, George S. Palmer of New London, one of the trustees of the Northfield schools, was introduced as the speaker of the afternoon. Mr. Palmer gave a thoughtful and sympathetic sketch of the character and work of D. L. Moody, the founder of the school. Mr. Palmer knew Mr. Moody personally and spoke from personal contact with the founder and more intimate knowledge of the schools as a trustee for many years. Palmer Hall, a beautiful new recitation building, erected at a cost of $200,000, with a generous endowment, was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer.

After Mr. Palmer's address, Mrs. Palmer also contributed to the pleasure of the occasion by singing, as she has often done before the students at Northfield.

Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Stone, and after a pleasant social hour the members of the club adjourned with very delightful impressions of the meeting in the Hanover parsonage among the pines.

TWO IN MYSTIC WERE ARRESTED IN RAIDS

Charged with violation of the liquor laws, Quinto Basili, 4 School street, Mystic, and Mrs. Joseph Radiconi, 42 Washington street, Mystic, were arrested late Friday when a squad of state troopers from the Groton barracks raided their houses. The squad was composed of Troopers Arthur Whitmarsh, William Visokay, Bernard E. Kenerson and Peter Bush. At Basili's home five gallons of alcohol, one gallon of gin and one gallon of whiskey were seized, while at Mrs. Radiconi's residence five gallons of alcohol, three gallons of gin, seven pint bottles of gin and ten pint bottles of whiskey were seized.

Basili and Mrs. Radiconi were held in bonds of $1,000 each for appearance in the Stonington town court Tuesday.

LOST HIS GLASSES BUT NOT OTHERWISE HURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 28—Joseph Morin, 58, of 16 Union street, lost his glasses, but was not otherwise injured, when he was run down this afternoon at Ash and Main streets by an automobile driven by Charles M. Breault of 2 Anthony street. Mr. Morin was taken to the hospital to see if he were injured.

On a reckless driving charge, after he had backed into the Hickey estate block on Union street this afternoon, doing about $20 damage, Wilfred J. Gagnon of 91 Willowbrook street was arrested by Officer William Hurley. Gagnon did not stop to see how much damage he had done, but David Williams took the number of the machine, which belongs to Yvonne Christien of 32 Ives street.

DID RECKLESS DRIVING IN TAFTVILLE NEIGHBORHOOD

After the automobile he was driving in Taftville Saturday night had run into two other machines, Kenneth West, 21, a sailor, was arrested by Officer Paquette on the charge of reckless driving and driving without his operator's license.

West was brought to police headquarters and will appear in the city court.

VOLUNTOWN MAN WAS PLACED UNDER ARREST

William Richotte, 19, of Voluntown, was arrested late Saturday night by Deputy Sheriff William McGuire of Baltic on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was brought to Norwich police headquarters, where a doctor who examined him pronounced him under the influence.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel N. Southwick of 36 Church street, Groton, are to observe the 50th anniversary of their marriage today (Monday) at their home.

They were married in Wakefield, R. I., Oct. 29, 1878, by Rev. Edwin S. Wheeler, pastor of the Wakefield Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. Southwick have made their home in Groton for 21 years.

COULD NOT SLEEP NIGHTS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. Ana Bezar, 196 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

TESTIFIES IN PENN. CASE INVOLVING $200,000 ESTATE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—Detective Sergt. John Cavanaugh has returned to New London, having been in court attendance at Allentown, Pa., for several days in the case of Raffaela Genovese against the Lehigh Valley Trust company, guardian of Catherino and Theresa Genovese, of whom the plaintiff and Louis Genovese, murdered two years ago in a gambling brawl, were the parents. The plaintiff seeks to collect $200,000, the amount of the inventory of the estate of Genovese. Judge Richard W. Iobat, in civil court, directed a return of verdicts to the two propositions considered: "Was and is Raffaela Genovese the common law wife of Louis Genovese, deceased?" and "Was the withdrawal of Raffaela from the common habitation of herself and Genovese justified?" and in favor of the trust company. The Genovese woman had not resided with Genovese for about ten years and during a part of that time she was a resident of New London. It was for the purpose of Detective Sergeant Cavanaugh testifying as to the habits of the woman while in New London that the officer was summoned to Allentown.

SPECIAL MATCHES IN CITY PINOCHLE LEAGUE

This (Monday) evening at the Moose Home the teams representing the Moose and Eagles will meet the American I. C. H. Pinochle club, the latter being the club that has entered the city pinochle league in place of the Sons of Hermann which withdrew from the league at the last meeting of the executive board.

Manager Willis of the new comers feels confident that on the entering night for his club he can count on a double victory.

These games are to start promptly at eight o'clock.

The next regular league night will be Nov. 1 at the Foresters club on Shetucket street.

Dolbeare at Mr. and Mrs. George D. Dolbeare at their Lake Mashapaug camp. Mr. and Mrs. Dolbeare will return to town today (Monday).

ARMY VICTORY OVER YALE MARKS SOLDIERS AS STRONG BIDDERS FOR TITLE

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—As great a collection of individual exploits as the gridirons of the east, south and west have known in some time has cleared the autumn air, revealing the outstanding college football championship contenders in bold relief against a drab background of shattered rival hopes.

Thanks to the prowess of Red Cagle, whose flying feet blazed a trail of defeat for Yale, West Point's battered but triumphant eleven has moved another notch toward eastern as well as national honors. Red himself is well along the trail that leads to All-American recognition after those twin dashes of 52 and 73 yards for touchdowns that thrilled yesterday's biggest football crowd, 76,000 in the Yale bowl.

The Army now has the unusual distinction of trimming Harvard and Yale on successive Saturdays, by decisive margins. This achievement stands out all the more as a result of Harvard's stunning overthrow of Dartmouth in an upset that ranks with Navy's defeat of Pennsylvania.

The Cadets still have Notre Dame, Nebraska and Stanford to face, anything but an easy prospect, since the latter pair now look to be the strongest in their respective sections.

While Cagle, the streak of Louisiana lightning, played the main role in the latest gridiron drama, he wasn't the only ball carrier in the spotlight. Capt. Jimmy Armistead of Vanderbilt scored four touchdowns as the Commodores kept pace with the Southern conference leaders by beating Virginia. Ken Strong, ace of the New York university scoring juggernaut, accounted for 23 of his team's 47 points against Colgate in another game that was surprisingly one-sided. Nebraska's great fullback, Blue Howell, was the big gun in an attack that smashed Missouri's "Big Six" title hopes by a score of 24 to 0. Capt. Howard Harpster of Carnegie again proved himself one of the east's outstanding stars by scoring the touchdown that humbled the erstwhile championship Pitt Panthers.

These luminaries all lived up to advance notices, justifying the blast of the ballyhoo, but at Iowa City the spotlight reserved for McLain and Nagurski, Iowa and Minnesota fullbacks, shifted to other stars. Iowa won this titanic "Big Ten" struggle by a single point margin, 7 to 6, with two substitutes compiling the winning points after Fred Hovde had run 91 yards for Minnesota's only score in a last period flourish.

The net results of the last October gridiron whirl cut down the contending field appreciably. Dartmouth, Yale and Pennsylvania skidded abruptly from the eastern peak as Army moved along at a swift pace, followed by New York university, Carnegie, Georgetown and Boston college. All five of these eastern teams have spotless slates and impressive records. Two of them, Georgetown and N. Y. U., meet in New York next Saturday in a battle between two of the country's most formidable scoring machines.

Ohio State, Iowa and Illinois, the 1927 champions, survive the "Big Ten" grapple. They are the only teams neither beaten nor tied.

Nebraska looms now as the "Big Six" favorite in the Missouri Valley group, while in the Southern conference area, Tennessee, Vanderbilt Georgia Tech, Florida and Clemson—all triumphant last week over conference rivals—are setting the pace for the big field.

The University of Texas stands out in the Southwestern conference, as a result of its second straight victory in the title chase over Rice, but faces a crucial test this week against Southern Methodist. The 1927 champions, Texas Aggies, met their third straight setback at the hands of Arkansas.

The University of Utah, by downing Colorado university in decisive fashion, strengthened its claims to the Rocky Mountain conference leadership, now shared with Colorado college.

The lull in the Pacific Coast conference race was costly for California, which provided another big league victim for the San Francisco Olympic club, while Stanford and Southern California beat minor rivals in polishing up for their big battle this week.

STRONG HOLDS PLACE AS LEADING SCORER IN EAST

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—Ken Strong, ace of New York university's backfield, rapidly is distancing his rivals in the race for individual football scoring honors in the east. Scoring three touchdowns and five points after touchdowns against Colgate yesterday, Strong boosted his total for the season to 91.

Gulick of Hobart, holding fifth place a week ago, jumped into the runner-up position with a three-touchdown splurge against Clarkson. He has scored 60 points so far. Langmaid of Williams failed to add to his total against Columbia and dropped back to third place with 56 points. Bienstock of City College of New York is fourth with 55; Marsters of Dartmouth and Rodriguez of West Virginia Wesleyan tied for fifth with 49.

Strong has compiled his imposing total with the aid of 12 touchdowns and 19 points after touchdowns, giving him the lead in both of these departments as well as in total points.

The ten leading scorers as compiled from a representative group of eastern colleges follow:

FREE-FOR-ALL FIGHT FOLLOWS AMATEUR GAME

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 28—(AP)—One man was severely injured and two football teams landed in jail after a free-for-all fight had broken up a game between two amateur teams here today. A squad of police was called to quell the disorder.

Abraham Coffran, 21, of Cambridge, received injuries to his leg and possibly internal injuries, when he was run over by a car said to have been operated by Paul Hoffman of Malden, who was fleeing the riot. Coffman was taken to the Municipal hospital.

The fight started near the end of a game between a football club of Malden and the Cambridge Catholic Juniors' club when the Malden team walked off the field in protest against a referee's decision. Fist fights broke out among the players and 200 spectators.

When the police arrived, they escorted members of both teams to the East Cambridge jail where they were later released after questioning.

ONE KILLED IN FIGHT FOLLOWING FOOTBALL GAME

POMONA, Cal., Oct. 28.—(AP)—An investigation which officials believed would terminate athletic relations between Chaffey Union high school of Ontario and Pomona high school, and probably result in arrests, was under way today following the annual street battle which ended in one death and serious injury to two others here late yesterday.

An inquest, which will be held tomorrow over the body of Gilbert Hull, who was killed when his automobile crashed into a telephone pole during a running a running battle, was expected to bring out the facts of the case.

The battle, which annually followed the football clash between the two schools, is said to have developed into a free-for-all in which outsiders participated. Principals H. P. Reynolds, of Pomona and Merton E Hill, of Chaffey Union, today declared they had cautioned their proteges against entering into the contest and that not more than ten per cent. of the 300 who took part in the affray were students.

Civic leaders of both towns were outspoken today in their condemnation of the "apparent laxity" of officials in allowing the pitched battle to take place.

Chief of Police English, of Pomona, where the fight occurred, said that arrests would probably follow the inquest. Considerable damage, which included many broken windows in the sector where the battle occurred, and the depletion of orange groves, and tomato patches, was reported by property owners today.

LOESER GETS TWO BROKEN RIBS IN ARMY GAME

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 28—(AP)—Yale came through the Army fray with a number of minor injuries and one serious hurt. Loeser, substitute center for Charlesworth, was taken from the game with severe bruises to his side. On examination at the infirmary today, it developed that the second string pivot man was suffering from two fractured ribs. According to Yale officials Loeser will be out of the lineup for at least three weeks and possibly for the remainder of the season.

Garvey, Hoben, Hall and Crile, will be out of the game for the balance of this week and according to Coach Mal Stevens, will not be used in the Dartmouth clash Saturday.

The extent of their injuries could not be ascertained and all the Yale mentor would say, was they would not be in the Dartmouth game.

Stevens said today that he intended to give his eleven a thorough going over this week and will start off on a hard week's work tomorrow afternoon. It is probable that new faces may be seen when the Eli squad lines up against Dartmouth. A shake-up in the line seems to be in the air.

Yale will scout Dartmouth this year for the first time. The Hanover college has had several men at the Yale bowl this season and both schools agreed on the same course.

GEORGETOWN LEADS EASTERN TEAMS IN POINT SCORING

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—Georgetown not only kept her record clear of defeat but increased her lead in the race for football team scoring honors in the east over the week-end. The high powered Washington machine rolled up 35 points against Duke yesterday and brought its total for the season to 240.

New York university's overwhelming victory over Colgate sent the Violet into runner-up position with 176. The two leaders will battle out the question of point scoring in a duel of their own at the Yankee stadium next Saturday.

Carnegie Tech, another undefeated team, holds third place in point scoring with 167. Lafayette, beaten by West Virginia and tied by Bucknell, is third with 163, a point behind Pennsylvania, which bowed to Navy yesterday.

Only five teams in the east can boast of a clean defensive record. Temple, one of the five undefeated and untied teams, is one of them.

The others are Princeton, Lowell Textile, Connecticut Aggies and Camisius, all of whom have been held to scoreless ties.

HAGEN AND FARRELL LOSE EXHIBITION MATCH

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Walter Hagen, unofficial world's champion golfer and holder of the British open title, and Johnny Farrell, American open champion, were defeated here today in the first of a series of matches that will take the mto the Pacific coast. The stars bowed to the prowess of Ed Dudley, Hollywood, Calif. professional, and Horton Smith, Joplin professional, who was semi-finalist in the recent national professional golfers' association tournament.

Although cold weather hampered the players, Smith shot a brilliant 71, three under par which was good enough to win. Hagen was second low with a 73. Dudley took 75 and Farrell required two more strokes, 77.

FOOTBALL PLAYER DIES WHEN HE BREAKS NECK

NEW HAVEN, Oct 28—(AP)—Therwin Kelly, 19, of Trucksville, Pa., who received a broken neck in a football scrimmage Friday, died at the New Haven hospital tonight. Kelly was a freshman at Dr. Arnold's gymnastic college here and during a football game with Milford preparatory school, collided with another player. He was dazed by the impact and when he attempted to rise, was unable to do so. He complained of numbness in the body and an examination at the hospital revealed one broken and one dislocated vertebrae in his neck.

SIX-DAY BIKE RACE GETS UNDER WAY AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Sixteen teams, composed of prominent American and European riders, started out tonight in the six day bicycle race at the Broadway Armory.

All the riders are competing independent of the National Cycling association, which threatens to place the entire squad on its black list. The race, however, will be conducted under the same rules as those of the cycle association. The track is 10 laps to a mile. Three sprints will be run off daily.

AGGIES SCORE ONE TOUCHDOWN TO BEAT VT.

BURLINGTON, VT., Oct. 28—(AP)—The University of Vermont lost a close game to the football team of the Connecticut Agricultural college yesterday by a 6 to 0 score. The teams fought evenly throughout but in the third period Fisher dashed 25 yards around the Vermont left end for the only touchdown. The loss was Vermont's fifth of the season.

MINNEAPOLIS AWARDED THE NAT. SKATING CHAMPIONSHIP

CHICAGO, Oct. 28—(AP)—Minneapolis was awarded the national outdoor skating championship, St. Louis the national indoor skating championship and Detroit the international indoor skating championship by the Amateur Skating Union of the United States today.

Dates for the championships have not been announced.

The union also selected William Carroll Hill of Boston as president; Joseph K. Savage, New York, first vice president; R. Goodwin, Cleveland, second vice president; H. C. Loughran, Detroit, third vice president, and H. C. Fisher, Andover, Mass., secretary-treasurer.

After a year's dissension, caused by refusal of several minor organizations to follow the substitution of the old International Skating Union of America by the Amateur Skating Union of America, the new organization affiliated itself with the National Amateur Athletic union today. All of the dissenting organizations declared themselves in favor of affiliating with the parent body except the Western Skating association, which has its headquarters at Chicago.

The union also voted to restore Francis J. Allen of Chicago to good standing.

PRO. BASKETBALL LEAGUE ORGANIZED AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—The National League of Professional Basketball clubs was organized at the Commodore hotel here today when representatives of teams in New York, Brooklyn, Rochester, Philadelphia, Trenton, Paterson and Green Point L. I., joined the new circuit. Another meeting will be held here later this week for the final selection of players by the league clubs, and at this time another franchise will be awarded to round out an eight-club league.

The New York club will be under the direction of "Judge" Grimth, and will play its games at the Olympia Spoting club. John A. O'Brien, former president of the Metropolitan league was elected yesterday to head the new circuit.

CALDWELL STARS AS GIANTS BEAT YANKEES

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—The New York Giants, with Bruce Caldwell, former Yale star, occupying the spotlight, took their inter-city professional football rivals, the Yankees, into their camp today, 10 to 7, before a crowd of 15,000 at the Yankee stadium.

Caldwell scored a touchdown for the Giants in the first quarter and a field goal from the 35 yard line in the third period, McBride, former Syracuse ace, tallied the other point after Caldwell's touchdown.

The Yankees, although showing a strong running attack build around Gibby Welch, Pittsburgh's 1927 all-American halfback, were unable to score until the final period. Welch went over, after receiving a pass from the 15 yard line, and Kelly booted the extra point.

WORK ON NEW GYM FOR HARVARD STARTS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 28—(AP)—First active steps toward the erection of a new gymnasium and swimming pool at Harvard university, will be taken tomorrow when workmen will begin to raze a block of frame houses on the site of the proposed building.

Among the houses to be torn down is that in which Theodore Roosevelt lived while studying at Harvard. A bronze tablet erected there to his memory has been removed for safe keeping. The old Hicks house, which was built before the Revolution and still stands on the site of the proposed gymnasium building, will be untouched until a decision as to the possibility of its being moved.

MANY UPSETS IN SATURDAY GAMES HAVE FOOTBALL DOPESTERS GROGGY

By Edward J. Neil
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—The bomb that has fizzed and sputtered, threatening each Saturday to blow up and turn eastern football topsy-turvey in one great explosion, finally has gone off—and pieces of "dope" are still fluttering down and about the ears of the crestfallen critics.

Each Saturday has seen its upsets, breaking out in the most unexpected places, but it took Saturday, the 27th, to up-end things all along the line, and wreck prognosticators even at some of the points throughout the eastern seaboard where victory perching on the banner named for it.

A Navy team, suddenly come to life and realization of its power after three defeats in four games, touched off the blast by sweeping over Pennsylvania, undefeated and unscored upon until the Middies took the field. Harvard, another sleeping giant, chose this day to rise and smite Dartmouth's favored host. Cornell held Princeton to victory by the margin of a single field goal and Yale was impotent in the face of Red Cagle and Army's crushing attack.

When the day was over only eight teams in the section were left without defeat or tie on their records. Of these only Army, New York university, Carnegie Tech and Georgetown, through their respective schedules, could dream of sectional supremacy or the national pigskin crown.

So general was the uprising that even winning teams caught the fever and slaughtered opposition considered dangerous indeed. The violent violets of New York university, with Ken Strong running wild to score 23 points swamped the Colgate team that held them last year to a scoreless tie, 47 to 6, Fordham raced through Washington and Jefferson, 34 to 0, and Georgetown smothered Duke, 35 to 0.

But for the most part it was the day of the under dog. The Harvard eleven, powerful but unwieldy, beaten by Army and never impressive, found itself against the Hanover warriors and raced away with a 19 to 7 triumph. Dartmouth's vaunted attack spattered helplessly against the Crimson forward wall while Art French and Dave Guarnaccia backs, who have been bidding years for stardom, ripped the Indian menace to pieces.

Down in the Yale bowl, where 78,000 sat in on the death, Red Cagle added another scalp to his private list of victims. With dazzling runs of 73 and 56 yards, the Army ace who has treated Notre Dame and Navy the same way on other days, led the West Point cadets to an 18 to 6 conquest. Yale had little chance against the Army stalwarts, blessed by the presence of the ghostly Cagle, and the sole Eli point resulted from recovery of a fumble.

Down with the hitherto undefeated Elis crashed another favorite in the race for the eastern crown. This time it was the Navy squad, beaten on successive Saturdays by Davis Elkins, Boston college and Notre Dame, that rose from its recumbent position and swept Pennsylvania from the boards by the margin of a single touchdown, 6 to 0.

Navy did the deed through the medium of the one single successful onward pass the Middies threw all day, a perfect effort from Gannon to Morel that covered 36 yards in the second period. The tricky Pennsylvania hidden ball could make little headway against Navy's new found power and Pennsylvania's sole scoring threat crumpled up on the Middie 7-yard line.

Carnegie Tech, rising steadily in power, edged out Pittsburgh, 6 to 0, and Columbia managed to down Williams as expected 20 to 6.

Rutgers swamped Delaware, 34 to 0 and Villanova kept up a winning march against Lebanon Valley, 19 to 0.

But Syracuse could do no better than tie Penn State, 6 to 6; West Virginia rose against Lafayette, 17 to 0 in a crushing upset; Holy Cross deadlocked with Marquette, 6-6, and Brown had a tremendous job eliminating Tufts from the undefeated lists, 19 to 13. Gettysburg contributed to the uproar by downing Bucknell, 14 to 12 and Colby overthrew Bowdoin, 14 to 0; Amherst was held to a 20 to 20 draw by Wesleyan.

Favorites came through as Lehigh defeated Muhlenberg, 13 to 7, Boston college upset Boston university, 27 to 7, Temple raged through Providence, 41 to 0.

TORRINGTON BOOMS AS STATE FOOTBALL CHAMPION

The further advance of Torrington towards the state title with a 4 to 0 victory over New Haven Commercial defeat of New Haven Hillhouse and return to winning form of such leading contenders as the two Bridgeport schools, Harding and Central, Hartford Public and Bulkeley of Hartford and the Academy furnished the features in state grid clashes among the high schools this week.

Torrington right now looks like the best bet for the bunting although in the next four weeks anything may happen. Harding gave Stamford a setback with a 6 to 0 win Saturday while Central beat Wilby, 13 to 0 Friday. Hartford High, in a triangular league game, applied the first defeat of the year to Hillhouse of New Haven and Bulkeley of Hartford surprised with a decisive 34 to 6 win over East Hartford. The Academy beat Westerly, which in the second half, was in decisive fashion. Meriden beat Crosby in an unimportant tilt.

Bulkeley of New London gained its first victory of the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island conference but has little or no chance to get very far this year. Putnam continued its winning streak by spilling Tourtellotte very easily and Stonington, which shares with Putnam the undefeated crown of teams in these parts trampled Chapman Tech, 20 to 0. Meriden beat Crosby 14-7. It is still quite a race throughout the Nutmeg State and the month of November should see some exciting clashes.

Spectators Stop Soccer Game.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—(AP)—An Eastern Soccer league game between the Hakoahs and the New York Giants, was broken up today when spectators swarmed down on the playing field in protest against the expulsion of two Hakoah players from the game. The game will be re-played. The Hakoahs were leading, 3 to 2, when the game was halted.

KOZIOL ADDS TO HIS K. O. RECORD IN HUB CITY

A. Koziol of Norwich, lightweight amateur of Rhode Island continued along the knockout trail Saturday night at the St. Joseph T. A. B. tournament at Commercial hall in Boston. Two boys fell before the terrific two-handed attack of the rushing champion and when he left the ring he was the most popular person present.

William Whittier of Boston was the first to face the Wildcat of Cranston and Whittier managed to remain on his feet for nearly two rounds before that one on the law that put him out of the running. Next Koziol took on Charles McCool of Medford whom he flattened inside of a round. Koziol was accorded a tremendous ovation as he let the ring and his popularity in Boston makes his appearance there certain during the winter months.

CAL. TO HAVE LARGEST TELESCOPE EVER MADE

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 28—(AP)—The largest telescope ever made, twice as big and four times as powerful as the present greatest instrument, will be erected on some yet undesignated California mountain top. It will be a 200-inch reflector.

Announcement of this plan was made here tonight, and two outstanding aims were outlined. One is the capacity to detect millions of celestial bodies never before seen. The other is organization on a national scope of scientists and business men to insure maximum results.

The announcement was made by the California Institute of Technology, to which the International education board has made an appropriation to build the telescope, laboratories and shops for its operation. The Carnegie institution of Washington and the Mount Wilson Observatory are cooperating.

The present world's largest telescope is the 100-inch reflector on Mount Wilson, California. The 200-inch reflector, as large as the floor of a good-sized room, will have four times the power of the 100-inch.

"The new telescope should render possible the exploration of many island universes' beyond the milky way, the nearest two or three of which are now but slightly known."

FIVE PERSONS KILLED WHEN TRUCK HIT AUTO

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 28—(AP)—Five persons were killed at a street intersection here today when a truck in which four young men were taking an injured companion to a hospital crashed into a large sedan containing a party of Halloween masqueraders.

The dead: Walter Tanzer 21, Mary Mehl 17, Mildred Copriva 17, Henry Schwappler 21, Clayton Copeland 20.

All of the dead except Copeland were riding in a sedan driven by Jack Brada, 24. They were returning from a Halloween party about 3 a. m. Brada was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. The driver of the truck was held on a charge of manslaughter.

MAN SHOT DEAD BY HIS 14 YEAR OLD STEP-SON

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 28—(AP)—Frank Murphy, 41, was shot and killed late today by Howard Bourdon, his 14 year old stepson, because police were told, Murphy was beating the youth's mother.

Murphy became angry, officials reported, because he was buying food for his five stepchildren, Mrs. Murphy said that he started to choke and beat her.

The boy is being held for investigation by the juvenile court.

BIGOTRY CONDEMNED BY SOCIALIST CANDIDATE

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 28—(AP)—Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for president, spoke out plainly before an overflow crowd at the State theatre here this afternoon on "the three pernicious R's of this campaign—rum, race and religion," stressing particularly his desire to be clearly understood on the religious issue.

REVOLUTIONARY CHANGES IN RETAIL DISTRIBUTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28—(AP)—Revolutionary changes in retail distribution methods taking place in the last decade were pointed out in a commerce department bulletin embodying the first results of a trade survey which it is making of the New England region. In spite of growth of automobile traffic and chain store systems, it was concluded that the great volume of retail business in the territory still was in the hands of merchants identified with local communities.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE TO LAUNCH RADIO CAMPAIGN

The National League of Women Voters, which since Jan. 1 has conducted a weekly radio campaign information service for the voters, is to inaugurate a new series of "Voters' Service" programs early in December.

The new series, according to an announcement by Miss Katharine Ludington of Lyme, chairman of the league's radio committee, will present programs designed to "carry over" the interest in campaign issues "into a period when congress and a new administration are embodying the wishes of the voters in legislation and policies."

With the presidential campaign almost at an end, the "Voters' Campaign Information Service" which has been broadcast every Tuesday over a network of 22 stations under the joint sponsorship of the league, and the National Broadcasting company, is temporarily discontinued tomorrow night. The final program of this campaign series will take the form of a last appeal to "get out the vote."

In discussing the launching of a new series, plans for which will be announced more fully after election day, Miss Ludington said:

"Early in January the National Broadcasting company and the National League of Women Voters launched an adventurous experiment dedicated to the service of that portion of the electorate which listens to the radio. It was the first attempt, on a nation-wide scale, to broadcast political education and the sponsors were none too sure how radio fans would receive it.

"This experiment has had nearly ten months' trial and all uncertainty as to its success has passed. The public clearly likes it; more and more stations are carrying it; educators, press and political experts praise it; and now the question is: What next? Do our listeners want more? Will the public care for talks on politics and government in a non-campaign year?

"A second experiment is to be tried. In December we shall launch a new voters' service designed to carry over our interest in campaign issues into the period when congress and later a new administration are embodying the wishes of the voters in concrete legislation and policies."

Women Voters' Discussions

Five round table discussions on methods of carrying on its work will be a feature of the eighth annual convention of the Connecticut League of Women Voters to be held at the Mohican hotel, New London, Nov. 14, 15 and 16. They will be held on the afternoon of the second day, Thursday. Mrs. Ruth McIntire Dadourian of Hartford, chairman of the legal status of women committee, will lead a discussion on "Legislative Methods." At the same time Mrs. James C. Howell of Lakeville, the advisor on young voters, is to conduct the round table on "Use of Questionnaires and the Discussion Method." The hour following there will be three round tables. Miss Ruth B. McIntosh, the secretary of the First New England Region of the National league, is to lead in discussion on the "Use of Publications." Miss Sally Fanny Gleason, field secretary of the Connecticut league, will conduct the round table on "Activity Programs." The round table on "Publicity Methods" will be led by Miss Beatrice H. Maren, the executive secretary and editor of the Bulletin.

Frances Marion, scenario writer and wife of Fred Thomson, western screen actor, was made defendant in a $200,000 alienation of affections suit filed at Los Angeles by Mrs. Genevieve Ross of Riverside, Cal.

BALTIC

REV. W. T. O'BRIEN EULOGIZED BY DIOCESAN NEWSPAPER

The Catholic Transcript (Hartford) says editorially:

"The death of Father William T. O'Brien gives us once more the sad task of recording a vacancy in the ranks of the Hartford Diocesan clergy. Once more it is our duty to give some small measure of tribute to one who has gone to give a last accounting to the Lord in whose service he faithfully lived and happily died.

"Perhaps a key to the character of Father O'Brien may be found in the affection that little children had for him. Truly they loved him. It was no uncommon sight to see them running after him on the street or clustered around him in the yard beside his home, giving visible expression in their own way to their liking of him.

"What quality in this devout and earnest priest attracted children to him is not easy to tell. He had many good points, any one of which may have brought them around him. We think, however, that it was the same virtue which made immediate friends of all who came in contact with him, namely, his kindness.

"Some have said that he possessed good humor. Others attributed zeal to him, charity, amiability and a dozen good qualities. But it is the well-nigh unanimous testimony of all who knew him that Father O'Brien radiated kindness. And we feel that the recording angel will put this down of him before all else, that he was one who loved his fellow men."

Especially among the children was Father O'Brien's influence felt. He was deeply interested in everything that pertains to their welfare. Their education, secular and religious, was one of his particular concerns. His personality drew them to him and made the work that he did with them effective and fruitful.

Father O'Brien is missed also in Hanover. Hardly six months ago he completed in this mission of the Baltic church the handsome new St. Joseph's church for the accommodation of the people there. With this little congregation he worked as zealously as with the greater numbers in Baltic.

MANSFIELD CENTER

USEFULNESS OF LIBRARY IN COMMUNITY SHOWN

The annual meeting of the Mansfield Library association was held at the library Wednesday evening. The president, Alfred Oden, presided. The report of the secretary was given by R. L. Hahn and that of the treasurer by T. Arthur Barrows, who reported a balance of $48.70. The librarian reported an increase in circulation, that for the year ending July 1 being 7,287, and the previous year 6,811. Books were sent to all the nine schools of the town. The number of books reported read was largest at the Hollow school, with Mansfield Depot second and the Ridges third. During the year 213 volumes were added, of which 98 were purchased, 61 received from the state grant and 414 gifts. At present the library owns 4,619 catalogued volumes. The officers elected are: President, Alfred Oden; first vice president, Archibald W. Buchanan; second, L. J. Storrs; secretary, R. L. Hahn; treasurer, T. Arthur Barrows; trustee of funds, Archibald Buchanan; librarian, Miss Elsie Marsh. Miss Sadie Franklin is assistant librarian.

Rev. Vere Abbey of Hartford, state president of the C. E. society, was a guest of the local society at their October business meeting and social Wednesday evening.

The Women's Church guild met Thursday with Mrs. Paul Jansen.

Earl W. Green post, American Legion, has elected and installed as officers: Commander, Ralph Reynolds; first vice commander, Carlton King; second, Harold Janes; chaplain Philip Linderson; finance officer, Arthur Barrows; historian, R. L. Hahn; adjutant, G. C. Milam. The auxiliary officers installed were: President, Mrs. Arthur Macfarland; vice president, Mrs. Reynolds; secretary, Mrs. Willis Homer; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Barrows; chaplain, Mrs. Carlton King; sergeant at arms, Miss Ella Theim.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreesen have named their infant daughter Helen Anita.

To lend a helping hand and voice to the cause of his friend, Congressman John Q. Tilson, floor leader in the national house, who is seeking reelection from the third Connecticut district, Albert Ottinger, attorney-general of New York and republican nominee for governor, spoke at a republican gathering in the Hyperion theatre in New Haven yesterday afternoon.

NO SLACKENING IN BUSINESS WORLD AS NATIONAL ELECTION DRAWS NEAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—(AP)—Business and trade continued to make good progress and maintain an even keel during the past week, with no sign of faltering as the national election drew near.

Major industries progressed satisfactorily, with the metal and related lines still well in the lead. Steel mill activity remained around 90 per cent of capacity, as compared to only about 60 per cent a year ago. Some slight recession seemed in prospect, as buyers in many instances anticipated requirements in September, when prices were advancing.

The year promises to better the previous annual steel production record, chalked up in 1926, by at least 5 per cent. The Bethlehem Steel company reported operations at 94 per cent of capacity, a new high peak for the company, and good demand for all products save railway equipment.

The automotive industry continued its high rate of activity, although there was slight falling off of employment figured at Detroit, the chief center. Building was also carried on at breakneck speed.

Earnings reports from large corporations and railways for the third quarter were highly favorable in a majority of cases. Crude oil refineries in particular showed marked improvement. The first 27 railroads to report September net operating income showed an average increase of about 1 1-2 per cent over September, 1927. Freight car loadings for the second week of October were well in advance of the like week of 1927, and about equal to the week of 1926.

Domestic copper prices were advanced a half cent to 15 3-4 cents a pound, the highest in five years, and other non-ferrous metals were generally firm.

The textile industry once more showed some improvement. A better demand developed for a wide variety of fabrics, and what price changes there were, were upward. In the lumber trade, hardwood buying was reported the best of the year.

Cattle prices rallied this week after a sharp recession, but hog prices dropped to the lowest point in six months and the lowest for this time of year in three years. There seemed little improvement in prospect for wheat prices, but the export movement improved.

Time money rates eased somewhat and brokers quite generally predicted easier credit conditions for the remainder of the year.

AUCTION

Auction Notice

By Witter Bros., Auctioneers, Office 42 Main St., Danielson, Conn. We will sell the entire high grade farming equipment belonging to S. Nikoloff at his farm at Putnam, Conn., located near the Day-Kimball Hospital, on the Pomfret state road, on Saturday, Nov. 3, at 10 o'clock a. m., rain or shine, as described: One pair of fine farm horses, weight about 2600 lbs.; a choice lot of farming tools of all kinds, including a Blizzard cutter and blower, low down manure spreader, 2-horse wagon and 4-wheel cart, double harness and collars, dairy equipment including cream separator, tester, cans and bottles. The Guernsey cattle are a fine and choice lot of individuals in the various stages of milk, including 1 pure bred cow, 1 pure bred heifer, a pure bred bull about four years of age the herd is accredited and never had a reactor. These animals will be sold about 2 o'clock p. m. 30 tons of first class hay, 3 ton of rowen, 1 ton of corn phosphate, 18 tons silage and the silo, 3 chicken houses about 12x15 feet each, 1 brooder house about 7x11 feet, and all of the cow stable equipment, consisting of modern swing stanchions and automatic water fountains. The above described property will be sold between the hours of 12:30 and 2 o'clock p. m. This valuable lot of property goes for the high dollar as Mr. Nikoloff is retiring from the farming business at this time. 2t oc29nov1

NAVY AND COAST GUARDSMEN UNRULY AT NEW LONDON SATURDAY EVENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—Members of the United States navy and coast guard imbibed too freely of liquor Saturday night. Lieut. C. V. Cocion, submarine base, was arrested by Patrolman William Riordan charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He was held in bail of $150 and will be in the police court Monday. His automobile was placed in storage. Philip Ramsay, 28, chief petty officer in the United States Coast Guard, stationed at the state pier, was arrested on a charge of intoxication and breach of the peace. Ramsay, who is a member of the crew of the destroyer Monaghan, hired a public service automobile from John Philopena and after running up a cab bill became ugly and abusive, finally smashing one of the cab windows. Philopena made complaint to the police and Ramsay was arrested by Patrolmen George Latoue and Albert Iverson. He furnished a surety on his bond of $50 for appearance in the police court tomorrow. The third uniformed man to be arrested was Kenneth Shaw, 25, submarine base. Shaw who had been drinking went to Plant hall where a dance was in progress. About a half hour before the dancing was to end, Shaw started a fight and was arrested by Patrolmen Edward Skoczylas and Albert Iverson on a charge of intoxication and breach of the peace. He was not successful in procuring a surety on his bond of $50. During the fight Shaw sustained a cut on his head, which at the office of a physician required several stitches to close.

Two other cases will also be presented, but they are civilians, both on charges of intoxication. One of the young men, although but 24, has been arrested 15 times for intoxication.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY ROUSES LIVELY INTEREST

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—Joseph C. Keefe, chairman of the democratic town committee, states that the rally to be held here Wednesday night is certain to exceed any ever known in this city. Hundreds have made inquiries regarding the parade and it is estimated that there will be thousands in line during the evening. The big feature of the affair will be a mass meeting to be held in the armory.

JEREMIAH SULLIVAN ILL IN BELLEVUE HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—Jeremiah Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Sullivan, 61 Gorton street, is seriously ill in Bellevue hospital, New York. Chief Inspector William Lahey, of the New York department, this afternoon wired the New London police, acquainting them with the young man's condition and requested that his parents be notified. The father of the young man was informed that his son was a patient at the New York hospital.

Navy day was celebrated Saturday, jointly by member of the local coast guard and submarine units. Other than a football game held at the athletic field at the submarine base between the two divisions, there was no formal celebration. The feature of the day was that all vessels in both units were open for inspection to the public. Boats were available at the city pier for transporting visitors to the different ships. Many New Londoners availed themselves of the opportunity of inspecting the sea dogs of Uncle Sam.

A tract of land owned by Kate P. Crouch, located in Sixth avenue, was purchased yesterday by Michael E. O'Connell for $200. The plot was ordered sold by Tax Collector Hibard Alexander to satisfy back taxes in the amount of $196.

Tax Collector Alexander has ordered the sale of three more properties to satisfy back taxes due the city. They are—house and lot located near Tenth street, owned by Frank Rose, taxes due $541.04. Land in Reed street owned by Harry Wolfe, taxes due $392.99. House and lot on Main street owned by Joseph and Emiliga Rzepniewski, taxes due $934.91.

WALTER BARRY'S CONDITION REPORTED SERIOUS SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—The condition of Walter J. Barry, of this city, who was injured in an auto crash at Madison last Monday morning, is reported today as being serious. Yesterday physicians in charge of the case thought the patient had improved since his entrance to the Guilford sanatorium, but this morning a turn for the worse was noted.

NORWICH TRAIN DELAYED BY DERAILED FREIGHT CARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—Trail No. 704, of the Norwich branch of the New Haven railroad, was delayed two hours Saturday morning because of the derailment at Groton of two freight cars. The derailment was caused by the breaking of an arch bar on one of the freight cars of the train after it had passed the signal tower at Groton. The Midway Wrecking company was summoned and within an hour succeeded in clearing the track so that traffic could be resumed.

Mrs. Arthur Beebe, of Niantic; John Bender, Groton; Mrs. William Lloyd and infant son, 194 Connecticut avenue; Miss Helen Crowley, Niantic; Eugene Sullivan, 22 Woodbridge street; Allen Larsen, 63 Raymond street and George Sizer, 118 Howard street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

The funeral of Charles Waschmirsh, of 9 Ledyard street, who died in New York, was held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the high mass of requiem being sung by Rev. George Clark. As a waiting hymn, Edward F Murray, gave "Abide With Me." The bearers were Edward S., James P., Francis W., Ambrose L., Edward J. and Joseph Neilan. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Irving Shafner, 204 Main street reported to the police this morning hat while his automobile was parked in front of his residence last night the lenses and rim were stolen.

The traffic beacon, corner of Main and William street is out of order. Its defective condition was reported at police headquarters this morning by Patrolman Michael Dorsey.

Abraham Krochuk, R. F. D., No. 1, Waterford, in driving his automobile at the corner of Shaw and Hamilton streets, this morning collided with a fire hydrant and damaged it. Krochuk reported the accident at police headquarters.

Pasquale Romolo, 34, Colchester farmer, was charged in the police court Saturday with violation of the city's traffic laws as well as violation of the state motor vehicle laws. He failed to appear and his bond of $10 was declared forfeited. Romolo was arrested on Bank street Friday by Traffic Officer Thomas Cavanaugh when he drove past one of the automatic traffic signals set at danger. When Romolo was arrested it developed that the driver did not possess a license and he carried improper registration.

Emile Matta, 320 Wood street, New Bedford, Mass., was also charged with violation of the city's traffic laws in passing an automatic signal on Bank street that was set at danger. Like Romolo, Matta failed to appear in court and his bond of $5 was forfeited.

The only other case presented was that of a fellow charged with intoxication who was arrested on Main street Friday. Judgment was suspended in his case as he is not a frequent offender against the law.

Paul A. Salerno, 30 Chappell street and Mrs. Alice Bottinelli Susi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Battista Bottinelli, 195 Pequot avenue, were married Saturday morning by Justice of the Peace Max Boyer. Michael Bizziano was best man and Miss Laura Bottinelli, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Last night at the Hotel Lafayette, Mr. and Mrs. Salerno were guests of honor at a banquet, attended by about 20 relatives and friends. The groom is employed as a store manager and his bride was until recently bookkeeper for her father.

Mrs. Emily G. Hewitt, whose death occurred at Willimantic Friday, is grandmother of Walter G. Hewitt of this city.

At the eighth annual convention of the Connecticut League of Women Voters, which will be held at the Hotel Mohican, Nov. 14, 15, and 16, five round tables of discussion will be a feature, taking up matters of interest to the organization.

The Young People's department of the First Baptist church was entertained Friday night by Luther Cresswell, at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Kenyon, Point Kumfort on the Niantic river. The party was a Halloween frolic. Music was furnished by Reginald Honeycomb.

At the membership tea of the local League of Women Voters, held at the Y. W. C. A. at the week end, Miss Mary Bulkley, president of the state organization gave an interesting talk on her experience in Switzerland during the past summer. Following the business meeting tea was served at a local tea room, Miss Edna L. Tyler and Mrs. John Baxter pouring.

Mrs. Gertrude Gropelli, 11 Crescent street, entertained at a miscellaneous shower Friday night in honor of Miss Valentine Maxson, Crystal avenue, who is to be married next month to Jack King, of this city. The evening was spent with games and music, after which refreshments were served.

A meeting of the Alumnae association of Lawrence-Memorial hospital is to be held Monday night.

Miss Dorothy Ryan was hostess at the week end at a Halloween party held in the Gardner Storage company's barn, which was gaily decorated. Games and dancing were enjoyed after which a lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice F. Glaessner, 39 Howard street, were surprised the other night when a group of friends dropped in to celebrate the seventh anniversary of their wedding. At the conclusion of an evening of games there was a lunch.

DRIVE PLANNED BY Y. W. C. A. FOR BUDGET OF $12,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—A mass meeting is to be held by members of the Y. W. C. A. Monday night for the purpose of interesting members and friends in the drive for $12,000 which is needed to care for the annual budget. Miss Susan S. Gardner will preside at the meeting.

Employes of the Thompson-Chevrolet company, this city, held their annual banquet at Risley's tourist lodge, South Lyme. Following the dinner dancing and games were enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Volkmann, who have been living at the Hotel Lafayette for the past two years, left this city yesterday for Honolulu where Mr Volkmann, who has been chief radio operator on the Camden, has been transferred to shore duty in the radio station at Pearl Harbor. Mrs Volkmann originally was from the Hawaiian Islands.

TRAIN STRIKES A SEDAN BUT DRIVER UNINJURED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—Anthony Silva, 7 Magnolia court, had a miraculous escape Saturday morning when the automobile he was driving was completely demolished by a New Haven railroad train. Sylvia escaped with a slight cut over his right eye. Silva was driving on Maple avenue and where a railroad crossing without a tender or bell signal exists. Neither are there gates for the only safety device is the common "Railroad Crossing" sign. Silva started to drive over the crossing, not noticing Train No. 49, composed of eight American Railway express cars from New York to Boston, approaching. The train due to arrive at the Union station at 8:05 a. m., was traveling at an estimated speed of 35 miles and was slowing down as is customary when approaching the Fort Neck bridge. The train was approaching the crossing as Silva's auto started over the tracks. When Silva observed the train, it was too late to avoid the crash with the result that the automobile was struck by the pilot of the engine and hurled 75 feet, being reduced to wreckage. The machine was a sedan and Silva climbed out of the crumpled auto unscarred except for the superficial cut on the head.

Three drunks were arrested by the police this afternoon and will be among those given a hearing in the police court tomorrow. One was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin on North Bank street, where he was begging. Another was arrested on Main street by Patrolman George Bruhne and the third was arrested on North Bank street by Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

Mrs. Arthur DiMaggio, 435 Montauk avenue, who has been a patient at Home Memorial hospital several weeks, seriously ill, was able to return to her home this afternoon.

Alfred Berry of Norwich was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Clarence Wells, charged with parking in restricted area on Pearl street. He furnished a bond of $2 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

The Ockfords were defeated at football at Mercer field this afternoon before a large crowd of gridiron fans, when the Boys' club team of New Haven was victorious, 3 to 0.

JOHN DUSH, A SAILOR, DIES FOLLOWING ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 28—John Dush, a sailor attached to the S-9, submarine base, died at 9:45 Sunday night and O'Dell Harrison, a member of the crew of the S-12, also submarine base, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital suffering from probable fatal injuries as a result of an automobile accident Saturday night on the Boston Post road from New Haven. Their car collided with a truck. Dush had a brain injury and a fracture of the skull. Harrison has a fractured skull and is on the critical list. All of the facts have not been learned but the state police are working on the case. The accident occurred between East Lyme and Lyme about 10 o'clock and it is understood the auto was traveling at a high rate of speed, at a time when many cars were on the road, returning from the Yale-Army game at New Haven. The sailors' car crashed into the truck, resulting in Dush and Harrison being hurled to the concrete highway, where they landed on their heads. When passing autoists went to their assistance, both were unconscious. They were taken to the hospital, arriving in New London at 10:45 o'clock and remained unconscious since their admission. The body of Dush was taken in charge by the sub base authorities.

Put down another dramatic bulls-eye for Richard Barthelmess!

The First National star has added another histrionic classic to his recent "The Patent Leather Kid" and "The Noose," in "The Wheel of Chance" the film version of Fannie Hurst's short story, "Roulette," which opened to enthusiastic acclaim last night at the Breed theatre.

In "The Wheel of Chance" Barthelmess enacts a dual role, each one a clear-cut character delineation worthy of being placed alongside his finest portrayals. The contrasting study of the two roles, that of twin brothers, presents a startling new phase of the acting ability of Barthelmess who has proved in a series of rare portraits his right to the top niche on the ladder of Thespis.

The story of "The Wheel of Chance" relates the dramatic adventures of twin brothers, separated in childhood by a trick of fate, and meeting again twenty years later in one of the most dramatically conceived scenes in the history of the motion picture. To tell more than this would be to take away the thrills and enjoyment in witnessing "The Wheel of Chance."

The balance of the cast supporting Richard Barthelmess in "The Wheel of Chance" includes Lina Basquette, Warner Oland, Bodil Rosing and many others. It is an Alfred Santell production.

Palace Theatre

Mirages, which have lured many a desert wanderer to doom, may fool the eye, but not the camera.

One of the most beautiful mirages ever seen in the Mojave, in which trees and a lake appeared in the midst of the desert sands, was encountered on the first day's work in the desert by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company, headed by Lillian Gish, when they made the exterior scenes of "The Wind," a dramatic portrayal of primitive passions and pioneer life on the prairies, which is now showing at the Palace theatre.

John Arnold, the cameraman, filmed a hundred feet of the mirage, but when the film was developed it showed nothing but the desert sands and cactus patches.

"The Wind" is a vivid romance of the plains, directed by Victor Seastrom. The exterior scenes were made in the heart of the Mojave desert, where a miniature city was erected to house the players and technicians. Lars Hanson, Dorothy Cummings, Edward Earle, Montague Love, William Ormond and others are in the cast.

"The reason I am single is that I have never found a man whom I could marry on a 50-50 basis."

This was the declaration of Bebe Daniels, movie comedienne, in an interview during the filming of her latest picture, "Hot News."

"It is not bragging for me to say that I have been a successful woman," the Paramount star said "With this success has come a certain income and an accumulation of money and property. The man I marry will have to be as successful in his work as I am in mine; he must have as great an income and as much savings. We must be on a 50-50 basis as far as money goes."

Broadway Theatre

A page was added to local motion picture history last night when Warner Bros.' production of "Lights of New York," the first all-talking picture, was flashed on the screen of the Broadway theatre. Of course, it was only a matter of time before a picture in which the story would be made clear by the voices of the characters on the screen would make its appearance and now that it is here one must admit that if it had nothing else to commend it except its sheer novelty this in itself would be sufficient to win great success for it.

Before going further into this, however, it must be said that "Lights of New York" has a great deal to commend it outside of its unusual treatment. Its producers in setting out to film an all-talking picture could hardly have selected a better vehicle. As it stands it is one of the most unique and diversified entertainments that has been offered on stage or screen and as such it is to be judged. It contains something of everything and it moves with a speed that is astonishing. It teems with youth.

To adequately present such a picture an unusual cast was necessary and this it has. Helene Costello, as the country girl working in the chorus of the night club, gives an extremely good performance. It is a role that calls for versatility as well as a variety of emotions, all of which she handles with a sense of art. Cullen Landis is the youngster from the small town, and Mary Carr has the role of his mother. Eugene Pallette contributes a good bit of acting and so does Wheeler Oakman as the dissolute owner of a night club. All of the roles in the picture are skillfully played.

The story of "Lights of New York" was written by Hugh Herbert and Murray Roth and was directed for Warner Bros. by Bryan Foy. It is destined on account of its novelty and its acting to talk itself into favor wherever pictures are popular, and this means everywhere.

Farewell Reception for Rev. Dunbar

An informal farewell reception for Rev. E. C. Dunbar and Mrs. Dunbar will be held in the First Baptist church Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. All friends of Rev. and Mrs. Dunbar are cordially invited. Rev. Mr. Dunbar is soon to leave to take up a pastorate in New Jersey.

Bauer, Master Pianist

"When one wants to hear an example of perfect piano playing Mr. Bauer is the one to give it," declared no less an authority than the reviewer of the "Chicago Tribune, in reference to Harold Bauer, who plays at Slater Hall Friday evening, November 2, at 8:15 o'clock when he gives the second concert of the present series.

"An audience that filled every seat in the hall listened with rapt attention and applauded him to the echo. A poet—a lyric rhapsodist," said Lawrence Gilman in commenting recently on Mr. Bauer's playing, while the music critic of the New York Post says of him, "This remarkable artist holds a unique place among pianists of our day."

Still another description comes from the pen of the late Henry T. Finck, "the absolute perfection if interpretation."

The seat sale for the Bauer concert opens tomorrow at 9 a. m. at Cranston's where course tickets for the remaining three concerts will be available at $4.50 See adv

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Bayer Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If it says Bayer, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Bayer Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Bayer Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

WEAVER KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE ON TRADING COVE ROAD; DRIVER IS HELD

Hit by a machine driven by Llewellyn H. Golden, 28, of No. 68 Thames street, John Barenas, about 45, a weaver was instantly killed on the Norwich-New London highway, near Trading Cove early Saturday evening. Golden was arrested on a charge of manslaughter and bonds were set at $5,00. He was unable to raise the bonds up to Sunday night and is being held at police headquarters.

According to Golden's story of the accidept, he is employed nights at the plant of the Richmond Radiator Co., and was on the way to a house at Trading Cove to get his wife and bring her back to the city, before he went to work for the night.

He was driving on the right hand side of the highway. As he neared the side road leading to the Joseph Hall Woolen mills, another machine approached him from the direction of Montville.

The lights on the other machine were bright, he said, but not blinding enough to obscure his vision of the road ahead or the center of the road. He slowed down, but did not see anything in front of him. As the oncoming machine reached a point about 20 feet ahead of his machine, something darted in front of his (Golden's) machine. Golden said he knew he had hit something and stopped. He was traveling at a rate of about 25 miles an hour at the time he struck the man, he claims.

Golden got out of his machine and looked all around but did not then see anything, he said. Barenas' body was evidently hidden beneath the machine. He did not know what he had hit.

Claim Witness' Name Lost

Then Golden drove his machine ahead about 200 feet and off the highway and went back to the spot where the accident happened. It was then that he saw Barenas' body in the road. Golden said Sunday that the driver of the machine which was approaching him, also stopped and went back to the body. Golden claims this driver said to him: "You couldn't help that." The driver, Golden said, gave him his name and the number of his car and said he would be on hand when wanted.

Up to Sunday night Golden was unable to find the slip of paper with the other driver's name and address on it. He can't remember the name of the driver nor the car number, he said. Thomas M. Shields, counsel for Golden, issued an appeal Sunday to the driver who gave his name to Golden, to make himself known either to Mr. Shields or to Coroner Edward G. McKay.

Held on Manslaughter Charge

After finding Barenas' body on the highway, Golden notified the police and police headquarters notified Constable Lucius A. Fenton and Coroner McKay who investigated the accident at the scene. The result of the investigation was the holding of Golden on a manslaughter charge, pending the coroner's decision.

Hourigan Bros., were given permission to remove the body to their undertaking rooms. Barenas' neck was broken, both legs, an arm and his ribs were broken. Death must have been instantaneous. It was not definitely known until Sunday who the victim was. In his clothing was found a pay envelope with the name "J. Barenas" on it. The pay envelope was issued by the Hall Woolen mills.

Lived at Boarding House

Checking up on the pay envelope the authorities learned that the victim's name was Barenas, that he was a weaver and lived at the board house at No. 178 West Thames street. He has been in Norwich but a short time and is said to have a wife and three children in North Adams, Mass. A diary found on the body indicated that he had been in Norwich for about two weeks. He has a brother, Karl Barenas, at East Windsor Hills, Conn., efforts were being made Sunday to get in touch with the brother. It is understood that Barenas was seen on the road before the accident and that he appeared to be in an intoxicated condition.

Damage to Automobile

Golden's machine was considerably damaged by the accident. The radiator was pushed back about six inches, the hood was split in two, the motometer broken off, front bumper pushed out of line, the skirt was bent, and the distributor was damaged. There were two or three dents in one of the headlights but it is not known whether these dents were the result of the accident or not.

Coroner McKay had pictures of the machine taken Sunday after which the machine, a Hudson touring car, N-4427, was towed to a garage from police headquarters.

Golden came to Norwich about five years ago from Plattsburg, N. Y.

JUDGE EUGENE F. FARLEY DIES AT YALE-ARMY GAME

A heart attack suffered while he watched the Yale-Army football game at New Haven Saturday proved fatal to Eugene F. Farley, former judge of the city court of New Haven, whose wife was Miss Nellie Lyons of Norwich.

Mr. Farley succumbed in full view of thousands of persons seated in the vicinity of Portal 15, as he sought to leave the big stadium when a condition of which he had complained throughout the day suddenly became worse.

Mr. Farley, graduate of both Yale college and Yale Law school, attended the game with Mrs. Farley.

Greene's pickup of an Army fumble had just resulted in a touchdown which evened the score which followed Cagle's 53-yard run, and the general excitement had subsided when Mr. Farley complained of feeling extremely nervous. Mrs. Farley suggested that they leave the Bowl and together they made their way to the exit. They were just about to turn into the tunnel that would lead them outside the Bowl when Mr. Farley collapsed. A doctor was summoned, but a Grace hospital ambulance waiting outside the tunnel which leads to the playing field beneath the Yale cheering section arrived in response to the emergency call and took the stricken man to that institution. He was found dead upon arrival.

Mr. Farley was born in Derby about 50 years ago. He was graduated from Yale college in the class of 1906. During the next ten years he was teacher in various schools. For eight years he was teacher of English and Latin at the Bridgeport high school. At the New Haven high school he taught history.

In 1911 Mr. Farley was graduated from Yale Law school, a classmate of Judge Sheridan T. Whitaker and many other prominent members of the New Haven county bar. Fourteen years later he became Judge Whitaker's associate on the city court bench.

In 1917, Judges Samuel E. Hoyt and Jacob Caplan, then presiding on the city court bench, named him an assistant city attorney and aid to Judge Whitaker, who then was city attorney. He served for six years.

July 1, 1925, he became judge of the New Haven city court, but returned to private practice after two years. His knowledge of Italian proved of great advantage to him during his term as judge. He spoke flawless Italian and was considered a keen student of law, English and the classics.

Mr. Farley suffered a serious illness in 1927, later undergoing an operation at St. Raphael's hospital. However, he had recovered sufficiently so that he attended the short calendar session of the civil superior court as late as Friday morning and even on Saturday morning had appeared in the New Haven city court in behalf of clients.

Mr. Farley is survived by his widow, Nellie Lyons Farley; by a daughter, Ruth, aged 11, and by three sisters, Mrs. John Dugan of Naugatuck, Mrs. William Nolan and Miss Anne Farley of Derby, and by his brother, Dr. Edward Farley, of Waterbury.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVANCE AT BROADWAY THEATRE

A Norwich committee on the observance of armistice day has secured Prof. Jerome Davis of Yale university, widely known as a lecturer, as the speaker for a special meeting that is to be held next Sunday afternoon at 3.30 at Broadway theatre.

In making the announcement the committee says:

"Special interest attaches to Armistice day observance this year as it will be the tenth anniversary; the interest is two-fold: first a reminiscent interest in the military movements which then found culmination on the fields of France, and second, a sustained interest in the international policies seeking world peace as the goal of our armies and the ideal of our economic and religious efforts. In our community centers, therefore, it is fitting that our citizens should overlook sectarian and racial differences and in the strength of a common purpose interpret the message of the anniversary with special reference to America's international relations."

LEILA TROLAND GARDNER SCORES AT CLUB MEETING

The Musical Courier of a recent date made special reference to a talk by a former Norwich resident, Mrs. Leila Troland Gardner, as the feature of Spanish Music day, Oct. 11th, at a meeting of the National Opera club at the Waldorf Astoria, New York. Mrs. Gardner's topic was "The Operatic Promise of the Year." Having recently returned from a season in southern Europe she was well equipped to give the latest and most interesting information on this theme.

Later, Oct. 23rd, at an afternoon meeting of the Theatre club, at the Hotel Astor, Mrs. Gardner had five solos, three Negro spirituals, "Standin' in de Need o' Prayer," "De Ole Ark is a Moverin'" and "Go Down Moses," with two of her own compositions, "Come to Me, Love," and "Love's Vision". The fact that she had three recalls was significant of her ability to please a critical audience, on a program where the entertainers were Rodolph Bochco, Sophie Treadwell, author of the play "Machinal," Patterson MacNutt, producer of "This Thing Called Love", Cleon Throckmorton, designer for the new "Rialto," Hoboken and others prominent in music and drama. A tea for the artists and guests of honor followed in the orangerie of the hotel.

MOOSEHEART LEGION IS GOING TO NEW LONDON

Women of Mooseheart Legion held their regular meeting Thursday evening with Senior Regent Minnie Smith presiding. It was voted to accept the invitation from New London chapter to participate in the Armistice day celebration in New London.

For the good of the order remarks were made by Past Regents Emma Beaver and Alida Boyens.

Past Regent Teresa Watters announced plans for Mooseheart day Sunday, Oct. 28 all complete. There is to be an entertainment Sunday afternoon and evening and the public is cordially invited to attend.

It being Past Regents night the following program was carried out under the direction of chairman, Teresa Watters: Solo, Sidewalks of New York, Mrs. Mary Edwards; fancy drill, featuring the emblems of Mooseheart Legion, Faith, Hope and Contentment; solo, Mrs. Mary Edwards; recitation, The Tradegies of Innocence, (Edgar Guest), Mrs. Elsie Coughey; recitation, In a Garden, (Edgar Guest), Mrs. Annabelle Emback; recitation, Kidnaped by a Dream, (Edgar Guest), Mrs. Mable Goldberg; recitation, Modern Marriage Rites, Teresa Watters; gymnastic drill; Smile a While by all present.

Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by Chairman Nellie Dorr and Legionnaire Irene Burns.

All members taking part in the entertainment Sunday are to be at Moose Home at 2 o'clock as the programme is to start at 3 o'clock sharp.

MRS. OLIVE R. ROBERTS TO PLAY NEW LONDON ORGAN

Following four years of most acceptable service as organist at Trinity Methodist church, Norwich, Mrs. Olive R. Roberts has resigned and Sunday next will begin an engagement as organist of the First Church of Christ (Congregational) at New London. Mrs. Roberts not only has kept up her work in the Norwich church but has gone to New Haven each week for instruction and coaching in organ playing, so that her training and practice have fitted her for the requirements of both organist and director. At New London she succeeds Organist Herbert E. Fengar, resigned.

GAVE HALLOWEEN SUPPER AT LEFFINGWELL CHURCH

Friday evening from 6:30 to 9, a halloween supper was served in the church vestry by the Ladies' Aid society of the Leffingwell church. The room was prettily decorated in halloween colors and at 6:45 a covered dish supper was served under the direction of Mrs. Silas Leffingwell, with the following as hostesses: Mrs. John Ross, Mrs. Harry Bedat, Mrs. N. E. Whiting, Mrs. William White and Mrs. Clinton Rogers. A candle contest drew the attention of many during the supper. The evening closed with various halloween stunts.

MEN'S BIBLE CONVENTION WILL MEET IN MERIDEN

Dr. "Sam" Gratkin of New York city heads the great galaxy of speakers that will appear on the program of the state convention of Men's Bible classes at the First Congregational church Meriden, Saturday, November 3rd afternoon and evening. His topic will be, "The Prodigal Church." The time of his address is 4:00 p. m.

The other speakers are Rev. Harold Camp, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, New Haven, and Rev. George Gilbert, humorist and community leader from Middletown, whose topic will be, "Hillsides of Old Connecticut." These two come on the evening banquet program.

Federation speakers include the national president, Joseph B. Montgomery of Philadelphia; the president of the Connecticut Federation, William O. Florian of Bridgeport; and representatives of city federations, C. T. Van Vliet of Hartford, C. L. Dennis of Bridgeport, C. C. Jones of Meriden, C. T. Wicks of Niantic, and others. One of the great features of the federation conventions is the song service leadership of John R. Thomas of Rutherford, N. J., the national song leader.

Registrations are pouring into the central office and they indicate that the goal of one thousand will be reached on November 3rd next.

Another feature of the program is a parade of Bible classes, with regalia and without at 5:30 in the afternoon.

SUES FOR INJURIES WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Suit against Alex Pasnik of this city for $2,500 damages has been brought by Philip Kierstein, also of this city, because of injuries he received when struck by the Pasnik automobile which was driven by Miss Dorothy Pasnik.

The plaintiff claims that on July 13 past his automobile and another belonging to a man named Rutberg were standing at the top of Mohegan hill when the car driven by Miss Pasnik skidded and struck Kierstein and the other two machines. Kierstein claims that his injuries disabled him for six weeks and resulted in a loss in wages to him of $450 The suit is returnable in November in the superior court.

Gave Halloween Party

A halloween party was given Saturday evening at the home of Miss Lucille Hayden with 15 guests present. Halloween games were played and weird stunts were performed. The feature of the evening was a solo, Among My Souvenirs, sung by Charles Holden with Lloyd Hayden at the piano. There were also musical selections. Refreshments were served by the hostess, with the assistance of Gordon Cruickshank.

NORWICH TOWN

SALVATION ARMY BAND PLAYS AT CONG. CHURCH

The Manchester Salvation Army band attracted a large congregation Sunday morning to the First Congregational church. Prior to the service the band which came to Norwich Town by special bus, played six sacred numbers on the Green. Under the efficient leadership of David Addy this band of redeemed men played several harmonious selections at intervals during the service. Of the 24 members, 21 were represented at this church. They were accompanied by Col. Water Jenkins of New York, who gave the address and by three other members of the Salvation Army, including two women. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Gordon F. Bailey, who spoke of the visit of the band and expressed the thought that the service showed the heart of real worship. In introducing the speakers, Rev. Mr. Bailey stated that Colonel Jenkins was secretary of the National Salvation Army organization and assistant to Commander Evangeline Booth.

Colonel Jenkins gave a spirited address from 1. Peter. 2-9. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of the darkness into His marvelous light.

Colonel Jenkins declared that it gave him pleasure to have the privilege of entering into the fellowship of this church. In the course of his address, the four main thoughts developed were: "Ye are an erect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation and a people for God's own position." Colonel Jenkins also pronounced the benediction.

Besides accompanying the church hymns, Onward Christian Soldiers and All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name, other numbers by the band were, My Jesus, and a vocal selection, Sweet Peace, Fred Clonch, baritone, sustaining the solo part very acceptably. At the suggestion of Rev. Mr. Bailey a collection was taken at the close of the service, to help defray the expenses of the band in coming to Norwich Town.

The sympathy of Norwich Town friends has been manifested for Mr. and Mrs. Ray Holdridge (Mildred Kinney) of Ledyard, the latter a former Norwich Town resident, in the loss of their home in Ledyard by fire last Sunday afternoon. The house was burned to the ground. Some of the furniture was saved, although the greater part of it was lost, including also all their wedding gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge were married about five years ago and lived on Yerrington avenue until early this year, when they sold their Norwich home and bought the farm in Ledyard.

The recent supper at the First Congregational chapel under direction of the supper committee of the Woman's Department of the League of Service, netted $29. This will go toward the several hundred dollars budget to be used for Missionary purposes. Mrs. John L. Browning is chairman of the supper committee.

Several Norwich Town politicians were automobile guests of Theodore Sterry Thursday afternoon, when the party motored to Willimantic and attended the brief reception given Gov. Al Smith democratic candidate for president and Mrs. Smith at the station there.

An invitation has been extended the parish of the First church, to attend an informal Halloween social Tuesday evening at 7.30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sterry, of Lee avenue.

TAFTVILLE

Friday evening a number of friends of Reginald Monty surprised him at his home at Riverside Grove, as he is leaving town to enter the Willimantic Trade school for a course of study. Games and music made the evening pass quickly and refreshments of sandwiches, cake, candy, ice cream and chocolate were served. Mr. Monty was presented a gold piece by Hartwell Zuerner, in behalf of the assembled company. Those present were Miss Mildred C. Yerrington, Miss Gladys Kinder, Miss Melba Monty, Miss Edith L. Heap, Miss Ruby Houston, Miss Elsie Risley, Miss Bertha Wallace, Miss Madeline Daley, Miss Clara Czikowsky, Miss Mabel Beausoliel, Miss Jean Copeland, Miss Stella Wolsard, Reginald Monty, Hartwell Zuerner, Byron Kloss, Alexander Arceo, Arthur Breen, John McNeil, Ronald Smith, Peter Lukoff, Harold Wallace and John Dreecher.

At all the masses Sunday at Sacred Heart church, announcement was made that there would be special masses next Thursday, the Feast of All Saints, which is a holy day of obligation for all Roman Catholic churches of the Latin rite throughout the world. There will also be special masses on Friday which the church designates as All Souls day, when the parishioners are requested to pray for the departed. As on Christmas, priests are granted the privilege of saying three masses on this day, and those who visit the church and pray for the intention of His Holiness the Pope, may gain a plenary indulgence, applicable to the souls in Purgatory.

On Wednesday the first meeting of the Men's League of the Versailles Methodist Episcopal church for the season was held at the church vestry with a large attendance. Plans were laid for a supper and social and the committee named to make arrangements for the event are Rev. Harvey H. Conklin, Louis Erlbeck and Robert Carr Bateson.

Miss Elsie Heap of South Second avenue returned Sunday from Detroit, Mich., where she has been spending the past two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. E. Tracy Clark and family, formerly of Taftville.

Miss Stella Buba of Centerville, R. I., spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Ludwik Ruslecki of South C street.

POETRY

For All the Missionary Saints

For all Thy saints who labor on, we pray—
Thy patient, toiling saints, who still are here,
Climbing and faltering up life's rugged way,
Forget them not, O Lord, to them be near.

For all Thy saints in far-flung lines, who still Gallantly raise Thy standard 'gainst the foe,
We plead—O show them perfectly Thy will,
Give them the succors of Thy hand to know.

Help them, with lifted heads, to stem the tide
Of hostile forces menacing their lives;
Aid each true saint, on fields of battle wide,
As with the ranks of sin he sternly strives.

These are Thy saints, O God—as truly Thine
As those that rest before the great White Throne.
May they at last, in the same radiance shine;
May they, like them, be numbered as Thine own.

May they, when life's long fight is fully o'er,
Join in that hallelujah chorus grand
Among the victors gathered on heaven's shore,
Who, crowned and robed in white, triumphant stand!

October

Every minute of October
Is a diamond set in pearls,
And the leaves, all scarlet-skirted
Are a crowd of ballet girls.
Dancing on their toes and fingers.
Yellow leaves come whirling by
Now and then a late one lingers
In some grassy niche to die.

Every hour of October
Is a lilting villanelle,
All the trees are empty sonnets,
Autumn has not written well;
Triolets, are purple asters,
Huddled in my garden brown
Fearing Autumn's frosty sickle
That some night will cut them down

Every day of blonde October
Is a testimony told
Of God's fearful architecture,
Dripping silent words of gold,
Floating through the air at twilight
Half uncertain where to go,
Leaves, without a destination,
Are like loves we never know.

GOV. SMITH TAKES FLING AT HIS POLITICAL OPPONENTS

In Personal Appeal to Voters of Maryland, the Democratic Presidential Nominee Rapped the Anti-Saloon League, the Ku Klux Klan, and the Republican Position on Prohibition, Water Power and Foreign Relations—Accused the Anti-Saloon League With Having Made a "Cold Blooded Threat" to Senator Norris—Stands For Progressive, Not Reactionary, Government.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 29 —(AP)— Governor Alfred E. Smith opened the final week of his campaign for the presidency tonight with a declaration to the American people that he was dissatisfied with the old order in government and promised if the democratic party were placed in power under his leadership he would seek to effect many changes.

The democratic nominee in a speech prepared for his only personal appeal to the voters of Maryland in rapid succession rapped the anti-saloon league, the Ku-Klux Klan, and the republican position on prohibition, water power and foreign relations and added he came before the country as a "free agent" to devote himself to its best interests and its welfare.

He accused the anti-saloon league with having made a "cold-blooded threat" to Senator George Norris of Nebraska, who recently announced his support for Smith. He said all Norris had done for the nation had been forgotten in a minute by the league because he had gone counter to its "narrow, prejudiced and bigoted ideas."

Spurns Votes of Klansmen

The governor assailed the Klan as "out of line with American traditions and history" and declared he would rather go down "to ignominious defeat than to be raised to the greatest position in the gift of the people by any influence that may be exercised by any organization with such perverted ideas of Americanism."

"I want no support because of my religious belief," was another declaration. "I repeat my firm adherence to the American doctrine of absolute separation of church and state."

The candidate argued there was no use attempting to solve foreign problems as long as a quarrel existed between the president and the senate, and promised to put an end to what he said was a dispute on this score.

He declared the protection of American citizens and property in foreign lands was a matter of national concern but coupled with that statement a belief that the American people no longer would "tolerate interference" with the internal affairs of South American republics.

"I am prepared to make a real endeavor to make the outlawry of war effective," he declared, "by removing its causes and to substitute the methods of conciliation, conference, arbitration and judicial determination."

He said that under Herbert Hoover, his rival for the presidency, there would be but little hope for a "forward-looking foreign policy" as the republican candidate had promised to follow in the footsteps of President Coolidge whose policies, he added, have been denounced both "in season and out season" on the senate floor by Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee of that body.

Water Power Problem

On water power, the governor said he was satisfied the old order of things could be changed for the better. He urged adoption of a "forward-looking, progressive attitude" by government toward the development of the nation's water power resources. Under the old order, he argued, these resources would fall into private hands for private profit.

The governor said only last Saturday night Senator Norris, who he described as a republican but uncompromising progressive, had told the American people in unmistakable language he was unable to support Hoover.

"Prominent among his reasons was Mr. Hoover's attitude toward the development of public power resources," the governor said "I want to take this opportunity to assure him (Norris) publicly that he will never have any cause to regret what he said with respect to my attitude toward these great public questions."

The governor contended that Charles E. Hughes, had said nothing could be done about prohibition. He said the republicans eight years ago had plastered the country with signs which read: "Let's us go away from wiggle and wobble." He then added that in no similar period in the nation's history had there been as "much wiggling and wobbling."

Wires Crossed on Prohibition

The chief spokesmen of the republican party are wobbling all over the prohibition question," he added. "Their wires are crossed." He said Senator Borah held prohibition to be the "overshadowing" issue; that Hughes had referred to it as a "sham battle" and Hoover had insisted that it was a "noble experiment."

The democratic nominee declared that when the word went out that Norris intended to support him the anti-saloon league had issued a warning as follows:

"The anti-saloon league has always supported Norris in the past, but if he makes this speech for Smith, the league is through with him. The anti-saloon league will oppose Norris in future campaigns if he does this thing."

"That is a threat," the governor declared. "That is a cold blooded threat."

The governor said he had read in a New Jersey paper a notice of a public meeting under Klan auspices and declared the article stated the meeting would be in conjunction with the national republican committee. He added local republican leaders had disclaimed knowledge of it, but that one had made a "significant" statement when asked if republican national committee plans were submitted to him for approval.

"They are supposed to be," the governor quoted him as saying, "but they have gotten us in trouble before; once or twice they have gone over our heads on this religious question. I know absolutely nothing about this meeting."

The nominee said that if the statement meant anything to him it meant that "some of the plans formulated in the national committee without the consent of the local leaders, have had to do with the question of religion."

He referred to sighting a burning cross by the side of the railroad as he returned from last western tour.

"That they (the Klan) are supporting the republican party in this campaign there can be no question," the governor declared.

Constructive Tariff

Regarding the tariff, Gov. Smith contended the position taken by himself and democratic candidates for the house and senate was "so constructive, so forward looking, so well designed to protecting the wages of the worker, both of big and little business, the farmer and improve the prosperity of the country generally that the republican party "in a moment of panic is forced—through one of its spokesmen—to the reactionary idea that the tariff can not be taken out of politics."

The governor took as the text of his address a quotation from his acceptance speech that "government should be progressive, not reactionary" and repeatedly referred back to his statement.

"I will take the oath of office as president of the United States," he concluded, "with absolutely no obligations except to devote myself to the best interests of this country and to promote the prosperity, welfare and happiness of all the people."

21-MINUTE DEMONSTRATION WHEN SMITH APPEARED

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 29—(AP)— Under rafters where democratic shouts 16 years ago acclaimed the nomination of Woodrow Wilson, a new party leader, Alfred E. Smith, tonight started the last week of his drive for the presidency by declaring for a change from the "old order" in government and a settlement of many issues on the Jeffersonian-Jacksonian theory of a strict states' right.

The old Fifth Regiment armory, a landmark in Baltimore history, rang with the cheers of a crowd which overflowed into the street as the 1928 democratic chieftain trained a verbal fire upon the Anti-Saloon league and the Ku Klux Klan and declared a belief in the separation of church and state.

A few minutes before 8 o'clock the gathering broke into shouts and cheers when Maryland's veteran governor, Albert C. Ritchie, walked to the front of the platform and waved his hat, a brown felt. The band struck up "Maryland, My Maryland," and the crowd howled. For two minutes the cheering continued. The governor again waved his hat and the cheering took on new life.

A few moments later, Millard Tydings, the state's junior senator, stepped up to Ritchie's side and the din grew in volume. Tydings waved to the gathering, smiled, took off an overcoat and moved to a seat. Former Mayor Jackson of Baltimore was the next to appear and there was more cheering.

This outburst hardly had died down before it started up again when Howard Bruce, democratic national committeeman from Maryland, introduced Ritchie as chairman of the evening. As the Maryland executive began a speech, Mrs. David Este Bruce, the former Alisa Mellon and only daughter of the secretary of the treasury, was escorted to a seat on the platform. Mrs. Bruce is the daughter-in-law of Senator Bruce, democrat, and senior senator from the state. She was accompanied by her husband.

Governor Ritchie hardly had finished his first sentence before the crowd was up cheering and tooting horns at a declaration that a "man's right to hold public office shall not be dependent on his religious faith."

Governor Ritchie was interrupted by a storm of applause when Mrs. Wilson, widow of the war-time president, was escorted to a seat on the platform. Senator Bruce then was introduced.

While Senator Bruce was still talking the audience rose to its feet shouting—somehow it had got a tip that Governor Smith was entering. The demonstration continued for five minutes. Confetti and scraps of paper was tossed about. Many waved flags. The band gave up.

In a few minutes Mrs. Smith walked to the front of the platform. The din grew apace.

Bedlam Broke Loose

Then the governor appeared and bedlam broke loose. The crowd, already on its feet, could do nothing but jump up and down to give additional vent to its feelings.

The governor walked to the platform. As he waved and smiled the audience roared. After 15 minutes the cheering still was as loud as at the end of the first minute.

Governor Smith walked over and shook hands with Mrs. Wilson. The roar grew. Amid the shouting Mrs. Smith walked to the front of the platform and joined her husband. In a second Mrs. Wilson joined them. The din raged.

It was one minute after 9 when the governor adjusted his glasses and Governor Ritchie began pounding for order. Giving up the gavel, Ritchie held a watch in one hand and motioned for silence. Finding this to no avail, he shouted out at the top of his lungs.

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I have the honor of presenting the next president of the United States."

As he finished, Governor Smith walked in front of the microphone. The yelling, shouting, cheering continued.

The governor's first utterance—that the last time he was in the armory the democrats were making history by nominating Woodrow Wilson for the presidency—was applauded. He described Wilson as "one of the greatest men that ever headed the nation."

The governor said he had taken as "my text" a thought from his acceptance speech declaring in favor of progress as against a standpatter. Hardly had the word standpatter dropped from his lips when somebody shouted "Hoover."

Applause punctuated a declaration that the World war taught one great lesson that the "American fathers and mothers desire peace with every country in the world."

There was booing when the governor quoted Senator Borah as saying he would have been unable to support Hoover if water power was the only issue.

Governor Smith motioned again and again for silence.

Finally, 21 minutes after the demonstration started, the governor began his speech.

FINAL CAMPAIGN SPEECH BY SECRETARY MELLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29— (AP) — National campaign issues were boiled down to a business formula by Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, in delivering tonight his final campaign speech to a radio audience.

Though the secretary dealt with tariff, immigration, agricultural and credit problems in reasserting his attachment to the republican party and support of Herbert Hoover for president, he concluded his address with a direct question to his auditors and a citation of his own business attitude toward affairs.

"If President Coolidge and the republican party have conducted the government in a way to merit your approval," he said, "and if you are satisfied with a continuation of the present policies under Mr. Hoover, then why change? In my own business experience when a management gave me a satisfactory balance sheet at the end of the year, showing a reduction in overhead, a decrease in indebtedness and at the same time an increase in dividends, I would have been very unwilling to see a change in management.

"The government of the United States is the greatest business enterprise in the world. It is infinitely complex both in its effect on the individual lives of its citizens and in its relations to those great economic forces by which the average man's welfare is greatly affected. At the head of that business I want to see a man of ability, who is thoroughly familiar with all of its phases. I want to see a man who understands these economic forces with which he must deal; and lastly I want him to be a man who has a feeling for and sympathy with the conditions under which the average man and woman must live, whether it be in the city, the small town, or on the farm. Herbert Hoover measures up to these qualifications. . . .

"The republican party is now, as it always has been, the party of progress. . . . It has ever recognized that motion is not synonymous with progress but that stability is essential to confidence and that confidence is the very spirit of business enterprise. Nowhere is this more true than in the field of credit. Credit is easily impaired. Any measure that tends to impede or divert the ordinary channels of trade or unduly burden industry, immediately results in impairing confidence and curtailing business progress and ultimately must have an adverse effect upon the development of the country.

NO CLEW TO BOMBERS OF HOUSE IN MANSFIELD, OHIO

MANSFIELD, Ohio, Oct. 29—(AP)— Absence of clews or any known motive tonight left police at a standstill in their investigation of the mysterious bombing of the home of R. C. Hollies, Mansfield publisher.

Mr. Hollies, his wife, their two small children and a maid servant were at home when the explosion occurred early today but escaped harm as they were asleep in the rear of the house.

The blast destroyed the front porch, demolished front windows and ruined furniture.

Hollies could give no reason for the attack. He said, however, that the placing of the bomb in front of the home instead of near the bedrooms in the rear, indicated that the explosion was more of an attempt to frighten than to harm him or his family.

Police also were unable to advance any motive. Their sole clew was the report of a neighbor woman that she saw an automobile drive away from the Hollies home at about the time of the blast.

Besides the Mansfield News, Hollies is publisher of the Lorain Times-Herald, and the Bucyrus Telegram. He and his family moved here from Lorain about three years ago.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

TIRANA, Albania, Oct. 29—(AP)—The government has placed greater restrictions on emigration to the United States than has the American government. The United States congress this year passed a joint resolution by which families of Albanians who have become naturalized citizens would be permitted entry.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 29—(AP)—The government today announced that no Americans were among the 31 persons killed in the Simplon tunnel express collision on Friday. Previously it was announced that Arnold Ehrlich, an American, was among the dead, but it was explained that the error was made through his name having been mistaken over the telephone.

Borah's Suggestion To Nominee Smith

Proposes That Gov. Smith Poll Dem. Members of Congress on 18th Amendment.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 29—(AP) —Senator William E. Borah of Idaho in a speech here tonight called upon Governor Smith "to clarify the prohibition issue" by taking a poll of the democratic members of congress to ascertain "whether 80 per cent of them are with him or against him on the repeal of the eighteenth amendment." Citing the governor's declaration that 80 per cent of his party's members of congress were "pledged" to support the tariff stand, the Idaho senator said that the democratic presidential nominee had "changed his mind on prohibition and should "clarify the issue before election." He proposed that Governor Smith send a telegram to each democratic member of congress asking for their views on the repeal of the prohibition amendment and on his proposal for the public manufacture and sale of liquor.

"Perhaps Governor Smith prefers to wait until after the election," Mr. Borah added. "There are doubtless sound reasons for his doing so."

The senator, who is making his final campaign swing for Herbert Hoover's presidential candidacy, delivered his speech in the West Virginia capital city over a statewide radio hookup. Tomorrow night he will make his second invasion of the campaign into the normally democratic state of Virginia to speak at Norfolk.

Directing his fire on the prohibition stand of Governor Smith, the senator charged that the democratic nominee "in his western speeches said there was not much a president could do about the liquor question but just recommend a course and in his Philadelphia speech he gave his audience to understand that he is out to end prohibition.

"The governor wants the issue clarified," Senator Borah concluded. "It would greatly clarify the prohibition issue if he would state whether or not he had undertaken to find out how the democratic members of congress stand and what progress he has made on his prohibition course. All that is necessary is to send the same kind of a telegram that he sent in regard to the tariff. It would not cost a great deal I am sure, (smiling how Mr. Raskob (democratic national chairman) feels, that he would foot the bill."

MURDER INDICTMENTS AGAINST TWO STUDENTS

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29—(AP)—The Fulton county grand jury late today returned two joint indictments against George Harsh and Richard Gallogly, Oglethorpe students, charging them with the murder Oct. 27 of E. R. Meek, grocery clerk, and Willard Smith, a pharmacist's clerk, who was shot to death during a holdup Oct. 19.

A second civil suit, one for $100,000, was filed against the pair today by Mrs. Mary Bells Smith, 19-year-old widow of Willard A. Smith, drug store manager, who was slain in one of the holdups, to which Harsh has confessed. Mrs. Smith's action, together with one for $50,000 previously brought against Harsh and Gallogly jointly by L. V. Ellis, manager of a chain store in which Meek was shot to death, brings the total asked in civil suits against the youths to $150,000. Ellis was shot during the holdup in which Meek was killed.

Attorneys for Harsh said tonight the youth's mother, Mrs. George Harsh of Milwaukee, and his brother and sister, who live in Atlanta, were considering the possibility of asking Clarence Darrow, famous Chicago criminal lawyer, to head the array of defense counsel. They added, however, that no formal move had yet been made to obtain Darrow's service.

DEM. COMMITTEEMAN CITED FOR CONTEMPT

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 29—(AP)— Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, vice-chairman of the democratic national committee, today was cited in contempt of a state legislative investigating committee that for six months has been probing alleged irregularities in his democratic stronghold, Hudson county.

The action was the result of the refusal of the mayor to honor a subpoena issued by the committee. His appearance was to have been the climax of the inquiry.

The committee headed by Senator Clarence E. Case, and composed of six republicans, four of whom were present today, and two democrats, first cited the political leader to appear before the legislative bar. The next session of the legislature is Nov. 19.

20 PERSONS OVERCOME BY SMOKE IN MERIDEN

MERIDEN, Oct. 29—(AP)—Twenty persons were assisted to safety, nearly overcome by smoke, during a fire which caused estimated damage of $25,000 to the Morse and Cook building in the center of the city late tonight. The blaze, fought by the entire fire department, was under control an hour after the first of two alarms was sounded.

TO BROADCAST SPEECH OF CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

CHICAGO, Oct. 29—(AP)—The republican national committee announced tonight that the speech of Charles Evans Hughes tomorrow night at Worcester, Mass., will be broadcast over a national broadcasting company chain extended to include the Pacific coast.

3,187,338 Voters In New England States

Official Registrations Show an Increase of 31 Per Cent Over the Figures of 1924.

BOSTON, Oct. 29—(AP)—A thirty one per cent increase in the number of registered voters in New England is shown by the 1928 registration figures—an increase that follows closely the general swelling of the voting lists throughout the nation.

The six New England states now have 3,187,338 registered voters. In 1924 there were 2,347,255 voters, the new totals showing therefore that 840,083 more persons are eligible to go to the polls next Tuesday.

Every state shows a substantial increase in registrations with the exception of New Hampshire where only 5,000 more voters are registered. Massachusetts, with marked increases in a number of her larger cities, leads the list with an increase of nearly 600,000 over 1924.

The registration by states for 1928 and 1924 follows:

	1928	1924
Massachusetts	1,720,778	1,129,909
Connecticut	483,700	409,296
Maine	307,000	292,192
Rhode Island	269,860	238,576
New Hampshire	230,000	225,000
Vermont	175,000	161,282
Totals	3,187,338	2,347,255

Springfield leads the Massachusetts cities in per cent of increase with a 1928 total of 58,880 against 40,434 for 1924. Boston's total is 298,439 against 247,636 for 1924.

Other Massachusetts cities showing considerable increases are:

	1928	1924
Cambridge	45,010	31,113
New Bedford	36,257	30,547
Somerville	42,908	35,303
Worcester	77,543	68,025
Lawrence	30,356	25,585
Lowell	40,568	35,420
Lynn	43,655	35,459
Pittsfield	20,723	16,587
Northampton	10,294	8,313

In Rhode Island, Providence shows a total of 83,226 against 83,204, while in New Hampshire, Manchester has 30,416 against 26,677 and Concord has 13,500 against 12,500.

There is a similar increase in Connecticut cities as is shown in the following table:

	1928	1924
New Haven	62,239	49,955
Bridgeport	50,376	38,827
Waterbury	36,600	27,934
New Britain	21,469	16,575
New London	10,175	8,532
Meriden	16,367	14,353

Portland, Me., has 20,915 registered voters where in 1924 it had 18,115. Estimates of the registration in other New England cities show a corresponding increase; in some being from 8 to 10 per cent.

SEN. BINGHAM ATTACKS DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

DANBURY, Oct. 29—(AP)—United States Senator Hiram Bingham, addressing a republican gathering here tonight, asserted that the republican party believed that under the Monroe doctrine it was "our duty to promote peace and security" particularly among the countries bordering on the Caribbean sea, near the Panama canal.

Senator Bingham had alluded to the democratic national platform and its plank on foreign relations, saying that the democrats "did not appear to be aware of what was actually going on in Nicaragua." Said the senator: "The democratic platform declared for a foreign policy based on 'non-interference with elections or other internal political affairs of any foreign nation' and states explicitly that this non-interference should extend to Nicaragua. . . . Our supervision over elections in Nicaragua had been requested by both the leading political parties of that republic and was regarded by the leading citizens of Nicaragua as essential to the peace and prosperity of the country.

"Apparently the democratic platform is based on the wishes of the bandit Sandino, one of whose lieutenants recently led a bandit gang which committed murders and terrorized the inhabitants of several villages in order to keep them from registering and voting.

"Col. Francis Parker, who has recently made a personal investigation, reports that the murders were perpetrated with most revolting cruelty, several victims being hacked to pieces with long knives, their noses and ears cut off and their bodies mutilated. Sandino's lieutenant released some captives on condition that they spread the warning among other inhabitants. He said he would kill all who attempted to vote in the forthcoming elections. Since then this bandit has been committing more murders of a wanton and brutal character. According to the democratic platform it is apparently to permit this sort of banditry to run riot and the elections to become a farce and a friendly country to be thrown into the terrors of a civil war."

Senator Bingham further said: "The republican party believed that under the Monroe doctrine it was our duty to promote peace and security, particularly among the countries bordering on the Caribbean sea near the Panama canal. If we were to follow the democratic ideas on this subject European nations would soon be compelled to send over armed forces to protect their nationals. It would give them an excuse to establish new footholds near the Panama canal."

The meeting tonight was held under the auspices of the Republican club at Concordia hall, before a large audience. Judge Edmund Mason presided as chairman.

CREW OF GRAF ZEPPELIN OUTWITTED BY STOWAWAY

Clarence Terhune of St. Louis, a 19 Year Old Caddy, Was Discovered Just as the Airship Was Passing Over the American Coast Line, Bound Over the Ocean—First Trans-Atlantic Air Stowaway—Officers of the Zeppelin Hope to Reach Friedrichshaven, Germany, by Wednesday Noon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—Carrying the first trans-Atlantic air stowaway—a blond American youth in his teens—the German air liner Graf Zeppelin was homeward bound tonight over the North Atlantic.

The huge ship, whose arrival in the United States just two weeks ago today thrilled the Atlantic seaboard by her majestic size and power, bade farewell to her American hosts at 6:15 o'clock this morning and turned her blunt nose from the Massachusetts coast out to sea in a wide swing toward Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

At 10:15 o'clock this morning the returning voyager passed over the steamer Laconia at a point 90 miles southwest of Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, while at 2:00 p. m., she reported her position as about 112 miles southeast of Cape Sable. The ship was then averaging 67 miles an hour and the weather was reported clear. She was about 980 miles from Lakehurst and hoped to reach her home port, Friedrichshafen, by Wednesday noon.

The great dirigible, which for 6,000 miles had struggled with adverse winds on her trip to the United States, swinging in a wide lane over the southern route by way of Madeira, the Azores and Bermuda, was on the steamship course from Boston to southern England, and there was every indication that Dr. Hugo Eckener would follow the normal northern route. This is somewhat south of the direct great circle course followed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in his historic flight to Paris last year.

While weather conditions were reported more favorable over the southern course toward the Azores, there were favoring tail winds to the north which Dr. Eckener apparently was determined to use to their full advantage. Weather reports compiled in New York indicated that the ship would encounter shifting winds and equally conditions as she got further out to sea.

It was shortly before 2 o'clock this morning when the Graf Zeppelin, turging at her leashes in the huge hangar at Lakehurst, moved out there for two weeks she was tied to a mast, side by side with the American dirigible Los Angeles, also a product of the Zeppelin works, slowly sled through the great doors and emerged into the moonlit morning. Doubt as to the exact time of her departure had filled Lakehurst with feverish excitement as postponement followed postponement. Then soon after midnight came breathless action. Taking advantage of a favorable ground wind, Dr. Eckener gave the command that started the homeward voyage. More than 300 sailors hauled the great ship into the night and 1:54 a. m. she was off.

Down on her lists were 20 passengers, including one woman and a crew of 40. But there was one more passenger—a stowaway—the first to worm his way aboard a trans-Atlantic airliner and make the trip without authority. He was discovered at 6 o'clock this morning, just as the ship was nosing her way through the sky past the American coast, bound over the ocean.

First news of his finding came in a dispatch to a Berlin newspaper from its representative aboard the dirigible. He was described as a "17-year-old" blond American youth and there was nothing in the message to indicate that his presence had caused chagrin although the danger of stowaways was one that Dr. Eckener had been guarding against carefully.

The stowaway was Clarence Terhune, a 19-year-old caddy whose home is in St. Louis. "St. Louis," as he was known at the Rye Country club where he worked for the summer, left Rye last Friday leaving a hint that he was adventure bound. He had $50 in his pocket, his savings for the season.

But Clarence is not the only American aboard. There are three United States navy officers aboard as guest observers of the homeward flight. They are Comdr. M. R. Pierce, executive officer of the Lakehurst naval air station; Lieut. G. W. Settle, engineer officer of the Los Angeles, and Lieut. C. E. Bauch, watch officer of the Los Angeles and flight officer of the station.

In addition there are Mrs. Clara Adams, Tannersville, Pa., wife of George L. Adams, retired business man; Donald M. Castro of Columbus, O.; Joseph B. Jessel of New York city; Col. Allen Miller, New York and London financier.

Lady Drummond Hay, who was the sole woman passenger on the voyage to America, remained in the United States.

TO INDICATE POSITION SEVERAL TIMES A DAY

BERLIN, Oct. 29—(AP)—All Germany once more is in a state of frenzied expectancy over the return flight of the Graf Zeppelin. This is viewed by the popular mind as furnishing an acid test to the dirigible's claim to be received as a medium of ocean air travel which would definitely remove them from the realm of legend and experiment.

The solitary bale of cotton which is on board the greatest airship of today is held of great importance as representing the first commodity of commercial importance to traverse the Atlantic by the air route.

The fact that Dr. Hugo Eckener struck out from the American continent over the lane followed by Atlantic liners is received here as an indication that he may establish a record time on his return flight. Wireless messages received in Germany from the commander of the dirigible indicated that a favorable west wind has enabled him to maintain an hourly speed of 150 to 160 kilometers (92 to 99 miles) in the early part of the flight.

No recurrence of public resentment such as was caused by the news monopoly during the flight to America is expected in connection with the return trip. The ministry of transportation has instructed Dr. Eckener to indicate his position several times a day and also to reply to official queries, which would give the public at least a minimum quota of news of the flight. A further safeguard of the interest of the public is expected from the presence aboard of Director Ernst Brandenburg of the ministry of transportation.

The Graf Zeppelin on its return flight is again in communication with the German aeronautical testing station at Adlershop, near Berlin. These communications are in further experimentation with short wave lengths which are now deemed indispensable in addition to other radio facilities since these signals can be sent with dry batteries in emergencies.

PREVIOUS RECORD OF ZEPPELIN STOWAWAY

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 29—(AP)—Clarence Terhune, 19, the first trans-Atlantic airship stowaway in history, is the son of Charles Terhune, a barber, who killed his wife and himself in their home here last July 12. The boy then was a stowaway on a ship in the Pacific.

"It's just like him," exclaimed George M. Hall, a brother-in-law, when told Terhune was a stowaway on the Graf Zeppelin. "He's being doing things like that for two years but this is the biggest job he ever underfook."

LOG OF GRAF ZEPPELIN

BERLIN, Oct. 29—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin reported by radio that at 1 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, her position was latitude 43 north, longitude 58 west. The flying speed was given as 160 kilometers hourly (almost 100 miles) and the course as south-east.

2:00 p. m.—Radio report to Germany gave position as latitude 43 north longitude 58 west. Speed 160 kilometers and the course southeast.

5:25 p. m.—Reported sighted passing over Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, flying low and toward the east.

IDENTIFIED IN PICTURE OF CONDEMNED MAN HER HUSBAND

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 29—(AP)—Examining photographs of Russel B. Beitzel, scheduled to die at San Quentin prison in California Nov. 30 for the slaying of Barbara Mauger, Mrs. Mary Thomas, 28, of McKeesport, a suburb, tonight declared Beitzel was her husband, whose real name she said was Leo Thomas. Mrs. Thomas' seven year old son also recognized the photographs as that of his father, the woman said.

Mrs. Thomas said her husband had deserted her five years ago and that she had not seen him since that time.

The pictures of the convicted slayer were sent to Mrs. Thomas by Sheriff William I. Traeger of Los Angeles after she had requested photographs upon seeing Beitzel's picture in a newspaper.

Mrs. Thomas is the second woman to claim Beitzel as her husband. Mrs. Jean Mellinger Beitzel of Lancaster, Pa., having made a similar claim shortly after the man was arrested for the murder of the Mauger girl, whose home was in Philadelphia. Her body was found in Stone Canyon, North Hollywood, on Aug. 3.

ROTARIANS HEAR INTERESTING TALK ON IMMIGRATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 29.—Michael Kiley, manager of the immigration service and citizenship bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company of New York was heard in a most interesting talk on The Immigration and the Old World at the weekly meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club held in the Windham Hall hotel this noon. The meeting was held today instead of the regular day Tuesday to accommodate Mr. Kiley in view of the interesting subject to be heard discussed there was a large attendance including the following guests: H. C. Lathrop, J. H. Trombley, R. E. Shepard, manager of the local district of the Metropolitan insurance company and Walter Bradley of Pine Orchard. Cigars were received from Kenneth N. Rithouse who recently became a proud father. President Raymond A. Parker called attention to the distribution of chamber of commerce folders uniquely advertising the advantages of Willimantic as a good place in which to work and live, and asked the members to enclose copies in their outgoing mail. Wilfred A. Gagnon was appointed assistant editor of The Coo for next week.

Mr. Kiley first gave figures and facts concerning the immigration laws their benefits and their purposes. A check from those seeking admission to America began in 1917 when the literacy test law was passed over the head of President Wilson. The first restrictive immigration law followed in 1921 for equalization purposes and showing preferences to the people of northern and western Europe. In 1924 the immigration was restricted to two per cent. of nationals of any country as of the census of 1890. The results of these restrictions has been that a selected class of foreigners of desirable aims intelligence and adaptibility have been accepted. Of those who came over 88 per cent. were examined on the other side thus avoiding disruption of families at Ellis Island, which has been changed from the Isle of Tears to the Isle of Joy. Mr. Kiley went on to give a complete picture of the character and peculiarities of the immigrant classes. Of 307,255 immigrants who came to this country last year 33.4 per cent. of the total were of the following eight races: Mexican, German, Irish, English, Scotch, Italian, Scandinavian and French. There were 144,281 immigrants admitted from the American continent which is now restricted as to quota. He took his hearers on a imagined trip to the principal centers of Europe, injecting a fine combination of humor and pathos in his rapid description of governments, peoples and incidents experience by him on tours of Europe. As regards Willimantic Mr. Kiley gave figures to show that in the census of 1920 it showed a population of 12,820, with 4.18% of the population foreign born and over 1,919 non-citizens. There were 311 adult illiterates, this figure having been greatly reduced through the efforts of educational agencies.

CORN COB CLUB'S SPONSER THRILLED AT ARMY-YALE GAME

John Ashbey, godfather of the Corn Cob club went with some of his friends by automobile Saturday to see the Army-Yale football game in New Haven. An ex-college man, H. Horan at Yale college for several years, got the tickets for Godfather Ashbey and himself while the other three had theirs engaged four months ago. Reaching the Elm City at 11:30 a. m. the party went to the Hotel Taft for dinner, before the cadets from West Point came by train, so as to see them march through the streets, getting a good place at the railroad station. 1200 cadets were in line. The band played snappy music. Then off to the bowl they went for the battle. They got their place on the West Point side and were cheering for the West Point to win. Seeing the boys in gray march around the field several times was a pretty sight. At 2 o'clock came the kick-off and the battle was on. It was the first game of football that Ashbey ever saw and it was some treat. Much of it was Greek to him and when Cagle, the flash for the Army team made a dash through the center of the line for a beautiful run of 76 yards shaking off Yale players time and time again, Ashbey said: "That is not fair, 22 men chasing that fellow to take the ball!" He yelled "Stop that! You will hurt him!" The fans had a great laugh at the country boy's mistake. He wrote a fellow's hat when the cheering squad went wild over the run and helped them out. When the game was over the Army mule had kicked the bulldog around for a score of 12 to 6. Godfather Ashbey was happy to see the fun after the game where the snake dance was done around the field. Reaching the fishing village at 10 o'clock that night he was tired but happy, over the day's outing in New Haven. He will tell the Corn Cob club members all about it at their next meeting night in November.

Parker Wildes spent the week end in Vermont.

Sam Fish was in Bridgeport Sunday calling on relatives.

Some Halloween Stunts

A Halloween party was held at the home of Daniel Robertson Saturday evening twenty of his friends gathering for a good time. The room was decorated with blackcats, witches, orange and black crepe paper. Pumpkin moonshines were around the room. One game, bobbing for apples was a large tub of water with red apples floating on top and the lucky person to pick an apple out of the tub without touching his hands, getting the apple by the teeth, received a box of candy. The first to try it was Ben Chesebro, he slipped, took his Saturday night bath and drew a laugh from the crowd. Several others got a wetting. George Marks knew the trick and got the apple without getting wet so won the prize.

Several Halloween tricks were played. West View Happy Boys orchestra gave the guests plenty of dance steps. Eugene Butson came in dressed like a witch and said "I am Miss Halloween from High street!" Several girls nearly fainted. The girl trio, Miss Roberta Buddington, Miss B. Smith and Miss Bertha Nash sang "Let a Smile be Your Umbrella" with Frank E. Bredge at the piano. Doing a sword dance, Gordon Clark showed how to walk on the sword in bare feet. Raymond Sweet as Miss Ruby Sterry and Walter Buddington as Sid Gold, put on an act "Ma and Pa at the Seashore." A duck supper was served with cream puffs and coffee. The orchestra played "Three O'Clock in the Morning" as the party ended.

Raymond Sistare was in Providence over the week end.

The Sunbury branch of the American Mechanics lodge, 40 members left in automobiles for Providence Saturday morning to take part in the field day and big parade held in the afternoon when the streets were lined and filled the air with music. The Noank lodgemen were second in a line that was 2 1-2 miles long. Also had along their band with 20 men. The sidewalks were crowded and the policemen had some job to hold the crowd. After the parade supper was served in the new hall by the young ladies to all who took part in the parade. A short program was put on and a 15 piece orchestra played for dancing.

It was around 3 o'clock Sunday morning when the lodgemen rolled into the village and reported a swell time in Rhode Island. John Bentley was in charge of the delegation.

About 50 from the village attended Navy day at the submarine base when it was open to the public.

The president, Miss Norcross, presented Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt, who has been the club leader for the past two years, and who is resigning, a silver pie knife from the girls of the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Whaples of Norwich were present and Mr. Whaples, the county club agent, spoke on the Value of Club Work and hoped the club would continue. Ice cream and cake were served by the members and there was an interesting exhibit of their work for the year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edmund Norman entertained at a Halloween party for their children, J. Edmund, Jr., Carol, Irving and Phoebe at their home in the village Thursday evening. Games were enjoyed in the garage and later the company adjourned to the house where stories were told around the fireplace and refreshments were served. There were 20 in attendance.

A meeting of the Ladies' Aid society was held Friday afternoon at the rectory. The work was on quilt blocks.

At the Community M. E. church Sunday morning, Rev. Jerome Greer spoke from Matthew 22:5, his theme being They Made Light of It. The quartet sang, O Saviour of the World, at the offertory. At the church school session, following the study period, Miss Ethel F. Main, who won the Bible offered by Dudley C. Perkins in a recent contest, recited the several memory selections before the school. The classes of Mrs. Courtland E. Colver and Mrs. Avery Main were awarded the banners for attendance and the Men's class and Miss Emma Beth Bennett's secured those for offering.

Miss Helen L. Colver was leader of the Epworth league evening meeting with the topic, Parties and Personalities. The chapter is to hold a Hallowe'en party at the vestry Friday evening. A prize is to be offered for the best costume and any not specially garbed for the event will be fined.

Members of the church school classes, taught by Mrs. Jerome Greer and Mrs. Andrew C. Miller, met Wednesday evening with their teachers at the parsonage, and organized a Queen Esther society, with ten members. The officers elected are: Miss Helen L. Colver, president; Miss Velma Atkins, vice-president; Miss Ethel F. Main, secretary; Miss Lillian Atkins, treasurer; Miss Margaret S. Colver, mite box secretary. Mrs. Greer's class of older girls arranged for the refreshments served during the evening. The society will meet once a month, the next session to be Nov. 7.

Mrs. Marie Sorenson, who left here two years ago to visit her daughters, Mrs. C. W. Johnston at Santa Monica, Calif., and Mrs. C. H. Christiansen, at San Pedro, Calif., returned Thursday to the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew G. Miller. Her daughter, Mrs. Anton Larsen of Boston, who joined her here on her arrival for a short visit, returned home Saturday evening.

Mrs. Delphine Fish entertained for the day, Thursday, Mrs. Lydia P. Hurlbutt and Mrs. Lucy A. Hurlbutt of the village; Mrs. Jennie Wadham and Mrs. Edna Moses of Groton, and her daughter, Mrs. Coleby Morgan, of Mystic.

Local teachers in the Ledyard schools, Mrs. Evelyn R. Lawson, Mrs. Iva B. Hurlbutt and Mrs. Fannie G. Stoddard, were in attendance at the annual state teachers' convention, in New London Friday.

Mrs. J. Edmund Norman, a local member of the New London Northfield club, with Mrs. Robert Miller of Boston, a former secretary, were in attendance at the meeting of the club at the home of Mrs. Dwight C. Stone in Hanover Saturday.

Miss Susan Mathewson left recently to visit friends at her former home in Durham.

Miss Laura A. Perkins is spending some time with relatives and friends in New London.

WESTERLY

ENTHUSIASTS CLIMB HILLS ON WATCH FOR ZEPPELIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 29.—When it was learned in the early hours of this morning that the giant German dirigible Graf Zeppelin had left Lakehurst, N. J., and was on its return to Germany a number of Westerly enthusiasts sought vantage points from which to observe the passage of the big aircraft. It was known that the ship was headed in a generally northerly direction but the exact spot at which Westerly was to be crossed has been "all up in the air."

The top of Hinckley Hill in Pawcatuck, from which aircraft have previously been observed when passing either to the north or south of Westerly was visited by a group who found the weather remarkably clear and a light from a nearly full moon illuminating the stretch of land and water which lay before them. Navigation aid lights in Fishers Island, Long Island and Block Island sounds were clearly visible and brought out in sharp relief by the aid of glasses, but no evidence of the big dirigible met their gaze which was especially drawn shortly before 5 a. m. when the drone of distant motors seemed to be heard. Montauk light was clearly visible at all times and these watchers declare that no air ship passed between them and the eastern extremity of Long Island in the hours from 4 to 5 a. m.

Observers who visited Watch Hill reported seeing the lights of the airship over Block Island. There is a possibility the ship came inland when off the south shore of Long Island sufficiently long enough to make sure of its bearings before turning its prow directly across the wide expanse of Atlantic.

Section men and work train crew on the New Haven road have been engaged the past few days on the roadbed between the Broad street dry bridge and the Pawcatuck river water bridge and the Westerly waiting station. A "mole" so-called by the railroad workers, has been in operation cleaning the rock ballast of the road bed. The heavy piece of machinery weighing several tons is placed between the main-line tracks and the "hands" when operated haul the roadbed surface into the machine cleaning the dirt, sand and foreign matter collected from the rock ballast which is again tamped back under the railroad ties. The machinery is carried on a flat car of the work train and lifted off between the tracks by the steam derrick, a part of the work train equipment.

The following transfer has been recorded in the office of Westerly town clerk:

Oct. 27. Maynard Land company of Providence to Louis L. Mathews and wife Julia E. Matthews, lot No. 69, plat of Melrose Heights.

FUNERAL

John B. Moran

The funeral of John B. Moran was held Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock from his home 36 Garden street, Pawcatuck. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at 9 o'clock at St. Michael's church by Rev. Leo Weston. Following the mass, Dr. Harold F. Doyle sang "Teach Me to Pray." There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Burial was at St. Michael's new cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Fr. Weston. The bearers were: Patrick Sullivan, Michael Sullivan, Patrick Barrett, Michael Donahue, Michael Cummiskey and Thomas Shourse.

OBITUARY

James Berardo

James Berardo 41, dropped dead Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock in the yard of his home, 17 Pleasant street, he having been a sufferer from heart trouble. Berardo had been down town during the afternoon and upon his return home walked about the grounds. During the day he is said to have suffered from pains in his stomach, but he gave the trouble no serious thought and was about during the day as usual. Neighbors saw the man fall and went to his assistance. Dr. M. H. Scanlon was summoned, but found the man was dead. Mr. Berardo was born in Cargiliano, Italy February 11, 1887. He came to this country about 18 years ago, and for a number of years had made his residence in Westerly. Besides his wife, Carmella, he is survived by his mother in Italy, and eight children, two daughters, Tessie and Eleanor, and six sons, Joseph, Dominic, Roland, Tony, Fred and Albert.

"Scotland of the Scotch" was the subject of an illustrated lecture Monday evening at the First Baptist church by Samuel G. Neil, D. D., under the auspices of the men's class.

Mr. Neil is a traveler, orator, humorist, word-painter and singer and he appeared in Scotch costume for his lecture in addition to many interesting narratives and descriptions of Scotland, he gave a number of folklore songs. Beautifully colored screen pictures added to the enjoyment of the evening. Music was by the Westerly Kilties band.

HOOVER-CURTIS CLUB PLANNING BIG RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 29.—At the meeting of the Hoover-Curtis club executive committee plans were perfected for the republican rally to be held Wednesday evening. Gov. Norman Case will not be here Wednesday night, but will speak at a rally to be held in Westerly at a later date.

Judge Felix Hebert, the republican candidate, who will oppose Senator Peter G. Gerry democrat, for United State senator, will be one of the speakers Wednesday. Ex-Speaker Philip Joslin and John C. Cosgrove of Woonsocket are the other speakers.

The executive committee has not set the date for the second republican rally.

"OVER THE COUNTER"

Dear Dot:

I promised you some time ago that I would write you twice a week to tell you things of interest that I find in Willimantic on my bi-weekly shopping tours. Last Friday you were told how to make the Honest Penny figure in your buying. Today I must tell you about another splendid chance for economical purchasing. It has to do with the Ten-Cent Piece . . . the silver Dime made famous by Woolworth, Rockefeller and others...and Groceries necessary for every household.

The story is simple enough, but the opportunity is one of the best I have ever seen. At the LARAMEE CO. INC., GROCERY AND MEAT STORE, 22 North street, I came across an extensive display of articles over which was a sign "Ten Cents Each." In the display were all varieties of canned vegetables and fruits; jellies and jams; pickles and olives; peanut butter, etc. There were also Teas, Foss' Extracts, packages of Rice, Spices of all kinds, Bottles of Vinegar and Catsup, and what not. In all, they are too numerous to mention, Dot, dear, but they are good-sized cans, jars and packages and really represent a great value for a small investment.

LARAMEE'S is also showing a new line of Keebler CRACKERS AND WAFERS, neatly packed in tins. Keebler's products include Saltines, Fountain Wafers, Cheese Wafers, Thin Rings, Graham Crackers and Arrow-Root Biscuits.

You will also find there a complete list of the Tea-Garden brand of Jellies and Jams and delightful Sweet-Pickled Watermelon.

THE LARAMEE CCO. has a wide reputation for excellent Cheeses and Imported Pastes and Fillets of Anchovies and Tuny Fish, flavoring touches to the dishes of the discriminate and cultured person.

So, there's the story, Dot. Whether it's from a standard stock of fresh groceries and meats or from the special Ten-Cent display, you can get just what you want and all you want at LARAMEE'S. And about that Ten-Cent proposition. What more economical way of replenishing the family larder with a fine array of canned, jarred and packed goods than by paying for them at the rate of Ten Cents—One Dime—each? You'll find having these groceries on hand mighty handy when those unexpected guests arrive and the stores are closed. Select your favorite assortment this week, Dot, and LARAMEE'S will deliver it for you.

Yours,

JANE.

Household Bank Accounts

The management of household finances ought to be a business matter. The member of the family who looks after the expenses and pays the bills should have a bank account. Paying bills by check gives one an accurate record of where the money goes, and cancelled checks, which the bank returns, are receipts for all money paid.

We have a large number of household accounts and would welcome yours.

LOCAL GRANGERS ATTEND POMONA AT ABINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. Lucien O. Allen and son Leslie attended Quinebaug Pomona Grange meeting held with Wolf Den Grange at Abington, Saturday. Leslie Allen took the fifth and sixth degree preparatory to taking the seventh degree at Washington, D. C., next month.

Monday evening, Everyman's Bible class of the local Baptist church, had its October supper and business meeting. Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of Groton Heights Baptist church, delivered an interesting address. The Ladies' Aid society of Old Mystic Baptist church will meet Wednesday with Mrs. Frank Wheeler.

Ellison Beckwith of New Haven spent the week end with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Beckwith.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Burdick spent Sunday afternoon with Norwich friends.

As the first Tuesday of November is Election day, Plus Ultra Bible class of Old Mystic Baptist church is having its meeting Thursday evening, Nov. 1, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Williams.

John Nivin celebrated his seventh birthday, Friday, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nivin of Cedar road. His school friends who were invited played games and had a fine time. Those present were Marion Miner, Lois Miner, Mary Maxson, Mary Nivin, John Lamb, Ellery Vial, James Maxson Jr., Alpheus Farnsworth and John Nivin.

Miss Elizabeth Thorpe of Dana Hall, Wellesley, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thorpe.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Paige have rented their home and are staying with Miss Josephine Dickenson for a month or so, before going south to spend the winter.

Miss Dorothy Gray of Providence Normal school spent the week end with relatives.

John Paton has been dismissed from a private hospital in Westerly.

Winfield Gaskel, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gaskell was playing in the yard recently and in jumping landed on his foot in such a way as to break two bones. He is a patient at Lawrence hospital, New London.

Mrs. Alice Sherburne is spending a few days with Miss Evelyn Holmes of New London.

Misses Emeline and Jessie Fish are having their house renovated and painted.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church is to meet Thursday in the vestry.

Mrs. Eugene Jones sang a solo at the Congregational church, Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Trulock B. Hathaway of Bridgeport brought the latter's mother, Mrs. Charles W. Foote, home, Friday, after a visit with them. Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway returned to Bridgeport Saturday.

The Mystic Visiting Nurse association cleared $295 from the "Womanless Wedding," given for two nights recently.

At the Union Baptist church Sunday morning, Citizenship Day was observed. A motion was passed to take up a special offering next Sunday morning and evening to be used toward building chapels, churches and buildings in Porto Rico. Mrs. Joseph Johnson sang the solo entitled, If I Forget Thee, O Jerusalem, at the morning service.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Haley and Miss Juliette Haley left Sunday for their winter home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Harry Hill is substituting for Miss Hopple Brown at Mystic academy. The latter is on a motor trip to Romney, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith and children Claire, Marjorie, Jane and Bobbie, of New Haven, and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carter and son, Adelbert, Jr., spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Perry Eldredge.

Mrs. Ellery Davis of Old Mystic and son Elwood Davis of New Haven, returned Friday from a motor trip to Canada and New Hampshire.

Prof. and Mrs. D. T. Keech and two sons of New Haven and Miss Elizabeth Bentley spent the week end at White Hall.

The Country club's committee for Thursday evening's meeting will be Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Manning, Mrs. Walter T. Fish and Miss Margaret Bindloss.

The Ladies' Aid society of St. Patrick's church is to meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. George McKenzie. Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Justin Stafford and Miss Elizabeth Foley.

To Remember Their Dead

Wednesday morning there is to be a mass for the deceased members of the Knights of Columbus. Thursday the Feast of all saints masses will be at 5:30 and 8 a. m. First Friday of the month, masses at 5:45 and 8 a. m. Evening holy hour at 7:30.

HOOVER AND FARM PROBLEM

In connection with the problem of farm relief Mr. Hoover has stated what he believes should be done. He has set forth a definite programme and he is confident that it would meet the situation. He recognizes the situation needs attention, just as it has been realized for many months, but he proposes to do something about it just as soon as possible.

Farm relief is sought from congress. It is unfortunate that it was not accepted from the last session of congress in such a form as the president urged and as congress would have provided. If it had been it would now be in operation, but without the inquitous equalization fee. There is an opportunity for congress to take up and meet this farm problem in the coming short session. Mr. Hoover expects that it will do this thing, but if for any reason it doesn't he has declared that he will call a special session of congress for the purpose of dealing with it should he be elected.

That doesn't mean the naming of a commission that will spend a lot of time getting together facts which are already known and utilize a lot of time before reporting to congress. It means getting congress together for a special purpose at the earliest possible moment and calling for action upon the farm question.

Such a plan is not one of snap judgment. Mr. Hoover who came from the farm knows the importance of early action. His purpose is to have steps taken that will aid the farmer during the coming year, rather than wait until the year after. He is ready to act if it becomes necessayr for him to do so and it is significant that he has received the endorsement of leaders from the farming states in the position he has taken. His attitude is consistent with the demands of the situation. Certainly if the present congress makes full use of its time and opportunity when it gets together in December it can make an extra session unnecessary. That is the logical and desirable thing to do, but if congress fails to do what is needed then Mr. Hoover in event of election would be prepared to exercise his right and call the new congress into action. Thus he gives assurance to the farmers that it will be a matter of only a short time at the most before something will be done.

AVIATION ADVANCES

Every time a new air mail service is provided, every time a new air transport service of any kind is opened, it advances aviation. In a new way the arrival and departure of the Graf Zeppelin aids in the advancement of air service. Its successful return to Friedrichshafen will be a big feather for that type of airship.

According to statistics which have been compiled by the department of commerce we have planes which carry mail 26,240 miles every day. Most of the larger cities are today equipped with landing fields, or airports, and there are many of the smaller ones which either have or are contemplating such facilities for advancing their air service.

It was not so many years ago that attention was being directed to the fact that European countries were far ahead of the United States in the development of the airplane. It was here that flying was shown to be a possibility but it was across the water that the greatest interest was manifested in putting it to use. Foreign efforts were made possible through government assistance, but even in the carrying of mail and passengers the airlines of Europe got into action before we did.

Our mail planes do not as yet cover as many miles as the mail carrying planes in Germany where 40,000 miles are made daily, but our planes covering the 26,240 miles carry a greater volume of mail. While the German planes carried less than a million pounds last year our planes carried nearly a million and a third pounds.

We are yet back of Europe in the matter of passenger carrying plane. The number is growing each year. Statistics, if kept, would doubtless reveal an interesting situation in this respect concerning our planes, but we have yet to reach the stage of air service that has been established between London and Paris or even that which prevails in Germany. That we haven't reached it doesn't mean that we are not going to. It is certainly coming and by no means is it at a snail's pace. The present year has seen a decided gain over 1927 if we can judge by the indications.

SMITH CHALLENGED

Whenever Mr. Smith has sought to make use of the names of prominent republicans to bolster up his position he has invariably encountered trouble, or his campaign backer made a great handle of the fact that Charles Evans Hughes had said something complimentary of him in connection with the governorship of New York state. It was utilized as a testimonial. Mr. Hughes didn't deny it. He made the statement accredited to him but he wasn't weighing Mr. Smith as a candidate for the presidency. What he has been quoted as saying about Mr. Smith gave him the opportunity for acknowledging what he said, but also to say that even though it was true he regarded Mr. Hoover as far the better man for the presidency and gave good and ample reasons for it.

When Mr. Smith took exception to the Hoover statement that his attitude on the water power question showed a tendency to state socialism he made the claim that Nathan L. Miller, former governor of New York, was also a socialist then. His purpose was to convey the impression that Mr. Miller and he thought alike on the water power question.

Mr. Miller takes exception to such a declaration. He says: "Mr. Smith represented as favoring state development and operation of water powers. He knows better. He knows that the present water power law of the state of New York, passed during my administration and upon my recommendation, provides for private operation and development under state ownership and strict state supervision and control." Furthermore the former governor of New York challenges Mr. Smith to "say in plain words either that he favors or is against the policy of public development and operation of water powers."

This demand that he make himself clear as to where he stands on the water power question is in keeping with similar demands which have followed addresses during his tours out the country. He has befuddled the situation concerning the tariff. No one knows where he stands on the equalization fee and he is having a hard time trying to keep on an even keel concerning the wet question as he moves from dry to wet territory, so much so that Mr. Hughes refers to it as a sham battle. It does little good to talk about misrepresentations when one straddles on national issues.

STEAM VS. ELECTRICITY

In these days of increased power development and increased output of electricity it is inevitable that it should be employed for the purpose of operating railroads. This is not exactly a new field for development has been underway in that direction for years. However, progress has been slow for while there are 1800 miles of lines which are operated by electricity this represents but 3 per cent. of the total trackage of the country. The roads which have adopted electricity have done so only in part. The coal burning locomotive has by no means been replaced. It has on some of the roads given way to the oil burner, and certain disagreeable features have thus been eliminated, but electricity is another and much more costly step.

Railroads are not under orders from the interstate commerce commission to electrify a certain number of miles of road every year the same as is required in regard to the automatic train control. They electrify when it is found advisable and when it is possible to get the necessary capital. It is necessarily a piecemeal job. It means a complete change of locomotives and expensive wiring and bonding, to say nothing of the power stations.

In this respect, however, this country is not alone. Electricity has been adopted in other countries for motive power, but no where does it exceed the use to which it is put in this country. When it is shown that there are 19 of our railroads which have adopted it on certain stretches, in underground work about cities and in terminals with certain intercity installations, it is noticed that it has not been replaced. The impression is gained that there would be electricity used more generally but for the expense that is involved in getting ready for it. As the amount of current available for such use is increased and opportunity exists for utilizing it, it is reasonable to expect that railroads will employ it whenever and wherever their financial resources make it possible. Perhaps the day will come when such equipment, as well as the automatic train stop, will become better standardized. Every advance toward perfection should make for increased use. It will be a long time, however before the steam locomotive disappears.

REFUTATION OF SMITH CHARGE CONCERNING FOOD PRICES

The manner in which the republican national committee has anticipated carefully prepared attacks on Mr. Hoover by his democratic opponents and supplied the effective answer in advance must be decidedly irritating to Chairman Raskob, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. There have been several such instances of republican enterprise lately. One of the most notable was the spiking of the guns that were being trained on Mr. Hoover's "British citizenship."

Now the democratic chairman launches a broadside against the republican candidate's record as food administrator during the World war. That record of brilliant achievements, which not only helped to win the war, but saved America's agricultural industry from disaster, is fairly familiar to Mr. Hoover's fellow countrymen. But it has been deliberately misrepresented in an effort to show that Mr. Hoover did not do all he could for the American farmer. There have been two specific but unfounded accusations. One is that he fixed the price of wheat in 1917 at a figure unsatisfactory to many farmers, although it worked out to their exceeding advantage. The other charge, more recent and emphasized for 1928 campaign purposes, is that Mr. Hoover tried to beat down the prices of farm products immediately after the war.

The first charge has been refuted so forcefully that even Mr. Raskob perceives the futility of reviving it now. But there is no more basis for the other accusation which Mr. Raskob has been misled into indorsing. That was clearly shown last Friday by the comprehensive statement of the republican national committee which leaves Mr. Raskob in the position of circulating an untruth after its falsity has been demonstrated.

The basic price of wheat during the war, fixed back in 1917 by the fair price committee appointed by President Wilson, was $2.20 a bushel. That was the minimum. As a matter of fact, the farmers frequently got more. With the fixing of this price, Mr. Hoover, according to President Wilson and Chairman Garfield, of the committee, had absolutely nothing to do. That is settled. Debarred from reviving this false report in so many words, Mr. Raskob nevertheless shiftily seeks to capitalize the spirit of its authorship by suggesting that after the armistice Mr. Hoover sought to hold down the price of the 1919 wheat crop, and he quotes a single sentence from a cablegram sent to Washington by Mr. Hoover at the time when the administration was beginning to consider what should be its future policy in this matter.

The republican national committee gives the true version of Mr. Hoover's activities. Upon his return from Europe he found that Mr. Houston, the democratic secretary of agriculture, was vigorously opposed to any increase in the minimum price for the 1919 wheat crop. Mr. Hoover thereupon proposed that the 1918 guaranteed should be maintained for the 1919 crop and that a committee be appointed to report in the spring of 1919 the additional price which should be given. "In spite of opposition from many quarters, he secured its adoption, and it was the only guarantee given by the government for any 1919 product." Mr. Hoover's term of office expired before the 1919 crop was harvested. President Wilson then decided that no advance in the fixed price was necessary, since the world price level for wheat was so favorable. And as it proved, the 1919 crop averaged $2.72 a bushel for No. 1 northern.

Mr. Raskob does not mention that after the armistice Mr. Hoover went to Europe for the sole purpose of protecting the interests of the American farmer in the face of a most serious crisis. There was a surplus of 16,000,000 tons of foodstuffs in this country, produced to meet the needs of the allies. Mr. Hoover perceived that the only solution would be the lifting of the blockade on the central powers and the diversion of this surplus to them and the "liberated" countries whose people were starving. He pressed this point on the allies, and how magnificently he succeeded the record shows.

It is a fact that during the four months of negotiations the continued flow of food products from America to Europe was due wholly to Mr. Hoover's personal efforts. That is only one thing of many that Mr. Hoover did for the American farmer: but it was a big thing. No other man in the history of this country has done so much for American agriculture. And all that Mr. Raskob's latest attack has done is to emphasize Mr. Hoover's brilliant record of unselfish, efficient public service.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29— Washington is going to lose a favorite conversational pastime when Calvin Coolidge leaves the White House in March. It might be termed "Guessing the Coolidge Enigma."

There has never been a time since he became president that club and dinner table conversations in Washington as a rule failed to take up at some point the job of speculating about what Coolidge was going to do about something, usually involving his personal plans rather than his executive acts.

It is still going on. Nobody knows what project is formulating in the Coolidge mind for filling in his time as former president. As usual, he has observed complete silence on that subject.

What sort of a vacation the Coolidge family may take when he puts public office behind him March 4 next for the first time in more than 20 years; whether he will make his home in Massachusetts or Vermont; what gainful private occupation this man of only 57 years will take up; what his political ambitions, hopes or dreams may be—all of these are matters of constant conversational interest to all Washington—that is, to all Washington, but that chiefly interested party, Mr. Coolidge.

Coolidge Question Marks

It has been a curious cycle of highly important interrogation points that have been coupled these half dozen years not only in Washington but in the nation at large, with the name of the calm, very reserved little man at the White House. It began when he hastened from Vermont to take over the duties imposed by President Harding's death.

"What will Coolidge do about Harding policies, Harding cabinet officeholders?" That was the first rush of speculation about him. He said very little, even to the handful of cabinet members gathered to greet him when he arrived. He told them merely that he expected to close up the tanks and march ahead. That was all he did. For the remainder of the Harding term the Harding policies were kept intact. It was only on wholly new questions that Coolidge policy began taking shape.

After his own overwhelming victory in 1924 and when he took office in his own right and title, there was a distinct change. He was justified in assuming that Calvin Coolidge had been commissioned to strike out on lines of his own selection and that the Harding interval was over and done with.

Now What?

Yet hardly had the actual Coolidge administration got settled than clamor arose as to whether it was his purpose to seek another nomination in 1928. It meant a great deal to many other party aspirants for the nomination.

And nobody who attended White House press conferences could have much doubt that Coolidge was amused by the situation. There was a twinkle in his eye every time he ignored a question as to his plans.

In two years he popped out the famous "I do not choose" statement. It just served to set speculation as to what he meant at fever heat. It kept that temperature right up to the Vare-Mellon pronouncement for Hoover at Kansas City this summer.

Now Coolidge is still shadowed by a huge question mark. What is he going to do with himself after March 4 next and what is he thinking about the 1932 campaign prospects? Nobody knows but Coolidge.

Norwich is thus the highest in the list, higher than Willimantic, New London or Meriden. New London in fact gave the consumer the option of the old or the new rate when it changed. No such consideration is shown for the poor man in Norwich. The poor man is being penalized for his ownership in the electric plant while the fellow better off is getting an extra dividend. Is there any wonder the little fellow kicks?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Great Strides Under Prohibition

Mr. Editor: In answer to "A Voter" who wrote Oct. 24, let me say his view point is as narrow as that of thousands more. Instead of judging by a local situation or by hearsay, let him study prohibition throughout our United States.

He asks why should we vote for the party in favor of prohibition, has it made such "great strides toward righteousness, etc"? Let me give him facts from men who have made it their special study.

Oscar McIntyre in the N. Y. American says "The night club has run its course and is dying out."

Judge Gary says, "The use of alcoholic stimulants is becoming unfashionable and eventually it will be practically eliminated."

Says Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army (than whom no one else knows better because of her nationwide experience among drunkards): "With the ousting of the American saloon, nine-tenths of the drunkenness has disappeared." Proving this, here are census figures: "Commitments to prison for drunkenness decrease 55 per cent; arrests for drunkenness decrease half a million!"; "rate of decrease in commitments for all crime 37.7 per cent."—U. S. Census Bulletin 8-5503, 1926.

Chief Justice Taft makes public a statement at Washington, Oct. 1, 1927: "Trials of criminal cases, especially of the prohibition and anti-narcotic cases are occupying much less of the time of the judges. * * * Criminal cases are being disposed of nearly as fast as they come in."

Again, "Americans are drinking milk. * * * prohibition was an important factor in the 27 per cent. increase in milk consumption in the U. S. A. between 1918 and 1926," so says Professor Feldman of Dartmouth.

"The National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers in report from 1916-1926 there was an increase in consumption of more than 114,000,000 gallons (or about 55 per cent.) while the population increased a little less than 15 per cent."—Professor Feldman of Dartmouth.

"The wage-earner with the eight-hour week day has his evenings to himself; he spends his money on the movie; he takes more interest in his home; takes a ride in his car; listens to his radio."—Professor Feldman of Dartmouth.

"The sale of small houses has tripled since 1918. Building and loan assets increased two billion dollars."—Report of the committee on alcoholic traffic of the 68th congress.

"The poll of college publication editors and that of college presidents indicate decrease in drinking in colleges and by the youth at large."—Literary Digest, July 17, 1926.

Bruere says: "There is less drinking among high school pupils."

Just listen to what President Dalton, operating the U. S. lines of steamships says, "Personally, I would not approve of again restoring bars on U. S. ships even if authorized by law. Prohibition does not retard our bookings and in many cases passengers with women and children prefer the American ships because there is no drinking at bars and there is no place on the ship where women and children cannot go."

Census figures: "Alcoholic insanity reduced 66 per cent. in first three years of prohibition."

Death rate from alcoholism reduced from average of 5.6 per 100,000 to 3.9. It averages 2.5 in dry states and 4.5 in wet states!

Among the American farmers, upon whom so much depends, "there is no question on which they are so thoroughly united as the question of maintaining our present temperance laws and their rigid enforcement. The Grange, a farm organization of almost sixty years standing, has unanimously gone on record again and again for the strict enforcement of the prohibition laws."—L. J. Tabor, master national grange.

"The liquor traffic long dominated the politics of our nation. Its power is broken."

The above facts are but a few of the "great strides toward righteousness and lawful living" in answer to "A Voter's" question. He himself is "not in favor of the return of the saloon!" Why? Man, your own heart tells you the children and youth of today know nothing of the curse of the corner saloon. Look at the buildings and business places in Norwich today which have supplanted the accursed thing!

Why Little Fellow Kicks

Mr. Editor: After noting the experience of myself and neighbors with the electric rates I was interested in the figures given by the board of gas and electrical commissioners in The Bulletin this morning. Like many of the other notices by the board it was made up to suit the contention of the board. It was a fixed example.

Figure it out for the small user. Give the poor man a chance which it doesn't appear to be getting under these new rates. Use the same rates in the different cities and a consumption of 20 kwhs and see what you get.

YOUR HEALTH

BOILS AS AN INVESTMENT.

By Frank E. Bunts, M.D., Cleveland, O., Member Gorgas Memorial

Much misinformation exists as to the cause, progress and treatment of boils, or furuncles, as they are called by physicians. By many they are thought to be evidences of some constitutional defect, and therefore should be treated by such means as would tend to relieve the constitutional defect. Others have heard that they are a sign of diabetes, and still others who, perhaps, have had no personal experience with them jokingly refer to them as being worth at least five dollars to the victim as one of nature's blood purifiers.

There is just a little truth in the first two suppositions, but probably one in the third. Just as a generally debilitated condition may predispose one to many of the infectious diseases and make their course more serious or protracted, so may such a condition predispose to the formation of boils, but it is not the cause of them.

Boils are due to a local infection and are not a blood disease. The infection is almost invariably due to one of the pus producing micro-organisms called a staphylococcus, which finds its way into the hair root or follicle, and then if other conditions are favorable it begins its destructive action causing the formation of pus and a central area of dead tissue which we call the core, and until this core is eliminated by incision or other means, the pain and suppuration usually continue. The reason that crops of boils occasionally inflict the sufferer is not because it is in the system and has to come out, but because the discharge from a boil contains myriads of germs capable of infecting more hair roots and thus causing more boils, and this being the fact, it is easy to see how certain dressings that confine and rub in the discharge tend of themselves to perpetuate or spread the infection. It must be remembered too, that if by carelessness the fingers become contaminated with the discharge, the infection may be carried by scratching, to parts quite distant from the original site, thus, no doubt, tending to confirm the patient's view that it must be a blood disease. The only wonder is that the majority of boils are confined to the original area of infection, and we cannot but believe that the sufferings of Job were due in all probability to uncleanly and unsanitary personal habits, rather than to troubles sent from heaven.

There are many methods of treatment advocated by physicians, such as poultices, plasters, X-ray and local injections of strong antiseptics, but undoubtedly the quickest way of relieving pain in a boil is to have a free incision extending from one edge of it to the other. This relieves tension, the chief cause of pain, and gives free egress to the products of inflammation. After the incision, mild antiseptics, warmth if agreeable, and careful attention to cleanliness are all that are needed, unless the constitution has been undermined from other causes, which of course demand their own appropriate treatment.

As infection is the cause of boils and as even slight wounds predispose to infections, it is not surprising that the majority of boils, in men at least, occur on the back of the neck, and the true corollary of this is that if men would regard a ragged or rough edged scratching collar much as they would a venomous reptile, there would be fewer sufferers from this very common affliction.

Burgess Bedtime Story

The Beechnut Harvest

The harvest always should be glad; Alas, that sometimes it is sad.

—Happy Jack Squirrel.

Beechnuts were ripe. That is such as they were, they were ripe. But the harvest was a slim one. Every one was there for their share. Great big Buster Bear was on hand. Lightfoot the Deer was also there. Striped Chipmunk, Happy Jack Squirrel, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Rusty the Fox Squirrel, Sammy Jay, Mr. and Mrs. Grouse, not to mention Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and a few others, were all looking for their share. Usually beechnut harvest time is a happy time. This year it was an anxious time.

"My goodness, I never knew beechnuts to be so scarce," grumbled Buster Bear. "Independson these nuts to get fat for the winter, but unless I can find some beechnut trees somewhere else with more nuts on them than these have got, I guess I shall go into the winter with very little fat."

It made Buster short tempered. He growled at everybody who came anywhere near him. There were so few of those little, three-cornered nuts that Buster wanted all of them himself.

Lightfoot the Deer didn't care so much. There was other food for Lightfoot. He really wasn't dependent on beechnuts. The same thing was true of Mr. and Mrs. Grouse. But they were disappointed. They are very fond of beechnuts and they had looked forward to a feast when these little nuts should be ripe.

"I feel as if I had been cheated," said Mrs. Grouse. "There is hardly more than a taste and there are all those greedy Squirrels acting as if they thought they owned these beechnuts. Somebody is going to go hungry this winter if they are depending on beechnuts. Just see how out-of-sorts Buster Bear is! Usually he is good natured when he is getting beechnuts."

Mr. Grouse chuckled. "He isn't getting them; that's the trouble," said he. "Hello, here comes Mrs. Bear! She means to have her share. And there is Cubby Bear, too!"

Sure enough, Mrs. Bear came stuffing up, but Cubby Bear kept his distance. It was quite evident that Cubby didn't dare come very near either Buster Bear or Mrs. Bear. Buster Bear didn't seem at all glad to see Mrs. Bear. On her part, she didn't seem at all glad to see Buster Bear. For that matter, they pretended not to see each other at all. However, if Mrs. Bear happened to come his way, Buster always found something to do where else. Of course, with the whole Beach family prowling around searching for those little three-cornered nuts, the smaller folk had rather a hard time. You should have heard Chatterer the Red Squirrel scold. To hear him you would have thought that he was the only one who had any rights there. Once Mrs. Beach almost caught Lim. For a while after that his tongue was still. It was the worst fright he had had for some time.

There were very few nuts escaped the bright eyes looking for them. It didn't take long to complete the harvest. The leaves were raked over, and when it was quite evident that all the nuts had been gathered, no one was satisfied. Cubby Bear and Buster Bear and Mrs. Bear left in different directions, all grumbling and still hungry. The storehouses of the Squirrels and of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse would have to be filled with other food this year. It really was a very serious matter.

"The worst of it is," said Happy Jack Squirrel, "the acorn crop isn't much better. I don't know how we're going to live this coming winter. It is all right night, but when the ground is covered with snow and ice and our storehouses are empty, I don't know what we'll do."

MILLION HOMES TONIGHT

A cry in the night holds no terror for the household where there's Castoria! A few drops, and Baby's sudden ailment is relieved. Your little one is comforted, and you have done only what any nurse or any doctor would have told you to do. For Castoria is a vegetable product; made for babies, and the one safe means of quieting any infant. It is not a narcotic, it contains no opiate, yet it always comforts a child.

Don't let night come without a bottle of Castoria on hand. It's a mighty comfortable feeling to know it's in the house. And it is an ever-ready aid when any of the children are constipated, have colic, develop a case of diarrhea. Old and tried, but the standby of modern mothers. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Stories That Recall Others

Math-me-ticks.

A little miss of 12, who has been promoted regularly, notwithstanding the fact that arithmetic has marred much of the joy of school life, came home a few days ago with bounding steps, and beaming face and announced to the family that "she thought she was going to understand and like 'math-me-ticks' very well this year."

Mistake Or Robbery.

Hurrying up to the ticket window a young woman didn't wait until the old man who had just bought his gathered up his change, but planked down a $10 bill and told her destination. The old man leisurely picked up his change, two $1 bills and started to gather in the $10.

She grabbed the $10 bill and without saying anything laid it down again and asked for ticket. The man laughed and said: "Well, now, all I wanted was my own change," and disappeared in the crowd.

"And what makes me mad," said the young woman explaining to a bystander who had seen the whole affair, "is that I feel terribly guilty and uncomfortable about having been so nasty about it, but whether it was a mistake or a robbery, he almost got away with my money."

PEOPLE IN LINE WHEN POLLS CLOSE LOSE VOTE SAYS ATTORNEY GENERAL

HARTFORD, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Persons who are standing in line at the polls on election day, when the time for closing the polls arrives, should not be permitted to vote, according to a ruling given today by Attorney General Benjamin W. Alling.

"The voting booths should be closed and the voting machines locked at the time when, under the existing law, the polls should be closed," Mr. Alling said.

The attorney-general declared in his ruling that election officials have no power to extend the time within which people may vote beyond the time which has already been fixed in accordance with the statute.

Mr. Alling's opinion was given in reply to an inquiry from Henry H. Pettis, town counsel of Norwich. The attorney-general's office has been flooded with similar inquiries on the closing of the polls on election day, he said.

Answering a second question from Mr. Pettis, the attorney-general advised that voting machines and ballots should not be used in the same voting districts. In those towns where it was indicated that present voting facilities would not be adequate for the convenience of the electors, Mr. Alling pointed out that under the statutes, the selectmen are required to provide proper facilities in such places voting machines should be used to the limit of their number in certain districts and ballots supplied in the remaining voting places.

Many Towns Raise Question.

Because of the present indications that there will be an unprecedented vote cast on November 6, the question has been raised in many towns of the state, as to the legality of an extension of the voting hours. It has been pointed out that in normal years, the heaviest hours of voting occur in the closing hours and that invariably a long line of voters are awaiting their turn when the hour for closing the polls arrives.

In many towns it has been predicted, the present facilities will not permit the entire electorate to cast their ballots within the legal voting limits, if the votes are cast at the rate of one a minute. Attorney-General Alling, in a ruling given several days ago relieved this situation, by pointing out that the voting machines and ballots should be used in towns where there was a likelihood that the present facilities would be inadequate.

The towns of New London, Hamden and Manchester were specifically cited where such a condition might prevail. The election officials were advised by the attorney-general's office to provide ballots in addition to the voting machines. The town of Norwich presented a similar situation, election officials there believed, and the matter was referred to the attorney-general by the town counsel.

Questions By Town Counsel Pettis.

Mr. Pettis' questions and the ruling of Mr. Alling follows:

"In case all persons desiring to vote have not been able to do so by the time of closing of the polls, would it be permissible for the election officials to extend the time for them to vote, and if so, under what circumstances and to what extent?

"Secondly, in case it were not possible to extend the time of voting beyond the designated hours, would it not be proper to allow those persons in line when the time came for closing the polls to vote?"

Attorney-General Alling's ruling follows:

"I would say in regard to your first question that the election officials have no power to extend the time which has already been fixed in accordance with the statute. In other words, the voting booths should be closed and the voting machines locked at the time when under existing law the polls should be closed. What I have said heretofore answers question number two."

First Selectman William S. Murray states that the Norwich vote can be handled by the dozen voting machines which the town will use in the six districts, especially when the full 12 hours for keeping the polls open from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., is secured, which is expected to be accomplished by the special town meeting that is called for Thursday evening this week. There is, however, a real need for early voting, as can be seen from this ruling by the attorney-general, for those who may be standing in line waiting to get past the checkers when the hour of 6 o'clock is reached in the evening will see the voting machines locked against them and they will miss their vote in the election of 1928. The checkers are the ones who will have to work fast on election day. Exactness on their part will make for speed when the crowd is coming fast, while an inexperienced checker will do much to slow up the vote in a district.

SETTLEMENT IN SUIT OVER CONTRACT BREACH

A suit alleging breach of contract, in which $10,000 damages were sought by Michael Tabaska against Louis Cuprak, Dmytro Galysh, Paul Gulak and the Norwich and New England Window and House Cleaning company, all of Norwich, has been settled and withdrawn from the superior court, according to notice filed with Clek John H. Walker.

Tabaska, a former partner of the defendants in the window cleaning business in this city, alleged that more than $6,000 was due him under the terms of the partnership agreement, when he withdraw from the firm. In a counter claim, the defendants set up that the plaintiff, Tabaska, had violated the partnership agreement and had gone into business for himself. They asked $5,000 damages.

HALLOWEEN DECORATIONS FOR SEWING CIRCLE MEETING

The West Side Sewing circle held its weekly meeting Monday evening at the home of one of its members, Mrs. Robert Sullivan, No. 59 Palmer street. The house was attractively decorated with cats, witches, bats and various other halloween trimmings, the color scheme being black and orange. Mrs. Albert Bowe and Miss Catherine Coughlin entertained by dancing. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. John Sullivan and Miss Margaret LaRochelle, accompanied at the piano by Miss Catherine Sullivan. All members were in costume. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Robert Sullivan, assisted by Mrs. John Sullivan and Miss LaRochelle.

WILL GIVE VOTERS INSTRUCTIONS ON MACHINES

Registrars of Voters Tyler D. Guy and Cornelius J. Downes are to be at the city hall Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. for the purpose of demonstrating the operation of the voting machines to the voters of the city. It is expected that these three periods of instruction will familiarize the voters with the operation of the machines, so that on election day their votes may be cast quickly. A meeting for the election officials has also been called for Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock at the city hall, when they will be instructed as to their duties on election day.

AMERICAN I. C. H. TEAM SPLITS EVEN IN PINOCHLE

The Moose home was the scene of plenty of excitement Monday evening when the pinochle sessions in the City league between the Moose vs. American I. C. H. and the Eagles vs. American I. C. H. were played so as to straighten out the schedule before the regular league night, November 1 (Thursday) when the league meets again.

The scores were as follows: American I. C. H. 26,880 vs. Moose 25,850; Eagles 26,580 vs American I. C. H. 23,990.

Kitten at Town Clerk's

A little black kitten, which was found sitting on the front steps of the court house Monday afternoon, found refuge in the office of Town Clerk Harold S. Burt, and became the special protege of Miss Mary Ward, the assistant town clerk. It's stay at the office may not be long for the owner of the kitten will probably claim it, but the little creature seemed well content to adopt the office as a new home for it settled itself comfortably on a cushion at Miss Ward's desk and blinked and slept the afternoon away.

THREE SPEAKERS EXTOLL REPUBLICAN POLICIES AT RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 29—Over 600 attended the republican rally, the first of its kind in Windham county, tonight at the town hall under the auspices of the Windham Republican club. The B. P. O. Elks band gave a concert from 7:15 to 7:45 on Lincoln square and then marched to the town hall which was crowded to capacity and the rally was convened by Judge Otto B. Robinson. The chairman first introduced the Hoover Girls, a sextette from New Britain, who sang several selections and encore songs during the evening. The leader is Mrs. William Fay, whose husband is a former resident of this city.

The first speaker was State Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers of New London, candidate for lieutenant governor, who commended the state and district tickets and gave a concise review of state finances.

George H. Cohen of Hartford, assistant U. S. district attorney, who was the second speaker, charged that the tariff issue is the one issue of the campaign, but has been made negligible by the democrats because they are unable to cope with it. He also charged that any change in prohibition could not be effected by the democrats, even though their candidate was elected. He based his conclusion on the fact that a majority in congress would be controlled by the south. In conclusion, Attorney Cohen lauded the merits of Hoover, commended Rogers, Chairman Robinson, who is candidate for judge of probate from this district, A. Linn Weatherhead and Charles B. Pomeroy, candidates for representatives, and Andrew T. J. Clark of Canterbury, candidate for senator, all of whom occupied seats on the platform.

James A. Frear, congressman of the tenth district of Wisconsin, who has been in the house for 16 years and identified himself as a personal friend and admirer of Congressman John Q. Tilson and Richard P. Freeman, was introduced as the third speaker sent by headquarters in place of Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of Maine who was unable to appear. Congressman Frear gave figures to show that when the republican administration drafted the Fordney bill upon assuming control in 1921 there were nearly six million out of work while today the figure slightly exceeds one million. He spoke of the reduction of the national debt at the rate of nearly one billion dollars a year, this being accomplished while federal taxes, including the income tax were reduced 40 per cent. The speaker attacked the democratic viewpoint on tariff and Gov. Smith's criticism of an alleged conference held between Hoover and Coolidge with Albert B. Fall. He termed this criticism as unjust and as a reflection on Smith's manner of campaigning, especially when one considers that the money received by Fall was from Doheney, a democrat, who had planned to get ten times as much out of a crooked deal as Fall. Relative to the alleged crookedness of the republican party Congressman Frear read part of a record of Tammany with which Smith is alleged to be affiliated. In his attack upon Tammany he mentioned the records of Connolly who figured in the Queens county sewer grant and the late Tammany leaders, Croker and Murphy. Relative to the waterpower standing that Gov. Smith has taken he said that if Smith could not during his years as executive of New York state effect any beneficial change in power rates of that state he would be similarly at a loss to effect any change in the power rates in the United States. That the ineffectiveness of this promise was true he pointed out that one need only to recall that Smith was being supported by the officials of the General Electric and by R. E. Ryan, head of the great Montana Light and Power Co. He then made mention of the honesty and reliability and ability of Herbert Hoover in handling billions of dollars in relief funds for which such nations as France, Belgium and Russia required no receipts and no accounting, such was their faith in the man. He brought a message from Congressman Tilson that electors of Windham be 100 per cent in casting their ballots on Nov. 6th.

The star orator of the evening proved to be Mrs. Henry A. Farnam of New Haven who was introduced by Mrs. Mary G. Noyes, vice chairman of the city republican committee, as a native of Belgium who had married an American and was now a naturalized citizen of this country. Mrs. Farnam with the quaint accent of the Belgium born told of the great work of which she had personal knowledge that Hoover had done in Europe, seventeen years ago, especially as related to war-ridden Belgium.

"He did not ask for color, creed or nationality distinctions in extending relief to the starving thousands during the great world strife and that is why today as a Roman Catholic, taking my religion from many generations, I stand ready to do whatever possible for Herbert Hoover," said the speaker. With drama and pathos she drew a character sketch of Hoover and Mrs. Hoover in her plea to the women she asked for their support of a man who had done so tremendous a work for mankind. Mrs. Farnam then told of the personal study that she had had the opportunity of making while she sculptured a bust of Herbert Hoover which is to be seen in the new bar library at New Haven. She accused Gov. Smith of encouraging law violation on various excuses by criminals and others in his open challenge to a part of the constitution of this country. Mrs. Farnam was given a great ovation by the audience. She was the last speaker on the list and the conclusion of her speech brought the rally to a close.

EXPANDING MARKETS FOR NEW ENGLAND INDUSTRIES

Steadily improving national standards of living and the increasing purchasing power of the American people as a whole, point to expanding markets for the high-grade specialized products of New England's remarkably diversified industries, according to Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the commerce department.

Keen competitive conditions and many other trading problems can be overcome to a very large degree, in Dr. Klein's opinion, by the application of the newer science of market analysis and business management. The department of commerce, he said, is now, for the first time, becoming equipped to supply much of the necessary basic information as a result of special regional studies, such as the recently-completed New England survey. The entire country has been divided into nine large regions to facilitate this work. The complete survey of the southeastern states, the first of the series to be available in printed form, has received favorable comment from southern business men, according to Dr. Klein.

Stressing the importance of the wide spread of New England's manufacturing industries in contributing to business ability, Dr. Klein pointed to the official figures of the bureau of the census, which shows that nearly two-thirds of all the classes of industry for the entire country are represented in New England.

Primarily because of this same great sweep of manufactures the cotton-consuming industries do not occupy the position of paramount importance in New England generally believed. Government figures show that all the cotton-consuming industries combined contribute only about ten per cent of the total income from manufacturing in the whole area.

Again, the prosperity of New England has been regarded by many to hang upon the boot and shoe industry; yet all the leather industries, together with all the rubber manufactures of the region, comprise less than 12 per cent of the contribution made by all of New England's factories and mills.

Metal Manufactures Important

The metal manufactures of New England mean more to the people of that section as a source of income than all the textiles, metal-working industries contributing nearly one-third of the total income for all manufacturing in New England against 27 per cent for textiles, including wool, silk and knit goods, and all wearing apparel.

For many months, at the request and with the co-operation of the New England council, the commerce department has been gathering fundamental facts and figures concerning New England's business. This mass of information has been carefully compiled and classified for publication. Believing that a series of small pamphlets would be more practicable at this time than several formidably-sized volumes, and in order to expedite delivery, the department has decided to make public some of the information in pamphlet form, each one dealing with a well-defined subject.

The first of the series released today bears the title, "The Retailer and the Consumer in New England." Its contents are based generally upon personal interviews with merchants and other business men in all parts of New England, and supplemented with information gathered by questionaires and from other sources.

Changed Distribution Methods

In general the pamphlet shows that the revolutionary changes in distribution methods have affected retail distribution in New England as in other parts of the country. Department stores have had distinctive development in New England because of the large number of population centers of considerable size. Despite the tremendous pulling force of the automobile and other factors in drawing local trade of small communities to large nearby centers, it is found the majority of family trading in New England is still carried on with merchants of the local community.

Chain store development has been pronounced, particularly in southern New England. The success of chain organization is attributed to skilled central management, attractive arrangement of stores in well-chosen locations and rapidly moving stocks of standardized goods. The success of the chain stores has stimulated many independent retailers to adopt improved methods in their business and to reduce operating costs by eliminating sources of waste. Better control of merchandising operations is indicated on the part of many of the successful stores, which have come to realize that increased volume of sales does not necessarily mean increased profits.

There are some distinctive preferences of the different racial groups, such as the Canadian-French, the Polish and Italian stock, but the people of foreign birth are found to become assimilated rapidly and to adopt the customs and taste of the native stock, with surprising rapidity. As a general rule their purchases are influenced more by the size of their income than by racial peculiarities.

Family Trading

The report discusses in detail the prevailing practices of department stores and specialty shops as representative of the family trading which is done in most instances by the women of the household. Men's clothing and furnishing stores are given detailed treatment as typical of general trading with men customers. Another important type of retailing is considered in the sales of furniture and home furnishings, which take place through a variety of outlets.

A particularly significant part of the bulletin is the analysis of customers' preferences and buying habits, based upon replies from nearly 4,000 housewives in the smaller cities and towns of New England. This fairly representative cross-section of New England consumers indicated that the majority of housewives still buy their ordinary articles of apparel and household equipment through their local retail stores.

Out-of-town trips for purchases of dresses, coats, furs, furniture, rugs and the like were indicated by from one-third to one-fourth of the housewives, who replied, the frequency of these trips to larger centers being determined largely by their distance from such centers. The principal reasons given for trading out of town were the greater variety and more up-to-date styles found in the larger stores, these factors appearing more important than differences in price. Theatres and other attractions also were important factors in many instances.

The majority of these housewives indicated that the service of local stores was quite satisfactory, only nine per cent of the total number who replied indicating that they were not entirely satisfied with the service they obtained from stores in their own community. The chief limitation appeared to be the smaller selection and style range in the smaller centers, and some criticism was made of the poor arrangement and display offered in the smaller stores. It was indicated, however, that many of the retail stores in the smaller centers offered conditions fully as satisfactory as those in the larger stores.

Progress Offsets Losses

Discussing some of the more general aspects of New England, Dr. Klein states, that while in certain lines of industry some New England manufacturers have fallen back, their losses are in general being largely offset by the progress of many other establishments even in the same industries, which have adapted their operations to the changed conditions that have prevailed since the war.

The condition of New England manufactures in the last few years has been one of transition and adjustment. The whole region has been going through a thorough housecleaning. In this respect it has an advantage in comparison with other regions which have not yet faced these conditions, but which will be confronted sooner or later with similar problems.

New England is the first region of the United States which has approached its problem of adjustment by making a thorough inventory of its resources and its weaknesses, and it has thereby set an example which will doubtless be followed by other regions.

GIFT IS PRESENTED AT BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

A surprise birthday party was held Saturay evening in honor of Mrs. Mary LaValle, treasurer of the Mooseheart Legion, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Herbert Rich, No. 317 Main street. There were about 30 present and the evening was a most enjoyable one for all. During the evening the senior regent of the Mooseheart Legion, Mrs. Minnie Smith, presented Mrs. LaValle, in behalf of those present, a beautiful rug.

Cards were enjoyed and there was a pleasing musical programme. The selections included radio numbers, a saxophone number by Lester Rich, composed by his father, Herbert Rich, and two vocal solos, Sunny Boy and The Sidewalks of New York, by Mrs. Mary Edwards.

At cards the prizes were won as follows: Pinochle, first, Mrs. Ida Clifford; consolation, Mrs. Roy Lee Hill; whist, first, Miss Georgette Gregory; consolation, Mrs. Nellie Dore.

The prizes for the games were won by Mrs. Ida Clifford, first and Mrs. Elmer Reynolds, consolation. A birthday cake made by Mrs. Rose Carter was presented to Mrs. LaValle by Mrs. Carter and refreshments of cake, coffee and ice cream were served. Courtesies were extended by Cummings and Ring and Norwich lodge, No. 950, L. O. O. M.

Made Mohawk Trail Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sholes and family have returned from a trip over the Mohawk trail having called on friends at North Adams, Mass., Albany and Newburgh, N. Y.

Farm relief from a democratic viewpoint is an issue of prime importance to the people of the United States and one of the leading planks in the platforms of both parties this years, according to Augustine Lonergan, the democratic nominee for U. S. senator from Connecticut, speaking at rallies in Deep River and Clinton.

Going Up!

Nightly, now, her smile is winning new hearts all over America. She is lovely Corinne Burton, whose New York home is the New Weston Hotel. Her march to fame includes a season each in "The Music Box" and "The Scandals;" and now, under Chaz. Bowers' direction, she's going up in the movies!

"I don't believe in overlooking any point which may help make your presence pleasing," says Miss Burton. "Recently, I learned the method of caring for the hair, which is all the rage among New York girls, now. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush every time you arrange your hair. It makes my hair so easy to dress and holds it in place wonderfully. It has gotten rid of my dandruff. It keeps my scalp and hair so clean and comfortable that I don't shampoo half as often as I used to. It gives my hair such a silky, soft and lustrous appearance that friends comment on it."

Danderine is not oily. It removes the oily film from each strand of hair restores its natural color, gives it new lustre. It dissolves dandruff, cleanses and invigorates the scalp. It is delightfully fragranced. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. Lovely, gleaming hair and a healthy scalp for a few cents.

"RABALM REDUCED MY VARICOSE VEINS and ended the terrible pain in my left leg," says Geo. W. Campbell, Barber, Hazardville, Conn. Start using RABALM tonight if you suffer from painful swelling of the legs and feet. 60 cents and $1.00 at druggists.

EDMUNDS BELIEVES N. B. A. WILL BE STRONGER THAN EVER BEFORE

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—Any idea that the National Boxing association is about to lose power because of dissension within its ranks or the withdrawal of Canadian and some eastern allies, must be revised, according to Leslie E. Edmonds, executive secretary of the Kansas state athletic commission.

Edmonds, chairman of the N. B. A's. legislative committee, and a prime mover in the new regime, believes that instead of losing strength, the association actually has gained power by a combination of forces, especially in the middle west and south, now under the leadership of Paul Prehn, of Illinois.

Prehn was the candidate of the Canadian middle western boxing interests as a group, Edmonds points out in a statement to the Associated Press, outlining his view of events leading up to the recent N. B. A. convention in Toronto.

The association refusal to accept Thomas A. Murphy, member of parliament and president of the Canadian Boxing federation as a presidential candidate, led to Canada's withdrawal from the N. B. A., and negotiations for an alliance with the New York state athletic commission. Representatives of Connecticut and New Jersey sat in on the negotiations.

"I believe the men now in control of the N. B. A. look on their offices as 'trusts,' said Edmonds. "I believe the N. B. A. will go forward. Its principles are too important to permit the changes in personnel in one obnoxious states to affect its usefulness. As for the states that are supposed to contemplate secession, the N. B. A. is more important to them than they are to it.

"It will be amusing to us in the west who have pleaded and worked for independence of the odmination of the large eastern states to see the little fellows snuggling up to New York and taking orders as in the days before the N. B. A. was formed." Edmonds said that Prehn's campaign was successful, the result cut and dried before the Canadian issue came up.

"A coalition of middle-western and southern members mustered so many votes that the opposition gave up its plans to run anybody. Tom Donohue (of Connecticut) concluding practically his second term—he succeeded to the president soon after the annual election two years ago because of the death of the incumbent—announced that he 'did not choose to run.' That such diehard opposition should develop after it was all over was as much a surprise to us in the middle-west as anything that ever happened in the association's affairs."

"Out this way," Edmonds said, "we have no ideas about organization politics or honorary offices. We want something done for the N. B. A. Two years ago I incurred the displeasure and censure of the powers in control because I advised the N. B. A. to get busy or quit. Stagnation continued except for the use of organization offices for the personal aggrandizement of the officeholders. Tiring of that the middle-west began to seek a way out."

Since Kansas joined the N. B. A. every state in the middle-west with legalized boxing entered the association, Edmonds said, while "back east" the little states are members, but New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts "prefer to run their own affairs."

DARTMOUTH TEAM BADLY CRIPPLED BY INJURIES

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 29—(AP)—With a long injured list from the Harvard game, the Dartmouth football squad today opened its campaign for the Yale encounter under freezing weather conditions. Head Coach Jesse Hawley gave his entire first team and the three leading reserves, Reece, Wolff and Crehan, the day off, since the general shaking up the green team received Saturday made it unwise for the coaching staff to attempt much work.

Trainer Harry Hillman has the worst task that has faced any Dartmouth conditioner for many years in attempting to get the team back into shape for the Yale game next Saturday. Wolff was suffering from a serious leg injury and Marsters and Breithut sported ankle hurts which may prevent them from playing long in the bowling. Swarthout, regular end, Captain Dick Black, McDonough, the quarterback, and Armstrong regular tackle, were generally bruised and shaken up in the Harvard game. Backart regular right end was confined to the hospital here today with a possible case of appendicitis and Hillman's worries increased when Sutton, Captain Black's understudy at fullback, was injured in this afternoon's scrimmage between the second and third elevens.

Hawley, evidently taking no chances on the doubtful shape of his varsity team, put his reserve elevens through a long scrimmage. The coach was in a belligerent mood and drove his players hard in an attempt to improve the line play which was very weak against Harvard. During the practice, every able-bodied member of the huge Dartmouth squad was brushed up for possible service against Yale.

BOSTON COLLEGE DUE FOR A HARD WEEK

BOSTON, Oct. 29—(AP)—The Boston college football squad, especially the line men, were due for plenty of hard work this week. Although the Eagles have been neither defeated nor tied, Head Coach Joe McKenney indicated today that the brand of play against Boston university on last Saturday was not up to standard, particularly the line charging.

Accordingly, the B. C. linemen spent most of this afternoon working out on the charging machine. The backfield candidates and the ends had a much easier time because many of them were suffering from slight injuries.

Captain Warren McQuirt witnessed the practice. He has been seriously ill for the past two weeks and indications were that he would not be able to play until the Fordham game on Armistice day.

O'DOUL TRADED TO PHILLIES FOR LEACH

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—Announcement of the trade of Franke (Lefty) O'Doul and an unnamed amount of money to the Philadelphia Nationals for Fred M. Leach was made by the New York Giants today.

Both players involved are hard-hitting outfielders. O'Doul played last season with the Giants for the first time while Leach has been with the Phillies since 1923 with the exception of a year's vacation in the minors.

O'Doul is 31 years of age and Leach 28. The Giant, who bats and throws left-handed, was used to good effect against right-hand pitching and in 106 games compiled a batting average of .318.

Leach, a left-handed batsman but right-handed thrower, was out of the select .300 class for the first time last season, winding up the season with an average of .295.

VELVETMEN LOSE TO COTTRELLS AT WESTERLY

The J. B. Martin soccer team went to Westerly Sunday afternoon and played the fast Cottrell F. C. on their new grounds, Riverside park. A good sized crowd saw the game. The final score was 5 to 1 in the Westerly team's favor.

Williamson and Cruikshanks were the stars for the Cottrells, while E. Murphy gave a remarkable display in goal for the J. B.'s, handling some very difficult shots in masterly style and he could not be blamed for the counters.

The line-ups were as follows:

J. B. Martin	Cottrell F. C.
Murphy	Marriott

HARVARD REGULARS HAVE A FREE DAY FROM DRILL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 29—(AP)—Four members of the Harvard varsity football team, including Captain Arthur French, received injuries in the Dartmouth game which were serious enough to keep them on the sidelines for most of the coming week. French reported for practice today with an injured leg, as did Dick O'Connell and Jim Douglas, the varsity ends. Bill Tichnor, regular center was so badly bruised that he was ordered to refrain from practice until next Friday.

Wally Harper, varsity fullback, who was injured in the Army game, will probably remain inactive until the Pennsylvania game almost two weeks hence. Harper has been suffering from a "Charley-Horse" which has not responded to treatment.

Head Coach Arnold Horween excused all of his varsity players, except the quarterbacks, Crawford, Putnam, and Gilligan, all of whom played against Dartmouth, and put his team "B" through a long scrimmage with the scrubs. The varsity quarterbacks played on team B, which scored three touchdowns during four eight-minute periods.

During the scrimmage Horween played Joe Potter, a 200-pounder, who started the last Yale game at fullback, in a tackle position. This player has spent most of his career in the backfield and the line coaches were of the opinion that it would be several weeks before he had his tackle assignments down pat enough to play in a game.

MAJOR LEAGUE BALL PLAYERS HAVE SUCCESSFUL HUNT

FREDERICTON, N. B., Oct. 29—(AP)—Two fine moose, as well as many deer, already have fallen before the marksmanship of the party of major league baseball players, headed by Eddie Collins, of the Philadelphia Athletics, which has been hunting big game in the New Brunswick woods, according to reports received here today from players' headquarters at Hopewell Lodge on Cains river.

The moose were the trophies of Sam Jones, pitcher of the Washington Senators, and "Mickey" Cochrane, catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics. Jones' trophy had antlers spreading 45 inches and having 17 points, while that shot by Cochrane had an antler spread of 44 inches with 16 points.

Joe Bush, pitcher of the Athletics, had felled two deer, and Walter Huntzinger, formerly of the New York Giants, one. Neither Eddie Collins nor Benny Bengough, the New York Yankees' catcher, had killed any big game, but Bengough was reported as having been busy with a motion picture camera.

The party will begin their trip home tomorrow.

CANZONERI TAKES CLOSE DECISION FROM CHARLES

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—Gaston Charles, of France, gave Tony Canzoneri all kinds of trouble in a ten-round bout here tonight but the former featherweight champion managed to land a close decision.

Gaston forced Canzoneri to travel at top speed to earn the decision. The Frenchman was always coming in, landing often to the body, but the New Yorker won on cleaner punching. Canzoneri suffered a badly cut lip early in the fight and his eye was partly closed in the eighth round. Canzoneri weighed 130 pounds, four pounds over the featherweight limit. Charles was three-quarters of a pound heavier.

Johnny Erickson of New York won a six-round decision over Benny Hall, St. Louis Negro bantamweight, and Jack Sullivan, of Brooklyn, outpointed Jimmy Carney of Scranton, Pa., in a four-round struggle between heavyweights.

McGRAW WINS ON FOUL FROM BASS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29—(AP)—Phil McGraw, Detroit lightweight, won on a foul from Benny Bass, local featherweight, in the fourth round of their ten-round fight here tonight.

Bass led up to the time he landed a blow to McGraw's groin that the referee declared foul. He had dropped the Detroit boxer twice in the first round with rights to the jaw, and had floored him for a count of nine in the second.

Greeneville Wins

Greeneville school football team won its first game Monday afternoon against St. Mary's team with a score of 26-0. Bull and Chink were the stars of the game, making three touchdowns. Wise played a nice game. Three of the St. Mary's players got knocked out.

Greeneville challenges Broadway for a game Friday, Nov. 2, at the Academy campus.

Knapp Elected President of Orioles

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29—(AP)—Charles H. Knapp, counsel for the late Jack Dunn and the Baltimore Orioles, today was elected president of the baseball club to succeed Dunn who died suddenly last week. Knapp immediately announced that, following an appraisal of the club's holdings, the company would be open for bids.

Griffiths Beats Dillon

CHICAGO, Oct. 29—(AP)—Jerry "Tuffy" Griffiths, Sioux City, Iowa, light-heavyweight, scored his 60th consecutive ring triumph tonight when he won the decision over Harry Dillon, former Canadian champion, in a ten-round slugging match at White City.

Slattery Kayoes Gardner

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 29—(AP)—Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo idol, tonight continued his impressive work in quest of Tommy Loughran's light-heavy tiara by knocking out Otis Gardner, Pittsburgh Mexican, with a left hook in the second round. Slattery weighed 171, while Gardner had a 14-pound advantage with 185.

Emps Practice Tonight

The Y Emps will hold their second practice of the season this (Tuesday) evening at 6 o'clock. Coach Conklin will probably send his boys through a short scrimmage. The first workout last week brought out a large squad.

BELGIANS TRAINING "UNTAMABLE" ELEPHANTS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 29—(AP)—How supposedly untamable African elephants are trained by Belgian Congo officials to become farm servants, each equivalent to a tractor "plus," is disclosed by members of a Harvard expedition recently returned from Africa. Frederick R. Wulsin of Peabody Museum led the expedition.

The "plus" in the elephant's favor is that after doing a day's work equivalent to that of a tractor he gathers his food free of cost in the forest, where it grows wild, while the gasoline "feed" of tractors is expensive in the Congo.

African elephants long had a reputation for incurable ferocity, and the accomplishment of the Belgians in learning how to domesticate them is new. The successful training is due to catching the elephants young. Numbers of them have been given to settlers for farm work.

The Peabody expedition was sponsored by the Laura Spelman Rockefeller fund.

GERMAN SAYS WHALE HAS LARGEST BRAIN

HAMBURG, Germany, Oct. 29—(AP)—The fishes had an inning at the German Congress of Natural Sciences here when the whale was declared the only mammal entitled to the record of possessing the largest brain.

Professor W. Weygandt, Hamburg neurologist, confuted a prevalent belief that the largest brain claim is shared by whales, elephants and man. As a matter of fact, he said, the whale only justified the claim, the largest whale ever caught having a brain weighing 7,000 grams. The human brain seldom exceeds an average weight of 1,250 to 1,460 grams in the male and 1,140 to 1,340 in the female.

COCHET AND WILLS LEAD TENNIS WORLD SAYS BRITISH CRITIC

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—Henri Cochet and Miss Helen Wills head the lists of the "world's first ten" tennis players named by S. Wallis Myers, British writer and critic of the game and announced in the current issue of "American Lawn Tennis." In class list the United States has more representatives than any other nation.

Cochet succeeds his countryman, Rene Lacoste, who was first in 1927 and Bill Tilden trails both of the French stars, having dropped a notch. The runner-up to Miss Wills again is Senorita Lili de Alvarez of Spain.

The United States has held its own in the men's "first ten" with four representatives, the same individuals who made it last year, France, on the other hand, has three instead of four, the veteran Jacques Brugnon having failed to make the grade.

In the women's ranking the United States with three representatives has one less than last year, Mrs. Molla Mallory and Mrs. A. H. Chapin having failed to repeat while Helen Jacobs is the American newcomer.

Mr. Myers' 1928 and 1927 lists which are accepted as authoritative here and abroad, follows:

MEN

1928

1. Henri Cochet, France
2. Rene Lacoste, France
3. William T. Tilden, U. S.
4. Frank Hunter, U. S.
5. Jean Borotra, France
6. George Lott, U. S.
7. H. W. Austin, England.
8. John Hennessey, U. S.
9. H. L. De Borpurgo, Italy.
10. John E. Hawkes, Australia.

1927

1. Rene Lacoste, France
2. William T. Tilden, U. S.
3. Henri Cochet, France
4. Jean Borotra, France
5. Manuel Alonsen, Spain
6. Frank Hunter, U. S.
7. George Lott, U. S.
8. John Hennessey, U. S.
9. Jacques Brugnon, France
10. Jean Koselun, Czechoslovakia.

ANCIENT STONE BUILDING UNEARTHED IN PHOENIX

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 29—(AP)—A legend that Phoenix is built over the site of an ancient Indian city received startling corroboration when a pre-historic ruin was unearthed here on Nineteenth street—startling because the structure proved to be a four-story masonry stone building. Before excavation it had been merely a "mound," a favorite bicycle coasting runway for boys. Frank Mitalsky, archeologist, and Dwight B. Heard directed the digging.

Funeral urns, cooking pottery, even traces of cooking fires were unharmed, and one piece was considered to have an archeological value of $1,000.

Mr. Heard will open the mound as a public museum.

"I'm solid for Chesterfield"

Mild enough for anybody
. . . and yet they Satisfy*

*A PLAIN, unvarnished statement of fact: "Mild enough for anybody and yet they satisfy."

If you will light a Chesterfield and smoke it critically you will find no hint of harshness, but a certain mildness, with a rich, wholesome flavor.

Chesterfields satisfy without being harsh. They're mild without being insipid or tasteless.

DANIELSON

FINES AND JAIL SENTENCES FOR LIQUOR VIOLATORS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 29—This morning the town court proceeded with the disposition of more cases growing out of the monster raid staged by state officers in this territory last Thursday afternoon and evening.

Ogena Beaudoliel, of Danielson, was presented to answer a charge of keeping with intent to sell. She is a resident on Mechanic street. She pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs. Mrs. Beaudoliel's daughter, Mrs. Irene Breault, and resident with her, pleaded guilty to an actual sale and was fined $25 and costs. With the charges of prosecution added to the fines, Mrs. Beaudoliel said a total of $71.87, and Mrs. Breault $46.87.

Honore Lemery, also of Mechanic street, was in court to answer to charges of keeping with intent to sell and with an actual sale. Lemerey drew a sentence of 30 days on each count, a total of 60 days, but in view of certain circumstances that were explained to the court, Judge W. Fenner Woodward was lenient and suspended execution of the jail penalties. It was stated that Lemerey has a sick wife, three children and is without work, so, evidently, resorted to an easy but dangerous way of making money by selling intoxicants illegally.

Other Killingly liquor cases growing out of last Thursday's raids are still pending, but are expected to be disposed of within a few days.

During Tuesday and Wednesday cases that Plainfield and Thompson produced in last Thursday's raids will be heard in the town court of Plainfield and in justice's courts in the towns of Thompson.

An aftermath of the big raid is the complaint that "they didn't get them all." The answer appears to be from all that appears in official circles is "they never do," no more than the best fisherman never gets all the fish in any given stream or lake. But, it is said, there are other days, and there is the old saying, many times proved to be so true, that "you get them all in the long run."

Ralph Shippee, of Elmville, confessed raider of poor boxes and votive stands in St. Joseph's church at Dayville and St. James' church at Danielson the past week end did not have to answer in court here today for his part in the enterprise of vandalism. It was said that the delay in proceeding with the prosecution was due largely to the fact that there is imminent hope of apprehending William Culley, 20, of Elmville, and of disposing of both the cases at one and the same time. Culley will not go far, officers say, if his past record of evading responsibility for his misdoings amount to anything. He never gets farther away from home than Providence, and is so much of a home town boy that he will be picked up not so many miles from Danielson within a reasonable short time. At least that was the forecast tonight.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Julia Espinosa

This morning the funeral of Mrs. Julia Espinosa was held from the home in East Brooklyn with funeral services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. The officers of the solemn high mass of requiem were Rev. Joseph Berger, M. S., Rev. Anthelgme Mollard, M. S., and Rev. Joseph A. Demers, M. S. The funeral congregation was a large one. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. Demers. The bearers were Paul Romano, Tufanario Romano, Albert Lucibella, Patrick Morai, James Moran, Michael Romano and Bernard Casey. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

There was no outward indication of political activity in Killingly today as the final week of the presidential campaign opened, but there was plenty doing underneath the surface. There is no hazard whatever in predicting right now that the largest vote in the history of the town of Killingly is to be polled on Tuesday of next week. Forecasting what it may portend is worse than useless. This is normally a republican town. The democrats are so confident this week that they are making arrangements for a victory celebration on Tuesday evening of next week. The republicans are entirely complacent about that, and say that their party ticket will win by an easy margin, as usual, and that if there is any celebrating they will do it on election night. All of this may be summed up by commenting that it is nice to have everybody so sure of victory, not forgetting that only one party can win, and that there is sure to be a loser.

This is the week that brings some final decisions about real estate deals in Danielson. It will mark the closing of a trade for the old Windham County Savings bank building, now the property of the Brooklyn Savings bank or the forfeiture of the price put up when a bond for a deed was given many weeks ago. It is apt to see a decision, one way or another, as to whether the real estate brokers who came in here a few weeks ago and negotiated the purchase of the Attawaugan hotel are really going to come through with that deal. November 1 is not far away. It is an important date this particular fall as to the future of Danielson in a commercial way.

It was indicated today that a congregation that will fill Old Trinity church on Church street, Brooklyn, to its capacity will be there Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, when the annual All Saints' day service is scheduled to be held. Included in that congregation will be many who are descendants of the early settlers of the Mortlake district as well as many who have come to regard this annual service as a very unusual event.

It would appear from all the forecasts that Halloween is to be something of a night in Danielson. Young people have outings planned at which spooky settings will be the object. There are to be chestnut roasts—big horse chestnuts, not so good to eat, but that pop merrily in a smart fire—frankfurt roasts, and marshmellows and many other good things. Sheets, candles, pumpkin moonshines and many other appurtenances will enter into the making of the celebration. All of this, of course, has to do with the activities of the young people. The old-timers have other arrangements. They will dance and dine—and hop home as best they may, everything considered, when the festivities of the night are over.

Stray dogs are making their appearances in Danielson in numbers more or less out of proportion to the need of them. Some of them appear to be registered, while others are not. They wish themselves on to families, park themselves where they are not wanted and are generally a nuisance. Steps already have been taken to be rid of them. An annual clean up of stray and unregistered dogs is about due. It cannot be delayed too long.

Harvest time has been most bountiful, so would it also be with your financial affairs if you deposited regularly in the savings department of The Windham County National bank and let the interest accumulate by compounding it. —Adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Aldei Lamothe, Mrs. Francis Ducharme and Mrs. Frank M. Bedard motored to Springfield Sunday.

A pageant of Armistice day is to be presented at the Baptist church on Sunday evening, Nov. 11, under the auspices of the Danielson Federation of Churches.

Assessors of the town of Killingly will during the early part of this week receive the last of the tax lists of the year. After November 1, the assessors will be concerned with adding 10 per cent to the valuation of properties not filed upon.

A Chevrolet car driven by Arthur Kerouack of Wauregan was struck as it emerged from the grounds of the Henry Loring estate at Wauregan and turned over by a car driven by Hector Grenier of Moosup. There were no personal injuries in the accident.

Landlord W. W. Murphy served a chicken dinner to a score of agents of an insurance company representing the Webster-Southbridge division at the hotel in Dayville. A business meeting preceded the dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. George Donald Stone of Academy street are removing today to South Killingly, where Mr. Stone has purchased the Raymond Barlow place.

Miss Katherine T. Thayer of Putnam and Richard Foddy of New York were visitors here today with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Witter.

A low-hanging awning rod gashed the face of William S. Brown, near the eye, while he was walking along a sidewalk in the business section.

Arthur A. Dean, personal tax collector, will begin his annual collections in mid-November, having already given required notices of this fact.

Acquisition of two more theaters in Massachusetts towns by the Interstate Theaters chain, of which the Orpheum here is one, gives a total of thirteen picture houses in this group.

November 10 has been set as the date for beginning the annual Red Cross roll call in Danielson.

Dr. Warren A. Tanner continues to improve at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, forecasting his early return to his home here.

JEWETT CITY

REPUBLICAN RALLY EVENTS FOR WEDNESDAY EVENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 29—The stage is all set for the big republican rally to be held by courtesy of Manager John Barnett in Finn Opera house, Wednesday evening. The committee has completed arrangements for special musical attractions, in connection with four speakers of state-wide prominence in the present campaign. For 15 minutes before 8 o'clock, the hour of listening to the speeches, Swahn's orchestra from Norwich will give a concert. During the program later, Miss Doris Myott, solo contralto in the United church, Norwich, will sing. State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown will be the presiding officer. The speakers are Norman G. Stevens, ex-mayor of Hartford; Philip B. Erard of Springfield, who will speak to the French people; Joseph B. Kulas of Hartford, a Polish orator, both men speaking their own language fluently. Mrs. Edith V. Cook of New Haven will address the women particularly.

HUNTERS' LICENSES PLENTY BUT WHERE IS THE GAME?

The present hunting season means about as little in the local fields and woods, as can be recalled by the oldest sportsman. The number of licenses issued has been equal to the normal holdings of the last five years. The trouble begins when one reaches the woods. First off, a fine flock of quail is down in the corner of the old corn field in full view, with two or three sitting on the top rail of the bar-way. They are protected by law, therefore must be passed by. Conspicuously nailed to a tree in the old favorite runway, is a notice from the game commission, asking that partridges be spared this year, as their extermination is close at hand unless the hunter lets up for a spell. True sportsmen, with the best interests of game preservation at heart, will honor this notice. Ruffed grouse are protected by law. "Now then!" said a returning hunter today, "there remain squirrels, which have been hunted until the gray tails are few and far between!" Local covers have benefited by a recent stocking of pheasants and there are some to be met with along the country roads, but, as one man remarked, "Where is the kick in shooting one, that alights almost at the hunter's feet, looking for three or four grains of corn, which he may have in his pocket?"

Now it has got down to rabbits and, as reported, there are a few cottontails left in some of the outlying huckleberry pasture lots, but the sportsman who gets one without illegal ferret hunting has got to have a true eye and plenty of luck.

The Ladies' Aid society of Newent Congregational church will hold an all-day meeting, Wednesday, at the Community hall.

The tail ender, for local flowering shrubs is here, with witch hazel in bloom. Few ever come upon the dainty yellow blossoms, once numerous in the early fall, and to be found in several places in the woods at the upper end of Tadpole pond.

PARISH MEMORIALIZES DEPARTED MEMBERS

The annual services for deceased members of St. Mary church were observed at the cemetery Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. J. McCabe and Rev. Nicholas Caron read the prayers for the dead, and the senior choir sang the liturgical music. A large concourse of people attended the services.

Rev. J. J. McCabe was in New Britain Monday to attend the funeral of a relative, Mrs. Helen McCabe O'Connor.

The Pachaug Community club committee for November is Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Montgomery, Mrs. Frank Wilcox, Elsie Lord and Fred Edmond.

Raymond B. Johnson and family of Hartford were guests Sunday of Mrs. Walter I. Johnson, in Pachaug.

Recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs A. Zegeer were Mr. and Mrs. Alec Casais and son of Marietta, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Elias Becela and two daughters, of Worcester, Mass.

Since the Choose-up on the Connecticut company bus lines has become effective, it is learned that Messrs. Caffery and Prodel are to be transferred to other parts of the system. These men have both proved their efficiency and worth as coach operators. Local patrons, with regret, note their reassignment. The new men who operate the local runs are Earl Young on Prodel's run, Elliott Savage on Atwood's run, Van Poitras takes Caffery's run, and Mr. Pettett Poitras' run

PUTNAM

DR. SIMPSON RETIRES FROM HIS DENTAL BUSINESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 29—Dr. E. L. Simpson, for the past 36 years one of Putnam's leading dentists and jaw specialists retired from his profession Saturday evening and left this morning for New York city, where he will spend several months in a New York hospital. Dr. Simpson said today that his failing health forced him to leave his work.

Dr. Simpson was born in Watertown, N. Y., on January 27, 1868. He spent his childhood and youth in the city of his birth, receiving his primary and secondary education in the New York upstate city. Upon his graduation from the Baltimore Dental college Dr. Simpson opened an office in Bridgeport, where he excelled in dental surgery. A visit to Putnam in the late nineties, Dr. Simpson said, induced him to establish himself in his profession in this city. His name soon became widely known among the leading dentists of New England and on several occasions he has been in consultation with some of the most widely known surgeons in the country.

In recent years Dr. Simpson's health has failed from overwork and he gave this as his reason for retirement. He left Putnam with Mrs. Simpson today, taking with him the best wishes of his scores of friends in this section of the state.

A large Hudson coach owned by John Butler of this city and a Ford sedan owned by Herman Carver of School street collided this noon on Bugbee's square, resulting in a tie-up of the noonday traffic because of the glass in the street. Neither Carver nor Butler were injured as the result of the crash. The crash attracted several to the square. Capt. Jarvis of the local police investigated the crash and allowed both drivers to proceed.

A survey of the city this morning in the residential sections indicated that "Halloween," the night infested with spirits and spooks is not far off, as in several instances property owners were seen removing their ground floor blinds, lifting their front door fence gates and performing other home tasks, such as disconnecting the electric doorbells, so they will not be forced to crawl up a hen house roof or climb a telephone pole to secure their belongings on Thursday morning. In past years Putnam has been free of any vast amount of vandalism committed by youngsters. Police will keep a close vigil on the solders' monument this year to prevent last year's incident of children rolling the ancient cannon balls down Grove street.

Captain William J. Jarvis and members of the local police are to dispose of liquor obtained in the raids in the north of the city last Thursday afternoon and evening, during the coming week, as waivers have been signed by the owners legally turning the alcoholic beverages over to the authorities for legal disposal. The raids netted hundreds of gallons of the intoxicants, which are now stored in the cell rooms of the police station.

Rumors were current this afternoon that an elderly man had been struck by a speeding automobile on Park street. A check up of the tale was made at the local police headquarters and at the Day Kimball hospital, each bureau denying any knowledge of an accident.

Theodore Sousier of 262 Main street was arrested in Putnam this afternoon by Capt. Jarvis on a charge of evading responsibility, after a car which he was operating figured in an automobile crash a short distance from the town of Webster. Sousier, it is alleged, collided with another car, injuring the driver, and that he failed to stop. The injured operator of car. He reported the incident to the Webster police and a check-up was obtained the registration of the Putnam made with the department of motor vehicles in Hartford, the department naming Sousier as owner of the car. He will be held for the Webster police.

Charles Bruzuk, Main street, Putnam, was arrested today by the Putnam police and turned over to Officer Elton T. Nolan of the Danielson state police barracks on a charge of reckless driving. Bruzuk was arraigned before Justice Percy P. Tourtellotte in North Grosvenordale today and was found guilty of the charge. A fine of $50 and costs of the court was imposed. Bruzuk was represented by Attorney Irving A. Miron of this city.

Raymond Valade, Assumption college '31, has been elected vice president of the C. L. F. A., college literary club. Young Valade is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Valade of Walnut street, this city. Valade is also a member of the board of advisors of the College Branch of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, according to a dispatch in the Worcester paper of Monday.

Hyde Smith, of Worcester former Putnam theatre owner was in Putnam today on business.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mark Gallant

Announcement Saturday morning of the death during the previous evening of Mrs. Mark Gallant, 52, wife of Mark Gallant of Church street, came as a great shock to all relatives and friends of Putnam and vicinity where she was widely known. Mrs. Gallant underwent a major surgical operation about three weeks ago and since leaving the hospital failed to regain her health. A few weeks ago she was stricken and was confined to her bed, dying shortly after 5 o'clock Friday evening.

Mrs. Gallant was born in Putnam on March 21, 1876. She received her education in the schools of Putnam and lived all of her life here. She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Miss Elsie, who will soon take examination for admission to the state bar for legal practice, Miss Lorena, a nurse and a member of the staff at the Day Kimball hospital and one son, Alfred, who is employed as a machinist in Hartford. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs Henry Tetreault of Main street, Mrs. Regis Bouthilette of Church street and Mrs. Arthur Maynard of Water street; two brothers Maxime Bisaillon of Harrison street and Armand Bisaillon of Putnam.

The funeral was held this morning from her late home, followed by a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Mary's church. The mass was celebrated by Rev. U. O Bellerose, pastor of the church, Rev. Jos. D. Casey, deacon and Rev. Ernest Boileau, sub deacon. The funeral mass of Dion was sung by the members of the church choir. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

PLAINFIELD

NEW PASTOR SATISFIED WITH RURAL PARISHES

Rev. Harry Small, the new pastor at Canterbury and Westminster, states that he prefers a small parish to any other, loving to take the part of the farmers and to help them in all possible ways. He is a descendant of John Berry, who was wounded on the deck of a Boston sloop, the Marguerette, in the first battle of the Revolution. This was fought in the Machias river in Maine on the banks of which Mr. Small was born, within sight of Old Fort O'Brien. Mr. Small was graduated from Amherst college in 1890 and graduate from Yale Divinity school. He was ordained to the Christian ministry in 1893 at Guilford where he was pastor a year and a half and where he married. From there he went to Riverside (East Providence) for a year and a half and January 1, 1897, to Goshen, where he has since remained. Mr. Small served for 30 years on the school board. The first ten he was acting visitor and the last ten secretary and treasurer. He was also in the state legislature the past term where he was especially watchful of legislation which might in any way effect the farmers, whose champion he was. Mrs. Small is a native of Guilford, a descendant of John Foot through Governor Brenton of Rhode Island and Governor Jonathan Law of Connecticut. She was graduated from Guilford institute in 1887 and attended Oberlin College and Conservatory of Music. Their elder daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Bartlett Norton, was graduated from Guilford high school, studied two years at the Institute of Musical Art in New York city and privately, and is now manager of the Davis and Sanford studio there. Her husband, Horace Norton, is one of the managers of the Charles H. Ditson Music company. He is organist in one of the Metropolitan churches where Mrs. Norton is contralto soloist. Miriam Roseiter Small was graduated from Gilbert high school at the age of 16, made Phi Betta Kappa at Wellesley college and M. A. and Ph. D. at Yale. She is now professor of English at Wesleyan college. Edwin Williams Small was graduated from Torrington high school where in his freshman year he won first county prize and second state prize in a national oratorical contest. At Yale he has won the Litchfield county scholarship. He is a member of the junior class. Testimony to the love Goshen church held for Mr. Small was the gift to him of $1200 from the church and a purse of $425 presented by friends at a farewell reception.

Winthrop Wilson of New York was a recent visitor with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Wilson.

FINAL QUOTATIONS WERE HIGHER DESPITE FLURRIES OF SELLING

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—Wall street entered the closing week of the presidential campaign today with the "bull movement" still in full swing. Flurries of selling swept through the market at intervals, and a few weak spots cropped out, but final quotations were generally higher, some of the gains running from 5 to 17 1-2 points. The average of 20 leading industrial shares, compiled by the Associated Press, set a new high record for all time.

Trading failed to maintain the terrific pace set in the last fortnight, the day's sales running well below 4,000,000 shares.

Call money renewed at 7 1-2 per cent, and advanced to 8 as banks called about $15,000,000 in loans. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady. Call money is expected by bankers to ease again late this week or early next week.

Expectations of important developments at the forthcoming directors' meeting of the United States Steel and General Motors corporations stimulated bullish enthusiasm in the market. Steel directors meet tomorrow and make public the third quarterly earnings of the corporation, which are expected to run between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. Rumors were current a few weeks ago that a stock dividend might be authorized at this meeting but since then doubt was expressed in banking quarters that any such action was likely at this time. Directors of General Motors are scheduled to meet the second Thursday in November with current rumors to the effect that the stock would be split up on a 2 for 1 basis, and a special distribution made either in stock or cash.

Increased activity in General Motors today was associated with the return from Europe of William C. Durant, automobile manufacturer, who has been actively identified with the market in that issue. The stock ran up to within a fraction of the record high at 223 3-4 and then eased to 221 1-4 for a small fractional gain on the day. Hudson ran up more than 4 points at the expense of an overcrowded short interest, but lost part of its gain. Motor Products, which was weak last week, rallied 17 1-2 points to 168. Further heaviness developed in Briggs Manufacturing, which sold down 3 1-2 points to 48.

Oils were again in brisk demand, Sinclair moved up 2 1-2 points to a new high at 39 and Marland touched a new top at 45 1-2 just prior to the announcement that Daniel J. Moran, formerly vice president of the Texas corporation had been elected president to succeed E. W. Marland, who stated that he would continue as a director and member of the executive committee but had resigned as president because he did not have the time needed to handle the affairs of the company.

Radio was another spectacular performer in today's market, soaring 9 points to a new high record at 245. Kolster Radio, which recently has announced several new valuable radio patents, was one of the most active features of the day, climbing 5 points to a new high at 88 1-2. American Telephone moved up more than 3 points to 185 1-2, retaining most of its gain, and Western Union climbed to a new peak at 201 and then fell back to 192 1-2, off 2 1-2.

Coppers also were well bought on reports of further trade improvement. American Zinc issues, which had been under pressure, rallied briskly while new peak prices were established by American Smelting, Kennecott and Granby. Among the many other issues to break into new high ground were Shubert Theatres, R. H. Macy, Best & Co., General Gas & Electric A and B, Superior Steel and Westinghouse Electric. Warren Bros. ran up 11 3-8 points and Johns Manville, Industrial Rayon, Dupont, Standard Commercial Tobacco and several others advanced 5 points or more. Revival of activity and strength in Savage Arms was based on expectations that the earnings report, due tomorrow, would make the best peace time showing in the company's history.

Rails moved forward with the industrials. Delaware & Hudson, Pittsburgh & West Virginia and Canadian Pacific advanced 4 1-2 to 6 points. St. Louis Southwestern established another new high at 122 3-4 but lost its gain.

A further advance of 20 points in Japanese yen to 47.20 cents, attributed to the squeezing of a Chinese "short" interest in the currency, was the only change of importance in the foreign exchange market. Sterling cables ruled just under $4.86.

Cotton rallied about $1 a bale on reports of colder weather and a better Liverpool demand. Wheat futures yielded a cent or more a bushel. Other commodities showed little change.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

"W'en a Pussy Cat Dies"

You'se as stiff an as cold as a stone,
Little cat.
Dey'se done frowed you out an' lef' you alone
Little cat.
I'se strokin' you'se fur.
But you don't never purr.
Nor hum up anywhere.
Little cat—w'y 's dat?
Is you'se purrin' an' hummin' all done?

Wy fer is you'se little foot tied.
Little cat?
Did dey w'een you'se tummick inside.
Little cat?
Did dey hurt you wif kicks.
Or wif big, nasty bricks.
Or poun' you wif sticks
Little cat—tell me dat?
An' holler w'enever you cwied?

Did it hurt very much w'en you died.
Little cat?
Oh w'y didn't you wun off an' hide.
Little cat?
Is wet in my eyes
Cos I 'most allus cwies
W'en a pussy cat dies.
Little cat. Fink of dat!
An' I'se awfully sorry besides.

Dest 'ay down dere in de sof' groun'
Little cat.
W'ile I put de green grass all roun'.
Little cat.
Dey won't hurt you no more
W'en you'se tired an' so sore—
D'est lay twiet
Little cat—wif a pat.
An' forget all de kicks of de town.

To Fido the Faithful.

So much of love in your deep eyes
I read, O friend of mine.
So much of loyalty supreme.
So much of courage fine.
I think I never can repay
The debt I owe to you—
The gift of your great loving heart
O friend so fond and true!

Alas I do not feel so sure
Of some I call my friends
For sometimes friendships tends, I fear
To mercenary ends.
And too exacting oft are found.
Too quick to take offense.
Are some whose love we're sadly found
Was but a mere pretense!

But you are quite incapable
Of falseness and deceit.
And when I hear your joyous bark.
The patter of your feet.
You greet my home return and gaze
With your eyes so clear
I know I have at least one friend—
True faithful and sincere.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

There are two groups of cattle. One is the straight-poined species we know and which is found the world over, and the other is the humped species of India and Africa. The latter is known as the zebus. The oldest known records of the Hebrew and Hindu peoples mention them as being used as beasts of burden as far back as 2,000 years before Christ was born. In both the Greek and the Roman periods the head of the animal was a very common figure on sculptured antiquities.

Many years before Christ the ox was used as a symbol of sacrifice by the Huns and was also portrayed on the early Egyptian monuments.

In the Swiss lakes the remains of once domesticated specimens have been found, together with implements of stone, at a time when Neolithic man roamed the southern continental areas of Europe.

In early times a man's wealth was determined by the size of his herd, and among many of the pre-historic races of Africa cattle formed the medium of exchange between peoples or tribes. The ox also appears on many ancient coins of both the Greek and the Roman mints. From the word "pecus," i. e. cattle came the Latin word "pecunia" and our word "pecuniary."

The bull appears more than any other animal in Greek mythology. To kill the ox was a great crime, and the Jews were forbidden to put any form of muzzle upon it when treading the corn. To kill it was punishable by exile. The Hindus believe the the bull was the first animal created by the Triu Gfrinities who were directed by the Supreme Being to inhabit the earth. Among the Egyptians the bull figured in the Signs of the Zodiac.

The Portuguese herds and many of the cattle of Spain possesses very long horns like the Hungarian, often measuring five feet from tip to tip, but in size the cattle are unlike the Hungarian which are a very large breed. The Portuguese oxen used in the vineyards and for general agricultural purposes are smaller than the smaller breeds of their American progenitors.

The best pasturage lands for rearing bulls are along the low banks of the Tagus. These districts are noted for the quality of bulls they produce.

The ancestors of the Spanish herds were from Friesland and Holstein, a very large breed, the first introduced into Spain by the Goths. Later they were taken to South America.

As compared to the horse, the ox has greater powers of endurance, and is very little lower in the scale of intelligence. The lion, misnamed the king of beasts, finds his master when put into the ring with the highly bred fighting bull of southern Mexico. There is no record of a victory by a lion over a bull, whose attacks are received with supreme evidence of terror, cowering before the charge of the bull like a stunned before a giant.

The primitive animal must have chosen the rhinoceros and elephant as his most congenial companions, as remains dating from very remote geological periods have been found with those of the greatest beasts.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

Rules For Training.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to you for a long time. I would like to been again so I will send this story. I hope you and the Wide-Awakes will enjoy my story. How to Train for an Athletic Event.

In order to train for anything it is necessary to have some kind of daily program. I have suggested one below. For probably a week this program might be all right. He should get up early, say about 7 o'clock sharp. Then take a cold shower after which he will eat a light breakfast of good substantial food. A little while after breakfast he will take a run and so on. At dinner time he should not eat too much, but only eat non-starch foods. In the afternoon he should practice the event that he is going in for.

At supper time he should follow the same rules as at dinner. After supper he can rest until 8 o'clock, when he should go to bed. During this time he should do his best but keep going easy, so that he can save all his strength for "supreme test."

An Adventure.

Dear Uncle Jed:: I am telling you a story about one of my adventures. One night after returning from school two of my friends and I went nutting. We went down a narrow path and crossed a hollow on a plank. Coming to a stone wall we climbed over it and we were in a field which led into the woods.

We came to a tree but it had no nuts on it. We passed two more trees that were not bearing nuts, when we saw a tree in the distance with nuts on it.

We soon reached it and were picking up the nuts. Just as one of us was about to climb the tree we heard a noise: we listened but did not hear it again.

The girl in the tree jumped down and again we heard a noise. A bull appeared from the brush, as I had a red sweater on I buttoned up my jacket. I ran. The other girls followed me. Finally I looked back and seeing nothing I stopped running. We walked the rest of the way home but we had lost our nuts and later we found out that the bull was chained.

The Wolf Den.

Dear Uncle Jed: Israel Putnam's farm was in Pomfret, Conn. Near the farm was a forest. There were wolves in this forest that bothered the farmers. The farmers had killed all the wolves except one wise wolf with her young ones. One winter day Israel Putnam and some of his friends followed the wolf tracks through the snow. At last they came to the cave where they thought she did. Putnam took his torch and went into the den to see if she was there. He had a rope tied around his legs. When he kicked that meant that his friends were to pull him out. When he got in he saw two shining balls. They were her eyes. So he kicked and they pulled him out. The next time he went in he took his gun. The wolf growled at him. He lifted his gun and fired at the wolf. The gun powder made such a smoke that he had to kick and his friends pulled him out. The third time he went in he saw that the wolf did not move. He put the torch to the wolf's nose but she did not move. So Putnam took the wolf by the ears and pulled her while the men were pulling him. When they got home they hung the wolf on a tree. All the farmers from far and near came to see the wolf that had killed all their sheep, goats and kids.

Saw Soccer Game.

Dear Uncle Jed: Sunday I and my dad went to a camp in Chaplin, Conn. It is two miles and one-half from the main road. We had to go around a lake to get there. All of us had a very good appetite out in the woods so we had a chicken dinner. On the way home we saw a soccer ball game, between Jewett City and Goodyear. When we left the score was 2 to 0 in favor of Goodyear. We all had a very nice time.

At West Point.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to send you a story which I have written about a trip to West Point. I went to West Point this summer on a vacation. I went up through Willimantic, Hartford, Danbury, etc. I went over Bear Mountain bridge and I saw New York steamers and other big boats. I saw Fort Montgomery and Fort Clinton. My brother was waiting to show me around West Point for he is a cadet there. He took me to Fort Putnam and I saw cannons that were used during the war and Battle monument, Washington monument and a monument which was given to West Point by the French Military academy; also the chain which went across the Hudson river. I saw a West Point parade and it was very nice.

They were taking pictures of William Haines and Joan Crawford in "The West Pointer." It was very interesting to watch them. I had a very nice trip to West Point.

Went Nutting.

Dear Uncle Jed: My sisters, mother and I went nutting. We have five trees in a grove and five others around the farm. Some of the trees had only a few nuts. We picked up one and one-half bushels. We sold three-quarters of a bushel to some people. We divided the money among us four girls. My two sisters and I are going to put ours in the school bank.

Four Children.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am sending you a letter about four little children. Their names were Amy, Albert, Josephine and Joseph. Amy and Albert were twins. Joseph and Josephine were twins too. One day mother said, "I am going to grandmother's; you children are old enough to take care of yourselves." "But we are not old enough," said Amy and Albert doubtfully, "we are only five years old." "Well," said mother, "your older brother and sister can take care of you." "But who is going to take you to grandmother's?" asked Amy. "Oh, father will take me," said mother. "Good-by dears," said mother, and she got into the car. "Now," said Josephine, "you two boys run down to the store for some cookies. Amy and I will get supper ready." "Can we have ice cream to eat?" asked Albert. "No, but you can bring home two boxes of it," said Josephine. The boys hurried to the store. They got vanilla ice cream. When they reached home their supper was ready. After supper they played out of doors till it was bed time for Amy and Albert. Mother reached home just as it was time for Josephine and Joseph to go to bed. She said, "They were good children to take care of each other so nicely."

Louisa May Alcott

Dear Uncle Jed: I am now going to tell you in a few words about Louisa May Alcott. Louisa May Alcott lived in a rambling brown house in Massachusetts. She and her sisters, Meg or Margaret, Beth or Elizabeth, Amy and Louisa or Jo, seeing there were no boys, called Jo the male believe boy.

Meg was the oldest, Jo next, Beth, then Amy. Meg was the most loved by Amy and Jo loved Beth. Jo sold her first story when sixteen. The girls shared pleasures and sorrows together. In "Little Women" it tells all about her life and if you have not read it I will not spoil the story for you. It is a very good book and if you have not read it, you should.

A Lost Bag of Money

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a lost bag of money. There was a club called Worthy Warriors club. There were seven children that made up the club. There were three girls and four boys. The head one was Richard Mason. One of the meetings he told the others about a printing press, which they wanted for a long time. It was seven dollars, so that would be one dollar apiece, so they earned the money and passed the money in towards the printing press. Richard hid the money so that no one could find it, but some one did find it. His dog, Jazz, saw where he put it and returned it. The Worthy Warriors thought it was lost. They found the money and they went and got the printing press. I hope the Wide Awakes will like my story.

The Cedar Chest

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to tell you the autobiography of the cedar chest. Today I am your cedar chest. I belong to you. You store pretty dresses and other clothes in me in your home.

Five years ago I was still a tall cedar tree growing on a hill side miles away from such homes as yours. I was in my home swaying in the breezes among my friends, the other trees. I was enjoying life. I was happy. The birds entertained us with their singing, and we were generous too, providing them with food and shelter.

One day some men were chopping down some of the trees, and chopped me down also. They dragged us to a saw mill and there they made boards out of us, and piled us in sheds to dry.

And now about a month ago the men again came and this time they brought us to a cabinet making shop. Here the men planed us down, and made us into a beautiful chest with copper feet. They polished us up very much, and sold us to different furniture stores. It happened that I was sold to a Norwich store, and was there only a week when your mother came along and bought me for your birthday. And here I am, always at your service.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

October proved to be one of the best building months of the year when 42 permits were granted by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton for new construction work within the city limits. Included in the permits are six for new dwelling houses and 13 for garages. The largest projects for the month were the new store building on Main street for the Metropolitan Stores, the new athletic building for the Norwich Free Academy and the remodeling of the Uncas Bank building. The estimated expenditures as given by the owners of the new projects is approximately $101,000.

During the past week good progress has been made on all local building and the majority of the work has been brought to a stage where cold weather will not materially hinder it.

Seventeen permits were granted by Fire Marshal Stanton during the last week in October as follows:

To Antonia Bocshouski to erect a frame six-room house on Spring street. The house will have a cement foundation and cellar and will be 26x28 feet. There will be six rooms and bath. The estimated cost is $3,000.

To A. Produogiel to add one room and a veranda to the present house at 46 Ward street for himself. The room will be 12x12 feet and the veranda 6x18 feet. The estimated cost is $250.

To George Zurcher to add a veranda, 6x14 feet to the house at 339 Central avenue owned by A. Scoiota. The estimated cost is $100.

To Leo Yollowitz to erect a frame henhouse, 13x15 feet at 55 Elizabeth street for himself. The estimated cost is $50.

To James J. Dennis to erect a frame garage 10x18 feet at 17 Orchard street for himself. The estimated cost is $50.

To Nathan and Max Belt to erect a frame one-story frame building on West Main street. The building will be 57x112 feet with an ell, 8x12. The building which will be used as a store house will have concrete floors. The estimated cost is $4,000.

To Gelfaud and Loskin to add a veranda to the frame house at 29 Colt street for Isaac Gelfaud. The veranda will be 5x20 feet. The estimated cost is $25.

To Louis F. Murtagh to erect a frame garage on Colt street in the rear of her home. The garage will be 18x20 feet. The estimated cost is $200.

To Telley E. Babcock to alter and add to the present building at 283 Central avenue. The addition will be used as a garage. It will be 8x10 feet. The estimated cost is $25.

To Pawel Stecewics to build a frame garage at 60 North street for himself. The garage will be 10x18 feet. The estimated cost is $100.

To Charles S. Burke to add a pantry and sink-room to the house owned by Samuel Belt at 390 West Main street. The addition will be 10x12 feet. The estimated cost is $50.

To John Senetski to build a seven-room house at 43 Geer avenue for himself. The house will be of Colonial type and will be of frame construction throughout. The dimensions are 26x28 feet and two stories high. The estimated cost is $3,000.

To Joseph H. Daley to erect a wood frame garage on Oakridge street for himself. The garage will be 22x18 feet with cement foundation and floor. The estimated cost is $300.

To Leonard Hoffman to erect a three-car frame garage at the rear of 85 Sherman street. The garage will be 16x24 feet. The estimated cost is $160.

To Frank Bronejke to add a frame porch to the present house at 16 North street for Leon Korenkiewicz. The porch will be 7x15 feet. The estimate cost is $150.

To John F. Carroll to erect a frame garage, 18x19 feet on Page street for Patrick Sullivan. The estimated cost is $300.

To Charles E. Henry to add a frame veranda to the present house on Beech street. The porch will be 5x22 feet. The estimated cost is $150.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were seven sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to 18 sales for the corresponding week in 1927. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $10,500 and $24,900.

In New London during the past week there were 15 sales of real estate as compared to six sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $101,453 and $35,850.

New London

During the past year New London residents have erected 168 private garages at an estimated cost of $87,805. Many of these garages were two-car buildings, some single ones, and some three and four-section garages.

Eleven public garages have been built at an estimated cost of $81,500, and in addition to this three gasoline and service stations have been installed in New London at an estimated cost of $190,000.

The Standard Oil company has erected its red brick house at Blackhall and Truman streets, where its new improved gasoline station is to be conducted.

The house is of colonial design, with lattice work windows in front, and with colonial designed entrance. The ground about has been leveled off and entrance will be made to the station by two cement mounds from either Blackhall or Truman streets. Already three gasoline pumps have been put in place, and it is expected that in the near future the station will be open for business.

An additional factory building, estimated to cost $12,000, is contemplated by the officials of the Onondaga Textile company at its location, Smith and Trumbull streets. The company has filed with Building Inspector Gunn an application for permission to erect this structure.

The factory building planned is to have brick sidewalls, steel girders and wooden beams. The roof will be of wooden construction, with built-up asphalt roof.

This will be an addition to the present factory building and over all the structure will be 80 by 88 feet in dimensions. The new addition itself will be two stories high and 28 feet over all.

Edmund D. Barker of 174 Channing street has filed with Building Inspector Gunn an application for permission to build at 39 Bristol street a rear entrance to the house there, and also a cellar entrance. The estimated cost is given as $475.

Building Permits

A. H. and A. L. Burr, frame addition, 244 Pequot avenue, $4,000.

Meyer Rich et al, new front and two additions, 23 Hamilton street, $10,000.

Mary A. Perkins, frame addition, 355 Pequot avenue, $1,400.

R. Brockett, addition, 715 Ocean avenue, $1,500.

Mrs. Harvey Lee, dormer window and alterations, 42 Nameaug avenue, $600.

L. J. Budd, addition, 11 Wightman street, $200.

J. A. Dalton, frame garage, 176 Crystal avenue, $400.

L. E. Whiton, addition and alterations, 836 Pequot avenue, $750.

Luke Morley, enlarge veranda, 20 Tilyer street, $150.

Simon Green, alterations, cor. Truman and Bliss streets, $300.

Americo Canestrari, garage, 303 Coleman street, $600.

Total number of permits issued for the week, 12, estimated cost of buildings, $20,050.

Groton

The exterior construction and practically all of the interior work has been done on the small office building which has been constructed in Thames street, Groton, for Frank W. Hewes, Jr., Groton truckman. The exterior is finished in clapboards, which have already received their priming coat of paint. The interior walls are finished in hardwood paneling. The ceiling is of plaster board.

One of two houses that George Marquardt of Groton is having built on the east side of Pequot avenue, on what was part of the Capt. Thomas Scott estate, has been framed to the roof level and has been enclosed to the second floor. The structure will be a single family dwelling. foundation has been partially laid. This is to be another Marquardt house and will be of similar type to the one which is framed.

Westerly

For the third week in October Westerly Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rosi and Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Willis have issued the following zoning and building permits:

HOOVER PREPARING FOR WESTERN TRIP

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—(AP)—Herbert Hoover began clearing desk today for the long jaunt across the country which he will begin on Thursday.

The republican presidential candidate spent little time at his headquarters on Massachusetts avenue, devoting himself for the most part to disposing of personal matters at his "S" street home and to working out the speeches he will make on his trip to California.

Five speeches still are ahead of the nominee before he casts his vote a week from tomorrow at Palo Alto. Four of them will be made on the cross-continent campaign journey.

This will carry him through the border states of Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri, and he will speak in three of these states. The first of these addresses will be made at Cumberland, Md., after which he will cross West Virginia during Thursday night to Louisville where he again will speak.

The most important of his cross country speeches will be made at St. Louis on Friday night, however, when speaking from the border territory he will make probably the most detailed exposition of the agricultural problem he has given during the campaign.

In this speech he also will touch upon inland waterways, and their relation to the farm relief plan he outlined in his acceptance and West Branch speeches.

A peasant jury at Przemysl, Poland, acquitted Michael Szyblak of a charge of killing his wife, explaining that she was a poor housekeeper and it was no wonder he lost his temper.

Magnesia Best for Gas on Stomach

If everything you eat turns to gas, and your stomach is a constant ferment of sourness and Acid Indigestion, it is almost a sure sign your stomach needs an alkaline. Try a little Bisurated Magnesia—powder or tablets—after meals and note the amazingly prompt relief. This splendid Magnesia preparation instantly neutralizes the excess acid, breaks up gas, stops the pain, sweetens the stomach and keeps digestion perfect. It is the safe, certain, pleasant and convenient way to keep the stomach strong. Reliable druggsits everywhere sell it on a guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

WEDDINGS

Smith-Dres

This morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Miss Hazel Dres, daughter of Mrs. Mary Dres, of 77 Montauk avenue, became the bride of Edward Smith, son of Richard A. Smith of 155 Norwood avenue. The marriage was solemnized by Rev William C. Fitzsimons, who also sang the nuptial high mass. The sister of the bride, Miss Mary Dres was bridesmaid and her brother, Thomas Dres was best man. After a motor trip through the White mountains Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside at 77 Montauk avenue.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress of heavy white satin and lace. Her bridal veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister as bridesmaid was attired in green taffeta and wore a silver lace hat trimmed with green and carried pink roses.

A breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother after the church ceremony.

Stearns-Barstow

Miss Flora M. Barstow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs William F. Barstow of 34 Reed street and Martin F. Stearns of Providence, R. I., were married this morning in the office of Attorney Max Boyer. The groom is a well known salesman throughout Connecticut.

The annual memorial services of Nonowantuc tribe of Red Men were held last night in the Methodist church. During the meeting members paid honor to the 34 deceased members of the tribe.

Mr. Charles E. Brennan, formerly of this city, now of Worcester, who was injured in an auto accident about three weeks ago while en route here is reported as greatly improved. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Wentworth of 303 Vauxhall street.

A Dart hall, Bank street, yesterday afternoon there was a very enthusiastic Italian republican rally. More than 200 were present and speakers of state-wide prominence urged the Italian voters to back the principles of the present administration.

WATERFORD WOMAN FREED OF MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 29—Mrs. Thomas W. Wood of Durfee Hill, Waterford, defendant in a technical case of manslaughter, was freed in the town court of Waterford this morning. The case was brought about by an accident, March 13, when a truck driven by Mrs. Wood struck Frederick Carlson, a Waterford boy, who died as the result of his injuries.

BROTHER OF MRS. JOHNSON ASSISTS AT SERVICES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 29—Funeral services of Mrs. Ruth Chappell Johnson, wife of Frank R. Johnson who died Thursday at her home in Waterford, were held this afternoon at the First Baptist church. Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. C. Raymond Chappell, brother of Mrs Johnson from Keene, N. H., conducted the services. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Brother from N. H. assists at services.

The bearers were Capt. Frederick M. Green, Benjamin Sweesey, Claude Kenyon, George A. Wood, Franklin G. Keeney and Henry Johnson.

Members of the faculty and students of Connecticut college joined Saturday night in an old-fashioned Halloween party held in the gymnasium.

NORWICH DRIVER FORFEITS HIS BOND IN CITY COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 29—Alfred Barry, Norwich, charged with violation of the city's parking laws in parking in restricted area on Pearl street Saturday night, did not present himself in court so his bond of $2 was declared forfeited. He was arrested by Officer Clarence Wells.

Had Government Cartridges

George Lehman, submarine base, was arrested Sunday night charged with theft, but was discharged without being presented in court. Lehman was on State street and exhibited to Patrolman Dennis a box of cartridges some of which Lehman said he had taken from a man who had held him up at the point of a revolver. It later developed that the automobile of Charles Bahm, United States Coast Guard shore patrol officer's car, that had been parked on North Bank street, had been robbed of practically all that was found in the machine and the cartridges belonged to the federal government, having been taken from the auto. When it became known that the auto had been robbed of its contents, a search was made for Lehman and he was arrested by Officers Murphy and George Labous.

A man charged with intoxication, having been arrested early today at the union station by Special Agent John Anderson, of the New Haven railroad and Patrolmen John Clifford and Louis Tooker was discharged in the city court. C. R. Smith arrested at the same time by Special Agent Anderson and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy and John Clifford charged with intoxication, breach of the peace and interfering with an officer, was fined $10. Execution of the sentence was suspended.

A half dozen cases of intoxication were tried; all the accused were either discharged or were given suspensions of judgment.

Members of Moosehart legion, New London chapter, No. 347, held a banquet and entertainment Saturday night in Moose hall in celebration of the birthday of James J. Davis, secretary of labor, who founded the organization. About one hundred were present and a turkey supper was served at 6 o'clock. After a business session the evening was given up to a musical and dance program.

Miss Betty Bryan, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. A. M. Bryan, of Quaker Hill was hostess Saturday night at a Halloween party at her home. Dancing and games were enjoyed during the evening after which refreshments were served.

Members of the Neptune club plan a Halloween party at the club rooms of the Jibboom club Wednesday night. Members of both organizations will be present and prizes for the funniest and most original costumes will be given. Miss Lucille Smith is in charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Earl Cannon and infant daughter, of 322 Ocean avenue, Timothy Dwyer, 259 Huntington street and Joseph Melville, 42 Jay street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

Thomas M. and Julia Ganey have sold a building lot on Williams street to Samuel J. Sellack.

Otto Eames has sold to Emma Searle a building lot on Riverview avenue.

Arthur Cook, 38 of 602 Main street employed by the Central Vermont railroad as a machinist and Klim Pike, 42, of 137 North Bank street, a laborer employed by the railroad, engaged in a fight at the company's pier, East New London this afternoon. Cook and Pike were arrested on a joint commission charging breach of the peace and will be presented in court tomorrow morning. Cook and Pike furnished a surety on their respective bonds of $25 for their appearance.

Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin is confined to his residence on Nathan Hale street by illness.

Horace Beebe drove his automobile to the yard of the Chevrolet Service station, Bank street last night where he parked the car several hours. When he returned to drive the auto to his home, Beebe found a mail box lying on the ground, and in front of the auto. He reported his find at police headquarters and it was determined that the mail box had been removed from its station, corner of Bank and Tilley streets. Who placed the mail box where it was found could not be discovered by the police or post office officials.

Odell Harrison, a member of the submarine S-12, who with John Dush, a member of the S-4 fatally injured near Lyme Saturday night when the automobile in which they were riding collided with a truck, was reported at Lawrence-Memorial hospital today as slightly more comfortable. The patient is still on the critical list.

Thomas Sisk, a former pharmaceutical clerk in this city has returned to New London in charge of the United Drug company, succeeding Paul Salerno.

U. S. N. DAY IN COURT—THREE ARE PENALIZED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 29.—Lieut. C. V. Conlan, submarine base was in the police court this morning charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 and costs but Judge Victor Prince ordered $50 of the fine remitted. Conlan was driving on Howard street Saturday night and when the car reached Bank street, Conlan lost his bearings for he failed to turn either north or south into Bank street, nor did he drive the car across Bank street, into Reed street. Instead, the auto took a diagonal course and climbed up on the sidewalk in front of the Dart building, where it came to a stop, barely escaping hitting a plate glass window. Patrolman William Riordan was near at hand and upon investigating the stunts of Conlan determined that the driver was intoxicated and arrested him.

Kenneth Shaw, submarine base, was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace but was given suspension of judgment. Shaw was an attendant at a dance in Plant hall Saturday night and engaged in a fight. During the melee Shaw's fist smashed a window, cutting that member deeply. The bluejacket was not arrested, but was ejected from the dance hall. When Patrolman John Clifford was patrolling State street a few minutes after the fight the officer encountered Shaw and observing the condition of the sailor's hand escorted Shaw to police headquarters. Shaw was taken to the office of a physician where the wound was dressed. Then he was arrested by Patrolman Albert Iverson and Patrolman Edward Shoesyles.

Philip Ramsay, chief gattey officer of the United States Coast Guard stationed at the state pier was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace, but he, also was given suspension of judgment. Ramsay was on North Bank street Saturday night and while the automobile, a public service car, owned by John Philopena was motionless Ramsay deliberately smashed one of the windows with his fist. In doing so Rawsay sustained a deep laceration of his right hand, which necessitated the hand being dressed by a physician.

Edward McLaughlin, Union street, was charged with breach of the peace and was given suspension of judgment. McLaughlin was arrested Saturday night by Patrolmen Dennis Murphy and George Labous.

KENNETH CLARK, NIANTIC, CHARGED WITH NON-SUPPORT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 29—Kenneth Clark, of Niantic, was arrested this afternoon by State Police Officer John Smith, of Groton barracks, charged with non-support. He was not successful in obtaining a surety on his bond of $200, so was locked up at New London police headquarters. It is probable that Clark will have another charge to face before he is out of his trouble for the New London police have been seeking to arrest him for several weeks. Sept. 10 he was driving his automobile on Main street and near Church street it collided with a car owned and driven by Albert Santacroce. The Santacroce auto was damaged and Clark, instead of waiting to assist in the investigation of the crash by the police who had been summoned, speeded away. Santacroce obtained the markers of the colliding auto and the following day it was ascertained that the markers belonged to the machine owned by Clark. Since that time Clark has managed to escape the watchfulness of the police. Reports by Mrs. Clark made complaint to the authorities because her husband would not support her and today Officer Smith learned of his whereabouts and took him into custod. Clark was formerly employed as a public taxicab driver in New London and at that time was arrested once or twice for various offenses.

BOOZE AND DOGS CAUSE TROUBLE FOR JEFFERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 29—Edward Jeffers, colored, employed as chef at a restaurant on Bank street, was arrested tonight by Officers Louis Tooker and Henry Hick, charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. In default of bail of $50 Jeffers was locked up and will be in court tomorrow. Jeffers was on Main street, near Douglass street and being a breeder of dogs he had two of the animals with him. The dogs, it is alleged, were making a nuisance of themselves and when Officer Tooker remonstrated with the Negro for allowing the animals to roam at random and annoy pedestrians, Jeffers became abusive with the result that he attacked the officer. A passing autoist drove to Bank and Main street where he informed Patrolman Henry Hick that a fellow officer was in trouble a short distance away and drove the latter to the location of the fight. When Officer Hick arrived, Jeffers was quickly subdued and was as quickly landed in a cell where he will spend the night prior to being presented in court.

The work of resolving that section of State street between the Union station and the rear of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument, is progressing rapidly and when completed the improvement will insure a degree of safety of automobiles for an added space will be provided for automobiles descending the grade of State street and turning around the monument to proceed on the opposite side, the safety being possible because of the added space that will be provided. As the condition exists at present, public service cars parked in front of the Union station make it mandatory that other automobiles proceed cautiously in order to avoid a collision; and that is not always sure to occur especially when drivers round the monument who are not acquainted with conditions there.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

The first actual talking picture ever exhibited—i. e., a picture without subtitles wherein all the characters speak their parts, opened last Sunday night at the Broadway theatre and to say that the novelty intrigued the fancy of the audience is to speak with undue restraint of Warner Bros.' epoch-making departure, "Lights of New York."

Miss Costello, Mr. Landis, Miss Brockwell—in fact, each member of the distinguished cast spoke with quite amazing naturalness.

There was an odd pleasure in hearing the screen favorites, like the pleasure of becoming better acquainted with neighbors we have only nodded to. The full-toned resonance of Cullen Landis, the mellow tenderness of Mary Carr—mother to all freedom—the girlish clarity of Miss Costello, the harsh precision of Crosby, plainclothes man, Hawk Miller's suave villainy—all blended as perfectly as the various instruments in a well-trained orchestra, as the grinding melodrama of love, crime and retribution swept up to its terrific climax.

More of the story need not be told, than that it concerns a lad who, believing the old home town a dead burg, longs to go to the Big Town. Urging his mother to let him have her savings, he goes to the city to invest in what is surmoged to be a barter shop but what is in reality a blind for bootleggers. His sweetheart has gone to New York and is an entertainer in a night club, whose city proprietor has shot a policeman—thus implicating both youngsters in a bewildering chain of circumstances which brings them within the shadow of the electric chair. "Lights of New York" is different from anything you have ever seen. It is worth traveling a long way to see—and hear.

Palace Theatre

Suspense thrills, humor, adventure and ormance dominate Bebe Daniels' new picture, "Hot News," which came to the Palace theatre Sunday.

It is not only one of the most spectacular and entertaining films this popular star has ever produced but it tells a graphic and authentic story of what is undoubtedly one of the most exciting professions in the world—that of the newsreel cameramen.

The audiences at the Palace theatre raged with evident relish as Bebe stood on top of the Statue of Liberty with her camera and attempted to film an incoming trans Atlantic flier.

Neil Hamilton lends capable support to the star as a rival cameraman and Paul Lukas makes a splendid villain and brings about a spectacular climax.

A stretch of the Mojave Desert where no human being had ever been before was used as a "location" for the outdoor scenes in "The Wind," Lillian Gish's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle, now showing at the Palace theatre. There was no animal life save desert reptiles and no vegetation. In these bleak surroundings an artificial cyclone was made with giant fans for the spectacular storm scene in this romance of the plains.

Miss Gish plays the role of a gently nurtured southern girl who is thrust by circumstances into primitive pioneer life. She finds herself at the mercy of the elements and the unleashed passions of men. Yet through it all runs a beautiful romance the story of a beautiful love which saves the woman from virtual madness and reconciles her to her environment in the end. Lars Hanson plays the leading male role. Victor Seastrom directed.

Bread Theatre

Vampires are necessary screen evils.

A safe remark one might say, especially when expressed by the smiling Margaret Livingston, who plays a siren in Richard Barthelmess' new First National Picture, "The Wheel of Chance," closing at the Breed theatre tonight.

"The normal woman has a fear of women with slinking sensuous cunning" said Miss Livingston. "The only way to cure a child of fearing the dark is to make that child walk into a dark room, then suddenly switch on the light and reveal the fallacy of fright.

"The same is true about women and sirens. If a woman sees a so-called vamoire on the screen, she is interested; because she can learn from observation just what her tricks are and knowledge is power."

Miss Livingston however believes every "vampire type" must change her tactics in each film for it takes but little time to "wise-up" the women fans to methods.

"And that is fatal!" said the actress.

"Screen adventuresses must always be on the alert for new fashions in love-making, for after all they specialize in this just as much as some actresses are known by their ability to wear smart clothes."

A villain in a picture doesn't necessarily have to be handsome he may even be ugly, but a villainess must portray all the charm of a good woman, plus the shortcomings of the worst, the actress further pointed out.

Harold Bauer's Career

An intimate friend of Fritz Kreisler has said that the world lost a great pianist when that artist decided to be a violinist. That Mr. Kreisler is fond of the piano and an expert player of that instrument is now known to the public, for he has on several occasions appeared on the concert platform as accompanist for his colleagues.

The career of Harold Bauer, the distinguished pianist who plays here Friday evening at Slater hall, forms an interesting parallel, only the line is drawn from the opposite direction. Mr. Bauer's first ambition was to be a concert violinist, and that ambition was achieved before fate decreed that he win greater fame as a pianist.

In the London home of his birth where music was a familiar art with both parents his childhood fancy was caught by the instrument of his father, the violin, and by his ninth year under his father's guidance he had progressed to a degree of proficiency that promised a brilliant future. He then studied with famous teachers and was soon concertising throughout England.

It was in Glasgow that he met Paderewski, the Polish pianist, who, discovering his secondary skill as a pianist (acquired from his mother) persuaded him to give first place to the piano. Within three years he made his debut, soon appearing in London and Paris, and has since been constantly engaged throughout Europe and the United States. Everywhere he is received with unlimited acclaim and regarded as one of the great master pianists of our day.

Seat sale for this concert and for the series opens at 9 a. m. today at Cranston's. See adv.

Breath that Offends

If unpleasant breath is caused by a disordered stomach, a mouth wash will not remedy it. Get at the cause. Fermented food in the stomach and accumulated waste matter in the intestines send their poisons allover the body. Keep clean inside.

GREENEVILLE

ENJOYABLE HALLOWEEN PARTY IN GREENEVILLE

A Halloween party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bauer of 98 Oakridge street in honor of their son, Ralph Jr. Many games were played and enjoyed. William Delaney and John Delaney entertained, rendering piano and vocal solos in a very pleasing manner. The dining room was very prettily decorated with the color scheme of yellow and black and Halloween designs of black cats, pumpkins and witches. Miss Anna Delaney gave an exhibition of the black bottom. Among the guests present were: Miss Marie Delaney, Joseph Corey, Miss Catherine Delaney, John Delaney, Miss Anna Corey, Miss Marie Corey, Miss Elizabeth Shea, Rowsal Lordette, Everett Lordette, Miss Nancey Celucci, John Duch, Miss Mary Duch, William Mumblough, Miss Mary Desmond, William Morse, William Delaney, Ernest Weise and Miss Bertha Weise. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Anna Delaney, Miss Genevieve Weise and Mrs. Bauer, Mr. Bauer was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. Each guest received a Halloween favor. A small decorated basket filled with candies. Each child was dressed in a Halloween costume. Refreshments consisted of assorted sandwiches, fancy cakes, assorted cookies, hot chocolate, candies, pop corn, ice cream and assorted wafers. The party broke up at a late hour, all present voting Mr. Bauer a very pleasing host.

James Shea has returned to his home at New Bedford after spending a few days with relatives in Greeneville.

At all the masses at St. Mary's Memorial church Sunday announcements were made that there would be special masses next Thursday, Feast of All Saints, which is a holy day of obligation in the church calendar. There will also be special masses on Friday which the church designates as All Souls day when the parishioners are requested to pray for the departed souls. As on Christmas, priests are granted the privilege of saying three masses on this day and those who visit the church and pray for the intention of His Holiness the Pope may gain a plenary indulgence applicable to the souls in Purgatory.

The H club held their regular weekly meeting at their club rooms on Fourth street Monday evening with a large attendance. Regular business was transacted with President Wallace Atterbury in the chair.

James W. Purdon, Jr., of 115 Golden street will take up his new duties in the engraving department of Alex Shaw Finishing Co., at Greeneville, S. C., early in November. A farewell dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Purdon was given Sunday evening at Cinderella inn by local friends. Mr. Purdon has been employed at the U. S. Finishing company plant here.

RECOVERING FROM INJURIES SUSTAINED IN DANIELSON

Mrs. Charles E. Brannan, formerly of New London, and now of Worcester, is convalescing at her home in Worcester after being in an automobile accident while on the way to New London three weeks ago Saturday night accompanied by her husband. The Brannan machine, was sideswiped by another sedan owned by Harry Goodman of Danielson.

The Brannan car was damaged to the amount of $200 and the Goodman machine was completely demolished. Mr. Brannan escaped injury but Mrs. Brannan received bruises about the body and her neck was injured She is still under the care of a physician.

Mrs. Brannan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Wentworth, of 302 Vauxhall street, New London.

GOLDEN UNABLE TO GET $5,000 BAIL AS FATAL CASE IS CONTINUED TO NOV. 5

The body of Herman Bajorin, killed on the Norwich-New London highway early Saturday evening, by a machine driven by Llewellyn H. Golden of No. 68 Thames street, was sent to his home in North Adams, Mass., Monday evening on the 8:25 o'clock train. Relatives and friends accompanied the body, which was prepared for burial by Hourigan Bros. It was at first thought that the man was John Barenas, as he had a pay envelope with him bearing that name. He was evidently listed on the mill books as Barenas. The body was positively identified Monday morning by a brother, Joseph Bajorin of Winsted, who informed Coroner Edward G. McKay of the man's real name.

Mr. Golden was presented in the city court Monday morning on the manslaughter charge against his name. On recommendation of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy the case was continued until Nov. 5. Bonds were continued at $5,000, which Mr. Golden had not been able to raise up to Monday night. Since the accident he has been locked up at police headquarters.

Other than the driver who Golden claimed stopped and gave him (Golden) his name at the time of the accident, there were no eye witnesses. The identity of this driver has not yet been learned. Golden said Sunday that he lost the slip of paper containing the driver's name and cannot remember it.

The fact is, it is understood, that Golden's claim about being blinded by headlights and another driver giving him a name and address which he has lost was not made until Sunday.

It is understood that when Coroner McKay saw Golden Saturday night, Golden said nothing to him then about another machine or about a man stopping and giving him a paper which he had lost.

ROBINSON MAKES PREDICTION OF INVESTMENT LEGISLATION

A prediction that the whole subject of legislation concerning banks, and investment companies in general, will come before the next legislature for review, was made by Lucius F. Robinson of Hartford, Saturday. Mr. Robinson is counsel for the Bankers Security Trust company of Bridgeport, which is in litigation with the state, which seeks to make the company revert to its charter name, the Title and Guaranty company of Bridgeport.

The same prediction was implicit in the results achieved by the state's action in the case of Roger W. Watkins, former broker, whose juggling with an investment trust focused the attention of the state on the need of more carefully drawn legislation to cover this complicated subject. Former Attorney General Frank E. Healy, who represented Watkins, took occasion to criticize the administration of the investment trust laws in this state in the course of his plea on behalf of his client, before the latter was sentenced to state prison for swindling the public in a stock scheme.

Mr. Robinson's statement was made apropos the stipulation between himself as counsel for the Bankers Security Trust company of Bridgeport and Attorney General Benjamin W. Alling, transferring the trust company's appeal to the supreme court, from the Bridgeport session of the court this week to the Hartford session of the court in January. The transfer delays the case two months and brings it in coincident with the legislative session.

Asked if this was a move to compromise the case, Mr. Robinson said it was not and added:

"The whole question of legislation concerning banks and investment companies in general will probably come up at the next legislative session, when a general review of the situation will be made. There has been some discussion of waiting to see what the legislature does, but this has not come up directly between counsel. It is a big subject, but the delay in bringing the case to the supreme court is caused as an accommodation for counsel of both sides."

The trust company is appealing from a decision of Judge Alfred C. Baldwin of the superior court directing the company to give up its present name and go back to the use of the company's original name, the Title and Guaranty company of Bridgeport. Under this name it obtained from the last general assembly a charter which was unusual, the state claimed, in that it gave the company extraordinary trust company powers.

COLVIN BROWN TO SPEAK TWICE IN THIS CITY

Colvin Brown, manager of the Organization Service bureau, the United States chamber of commerce, will visit Connecticut the week of Nov. 5, according to an announcement made at the offices of the Norwich chamber of commerce Monday. Through arrangements completed by the local chamber, Mr. Brown's itinerary will include a visit to Norwich. The itinerary arranged is as follows:

Monday noon, Nov. 5—Bridgeport chamber of commerce, at noon, and Greenwich chamber of commerce in the evening.

Tuesday, Nov. 6—Noon, Norwich chamber board of directors.

Wednesday, Nov. 7—Noon, Norwich Rotary club; evening, Willimantic chamber of commerce.

Thursday, Nov. 8—Noon, Hartford Kiwanis club and chamber of commerce; evening, Hartford chamber board of directors.

Friday, Nov. 9—Bristol chamber of commerce.

Probably no man in America has traveled so many miles and has had his hands on the pulse of American business in as many places as Colvin Brown. He is consulted on problems of every conceivable character having to do with organization service. His office in Washington is handling thousands of inquiries daily.

NOTED BELGIAN WOMAN TO ADDRESS RALLY HERE

The republican town committee has been notified that at a rally to be held Saturday evening in the Town hall, the speaker is to be the noted Belgian sculptress, the former Suzanne Silvercruys, now Mrs. Henry W. Farnum, Jr., of New Haven, and an American citizen.

The father of Mrs. Farnum is the president of the supreme court of Belgium. She was a reverent friend and admirer of Cardinal Mercier and warmly agrees with his estimate of Herbert Hoover. She had the great honor of making the bust of Hoover for the Louvain Library. Mrs. Farnum worked with Hoover in caring for the starving women and children of Belgium and for this service was decorated by the King of Belgium. Her unusual personal magnetism and sincere fervor have led to her having been characterized as the Modern Joan of Arc.

This is an unusual opportunity offered to the people of Norwich to hear her tell her simple yet dramatic story.

MADE SUNDAY SALE TO POLICE CAPTAIN MURPHY

At the Monday morning session of the city court William Jackem, a peddler of religious literature, was presented on a charge of peddling without a license. He was arrested Sunday by Capt. Thomas P. Murphy for peddling, after the captain had bought a copy of a book called "The People's Friend." He had been canvassing houses in the city during the day. Judge H. H. Pettis advised Jackem to discontinue the sale of the book on Sundays and the case was nolled.

MOOSEHEART DAY WAS OBSERVED AT MOOSE HOME

Mooseheart day was fittingly observed by Norwich lodge, No. 950, L. O. O. M., Women of Mooseheart Legion, No. 124, and Mooseheart Junior Legion, No. 92, in Moose home Sunday afternoon with the hall well filled when the following programme was presented in charge of Past Regent Teresa Watters:

Opening, Star Spangled Banner by Maragaret Mehrholz, Doris Cote and Charles Watters; welcome, by Dictator Bernard Wunderlich. After welcoming the guests, Dictator Wunderlich introduced Past Dictator Rudolph Krohn, who gave a very interesting talk on Mooseheart and told how the Loyal Order of Moose took the name of this organization from the noblest animal, the moose. The dictator then introduced Past Regent Emma Beaver, who was the organizer of Norwich chapter and who spoke on what the Women of Mooseheart Legion chapter are founded upon; viz: Love, which is the real foundation of the order and what all must practice if the order is to be a success.

After the speakers the next was a drill by 13 of the Legionnaires, featuring the emblems of the Women of Mooseheart Legion, the cross, anchor and heart, for Faith, Hope and Contentment. Solos, Sonny Boy, by Mrs. Mary Edwards; tableau, originated by the governess, taken from the emblems of the Junior Legion, Goodness, Justice, Service, Kindness, by Margaret Mehrholz, Mary Connell, Roderick Jarvis, Gladys Cote, Doris Cote and Lenora Wunderlich; solo, Ice Cream by Dorothy Jarvis; solo, Little Mother, Gladys Cote. The next was a playlet by the children, The Gift of the Corn. Indians, Ellsworth Watters, Lorenzo Hathaway, George Embach, Peter Diagini, William Hadda, James Maconie; Colonist, Roderick Jarvis; farmers, John Watters, William Powell, Roger MaconMVsahhad ..fol huskers, Margaret Mehrholz, Mary Connell, Doris Cote, Rose Perrone; millers, Andrew Connell, Kenneth Sterry; housewives, Mildred Carter, Dorothy Jarvis, Mildred Hoelck; Mammy Gladys Cote. In the cornstalk parade were Charles Waters, Arlene Caughey, Edward Caughey, Lenora Wunderlich, Paul Watters, Rita Hoelck, Franklin Powell and Dorothy Embach. Sketch, Norwich Chapter, by Past Regents Emma Beaver, Rose Carter, Mary Hunter, Vera Stery and Legionnaires Mary Edwards, Nellie Dorr, Nora Willett, Martha Wunderlich, Elsie Caughey, Irene Burns, May Lasch, Margaret Comire, Ethel Hoelck, Mrs. Herbert Rich and Marie LaValle; tableau, Moosehaven by Mrs. Lawrence Hoffman, and Past Dictator Charles Beaver with solo Home Sweet Home by Mrs. Mary Edwards; solo, Jeannine I Dream of Lilac Time by Margaret Mehrholz and chorus; solo, Dream Kisses by Mary Connell and chorus; drill by Norwich degree team; solo, Beloved, by Rose Perrone and chorus, consisting of Mildred Carter, Dorothy Jarvis, Rose Perrone, Mary Connell, Margaret Hehrholz, Doris Cote; tableau, 9 o'clock at Mooseheart. This tableau was beautifuly carried out with Dictator Wunderlich performing the 9 o'clock ceremony, Arlene Caughey, Lenora Wunderlich and Edward Caughey as the children at Mooseheart and the singing of "Mooseheart the Happiest," by Senior Regent Minnie Smith, President Margaret Mehrholz of the Junior Legion, Dictator Bernard Wunderlich, Vice President Roderick Jarvis of the Junior Legion and Past Regents Emma Beaver, Mary Hunter, Rose Carter, Vera Sterry and Teresa Watters and Past Dictators Henry Jarvis, Rudy Krohn and Charles Beaver. The musician for the entire evening was Miss Gladys Cote, the leader of the Junior Legion degree team, who rendered the different selections very efficiently.

The children without any exceptions showed great talent in taking the different parts and Norwich lodge and chapter have every reason to be proud of their Junior Legion.

In closing Dictator Wunderlich thanked the Women of Mooseheart Legion, Loyal Order of Moose and the Junior Legion that gave up such a pleasant Sunday afternoon, to help to make the celebration of the birthday of the founder of the L. O. O. M., James Davis and Mooseheart Day a success. Dictator Wunderlich also said that although this is the first time Mooseheart Day has been celebrated in Norwich from now on it will be annually observed, and on a much larger scale. He then introduced Professor William Banfield who entertained the company with some very clever magic tricks and was very soundly applauded.

Refreshments of chowder, coffee and cookies were served after the entertainment by Brothers Frank Hunter, William Mehrholz, Joseph Limpka and John Mehrholz.

NORWICH WOMAN'S DIVORCE SUIT IS WITHDRAWN

The divorce suit of Annie Tillinghast Wheeler of this city against George Wheeler of Preston has been withdrawn from the superior court without costs, according to papers filed with Clerk John H. Walker. The marriage of the couple took place Feb. 17, 1910, and the divorce was sought on the grounds of intolerable cruelty since July 1, 1922. Mrs. Wheeler has been getting alimony pendente lite of $50 a month, having claimed that her husband owns property worth $15,000.

NOLLE IN CHARGE AGAINST WATERFORD WOMAN DRIVER

An absolute nolle was entered in Waterford town court Monday morning in the case against Mrs. Thomas W. Wood of Durfee Hill, Waterford, who was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter following an accident on March 13 when a truck driven by Mrs. Wood struck Frederick Carlson, a Waterford boy, who died as the result of injuries received. The nolle was prompted by a report made by former Coroner J. J. Desmond, which exonerated Mrs. Wood.

The accident occurred on the Shore road beyond Jordan Village in Waterford at 6.30 o'clock on the night of March 13.

PAYS $25 AND COSTS ON TWO COUNTS CHARGED

Pleading guilty to charges of reckless driving and driving without an operator's license, Kenneth West, 21, U. S. N., stationed at the submarine base, was fined $25 on each case with costs added, when he was presented in the city court Monday morning. He was arrested in Taftville Saturday night after the machines he was driving collided with and damaged two other machines, one owned by Jessie Laudette and the other by Charles Proulx, both of Taftville. West claimed that he had a license but it was found that it was suspended some time ago.

HALLOWEEN PARTY HELD BY C. L. CLASS MEMBERS

Monday evening the C. L. class of Trinity Methodist church met with Mrs. Jacob Lichenstein, 71 Church street, the seventeen members attending being in Halloween costumes. The rooms and table were decorated in the colors and emblems of the season. A short business meeting was held, in charge of the president of the class, Miss Mildred Mellor.

Following a social evening, with games and stunts and tricks, sandwiches, cakes and coffee were served. The favors were Halloween baskets of candies.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. John Hargreaves have had as guests their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cote and their three children, Paul, Jr., Florence and baby of Burlington, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Belisle and family of lower Norwich avenue have gone to Hartford where they are to make their home in the future.

Zotique Caisse of Occum is in Washington, D. C., where he is visiting his son, who is in the employ of the United States Hospital Corps.

The next meeting of the Thimble club is to be with Mrs. Albert J. Aberg of North A street.

Earle M. Wood of North Third avenue was in Hartford, Saturday, to attend a meeting of the state board of management of the Connecticut Sons of the American Revolution, at the state library.

Alterations and improvements have been underway at the residence of Kurt Seifert on the Baltic road.

One of the recent preachers at the Versailles Methodist Episcopal church was Rev. Dudley Burr, formerly of Baltic, who was ordained to the Christian ministry at the last Methodist conference.

Mrs. Charles R. Adams of North Third avenue has returned from spending a week in Mystic, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Billings and family.

Curtis A. Hedler of Terrace avenue spent the week end with friends in Middletown.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Heselton and children Kendall and Revela of North B street spent the week end with the former's brother-in-law and sister Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander of Springfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lambert and family of North B street had as guests over Sunday, their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Emile J. Dubeau of Plainfield.

On Sunday, the annual procession of the parishioners of Sacred Heart church took place, the people marching to the church cemetery on the Old Canterbury turnpike, where prayers for the dead were recited by the clergy.

WEDDING

Finizio-Gagnon

One of the prettiest of the autumn weddings took place Monday morning at Sacred Heart church, when Miss Eva Agnes Gagnon, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Joseph Gagnon of South A street became the bride of Vito Lebro Finizio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nunzio Finizio of Westerly, R. I.

The church was filled with relatives and friends of the young couple the nuptial high mass being sung by Rev. Frederick R. Des-Surreault, pastor of the church, who also performed the ceremony which preceded it. Miss Laura Gagnon, sister of the bride was maid-of-honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Anna Azzinaro of Westerly, and Miss Mary Finizio, a sister of the groom. For his best man, the groom had an intimate friend, Patrick Terranova of Westerly. The ushers were James Rosso and Frank Finizio, both of Westerly.

The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played as the bridal party entered the edifice and moved down the aisle to the main altar, which was beautiful with its floral decorations and lighted candles. The bride wore a gown of white satin crepe; her bridal veil of tulle was caught up with orange blossoms and lilies-of-the-valley, and she carried a bouquet of brides roses with a shower of lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids worn yellow georgette with hats to match and each carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

A reception and wedding breakfast was tendered the bridal couple at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gagnon on South A street, and in the afternoon a second reception followed at Marones hall at Westerly. There the newly married couple, assisted by the wedding party and their parents received hundreds of their friends. Buffet luncheon was served, and dancing, for which Hills Harmony Boys played, continued until midnight.

Mr. and Mrs. Finizio are spending their honeymoon in New York city, and upon their return they are to reside in a newly furnished apartment in Westerly where Mr. Finizio is with one of the large textile manufacturing plants.

The card party given by the St. Vincent de Paul society proved a great success and a neat sum was realized which was devoted to charitable work among the needy families of the village. The society was recently organized for this purpose.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Henry L'Heureux

Funeral services for Mrs. Henry L'Heureux were held Monday morning from her late home on upper Merchants avenue, at 8:30 o'clock followed by a solemn high mass of requiem at Sacred Heart church at 9 o'clock. The officers of the mass were Rev. Omer T. Mandler, celebrant; Rev. Frederick R. Des-Surealt, deacon and Rev. Francis X. Chicoine, sub-deacon. The bearers were A. Couture, Archie J. Michon, Philip Trembley, John Goyette, Victor Fontaine and Joseph Benoit. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery on the Old Canterbury turnpike where Rev. Father DesSureault read the committal prayers. Undertaker George G. Grant was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

REPUBLICAN RALLIES IN COUNTY THIS WEEK

An active week of speaking engagements confronts State Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers of New London, republican candidate for lieutenant-governor, beginning today. The final week of the campaign in Connecticut finds rallies scheduled for every evening, and on many afternoons, in all corners of the state. Noon-day factory meetings are also scheduled in industrial centers.

Mr. Rogers spoke Monday night at 6:30 o'clock in Willimantic. On Wednesday at 8 p. m., he will address a rally in New Britain. On Thursday at 6:30 p. m., he will speake before a republican group in Waterbury. On Friday, at 8 p. m., he will speak in Ashford, and on Saturday will give two talks, one in Bridgeport at noon, and the second in Colchester at 8 p. m., in Grange hall.

Several rallies in New London county during the week will bring to the county a number of prominent speakers On Thursday evening in New London a republican rally will be addressed by Assistant U. S. District Attorney George H. Cohen of Hartford, Edwin L. Donnelly of Willimantic and Congressman Richard P. Freeman.

What will probably prove to be the outstanding rally of the week will be that scheduled for the Norwich town hall at 8:15 p. m., on Saturday, when Mrs. Susanne Silvercruys Farnam of New Haven, a native of Belgium, having personal knowledge of the relief work done by Herbert Hoover, will speak. Mrs. Farnam is a sculptress of note and made the bust of Mr. Hoover which was unveiled this year at the dedication of the Louvain library in Belgium. She witnessed the havoc wrought by the war in her native country and, with Cardinal Mercier, became an enthusiastic admirer of Mr. Hoover.

The Colchester rally on Saturday night in Grange hall will find as speakers State Treasurer Rogers, Stanley Karpinski, New Britain, and Ernest C. Carpenter, New Haven.

NEW A B TOLL SERVICE FROM NORWICH TO MOOSUP

Effective Sunday morning, October 28, A B toll service is available between Moosup and Norwich. This is the same class of service now available between Moosup and Danielson, in which the call (station to station only) is completed by the local operator. This service will be much faster, since the local operator will complete the call, and it will not be necessary to call toll line.

Gave Haloween Party

An enjoyable Halloween party was given Saturday evening at the home of Miss Mildred Langlois of 22 Cliff street, the twenty-five present including guests from Westerly, R. I., New London, and Jewett City. The affair was a costume party and the prize for the best mannequin went to Miss Florence Wright, who wore an old fashioned costume. There were piano solos by Miss Catherine McVeigh, and dancing exhibitions by Miss Gayle Murphy, Tommy Rudd and Harry Lyman of Westerly. Dainty refreshments were served.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

UNITED METAL MANUFACTURING CO. IS TO BE CONTINUED IN NORWICH

Announcement of the filing with the secretary of state of a certificate of incorporation of the United Metal Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Norwich, a corporation for manufacturing and selling metal products, reveals that this industry is to be saved to Norwich. For over a decade it has been one of the thriving manufacturing plants of the town, with the late Charles E. Wells as its general manager, but after his death in April, 1927, the prospect of continuance of the concern became precarious, but business men of the city interested themselves in saving the concern for Norwich and the business was continued from June 1, 1927 by N. A. Gibbs, the cashier of the Thames National bank, as liquidating trustee, with the assistance of an advisory board, which consisted of Robert W. Perkins, James E. McCormick and Samuel Goldberg of this city, James T. Patterson of Bridgeport and S. F. Griffin of Waterbury. The factory in Thamesville has normally given employment to about 70 men.

The industry will be continued here, it has been learned by the new corporation of which the incorporators are Robert W. Perkins, Nathan A. Gibbs and Arthur M. Brown. Its authorized capital is $60,000 preferred stock and 2,100 shares of no par value.

Arrangements have been made for this new Connecticut corporation to take over the property very shortly.

On Democratic Payroll

According to press reports four men in Connecticut were paid $420 each by the democratic national committee as their week's salary starting Oct. 8. They are:

Fred R. Williams, 23 Whittlesey steret, New London; James P. Donohue, 40 Scoville street, Waterbury; Henry J. Tierney, New Haven; Thomas McNally, 35 Stone street, Danbury.

The New Londoner who seems to be in the pay of the democratic national committee is said to be the traveling business agent of the Carpenters and Joiners union.

Parts in College Play

Barbara Pollard '31, of Willimantic, and Anna Coleman, '31, of Norwich have parts at Connecticut college in the French play, Barbier de Seville, by Beaumarchais, which is to be presented under the auspices of the French club in December in the college gymnasium.

POETRY

To a Connecticut Village

I like the interlacing of white roads,
And the swift crystal of a brook at play,
Gold-splashed with sun; it twinkles and it sings
Its secret lay.

Your apple-trees in May are brushed with rose,
And if one comes upon them unawares
Climbing the emerald of a sharp green hill,
They look like white-clad children on the stairs.

In summer, scudding clouds trail opal scarfs
Behind your hills against a shimmering sky,
Their shadows gulf your valls with emerald deeps
In passing by.

I've known your solid farms and cornfields tall,
And seen the giant maples by the way,
Their deep-green breadth stirred lightly by the breeze
Of August day.

I've loved the summer in your broad farm fields
The splendor of its dwelling there I know,
And yet I long to see one of your lanes
Hushed deep with snow.

And snow upon the steep roof of some house,
And sparkling sweeps; the west a winter gold,
Soft whiteness in the maple's sturdy arms,
Fold upon fold.

—Meredyth Gooch Whiting, in "Anthology of Junior League Poetry."

Home! Sweet Home!

"Home! Sweet Home!" I have listened long
To the pleasant strains of the maiden's song.
Till all around me the soft air thrills
With a joyous sound, as of gushing rills;
Gayly she sings in her father's halls,
And I hear her voice as it floats and falls.
And mingled with it are tones of mirth
From a gathered group by a lighted hearth.

"Home, Sweet Home!" 'Tis a simple song,
But it fetters the weak and subdues the strong;
And evermore will its flute-notes low
With the sweeping sound of the wind-harp flow.

—Belle Bush, in "Voices of the Morning."

HUGHES REQUESTS NOMINEE SMITH TO BE MORE EXPLICIT

Mr. Hughes Calls Upon Smith to Say Definitely Whether He Favors Governmental Operation of Commercial Business—Refers to Handling of Farm Products and Operation of Hydro-Electrical Plants—Questions Smith's Prohibition Policy—Believes Hoover the Better Qualified to Deal With Presidential Problems.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 30—(AP)—Charles E. Hughes, bringing his campaign for Herbert Hoover into New England tonight, asserted in a broadcast address that a republican administration would not only assure maintenance of the protective tariff and an economical administration, but would also protect the country "against the invasion of disastrous policies."

"Governor Smith endorses policies," said Mr. Hughes, "if I understand him aright, which would introduce government into business on a large scale with a vast increase of bureaucrats."

The former secretary of state then declared that he had not heard any answer to "certain definite questions" which the speaker had recently put to Governor Smith on farm relief.

Farm Relief

"I asked, with respect to the McNary-Haugen bill," he continued, "is Governor Smith for the imposition of the equalization fee by the government? Does he not know that it is a component and necessary part of that plan that the government must buy and sell or appoint agents to buy and sell farm products on behalf of the government so as to make the equalization fee effective? If he does not know that, will he explain how the scheme would operate otherwise? If he does know that, is he for it?

"Now that is a simple question which tests what he means when he says that he is for something 'in principle.' I have not heard any answer. If it is his plan to have the government introduced into this enterprise, is it not clear that this is the most gigantic program of government in commercial business ever proposed in this country? And as I have said, both the west and the east are entitled to know where the governor stands on this question. If he does not know where he stands, then I suppose that would explain why he has said that he would appoint a commission."

Power Question

Turning to the question of power, Mr. Hughes asserted that Governor Smith had not stated, "despite his constant protestations of entire candor on the platform, in language that anybody can understand," whether he favored government operation of hydro-electrical plants. "There is no issue on government control between him and Mr. Hoover," said Mr. Hughes. "Is Governor Smith in favor of the building by the government of transmission lines and distributing electrical power? Does he propose that the government should undertake the generation and sale and distribution of power? If so, and he could have his way, we should have to contemplate a vast governmental business in the future with new bureaus and a host of offices with all the difficulties which adhere in governmental business administration.

"Now if Governor Smith does not favor the government going into the business of operation, then let him say so distinctly and he and Mr. Hoover will be found much closer together."

Prohibition

Reiterating that he did not consider prohibition a real issue in the campaign, Mr. Hughes recalled that in a recent campaign speech he had stated "certain inescapable facts."

"Governor Smith has made a long speech in an attempted answer," he continued. "But he has not met or questioned one of these facts. He has not questioned that the 18th amendment is a part of the constitution and that it can be changed only by the vote of 36 states. He has not questioned that congress cannot authorize that which the constitution expressly forbids.

"Governor Smith says he will appeal to the people," said Mr. Hughes. "That is a good method, but in this case he will be dealing with the federal constitution which requires the action of 36 states. That is quite different from an appeal to the people with respect to legislation or even the constitution of a state.

"If it is not a sham battle over prohibition," he asked, "why is Governor Smith not asking the people to elect a congress favorable to his liquor program? Why does he state that the democratic candidates for congress are free to run as dry, if they see fit?

"Governor Smith tells us he has telegraphed to members of congress to ascertain whether they are with him in his tariff policy. If this is not a sham battle over prohibition, why has he not telegraphed the democratic members of congress to find out whether they are with him in his proposals as to prohibition? If this is not a sham battle, why are the democratic leaders in the south and west advising their followers that Governor Smith will be helpless to accomplish what he advocates? If this is not a sham battle why are the majority of the democratic candidates for the house and senate running on a platform pledging themselves to support the 18th amendment and the Volstead act?"

Mr. Hughes said his answer to Governor Smith's question as to whether he—Hughes—was satisfied with present conditions was "most decidedly,—no. I am not satisfied."

"But I must add," he continued, "that I do not wish to see matters made worse and that I believe that would be the result of his (Smith's) election. He would not change the constitution or the laws, but I believe there would ensue far greater demoralization than we have had and that the difficulties of obtaining even the measure of enforcement that we now have would be far greater."

With Governor Smith in the presidency, Mr. Hughes declared, "the country would not believe that the prohibition policy was being fairly and honestly tested" and enforcement under a Smith administration "certainly would not be any easier."

"Governor Smith might raise his hand to heaven and swear that he was trying to enforce the prohibitory law," said Mr. Hughes, "but the country would not accept any performance by his administration as an adequate test.

Democratic Tariff Position

Mr. Hughes gave considerable time to a discussion of the democratic tariff position, asserting that the party had always pledged fairness to all interests, but that "we do not trust their opinion upon what is fair."

"Their past performance," he said, "have shown a faulty judgment. "Who is to determine what is fair to all interests—those who believe in the policy of a protective tariff or those who do not? The ideas of the democratic party as to fairness to all interests, and legitimate protection of industry and agriculture were embodied in the Underwood bill. The democratic party has not known in the past what measure of protection was necessary for the safeguarding of American interests, and we have no sufficient evidence that they have yet learned.

"Governor Smith says the democratic party will not approve any changes which will interfere with 'American standards of living and level of wages.' That is precisely what the democratic party has always promised, but its record shows that it does not know how to maintain the American standard of living and level of wages. How can you trust the application of the principle of protection to those who have never believed in it?"

Referring to Governor Smith's receipt of telegrams from members of congress giving assurance of support of the democratic candidate's tariff position, Mr. Hughes said:

"The significant thing about that statement is that Governor Smith found it necessary to ask for assurance. You do not have to ask for assurance from the republican members of congress that they will support the policy of protection.

"Nor do we know precisely what these assurances are which Governor Smith has received. I should like to cross examine some of these democratic members of congress who have telegraphed Governor Smith and find out just where they stand. I think we should find that their principles are precisely what they have been before."

On the subject of government economy, Mr. Hughes declared that "an executive who is a free spender and who treats with contempt such faithful servants as General Lord could not be depended upon to secure an economical administration."

Qualifications for Presidency

"If there were nothing else in this campaign," he added, "I should consider this reason enough not to put Governor Smith in office. He does not present such striking qualifications for the office of president of the United States that we should take any risk in the administration of the fiscal affairs of the government. These are soundly administered today and under Mr. Hoover they will continue to be soundly administered to the great advantage of every part of our country. Why should there be a change?"

The test of an economic administration, Mr. Hughes declared, was "is its success in meeting proper demands without inordinate outlays."

"Whatever explanation Governor Smith may have, and I have not found him to be accurate and satisfactory in his financial criticisms and explanations, the results of his administration in New York do not recommend him as qualified to be put in charge of the financial administration of the federal government."

Discussing in conclusion the question of the qualifications of the two candidates, Mr. Hughes said there seemed to be "but little room for hesitation."

"I have been much entertained," he continued, "by the arguments which have been used in the attempt to lift Governor Smith into the same class with Mr. Hoover. x x x

"It is nothing against Governor Smith as a citizen or as a New Yorker that he has had little or no occasion to study the problems of our national life. In the range of his activities as governor he has hardly touched the important difficulties which he would have to face as president. I do not think he knows much about them."

"Qualifications for our highest office are not produced over night," he concluded. "I should be the last to set store by mere knowledge of books or by the detachment of those who know very little of the way in which our government functions. Mr. Hoover is not of the detached, academic class. He is the most practical of men."

BORAH DISAGREES WITH BOTH HOOVER AND SMITH

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 30—(AP)—Discussing the power question for the first time in a campaign speech, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho tonight outlined his own position on government control of the nation's power resources and assailed the stand of Governor Smith on the issue.

Declaring that he did not agree with either Herbert Hoover or the democratic presidential nominee in their views on the power question, the senator said that "Governor Smith's proposition of government ownership and private distribution of electrical energy does not cover the power problem." The democratic candidate's views, he added, would not provide for any more government control of power than exists under the present federal water power act.

Mr. Borah declared his own position was "that it must be either complete government ownership, control, operation and distribution, or it must be private ownership with complete regulation and control upon the part of the state or the government." He added that in the campaign he had not been interested in the power issue "as a partisan" because he was not in agreement with the views of either candidate.

Emphasizing that he was opposed to "government in business," the Idahoan declared that power sites are "natural monopolies and belong to the public."

Robt. Lansing Died From Heart Attack

Retired From Wilson Cabinet in 1920, After Having Been Rebuked by the President.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—(AP)—Robert Lansing, secretary of state under Woodrow Wilson during the entire period of America's participation in the World war, died at his home here today, the victim of a heart attack.

The former secretary, who resigned from the cabinet after a rebuke from Mr. Wilson, had been ill for about four weeks. He died at 4:20 o'clock this afternoon, at his home on 18th street. Mrs. Lansing and two sisters, Misses Kate and Emma, were at the bedside.

It was not generally known that Mr. Lansing, who had retired markedly from the public eye in recent months, was in a critical condition, although he had been semi-conscious for three days. Dr. Sterling Ruffin, his physician, said that death was due to myocarditis and that Mr. Lansing had become acutely ill about four weeks ago, after his return from his summer home at Henderson Harbor, N. Y. The physician added that the former secretary had suffered from the ailment for several years but that it had not become alarming until the attack which brought about his death.

No arrangements had been made early tonight for Mr. Lansing's funeral.

Mr. Lansing's death marked the passing of the third of the trio who figured so prominently in American international policies prior to and during the war, President Wilson and William J. Bryan, the predecessor of Mr. Lansing as head of the state department, having preceded him.

Like Mr. Lansing, Mr. Bryan also had retired from the Wilson cabinet because of differences with his chief. Mr. Bryan objected to the Wilson foreign policies, while Mr. Lansing ostensibly incurred the president's disfavor because he called cabinet meetings while the war president was ill.

Mr. Lansing was 64 years old at the time of his death. He was born at Watertown, N. Y., and entered the state department in 1914 as a counsellor, but before this he had represented the United States on various arbitration treaties for more than 20 years. He was a graduate of Amherst and a lawyer by profession.

REV. STRATON CHALLENGES GOV. RITCHIE TO DEBATE

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The Rev. John Roach Straton, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church of New York, a foe of Governor Alfred E. Smith, tonight issued an open letter challenge to Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland to debate the question of the "fitness of Governor Smith to become president of the United States."

Dr. Straton said he objected to the "slighting references" of Governor Ritchie to "Bishop Cannon, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt and myself in your address at Baltimore Monday night preceding the wild harangue of Candidate Alfred E. Smith."

Governor Ritchie in making reference to Dr. Straton said:

"I hope he loves his God as much as he does his publicity."

Dr. Straton proposed that the debate be held in Baltimore Monday night, November 5th the question to be as follows:

"Resolved: That in the light of his obvious lawless spirit and his known records of opposition to righteous law and the greatest moral reform movements of our times, Alfred E. Smith is not a safe, fit and proper man to elect to the presidency of this republic."

MISS OLIVELIO LOST $150,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30—(AP)—Miss Isebella Olivelio, 25-year-old Atlantic City girl, lost her $150,000 breach of promise suit against Ray Keech, automobile spead king, when a jury of men today returned a verdict in favor of Keech.

Miss Olivelio charged that Keech was the father of her four-year-old child and that he had several times promised to marry her while posing as an unmarried man.

The alleged courtship with Miss Olivelio was in 1924 when Keech was a truck driver in Pleasantville, N. J., earning $40 a week. Keech made a general denial of the charges and said his worldly possessions amounted to about $500.

Mrs. Keech, testifying for her husband, said Miss Olivelio knew her husband was married and once told her: "I love your husband." Mrs. Anna Wolbert of Atlantic City testified she once heard Miss Olivelio say another man was the father of her child.

BOTH PARTIES CONFIDENT OF VICTORY IN BAY STATE

BOSTON, Oct. 30—(AP)—With the fireworks about over, Massachusetts is rumbling with impatience to be at the business of balloting. It has given rousing receptions in turn to Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith, heard them out on the campaign issues, flocked to the rostrums of speakers of lesser magnitude and now that it is left to its own devices for a time seems amply ready to write its decision.

Although that verdict is locked in the many minds of the electorate, there is no uncertainty about it at party headquarters. Hoover managers are confident that Massachusetts will stay republican and the Smith forces are equally sure that this is a democratic year. Nevertheless, being alive to the fact that this campaign is unlike others of the past, both sides are busy these last days at organization tasks on the theory that it is safest to fight all the way.

COVERED 600 MILES OF A PROJECTED 23,000-MILE FLIGHT

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 30—(AP)—The airplane, "Spirit of Australia," piloted by Capt. Frank Hurley, landed at Broken Hill, N. S. W., today, having covered 600 miles of a projected 23,000-mile flight from Sydney to England and back.

The flight will be resumed at daybreak on a direct course to Windham, Western Australia. Captain Hurley, an Australian explorer, is accompanied by Flying Officer Moth. The Spirit of Australia is a sister plane to Colonel Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis.

Horrible Death Of Attractive Woman

Body Found Badly Burned in Furnace Room of Police Station at Lake Bluff, Ill.

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., Oct. 30—(AP)—Miss Freda Kmak, 29, attractive sales woman for a Chicago publishing company, was found today in the furnace room of the Lake Bluff police station, apparently either the victim of an assailant who tried to burn her alive in the boiler room of the city hall or the dupe of hallucinations which caused her to inflict the injuries on herself.

The girl was found by the janitor huddled beside the furnace, her body stripped of clothing, and her arms and legs burned to the bone.

Police formed a theory that she had been the victim of an assault and that her assailant had attempted to force her body into the furnace while she was unconscious.

A. J. Rissinger, who treated her at a Lake Forest hospital, however, said that her half lucid mutterings indicated she had been a student of spiritualism and advanced psychology and that she had tried to burn herself. Dr. Rissinger added that he did not believe she could have inflicted such serious burns of her own will. He said she had not been criminally assaulted. He added that she probably would die of her injuries.

Miss Knaak resided with her widowed mother, Mrs. T. L. Knaak, a sister and three brothers at Deerfield, Ill., about 25 miles northwest of Chicago. She was a student at the University of Chicago and after her graduation became a teacher in primary schools in Highwood and Waukegan, Ill., in the North Shore district of Chicago. Last May she resigned and was employed as a sales woman by the F. E. Compton Publishing company of Chicago.

Yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock she left her home to attend a Chicago sales meeting. Publishing company officials said she left for home at 6:15 last night. No one has been found who saw her after that hour and the police are working on the theory that she left a North Shore train at Lake Bluff and was waylaid on her way home.

There is no night police force in Lake Bluff and the village hall is closed at night. Police believe Miss Knaak was dragged into the basement by one or more assailants and that her attackers burned her clothing in the furnace and after attempting to attack the young woman, tried to force her body into the furnace while she was unconscious, but failed in the attempt.

The janitor who found her identified her by means of a letter in a purse. The purse and a pair of shoes were her only belongings that were not burned.

Her three brothers hurried to the Lake Forest hospital but could throw no light on the mystery. They said the girl had no love affairs and when not at work spent most of her time quietly at home.

GOV. TRUMBULL COMPARES FINANCES OF N. Y. AND CONN.

NAUGATUCK, Conn., Oct. 30—(AP)—Comparing the difference in the method of administration of state government in Connecticut and in New York, Gov. John H. Trumbull, in an address here tonight declared that expenditures and debt in the state of New York had caused a tremendous increase in the tax burden in that state and that Connecticut today was practically out of debt.

The governor's talk was in the nature of a reply to challenges he said were made by democratic speakers who recently attacked previous statements made by him in comparing New York and Connecticut methods of state financial administration. He took his figures from the 1928 records of the national industrial conference board.

"In summing up the New York situation, the report states that while a considerable portion of increase in public expenditures, both in the state and in the local governments might be allowed as a normal growth of population and resources, the remaining 60-odd per cent of the increase between 1917 and 1925 must be attributed to an additional qualitative increase and expansion of governmental functions and to possible elements of extravagance and inefficiency in the conduct of governmental functions," the governor spoke.

"This does not seem to agree in mind with the oft-boasted of and alleged efficiency of the governor of New York in his widely publicized consolidation of departments in the state government. And perhaps the reference to extravagance and inefficiency might have some slight reference to Tammany Hall in New York."

RECOMMENDED WAGE INCREASE FOR RAILROAD EMPLOYES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Increased wages for 66,000 employes of western railroads were recommended to President Coolidge today by an emergency board, headed by James R. Garfield, appointed to investigate a controversy which has threatened a strike in the territory. The board, whose findings will go to the railroad executives and unions concerned, suggested an alternative method of awarding the wage increase and recommended that the additional pay be granted retroactively, effective May 1, 1928.

In explaining its findings, the board suggested that a six and one-half per cent. increase for conductors, brakemen, yardmen, firemen and baggagemen in western territory would be justified, if put into effect without any change in the present rules governing working service. At the same time the railroads have tendered a seven and one-half per cent. increase, provided that the unions concerned will agree to the elimination of wage contract provisions which hinder the operation of trains with double-engines and which limit the tonnage of freight allowed on a single train.

IMPROVEMENT IN IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Continued improvement in the iron and steel industry was reflected today in the United States Steel Corporation's third quarter earnings report showing total earnings of $53,145,676, after expenses and taxes, as compared with $46,932,956 for the second quarter, and net income of $34,275,458 against $30,488,001 in the preceding quarter. Total earnings in the third quarter of 1927 were $41,823,321 and net income $26,077,126.

GRAF ZEPPELIN SPEEDS ALONG IN FAIR WEATHER

It is Calculated That if Favorable Weather Continues the Airship Will Arrive Home This Evening—Whether It Will Land at That Time or Await Daylight on Thursday Depends on Weather Conditions—The Ship is Averaging About 75 Miles an Hour and All's Well—German Authorities Are Endeavoring to Determine Status of Stowaway Terhune.

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Graf Zeppelin last night was well along on the second half of her homeward flight from Lakehurst, N. J., to Friedrichshafen, Germany.

A series of radio messages to the Associated Press, from masters of steamships which had sighted her, sent at interval from early afternoon to nightfall over the North Atlantic, charted her course accurately for the first time since she left the shores of the United States early Monday morning.

The steamships were in mid-Atlantic, the first about 730 miles from Cape Race, N. F., and the last about 700 miles from Fastnet, Ireland.

At Friedrichshafen, where crowds were assembling, experts were of the opinion that with continued favorable conditions the dirigible might arrive this evening, with the record of the first round trip commercial crossing of the Atlantic by air behind her.

Although the steamship positions placed the Zeppelin on a parallel with southern Ireland, it was thought she might bend her course more to the southward and that southwestern England or even France might be her first European landfall.

The ship captains were unanimous in reporting good weather conditions with moderate to strong winds varying from south to west southwest. The meteorologist of the British air ministry predicted strong northwest winds over the eastern Atlantic throughout the night.

German experts estimated that the Graf Zeppelin had covered 2,800 miles in her first 34 hours of flight. This compared with 1900 miles covered in the same number of hours during her test flight over Europe. A part of this distance had been used to avoid a storm. It appeared that the Zeppelin had negotiated slightly more than 2,000 miles on the Great Circle route from Lakehurst at 2:15 p. m. Tuesday and that about 1800 miles remained between her and her hangar.

700 MILES SOUTHWEST OF FASTNET, IRELAND

LONDON, Oct. 31—(AP)—(Wednesday)—A radio report to the Associated Press, relayed by the British steamship Ausonia from the Dutch steamer Westerdijk said that the Graf Zeppelin had passed over at 12:15 a. m., G. M. T. (7:15 p. m. eastern standard time).

The position of the Westerdijk was given as 48.47 north latitude, 22.03 west longitude, or about 700 miles southwest of Fastnet, Ireland. The captain of the Dutch steamer reported the dirigible was steering about southeast true. The north wind was of moderate force and the weather fair.

If the position of the Graf Zeppelin given by the steamer Westerdijk was correct, the dirigible had developed unusual speed during the last few hours and had swung sharply to the southeast.

Earlier reports from steamships had placed her from 1200 to 1000 miles due west of Fastnet and following closely parallel 52 north latitude. The course given by the Westerdijk would bring her to the Bay of Biscay with landfall either in southern France or northern Spain.

PREPARING FOR ARRIVAL OF THE GRAF ZEPPELIN

FREDERICKSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 30—(AP)—With the welcome information this evening that the Graf Zeppelin was more than halfway across the Atlantic on her homing flight and had entered a zone of fine weather, the spirits of the German public rose perceptibly. The reports of the earlier part of the flight with tales of stormy weather had caused some misgivings.

It was estimated that the dirigible up to noon, eastern standard time, had covered about 2,800 miles in 34 flying hours. Not all of this was on a direct course, however, for Dr. Hugo Eckener, had apparently been forced to guide the great airship around a storm.

It was calculated that if the weather continues fine, the airship may be expected to complete its first round trip commercial crossing of the Atlantic by air tomorrow evening. Whether it will land here at that time or await daylight on Thursday depends on weather conditions.

Once more great activity prevails at the Zeppelin works where preparations are being rushed for the arrival of its greatest product. Precautions are being taken for the safety of the passengers of the dirigible who might be overwhelmed by the impetuous enthusiasm of the crowds already assembling. It was thought that even more persons will be on hand to welcome the airship than had assembled to see the takeoff. The hotels are already crowded. Reservations have been made for many government officials including the minister of transportation and the president of the state of Wurttemberg.

The police and German bureaucracy have been struggling to determine the status of Clarence Terhune, the youth who slipped aboard the dirigible at Lakehurst without permission or passport. Preliminary discussions have decided that he cannot be indicted for an attempt to defraud the Zeppelin company of fare since Dr. Eckener had announced before the takeoff that he could accept no more paying passengers.

He may even escape a fine of $5 for entering the country without a passport. United States Consul John D. Kehl of Stuttgart is coming here tomorrow and if Dr. Eckener gives a favorable report of the youth, the consul will furnish him with such papers as are necessary.

This report confirms earlier radio messages from steamships showing that the dirigible had changed its course from due east to southeast. The new course would have brought her near the position reported by the steamship Westerdijk at 7:15 p. m. E. S. T.

ELECTION BOARD GUILTY MALFEASANCE IN OFFICE

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Cuyahoga county's board of elections today was summarily dismissed for malfeasance in office.

Almost on the eve of the November 6 election, Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, as the state supervisor of elections, ordered the entire board, the head of the election machinery of Ohio's largest county, removed because of irregularities in the August 14 primary.

Brown's action followed the recommendation of a special grand jury, personally conducted by Attorney General Edward C. Turner at the instruction of Governor A. V. Donahey.

The charges resulted from the board's alleged failure to heed evidence of "crime, fraud, irregularity and nonperformance of duty by election officials," the grand jury found evidence of ballot stuffing, forgery, improper certification of the nomination of one republican candidate and large errors in the tally sheets of the August primary.

HOOVER TO GO WEST CONFIDENT OF ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30— (AP) — With the air filled with the clamor of the last week of the campaign, Herbert Hoover, in characteristic fashion, worked quietly today at his general headquarters at his S street home, welding into shape four political shots which he will hurl into the enemy ranks as he travels westward to cast his vote on Nov. 6 at Stanford university in California.

For all intents and purposes, Mr. Hoover's activities in Washington are almost ended so far as the 1928 campaign is concerned, although his personal headquarters will remain open until the night before election, with James Francis Burke, general counsel of the republican national committee, in charge.

Mr. Hoover is leaving for the west Thursday confident that he will return here to be inaugurated as president on March 4.

WORKING FOR NEGRO VOTE FOR STATE SEN WALCOTT

HARTFORD, Oct. 30.—(AP)—A. C. Logan, secretary of the Mosaic templars of America and whose home is in Little Rock, Ark., will "stump" the state for State Senator Frederic C. Walcott in an effort to gather the Negro vote "for one who showed his kindness to him and his family 20 years ago." At that time Senator Walcott aided materially to put young Logan through college and also helped to send his brother, Rayford W. Logan to Williams college, Williamstown, Mass.

Mr. Logan's plan is to address meetings of Negro voters throughout the state and to tell the people the story of the generosity shown to him and his family. He came here after learning ten days ago in the papers of Senator Walcott's candidacy. He is associated with a noted Negro lawyer in Little Rock.

GOV. SMITH PREPARING FOR CLIMAX OF HIS CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—(AP)—Removed for a time from the shouts of the thousands upon thousands who welcomed him along a route which zig-zagged for 11,000 miles through the heart of the nation, Gov. Alfred E. Smith spent today getting ready for the intensive speaking drive with which he will climax his campaign.

The governor's program calls for an invasion of New Jersey tomorrow with a speech at Newark that night. This is one of the cities visited by his rival, Herbert Hoover, in his bid for the Atlantic seaboard vote.

What the democratic candidate will discuss has not been disclosed. Some weeks ago he announced he proposed to take up the subject of labor. Inasmuch as he has but three addresses remaining, and he has said that New York state issues will be tackled in the Brooklyn speech Friday night, it is regarded as possible that labor may be the theme of the Newark address.

NON-RIGID DIRIGIBLE LANDED ON WATER

GRANITE CITY, Ill., Oct. 30—(AP)—The first successful landing of a lighter-than-air aircraft on water was accomplished on Horseshoe Lake near here today by army officers from Scott field, Illinois, who brought the TC-5, a non-rigid dirigible, to the surface of the water and performed a mock rescue of a balloonist whose balloon, theoretically, had fallen into the water.

The feat was arranged by Scott field officials and Paramount News Reel. The ship was in command of Lieut. Ed H. White of Scott field and Lieut. Ralph E. Holmes was the "rescued" balloonist. A rubber air-inflated boat was thrown to Holmes and a few minutes later the dirigible came to rest on the lake, supported by pontoons. Holmes rowed to the ship and was taken aboard, after which the dirigible rose and flew to Scott field.

17-YEAR-OLD BOY MAKING TRANS-CONTINENTAL FLIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30—(AP)—Richard E. James, 17, of New York hopped off from Mills field here this afternoon for Sacramento on the first leg of a flight which he expects to end at New York. James said he would try for a $1,000 prize offered by the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation for the first transcontinental flight by a person under 18 years of age. He may stop as often as he wishes.

James left here at 1:30 p. m.

WILLIMANTIC SILK CO. TO START WITHIN TEN DAYS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 30—The organization of the Willimantic Silk, Inc., has been completed and this city's newest acquisition along industrial lines will go into operation within ten days in a section of the Quidnick-Windham plant, now owned by the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company. The officers of the concern are: Max Stein, president; Nathan Stein, vice president; Charles Morante, secretary and treasurer. It is expected that they will take up their residence here. The office of the new plant at the No. 2 mill of the plant will be open Thursday morning at 9 o'clock to receive employment applications, which will be confined to persons who have had experience in the silk industry for the time being. The list of applications includes those of experience in this business whose names appear in the registered list of about 1,000 now on file at the chamber of commerce. The opening of the new plant comes as the result of exhaustive negotiations extending over a period of several weeks by the new industries committee of the chamber of commerce working with Messrs Walter Bradley, John F. Ahern and Porter, representing the lighting company. Messrs Stein and Corn are associates in the operation of a successful manufacturing business of broad silks at the present time in another city.

New type looms are to make up the equipment for the new mill and the electrical contractor began the work today of preparing the installation of power machinery. The first carload of looms is scheduled to arrive here the latter part of the week and work will be started as soon as the machines are installed.

The entire No. 2 mill building of the plant has been contracted for by the owners, giving assurance of sufficient room for expansion. The heating plant is in operation and power for operating will be electrical. The broad silks produced by Willimantic Silk, Inc., finds a ready market through the New York office of Domestic Silks, Inc., located at 162 Madison avenue. This sales agency has for the past few years sold in volumes far in excess of the ability of Messrs Corn and Stein to produce, this vagrancy in the supply and demand leading to the establishment of the local plant to manufacture such of the product that was given out to jobbers in the past. In a statement made today by Mr. Stein, president of the new company, he said that Willimantic Silk, Inc., was prepared to achieve success and to provide a worthy addition to the local list of industries. He expressed appreciation of the courtesy, friendliness and spirit of co-operation received from business groups and the townspeople in general and added that he was confident that a first class group of employes could be secured.

INCORPORATION PAPERS FILED FOR NEW SCREEN CO.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 30—The incorporation papers for the Willimantic Metal Screens, Inc., the second new industry acquired by Willimantic as a definite proposition this week, were filed with the secretary of state in Hartford this afternoon and with the issuance of the certificate of incorporation within a few days the stockholders will meet to choose a board of directors and elect officers. Those signing the articles of incorporation by appointment of the subscribers to the stock were: Kenneth N. Hillhouse, Willard H. Smith, James B. Fullerton and Frank M. Lincoln and J. M. Trombley, inventor of the new screen to be manufactured. A list of suggested directors will be drawn up by a committee comprising K. N. Hillhouse, Attorney E. Frank Bugbee and J. M. Trombley. The order for specially built machinery to make this new product will be placed immediately after the next meeting of the stockholders. It will take some six weeks to make this machinery, indicating that operations will start within two months. The new plant will be located in the former S. C. S. Box company building on Moulton's court. Mr. Trombley reports that many lucrative orders are already listed and assurance is given of steady supply of orders to keep the plant in continuous operation.

MANY TOWNS HAVE CONTESTS FOR JUDGE OF PROBATE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 30—The Windham-Scotland district will be the scene of the battle royal in the coming elections in a group of a dozen or so border towns, in the contest for judge of probate. In these 12 towns there will be but three contests for this office, the democrats having made no nominations in two and the republicans pairing off with the democrats in two others. The democrats endorsed the republican nominees in three towns while in still another the democratic candidate was endorsed by the republicans.

The outstanding contest will be in the Windham-Scotland district where Judge Otto B. Robinson, republican, seeks re-election with Valentine L. Murphy, democrat, as his opponent. Other contests will take place in Mansfield and Coventry. In Mansfield, Judge Lewellyn J. Storrs, republican and present incumbent of the office, will meet with opposition from Philip S. Hills, democrat and at Coventry Judge Eugene W. Lathmer, republican incumbent will have Herman LeDoyt, democrat, as his opponent. Ray P. Fuller, republican candidate for judge of probate in Hampton will not have any opposition, the democrats having failed to nominate. A similar situation prevails in Willington where George P. Bugbee is republican candidate. J. White Sumner, democrat and incumbent of the office for several years, will be without opposition in the probate district formed by the towns of Andover, Columbia and Bolton. The Chaplin democrats endorsed Burton M. Welch, republican nominee and those of Lebanon did likewise for George H. Briggs, republican candidate, and for Leon G. Rathbone, republican candidate in Hebron. The custom of the past several years of endorsing James E. A. Knowlton, democratic incumbent of the office of judge of probate in Ashford prevailed again this year.

LOCAL PEOPLE INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 30—Postmaster and Mrs. Frank M. Smith of this city sustained painful injuries about 10 o'clock this morning in West Springfield, Mass., when their Maxwell sedan figured in a head-on collision with a car operated by Roland D. Moriarty of Chicopee, Mass. Mrs. Ida L. Prentiss of Antrim, N. H., formerly of this city and third occupant in the Smith car, was seriously hurt and taken to the Wesson Memorial hospital at Springfield, while a fourth passenger Miss Philene E. Pierce of 255 New Britain avenue, Hartford, who was going to Mrs. Prentiss' home in Antrim for a visit, was also hurt. Moriarty escaped practically uninjured. Both cars were badly damaged. The accident occurred on Riverdale street, information being that Moriarty turned out to pass a truck and brought his car directly in front of the Smith machine. The local car was virtually reduced to junk. Postmaster Smith sustained severe lacerations on the head, abrasions on the left ear and knee and bad cuts on the fingers of his left hand. Mrs. Smith was lacerated on the forehead, sustained a severe bruise on the cheek and strained a ligament of the neck. Mrs. Prentiss is suffering from a scalp wound five inches in length and requiring several stitches to close, and a badly cut knee. It was feared that she was suffering from internal injuries. Miss Pierce, who sustained a fractured index finger of the left hand and shock, is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Smith. She is connected with the state motor vehicle department in Hartford.

J. H. HURLEY NEW CHAIRMAN OF RETAIL MERCHANTS BUREAU

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 30—At the annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' bureau held in the chamber of commerce rooms this morning, James H. Hurley, prominent veteran merchant, was unanimously elected chairman. Other officers elected for the year are: P. D. Donahue, vice chairman; Frederick J. Williams, treasurer and Earl J. Arnold, secretary. A rising vote of thanks was extended the retiring officers, Chairman Robert T. Newton and Walter S. Batrnes, secretary-treasurer. The committee on Christmas act was reported, including the decorations committee, Nelson A. Daniels, chairman and the advertising committee, James B. Fullerton, chairman. Indication was given in these reports that the merchants are to enter into active co-operation to make the Christmas season bigger and better than any previous year. It was voted to start the opening of stores evenings during the Christmas season on Thursday evening, December 20. The matter of closing the stores on Armistice day was taken up and final action will be taken at a meeting to be held next Monday morning, to allow time to secure data as to what other cities in eastern Connecticut are planning to do on this matter.

SUIT FOR $15,000 BROUGHT AGAINST EDWARD A. WINTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 30—Civil suit, claiming damages of $15,000, has been instituted by Mrs. Jennie L. Farnum of Worcester, Mass., formerly of this city, as administrator of the estate of the late George L. Wheeler of this city against Edward A. Winter. The suit provides for the recovery of property of the estate which the plaintiff claims is unlawfully held by the defendant. The case is set for the first Tuesday in November in the Windham county superior court. The allegation is that the deceased, George L. Wheeler was 86 years of age and by reason of his infirmities, old age and ill health, was unfit to transact his business during the last year of his life. As a result of this he was easily influenced and susceptible to the defendant's desires. The complaint states that in February, 1928, the deceased, then living, possessed 17 shares of Union Pacific railroad stock worth $1,500 and 55 shares of American Telephone & Telegraph company stock worth $11,500, which the defendant now holds for his own use. It is the rightful property of the estate. Mr. Wheeler died on May 4, 1928, and his will was duly approved and admitted in the Windham probate court in June, 1928, when Mrs. Farnum was appointed administrator. A previous demand made on the defendant for the return of the estate was refused, according to the complaint.

FUNERAL

Miss Ellen Keating

The funeral services for Miss Ellen Keating were held this morning from the home, 30 Manners avenue with a solemn high mass of requiem in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Charles M. Kelly was celebrant; Rev. Francis Duch, deacon and Rev. Henry E. Quinn, subdeacon. Mrs. E. R. Burlelance presided at the organ and solos were rendered by Miss L. Monica McKeon, and Arthur Roy. Burial was in the family plot at St. Joseph's cemetery where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Father Quinn. The bearers were John Meehan, James F. McGlone, Daniel O'Connell and Michael Keegan. Relatives and friends from Meriden, Hartford, New Haven, Putnam and other cities attended the services.

Rev. Charles G. Johnson, pastor of the South Coventry Congregational church has been granted a 90 days leave of absence which he will spend in travel after the holidays. He will take a 68-day cruise to the Holy Land and Mediterranean, sailing from New York February 14. He will also visit practically all of the important cities of Egypt and the North African coast as well as Italy and Spain. Rev. Mr. Johnson will travel as guest of a prominent religious paper.

An evening school will be held in Lebanon again this year, it was announced today by Charles M. Lamomb of this city, supervisor of rural schools for this section. The sessions will start Wednesday evening at the schoolhouse in District No. 13, and will be held three evenings each week with Principal E. Fenn Nourse of the Lyman Memorial high school as instructor.

William Klotz of Mount Hope has reported to the police that while his car was parked near the post office on High street while he attended a motion picture show Sunday evening the machine was sideswiped by an unknown motorist and damage to the extent of about $25 caused. Mr. Klotz has posted a reward of $50 for information leading to the identity and arrest of the person responsible for the damage. The nature of this report is similar to several that have been received of late and the police are on the alert in the hope of apprehending these unprincipled drivers who cause damage and hasten away without reporting.

Announcement was made this afternoon of another big democratic rally to be held in the town hall next Thursday evening and for which several prominent orators have been secured, including Rev. Mr. Richmond, Philadelphia, Pa., clergyman.

Mrs. Rogers Hayden, Jr., of Madison, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Tucker.

Two weddings Saturday, one in Willimantic and the other in Meriden, were of local interest. At 2 o'clock Stanley Field, son of Mrs. Bessie Trythall of Columbia married Miss Winifred Andrews at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Andrews, in Willimantic. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Richardson of Sterling, a cousin of the bride. The bride was attended by Miss Edith Hartley of Willimantic, and the groom had as best man Merrill Griffin, of Hebron. During the ceremony Miss Elizabeth McKinley sang "Oh Promise Me." After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Field left for a week's motor trip to New York, and on their return will reside in Columbia. At 4 o'clock Eugene Lafleur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lafleur of Columbia, was united in marriage with Miss Ethel James, of Meriden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert James. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Timble. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Lucie Greene of Columbia, and the groom by Eugene Merritt, his cousin. Mr. Lafleur is employed by the S. N. E. Telephone company. They will make their home on Columbia Green.

Fourteen went from Columbia to attend the 40th anniversary of Willimantic C. E. union, held at Andover church Saturday afternoon and evening.

The local C. E. society has decided to hold its meetings Saturday evening from 7 to 8, instead of on Sunday evenings. In this way it will be possible for the new pastor to be present, also members of the society who are only here over the week ends.

At the morning service of Columbia church, the pastor, Rev. John H. West, spoke on "The Power Behind the Throne." His talk to the children was "The Little Fox—Later," the third in a series of "Little Foxes That Spoil the Vines."

Mrs. Bessie Trythall and daughter Shirley spent the week end with Willimantic relatives.

Miss Ruth S. Jones spent the week-end at Boston and attended the Harvard and Dartmouth game.

Bolton Notch post office is to be discontinued Nov. 1.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory for the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and milder forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in. Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A periodic checking-up, together with oiling and gressing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

DANIELSON

PLAINFIELD MAN FINED $300 FOR LIQUOR VIOLATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 30—Today in Judge Torrey's court in the town of Plainfield, Joseph Schweitzer of the Flat Rock district of that town appeared to face charges of keeping intoxicants with intent to sell and of making five actual sales. For keeping with intent to sell, Schweitzer was fined $100 and costs. He was fined an additional $100 on one count charging a sale, and given a sentence of ten days, or a total of 40 days, on each of the other four sale counts, the jail sentence being suspended. Schweitzer paid the fines and costs assessed against him. A raid at his place last Thursday afternoon yielded a considerable quantity of intoxicants.

All of the other Plainfield cases growing out of last Thursday's raids in that town were continued until next Monday.

FUNERAL

Edward Riley

This morning, the funeral of Edward Riley was held from L. E. Kennedy's funeral home with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Joseph A. Demers, M. S., was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Many were in attendance at the service, a considerable number from Brooklyn, where Mr. Riley spent his life time. Burial was in St. James' cemetery, the committal service conducted by Rev. Joseph Bergin, M. S. The bearers were James R. Walsh, Thomas Gorman, Daniel Smith, Thomas Dooley, Martin Dooley and John Weaver.

L. Edwin Hill, County Y. M. C. A. secretary, reports the organization of the Windham County Older Boys' conference council at the state Older Boys' conference in Middletown. The following officers have been elected: President, Robert Princeton, Danielson; vice-president, Bertram Hammond, Danielson; secretary, Clinton Davidson, Putnam; treasurer, Norman Green, Phoenixville; members of the committee, Alden Danielson, Francis Hammett, Raymond Mayhew, Earle Chandler, Russell Danielson, all of Danielson; Albin Vaida, Clayton Hurlburt, William Hall, Leo Pomminville, all of Putnam; Harold Alvord, Dayville; Marcus Johnson, Ashford; Lawrence McWilliams, John McWilliams, Wallace Child and Donald Child, all of Woodstock.

At the Middletown conference the past week-end Clinton Davidson of Putnam was elected assistant secretary of the conference. Davidson was nominated from the floor, and his speech was so striking that he won over the regularly appointed candidate by an overwhelming majority.

Nineteen young women gathered last evening at the home of Miss Flora Keech on Hutchins street for a masque party that proved a delightful event. The hostesses were Misses Flora and Helen Keech and Miss Dorothy Burton. The home was very prettily decorated with Halloween devices, and a spooky chamber of horrors also had been arranged. There were games and stunts during the evening and prizes were awarded to winners in these. Refreshments were served. The party was made up of Miss Elsie Ray, Miss Lucile Caron, Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney, Miss Alice Jordan, Miss Doris Shipman, Miss Gladys Cook, Miss Ruth Cunneen, Miss Eleanor Gardner, Miss Elizabeth McGorty, Miss Beatrice Foster, Miss Flora Keech, Miss Dorothy Burton, Miss Helen Keech, Mrs. Stanley Keech, Mrs. Jerome Keech and Mrs. Philip Keech.

NEW VOTERS MAY GET SAMPLE BALLOTS FOR PRACTICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 30—It appears that persons who will vote for the first time in next Tuesday's election in Killingly are in numbers of instances a bit concerned over being able to so mark their ballots to vote as they wish and to make certain that they will not be thrown out for any technical reason. There are several hundred new voters in this town this year. Those of them who are at all worried about marking and casting their ballots properly need only obtain a specimen, or pink ballot, at any time now and go with it to someone in whom they have confidence for instruction in marking it. With this guide, there is little possibility of making any errors next Tuesday. An ample supply of the specimen ballots are available, and study of them between now and election day should, and likely will, clear any point about which there may be doubt in the minds of persons not familiar with voting.

It appears to be forecast that there will be an unusually large number of split tickets in Killingly for a presidential election. In considerable measure this will be due to the breaks in party lines this year over presidential preferences. Some republicans will vote their state tickets straight, yet give a vote to the democratic candidate for president. Likewise, some democrats will vote a straight state ticket and support the republican candidate for president. Speech of people already indicates this.

Probably in no preceding national election will there be such a drive to get out the vote in Killingly as will take place next Tuesday. Both parties will work exceptionally hard this year, and with hundreds of new voters records will be set here. Party workers are advising voters to get to the polls early and avoid any possibility of being unable to vote in last minute rushes at the polling places, in Danielson, Dayville and East Killingly.

A miniature aeroplane, an exact replica of the Fokker plane that Commander Byrd used on his Arctic flight, was on display at Dowe's today. It is the handiwork of two local men who are modestly remaining in the background. The little plane, operated by an elastic-band motor, can take off, fly 100 feet, and make a perfect landing. It has a three-foot wing spread and a length of 30 inches, yet is so lightly, yet strongly constructed, that it weighs but 12 ounces. It is a nifty little creation that any boy would love to possess, but one does not hear that it is for sale.

ESCAPES INJURY WHEN CAR OVERTURNS TWICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 30—Onesime Grenier, 18, of Grosvenordale escaped serious injury Monday evening, when a Chevrolet touring car, which he was operating turned over twice, on Grove street and then righted itself, damaging the car beyond repair.

The accident occurred about 300 feet west of the Soldiers' monument on Grove street, and according to Grenier, was caused when he was entering Grove street from Ring street. He said another car was proceeding on the left side of the road without lights. Suddenly the car flashed its lights into his face, frightening him so that he applied his brakes, causing him to skid and lose control of the vehicle.

One passenger, whose name was not obtained, sustained a number of slight wounds about the face and hands. Grenier escaped without injury. Sergt. Liard of the local police made an investigation of the accident, but made no arrest.

Foreman Frederick Dumas of the Eagle Hose company of the Putnam fire department observed his 43rd anniversary as a member of the Putnam fire department Sunday. In commemoration of his long term of years in the department, the members of the company presented their veteran chief with a beautiful watch and chain. The presentation was made at a banquet held in the company rooms Sunday.

Mr. Dumas was shy in relating tales of the past but his record shows that he joined the department at the age of 22 and has been in continuous service since. Mr. Dumas was born in Putnam and has lived here since his birth. At the time he became a member of the town firefighters, the old hand pumps were in use and each man was a volunteer. The march of progress soon brought the horse drawn fire apparatus and "Frank Dumas' Eagle Hoses" were the pride of the department. After a number of years the city kept in step with time and the motor truck known as "No. 1" was purchased but Mr. Dumas remained with the "Eagles" the company still using horse power to reach fires. Soon after, the city fathers purchased a second piece of apparatus, it being a motor truck and supplanted the old horse drawn Eagle hose wagon.

The ability of the Eagle hose company is recognized in all sections of the city. Several times in the north end (where it is stationed) it has saved thousands of dollars worth of property through its alertness. Mr. Dumas has been head of this company for a number of years. He is one of the most popular members of his company and is present at every blaze, despite his advancing years.

Mr. Dumas was injured in the Kinney coal yard fire of last April, when he was trapped between two walls of flame, and that blaze, the most destructive in the city this year went on record as being the only incident in Mr. Dumas' 43 years as a "smoke eater," when the fire had bested him.

Not only is he the oldest member of the Putnam fire department, but his term of service is unequalled by any other fireman in the state.

The Windham County Y. M. C. A. delegation to the 1928 Older Boys conference, held last week end in Middletown, has returned home. Clinton Davison of Putnam, a member of the Windham county delegation was elected assistant secretary of the conference. Davison was nominated from the floor and his speech was so far above the regular candidate, that he won with an overwhelming majority. While the conference was in session the Windham County boys decided to organize a Windham County Older Boys Conference Council, with the following youths being elected officers: President, Robert Princeton Danielson; vice president, Bertrand Hammon, Danielson; secretary, Clinton Davison, Putnam; treasurer, Norman Green, Phoenixville. The members of the council are: Alden Danielson, Francis Hammett, Raymond Mathew, Earle Chandler, Russell Danielson, all of Danielson; Albin Vaida, Clayton Hurlburt, William Hall, Leo Pominville, of Putnam; Harold Alvord of Dayville; Gabriel Koza of Ashford; Marcus Johnson, Lawrence McWilliams, John McWilliams, Wallace Child and Donald Child, all of Woodstock. L. Edwin Hill, county secretary of the organization will act as advisor of this council.

Boys of Windham county through the courtesy of the New Hampshire and Brown college athletic associations will be afforded opportunities to again attend the annual gridiron classic between these two colleges on Nov. 17 at the Brown stadium, L. Edwin Hill, county secretary of the Windham county Y. M. C. A. announced today. All boys desiring to see this game may do so, if they can assure Mr. Hill transportation will be provided for them. With the above mentioned obligations filled, tickets may be obtained at Bacon's store in Putnam, Saturday, Nov. 3, Wednesday, Nov. 7 and Friday Nov. 9, free of charge. The Danielson Y. M. C. A. offices will also furnish tickets to boys who wish to see the game.

This is the third year the college athletic associations have provided the free tickets to attend the games. Mr. Hill stated this morning that boys in Jewett City, Lebanon, Versailles and Fitchville, may attend this year's football encounter at Providence, as these towns are included in the Norwich area of the Windham county Y. M. C. A.

The general committee of the societies planning to participate in the observance of Armistice day on Nov 12, met in the chamber of commerce rooms last evening and listened to reports of the sub committees in charge of arrangements. Richard H McLaughlin, chaplain of the 169th Infantry, C. N. G., will be the speaker of the day. As plans are now, the programme of speaking will be carried out at the Putnam high school athletic field. Major A. J. MacIntyre will be the marshal of the day. Maj. McIntyre will select his aides at a later date. The reports of the committee as made last evening indicate there will be one of the most appropriate observances of Armistice day in Putnam since the celebration of 1925.

As previously announced by Superintendent of Schools Leon N. Parrin all children enrolled in the schools of the city above the fourth grade will attend school on Nov. 7, in the evening instead of the regular day session, this being observed as a part of American Education week. Plans are now progressing for the unique "school night", and committees have been appointed in all of the schools to receive and escort visitors through the buildings. At the high school, in addition to the regular work, visitors will be invited to witness girl's basketball practice in the gymnasium or to listen to the orchestra and chorus singing to the held in the auditorium. A brief exhibition of physical exercises will be carried on between two of the periods. Parents interested in the work of their children in school are requested to confer with the teachers after the sessions of class, rather than before, so instructors may be free to carry on their work.

Property owners in this city have been prompt in listing their belongings with the board of assessors for entry on the 1928 grand list. The assessors have been in session for the past two weeks at their offices in the municipal building and have received over 1100 enrollments out of about 1600 taxpayers listed within the limits of the town. Two more days are available to taxpayers to turn in their notices on personal and real estate property, as the board which is now in session will close on November 1. Following that date all delinquents will be forced to pay an additional amount of ten per cent.

According to information received today, promotions on the New Haven railroad will affect one of Putnam's most widely known road officials. Albert A. Cross, track supervisor, who will leave on November 1, for Danbury where he will be assistant divisional engineer, Mr. Cross came to Putnam a little over over two years ago, from Framingham, Mass. He assumed the duties of track supervisor between Norwich and South Worcester and also directed the rail work between Southbridge and Webster on the Southbridge branch.

He will be succeeded in office by Robert Bell of Waterbury, who like Mr. Cross is well known in railroad circles, where he has been employed for several years, and no doubt will be highly received by his workers upon his arrival in Putnam, where he will make his headquarters.

Within another month the banking houses of the city of Putnam will pay out in checks to thrifty patrons sums of money amounting to over $165,000 as the result of Christmas club savings which have accumulated during the past years. Cashiers of Putnam's three banks said this afternoon that the Christmas club savings of 1928 will be the largest in several years. All those who have tucked away a few cents each week will receive their total reward early in December it was said today, and will be able to settle their shopping accounts with their years aggregations.

Miss Effie Danielson, cashier at the office of the Southern New England Telephone company has been stricken with a sudden illness and has been forced to abandon her work, temporarily in the local office. During her absence Mrs. Ina Byers of Eastford a former employe is substituting.

The Blue and White Banner, the monthly periodical of the students of Putnam high school has been changed from newspaper to magazine dress and the first issue of the school publication is dedicated to the memory of Sheldon W. Carpenter, who was killed a few years ago in an automobile crash in Webster. Carpenter's initiative and interest in a school publication led to the existence of the present paper the Blue and White banner.

Captain William J. Jarvis of the Putnam police said today that he will post a small detail of extra policemen in sections of the city Wednesday evening, which will be Halloween and usually a night of vandalism by certain groups of youths who delight in inflicting damage upon property owners. The captain said that any boys caught in the act of lifting window shutters, stoning street lights and committing other petty acts will be reprimanded by the police on the following morning.

The first engagement of the 1928-29 tournament season, between the Masonic and Elks clubs, resulted in a complete victory for the Masons the final score of the evening being 7-6. The opener indicated a seasonal victory for the defeated Masons of other years as they held the lead throughout the evening and eclipsed the Elks as the final card was played.

The first night of play was held at the Masonic club and will be continued next week at the Masonic club.

Franklin B. Christmas, a member of the press staff of the Putnam Patriot returned this afternoon from a Worcester hospital where he has been suffering from an illness of about three weeks.

Mrs. William Burgess and daughter Carolyn, of Providence, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Byron Place, left Monday for Plainfield to spend a week with Mrs. Burgess' sister, Mrs. Edith Lewis.

Mr. and Mrs. Tilenda, formerly of this place, but more recently of Worcester, have returned and will occupy the place recently vacated by the Comtois family.

William Hughes and family of Providence spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Slater.

Aaron Viall, who has been suffering from a nervous disorder, has gone to a hospital for observation.

Edward Lyman of Danielson spent Sunday with S. A. Douglas.

Mrs. P. H. Coffey entertained Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Gaylord Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Winsor Barlow of Hillsbrove, R. I., visited Sunday with Mr and Mrs. G. W. Barlow.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hall, Mrs. P. H. Coffey and daughter, Beatrice, were in Norwich Saturday.

It is expected that work on the electric light line to be run through this section of the town will be started this week.

JEWETT CITY

GIFT OF HISTORIC GAVEL TO POST COMMANDER

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 30—L. D Howe, a member of the New London County Historical society, presented today to George Rochelieu, the newly elected commander of Orville LaFlamme post, American Legion, a finely wrought black walnut gavel, made from wood to which is attached an exceptional record. Mr. Howe's historical papers show that the black walnut tree, the only one in Griswold was planted by General John Tyler in 1776. The piece of wood from the tree used in the manufacture of the gavel was purchased by Mr. Howe in 1913. General John Tyler, was the son of James Tyler and Hannah Safford born Dec. 29, 1721. His military career in the Colonial wars is outstanding. Appointed by the general assembly, lieutenant, third company of the town of Preston, Oct. 30, 1762 (176 years ago today), he served as captain of several companies and fought in the battle of Long Island.

OLD PARADE TORCH RECALLS A TRAGIC HAPPENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 30—A local man found today among a collection of political relics the torch which he carried in the big parades of November 1888, during the Benjamin Harrison campaign. He recalled how the oil used to drip down on his back and remembered the unfortunate accident that happened one night to the late Jackson Scott. The parade was a big one that night, there was plenty of fireworks with red fire and all.

Great speakers were here, and excitement ran high. When the line was passing Deacon Keigwin's (the Gagnon property now) Jackson held a cannon cracker too long and part of his right hand was blown away in the explosion. Dr. S. H. Holmes was alive then and it was his opinion that Scott must be taken to Boston for immediate surgical treatment. The late S. E. Phinney was station agent here. He telegraphed to Frank Hilton the dispatcher at Norwich and Supt. P. St. M. Andrews gave orders for the boat train to stop here the next morning, that the doctor might hurry his badly wounded patient to the Boston hospital. The man who tells the story, recalls how the old depot was crowded at 5 a. m., to see such a wonderful thing as the great and ornate boat train, stopping at Jewett City.

For the second time this fall, the mercury dropped to 24 degrees during the early hours of Tuesday morning.

Griswold's apple crop is estimated to have fallen off one-third this year.

Big republican rally tonight, Finn's theatre, 8. Concert 7.40. Fine speakers. Good music. Come one, Come all. Hear the reason for continuing the present government policies.—adv.

Mrs. Orrin Rix of Voluntown entertained as week-end visitors Mrs. John Horton and Mrs. Albert Horton of Providence and Miss Helen Horton, R. N., and friend of New York.

Penelope, a cat, came back. William Warden of Kingston, N. C., took her for an 80-mile ride and dropped her from his car. A few days later she mewed greetings at his door.

DO YOUR VOTING EARLY

In view of the interest being manifested and the increased number of voters, it becomes evident that the best possible use should be made of the time when the polls will be open on election day next Tuesday.

Even though the special town meeting votes to increase the hours when the voting can be done it is impossible to overlook the significance of the decision which has been obtained from the attorney general of the state by Attorney Pettis. This makes it clear that there should be no long line of voters at the hour the polls must close. It does away with the idea that those who are within the polling place or those in line to vote when the closing hour strikes are entitled to vote. It is declared that the election officials have no authority to extend the hours of voting. That means that on the stroke of the hour the ballot boxes should be closed or the voting machines locked.

That is a ruling which will be used as the guide in Connecticut at elections. It is a warning to the voters which should not be overlooked. It reminds them that they cannot rely upon going to the polls during the last few minutes and being certain of voting. It should operate to impress upon voters the importance of voting early: getting to the polls at those hours when there is the least likelihood of a rush and getting the duty out of the way.

In most instances there is little or no reason for tardy voting. There are times when larger numbers can be expected at the voting places than at others. The noon hour is always a busy one, but with the big vote that is likely to be polled Tuesday it can be expected that the day will be busy at most any hour and the wisest thing to do is to make sure of your vote by voting before the last few minutes of the day.

LEARN THE VOTING MACHINE

During this month 2200 new voters have been made in the town of Norwich. Naturally a large proportion of them will arrange to cast their vote at the coming election. That is their clear duty. As new voters there may be added interest on their part but because they have never voted before it is probable that they are none too well informed about the use of the voting machines.

This should not be regarded as intimating that there is anything complicated about voting by machines. On the contrary, it is not yet it is desirable that those who have not used the machines should get a look at them and witness a demonstration, even operate one themselves before the time comes for them to actually vote. Opportunity to do this will be provided by the registrars of voters during the afternoons and evenings of the next three days. For this purpose there will be a voting machine at the city hall with officials in attendance to explain its operation and answer any questions concerning it that may arise in the minds of the voters.

Advantage should be taken of this chance to become familiar with what constitutes "voting by machine." This applies alike to all voters, whether newly made or not. The registrars have made this arrangement for the assistance of the voters. All uncertainty should be cleared up before election day for the tide of voters on Tuesday will be such that all voting should be expedited as much as possible. Find out all the details before election day and save time and confusion. The simplicity of the process will appeal, but get all doubts cleared up while there is plenty of time for those who want to ask questions and those who must answer them.

HIDING THE DIFFERENCE

While Mr. Smith has been trying to make a great handle of the water power question, and particularly so since Mr. Hoover's New York address when he so clearly explained his position, it is quite evident that the democratic candidate isn't trying to clear up his attitude but is devoting his efforts in an endeavor to misrepresent his opponent.

When former Governor Miller actually challenged Mr. Smith to declare his position on government operation of water power he was well aware of the manner in which the present governor of that state was covering up that point. The same thing is also brought to the attention of the public by Charles E. Hughes who, like Mr. Hoover, is misrepresented by the Smith statements.

On the matter of government ownership and control of water power resources the candidates are in agreement. They believe in it. Mr. Hoover isn't ready to go into the development and operation of such plants. He doesn't believe that there should be government competition with private enterprise as a general practice. There is a difference between the ownership and control of water power resources and the development and operation of them. In New York state there is control of the water power resources, but development and operation come under 50 year leases to private capital. Those charged by Mr. Smith with feeling the same as he does about the water power question do not stand for the idea of government development and operation, although they do favor ownership and control. In other words they do not sanction what is a socialistic doctrine. Mr. Hughes and the late Theodore Roosevelt favored ownership and control but they didn't go so far beyond it that their views could be interpreted as being socialistic. When Mr. Smith sought to justify his position by theirs he didn't take the trouble to clear up the very important difference. He left it about as cloudy as his position on the equalization fee.

COMMON PLEAS COURT CLERKS

What must be regarded as the logical appointment under the circumstances was that made by Judge Waller of the court of common pleas when he named J. Frank Corey as clerk of that court as a successor to the late Lewis Crandall.

Mr. Corey has been the active assistant in that court. It is work with which no one is more familiar. Mr. Corey has the distinction of being the first person not a lawyer to be named to that office, if memory serves us right, but lawyer or not a lawyer he has by long years of training so familiarized himself with that work that it has to be admitted that a lawyer as much could do no better. Mr. Corey now receives the appointment which it was felt he should have received when a vacancy existed in the office some years ago.

For the past 35 years Mr. Corey has been identified with the office of the clerk of the county courts as clerk and assistant. That experience has been valuable. It has given him a training second to none and it was such which must have been taken into consideration in the making of the appointment. It was clearly an appointment that was deserved and one that will operate to the best interests of the court it is believed.

Attorney Burke, named as assistant, is a rising young lawyer of much experience here, and elsewhere who should make an efficient aid.

STOWAWAY TERHUNE

It isn't everyone who would want to be a stowaway. Certainly it is not a delightful prospect which stowaways face when they hide in the coal bunkers of steamships, while to most others people the uncertainties of flying would cause them to hesitate before secreting themselves in some nook on an airship.

Not so with Clarence Terhune. He was ambitious to make a trip on the Graf Zeppelin. He had the courage and as is shown he was clever enough to escape the eagle eyes of those who were watching to prevent this very thing. Perhaps he didn't have in mind the vast amount of publicity he would get from such an experience, as others who have attempted flights across the Atlantic have angled for, but there is no doubt but what he will get it. His adventurous spirit has put him in a position where he gets the distinction of being the first Zeppelin stowaway. Possibly it is not such a great accomplishment but unless we miss our guess he stands in the way to be considerably benefitted by it in one way or another.

Of course he has got a story to tell about how he did it. He will also have a vivid story of his experiences. He has stepped into the spotlight through his own efforts, even though the climb up the ladder of success doesn't always begin with a similar undertaking. While stowaways are invariably deported, Terhune stands a slight chance of being sent home by a Zeppelin right away.

LITTLE THINGS

"Oh, Bob," Dot cleared the front porch and steps with amazing agility, "I want you to do something for me." Bob stopped, turned back toward the house.

"Make it speedy. I'm late as it is." Dot preferred him a bit of dappled silk. "What in the thunder?" he demanded.

"A sample, honey, of my new blouse. I forgot to get thread. It won't be any trick at all for you to slip into a store. Remember, though, get silk thread and a hundred-yard spool."

Bob pocketed the sample and went on his way. As she went into the house again Dot wondered what she would do that morning. She had intended to sew on the blouse, but she couldn't until she had the thread. She might bask in leisure for once, dip into a book, perhaps. The idea was tempting. But she would put the breakfast dishes out of the way first. She made her way to the back of the house and paused on the threshold of the kitchen. There in the middle of the floor sat a familiar, an unwelcome and an exasperating sight—Bob's wet overshoes.

"If it were the first time," gasped Dot, "it wouldn't be so bad, but it's become a daily habit. There's the familiar streak of mud from the back door to the middle of the linoleum, right where he stood to take them off. All right, Bob Perkins, it's time you learned a lesson. There they are and there they'll stay until you move them, and maybe the next time you take out the ashes you'll remember the finishing touches to the job.

Clatter, clatter went the dishes. Clatter, clatter, Dot's wrath. She tidied the kitchen with painstaking care until the rubbers and grimy tracks were like a mockery to the room's otherwise perfect spotlessness. She could not, however, get her mind on a book because she kept thinking about the kitchen floor.

"Oh, good gracious," she said at last, giving up all though of reading "I'm going out there and clean that muss up and forget about it." But at the kitchen door she again paused, igniting to the unfairness of the situation. "I'll not do it," she blazed, and fled back to the living room.

She caught up the book again, but the kitchen haunted her. She turned toward a side window. A figure moving in an adjoining yard, attracted her attention. There was her neighbor, Mrs. Manlove, stooping beneath the weight of two ash buckets. "Well, of all things," ejaculated Dot. "If I had a good-for-nothing husband like Ben Manlove—" She did not finish. Somebody was knocking at the kitchen door. It was Cora Findley wanting to use the phone—Cora who saw everything and told everything. Cora made a grand semi-circle about the rubbers. Dot had a fleeting notion to sweep them out of sight while Cora was talking on the telephone, but decided that their absence might arouse her caller's suspicions. Cora finished telephoning and came back into the kitchen, where she opened the conversation in her customary caustic manner.

"I've only to look about me," she announced, "to see the petty cruelties of men toward women. There's one misfortune I've escaped so far in this life and that's a husband."

"What do you mean by that?" flared Dot.

Cora looked pointedly toward the shoes, replied in an abstract fashion that was positively maddening. "Oh nothing in particular. Thanks for the use of the phone" and then departed.

Thoroughly indignant, Dot swept up the rubbers without further parley, put them into their accustomed place and proceeded to mop away the tracks. She was surprised at the soothing effect her action had on her.

That night when Bob came home he pulled six spools of thread from his pockets.

"Why such an assortment of colors?" exclaimed Dot.

"That sample," Bob retorted, "had at least ten shades in it, and in every store I went they suggested a different color. I tell you, I wore out about ten pounds of shoe leather before finally saying to myself, Shucks, why not get 'em all? So there they are. Thread looks like a little thing to buy, but I'll say this much to you, Twinkles: You're the only woman in the world I'd do such a little thing for."

"You're a perfect darling," purred Dot. "I know exactly how you feel. You left your overshoes in the middle of the floor again, and it took me all morning to put them away. You're positively the only person in the world for whom I'd do such little things, too."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—(AP)—A city that has always lived more or less intimately with the great and near great, domestic or foreign, is not easily aroused to lavish emotional enthusiasm on visiting dignitaries.

When you can rub shoulders with cabineteers in the theatres most any night and even do a little window shopping on "F" street to find that the dapper little man at your side, gazing at a window display with gloved hands folded behind his back, is the president of the United States, it is difficult to get much "het up" over any foreign visitor, however distinguished.

What is needed is a touch of romance. That's why Washington fairly turned itself inside out to do honor to Lindbergh. He was beseiged by hero-worshipping crowds, even in the corridors of government departments, for months after his transatlantic flight. For the most part it was the troops of girl clerks who made up these special "Lindy fan" audiences from which he fled in terror.

Girls Rush to Knut

Exactly the same thing happened in connection with the Graf Zeppelin flight. When Dr. Eckener and his officers came down to pay their respects in person to President Coolidge and sundry other official folk, they were greeted by just ordinary crowds and handclapping. There was plenty of generous applause for their pioneer commercial air voyagers "over the pond," but for only one of the group, Knut Eckener, the huge, blond young son of the big airship's commander, was there much cheering or rushing about to catch sight of him.

The reason for his special place in the regard of the girls of Washington in particular was this: They saw him, in fancy, prancing about the naked girders of that damaged stabilizer, far up above mid-ocean with nothing but that slender truss work to hold him and all the winds of the world clutching at him. The story of his instant dash to the scene of trouble when a squall had ripped away the stabilizer fabric, coupled with his youth and the quick blush that stained his face whenever he realized he was a center of attraction, made him the darling of the crowding young ladies. And he liked it no more than did "Lindy." He ducked out of sight; took refuge behind his lack of English; hid in the center of the group at every opportunity.

Missed the Star

When the party left Washington a bevy of school girls in their early teens were at the station, cheering and squealing for "Knut." He made frantic speed to the protection of the train. When the Germans visited the National Press club, the others got a friendly greeting, but young Knut had to be escorted through corridors jammed with women-folk. A girl elevator operator who ferried the rest of the Germans up and down but failed to have the youngster as a passenger expressed herself bitterly:

"Darn it," she said, "I missed the whole show."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Exorbitant Minimum Charge

Mr. Editor: To my mind the great trouble with the new residential rates for electricity is the exorbitant minimum charge.

Under the old charge there was no difficulty in making ends meet if the reports of the gas and electrical department are to be believed. If that minimum was sufficient to provide the overhead, operating expenses or standby charge, why was it necessary to boost the monthly lighting cost of several hundred consumers by 35, 45, 55 or 65 per cent?

Why doesn't Norwich get a fair minimum charge the same as in other cities? Why soak the man who has to economize and tries to economize and try to tell him he is getting a lower rate through increased consumption when he doesn't need and doesn't want increased consumption?

From those who have had their meters taken out and those who have served notices that places of business will be closed after dark until rates change, the new schedule is unpopular with other than the residential users of electricity.

It seems to me that the money the board of gas and electrical commissioners is using putting the new schedule into effect might better be employed in cutting down the big minimum charge.

DISGUSTED OWNER

Norwich, Oct. 30, 1928.

Bigger Than Smith or Brown

Mr. Editor: The problem of electric rates in Norwich appeals to me as one bigger than that of Smith, Brown, or Jones and in facing the facts on this matter of rates some illuminating conclusions may be drawn.

Electricity is an unusual commodity in that it cannot be stored up for use of consumers in large or small quantities as they want it. It must be made as required and delivered instantly when the button is pressed or switch is turned.

Suppose a merchant were up against a similar proposition in that all his customers came to his store to buy during only two hours of the time during which his store was open. He would require more help than if the patronage were more evenly divided during the day and would probably find it to his advantage to offer inducements for people to come when his clerks were not so busy.

Suppose a manufacturer, as many do, found the demand for his products came only during three months in the year and he was in the unfortunate position that he could not store up a supply to meet this demand. He would look for some means of keeping his factories busy and force employed during the other nine months if only partially.

Suppose a mechanic works overtime. Does not he demand more than his regular rate of pay?

The electric department is in the position of the merchant whose wares are in greatest demand during only a brief period of the time his store is open. It is in the position, also of the manufacturer who cannot store up his product but finds that there is a large demand during a short time only. It is in the position of the mechanic who says, "Time and a half for overtime—because the job is worth that much if I must work overtime."

And like the storekeeper and manufacturer, whose business if more even will benefit the clerk and factory employe by steady employment, the electric department must look for something to do when business is slack or the consumer must pay more than he is paying under the new or has paid under the old rate. Uneven demands for electricity on the part of the consumers require additional investment in equipment to make electricity, which equipment, if used during time of greatest demand only, is more costly to buy and operate per kilowatt hour sold than that required if the demands are more uniform.

John Smith benefits under the new rate, if he uses 32 kwhs in a six room cottage, by saving 74c per month, while John Brown, using only 32 kwhs in his fourteen room house is charged 6c more than he used to pay under the old rate and rightly so. In six rooms the chances are that Smith, using the same number of kwhs per month, is a steadier customer than Brown who has fourteen rooms and may be "all lit up" once in a while and dark at other times. If the conditions in these two cases are reversed it is unusual and these two are affected by the rates, as some will be in a manner contrary to the average, and by being different Brown may seem to be penalized.

The cost of meter reading, billing and serving one customer, aside from the electricity used, is about the same as for another. Then why shouldn't the electric department be considered fair if its new rate promotes business charges more in proportion to what the customer is getting rather than for just so many kilowatt hours and reduces the bill for the average customer? Why not?

Intoxication About the Country

Mr. Editor: May I ask the privilege of a small space in your valuable paper for the publication of a letter which I believe will be of interest to your readers about a certain topic just now much before the public mind. This letter is from Edward Foster, my uncle in California, who visited our city about a year since when he was making the trip which is herein partially described.

Yours truly for national improvement in real prohibition.

HARRY I. PETTIS

The letter follows:

"There is an old saying, that the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, 'It's a long time between drinks,' but from what Al Smith and his followers say it's not that way now, since the 18th amendment was added to our Constitution and the illicit distillers and bootleggers have become so active. Now, I'm a fairly close observer and when I was in the state capitol at Raleigh, N. C., and in the state capitol at Columbia, S. C., also in several hotels and up and down the streets in both of those cities last November, I did not see any drunken person, not even one, drinking intoxicating liquor; not only in those cities, but nowhere in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, or in any southern state, except a very few in Birmingham, Ala., and Jackson, Miss., and Oklahoma City, Okla., Al Smith and his cohorts to the contrary, notwithstanding. I am sure, that had I traveled over 2000 miles through the southern states in any year before the 18th amendment became a part of our Constitution, I would have seen thousands of intoxicated men and women, many even lying in the gutters. Practically all those I did see intoxicated, during my 5,000 miles sight-seeing tour from Chicago to the Atlantic coast states, from Portland, Me., to Tampa, Fla., then back through the southern states to Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Illinois, were in the cities of Chicago, Niagara Falls, Albany, Boston, New York city, Birmingham, Ala., and Oklahoma City and nine out of ten of those, appeared to be foreigners, excepting those I saw under the influence of liquor in Washington, D. C., they I presume were politicians. I do not deny but what there is lots of liquor being illicitly smuggled into the United States and made in the United States and drunk at the present time, but not one tenth as much as before the 18th amendment became a law nor one hundredth as many drunks to be seen in public. A few weeks ago a gentleman, friend of mine from Oklahoma and I drove down to Tia Juana, Mex., 16 miles south of San Diego. There we saw hundreds under the influence of liquor, many completely down and out, dance halls filled with men and women, with plenty of red paint on their faces and lips and many wearing brown derby hats with white chalk inscriptions on their hats saying 'I'm for Al'. Many gambling places wide open, with men and women patrons. If every legal voter of the United States could spend 24 hours in any, or all the Mexican towns along the border of the United States, I believe they would not only vote to keep the 18th amendment in full force, but would see that the police, attorneys and courts would keep their oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States and effectually enforce all its laws.

"What I started to say when I decided to write you a letter was that it's a long time between the letters we write to each other, but as it is near election time, I could not resist the temptation to repudiate the sayings of Al and his supporters, in reference to the 18th amendment.

Sunday night in a Unitarian church, I listened to a debate between men as to whether the 18th amendment should be repealed, or modified. The man advocating modification, used practically all his 45 minutes of time in ridicule, while the other man quoted pages of statistics from reliable authority to prove the advantages to the American citizen because of the 18th amendment, but strange as it may seem, more applause was given the man who did the ridiculing, even though it was on Sunday and in a church; which caused me to believe the "wets" are alert to boost for their side, whenever the opportunity presents itself, even in so-called churches. After the debate, the public were permitted to ask questions. Practically all the questions were addressed to the "dry" advocate, such as: What country has made a success of prohibition. Answer was: The United States. Question, Why so many violations of the 18th amendment? Answer Because you do not back up and insist that the police, attorneys and courts enforce the law. The speaker, a retired colonel in the U. S. army, and ex-sheriff of Los Angeles county, Calif., said he knew bribery and graft prevailed in Los Angeles and the citizens would not back up honest efforts he made to enforce the laws and because he did make such efforts, he was discharged. Therefore, if advocates of the 18th amendment want it to become effective, they must take more interest in seeing that it is enforced."

Lower Than Central Village

Mr. Editor: We have read the letters in The Bulletin from customers of the Norwich gas and electric department with much interest, and it seems to me people in Norwich do not know when they are well off. Our electric light bill for 21 kwhs is $2.76. Under the new rate in Norwich for four rooms our bill would be $1.93 a reduction of 83 cents. We are glad we have electricity and are not kicking on our bill for $2.76 but we surely wouldn't kick on a bill of $1.93 either. Think this over friends.

Little Talks on Thrift

A POSITION TO SAVE MONEY

Students of economic conditions in this country tell us that poverty is steadily being eliminated through the processes of education. There was a time within the memory of many now living when direpoverty existed in every city if not in every in every community. The general standard of living has been steadily advancing for the last fifty years and conditions are such today that there is hardly a person anywhere who is not in a position to save money if he so chooses.

This does not mean that all who are able to save are doing so. There are many who do not.

Numerous persons excuse themselves from practicing thrift on the plea that they cannot save anything and maintain a good standard of living. While it may be true in some isolated cases that circumstances over which they have no control make it impossible for them to get ahead in the world, these instances are exceptional.

The old saying, "Where there's a will there's a way" applies with full force to the practice of saving money. Those who do not save or who think they cannot are not fair with themselves. They are unwilling to make certain sacrifices. Their minds are biased by false pride of egotism. Their viewpoint is incorrect.

If they should think the problem clear through they would determine to find ways by which they could save something even though the amounts be small.

Upon one's ability to find such ways of saving money, depends very much of one's chances of success in life.

This is a phase of the matter that should be given the deepest consideration. Also it should be borne in mind that those who are not sufficiently interested in their own welfare to lay by a certain portion of their earnings for the future do not care enough about real success ever to achieve any substantial place in the affairs of men.

Before there can be success there must be a desire to succeed. And this desire must be so deep that it overcomes every barrier.—By S. W. Straus, president American Society ofr Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

What Time?

Little Elsie and her mother stopped the other day at a street scale to get weighed. It was the first time for little Elsie, and she stood on the scale very quietly watching the hand go up. Then she inquired with interest: "What time does it say, mamma?"

New Kind of Disease

It was one of those Sunday dinners where everyone proceeded to eat too much as is usual on such occasions. At last Uncle Otto a man of slender proportions refused the sixth, or maybe it was the ninth, helping.

When urged to partake of cake and dessert he declined with the tactful remark: "It looks mighty tempting but I have limitations."

Hearing this, William, his nephew, age seven, asked: "What kind of disease is that, Uncle Otto?"

WESTERN GIRL STRENGTHENED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Manchester, So. Dakota.—"I was in a terribly weak and run-down condition when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it and after a short time I felt better. We are a family of five and live on a 360-acre farm, so I have quite a good deal to do both indoors and out. At first I was unable to do anything and had to have a girl, but after taking the Vegetable Compound I finally gained my strength back and also gained considerable in weight."—MRS. ORRO J. GEYER, R. CLERK PLACES FILLED IN COMMON PLEAS COURT

Judge C. B. Waller of the common pleas court made two appointments Tuesday which were greeted with satisfaction by the legal fraternity when he named J. Frank Corey of this city to be clerk of the court of common pleas and Attorney John H. Burke of this city to be assistant clerk.

Mr. Corey has been assistant clerk and his appointment fills the vacancy left by the death of Lewis Crandall of New London, last month. The salary of the position is reported to be about $3,200 and that of assistant clerk about $1,800.

Mr. Corey's connection with court work began in 1894 when he became clerk to the late John C. Averill, then clerk of the county courts. In 1909 he was officially appointed assistant clerk of the court, continuing in that position until the present time.

The newly appointed clerk is a native of this city, born Feb. 11, 1865, and received his education in the schools of this city. He worked at various plants as a shipping clerk, until 1885, when he became a clerk for the Norwich and Worcester railroad. In 1893 he was station master at Norwich for a short period. All this time he was improving his spare time to increase his efficiency along the line of chosen work, and an opportunity offered to take a step forward when he went into court work.

Politically he is a republican and a staunch supporter of its principles. He is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Somerset Lodge No. 34, and has been musical director of the order for over 35 years. He is a member of Franklin chapter, No 3, and the council, No. 4; past commander of the council in 1900 and 1901. He is the secretary of the four Scottish Rite bodies and secretary of the Connecticut Consistory, of which he is a 32d degree member. He was clerk of the parish of Christ Episcopal church from 1897 to 1920, and for over a quarter of a century organist at that church.

In this city, Oct. 15, 1899, he married Sarah E. Hilton, daughter of Charles O. and Lydia S. Northrop Hilton. They have two children, Grace Marshall, a sophomore at Mt. Holyoke college and Herbert H., of this city.

Attorney John B. Burke, who will assume his new office on Nov. 1, has been associated with Attorney V. P. A. Quinn in the law business in this city. He has made his home in Plainfield with his wife, formerly Mary Smith of Moosup, and their two children, Mary and Teresa. Mr. Burke and his family will remove to this city shortly.

For the past year, Mr. Burke has been assisting in the office of the clerk of the superior court. He studied law in the office of Coran C. Small in Boston and was admitted later to the bar of that state. Mr. Burke made his home at one time in Marlboro, Mass., and Worcester. For several years he was United States naturalization examiner for the New England district.

REPORT NEARLY $1,000 IN SALVATION ARMY CAMPAIGN

John R. Tarrant of The Bankers Trust Co., treasurer of the Salvation Army campaign fund reported late Tuesday evening that the response to the letter appeal during the first two days of the Salvation Army campaign had been very encouraging. The campaign which is to raise the $5,000 budget to maintain the local Salvation Army work for the coming year was officially opened on Monday morning.

Mr. Tarrant reported that up until the time of the announcement of the progress of the campaign which he made on Tuesday night there were about 200 subscriptions received with a total of nearly $1000.

Chairman Arthur M. Brown seemed to be very well pleased with the first two days results of the letters of appeal which he as chairman of the committee signed and expressed the hope that the citizens of Norwich and Jewett City and the other towns in this district would respond promptly and generously so that this very worthy cause, as he called it, would be properly taken care of in as short a period as possible. The campaign is scheduled to continue for two weeks, but Chairman Brown expressed the hope that the campaign would be near the $5000 mark by the end of the first week. "We all feel that the Salvation Army is an asset to our community," Mr. Brown said, "and surely we do not need to be called on by a solicitor to influence us to give in this campaign. It seems to me that when a worthy cause of this kind is called to our attention by a letter the citizens of this community will respect the economic measure of this method of a campaign and I am sure they will be in sympathy with saving the time of those who have previously worked so faithfully in making the canvass and in consideration of this as well as the worthiness of the cause in whose interest the appeal is being made, the citizens of this district will stand in back of this campaign 100 per cent."

Machine Caught Fire

A Studebaker sedan owned by Joseph Pysyk of Hamilton avenue, was slightly damaged by fire shortly before noon Tuesday. The machine backfired as Mr. Pysyk was about to drive it out of his garage. The fire department responded to a telephone call but the fire had been extinguished when they arrived.

The seventeenth century Hotel de Lauzun has been bought by the city of Paris for $180,000 to give the Carnavalet Museum more space.

CITIZENS QUIZ EXPERT WHO EXPLAINS NEW ELECTRIC RATES IN NORWICH

The new electric rates and how they benefit the community was the theme of an address given Tuesday evening at the Community house by Charles S. Reed, consulting engineer, of New York. Mr. Reed, who came here voluntarily, spoke under the auspices of the board of gas and electrical commissioners, in defense of the new rates. Mr. Reed, who suggested the new rates which have been put into operation in this city dwelt almost entirely on the residential rates. He asked the audience of about 200 men and women to refrain from a discussion of the commercial electric rates, as, he said, the local commissioners are now revising that class of rates so that they will not inflict hardship on the commercial users.

The meeting was opened at 8 o'clock by Charles W. Taggart, general manager of the local gas and electric plant. Before introducing Mr. Reed, Mr. Taggart reviewed, in brief, the history of the municipal plant from the time of its purchase by the city 25 years ago.

He quoted figures to show that the operation of the plant under municipal ownership has not increased the indebtedness of the city. He said the gas and electric department is accused of building up the bonded indebtedness of the city which is not so.

Auditor Jensen Explains.

Mr. Taggart then called on Martin Jensen, auditor of the gas and electrical department and a former gas and electric commissioner to explain how the department has benefited the citizens of the city in the matter of taxation.

Instead of the tax payers helping us, we have been helping them to the extent of about $200,000 which the gas and electric department has turned back to the city from its earnings, said Mr. Jensen. Mr. Jensen said that the gas and electric department since its purchase by the city, has not cost the taxpayers anything in the matter of taxation.

Mr. Reed Speaks.

Mr. Reed, the speaker of the evening, was then introduced to the audience by Mr. Taggart. In his address, Mr. Taggart said:

In the first place I would like to state that I am not here as the paid representative of the gas and electrical department. I came to Norwich originally in an attempt to help out some of the larger power customers in regard to power rates. My intrusion, as it might be called, into the lighting rate situation, came of my own accord. I suggested the new rate as being a good rate for the citizens and the community of Norwich. Apparently all of you folks do not agree with me. Therefore I accepted Mr. Taggart's invitation to come before you tonight and explain why I think it is a good rate.

I intend to condense my remarks as much as possible so as to leave time for any questions which you might care to ask.

Electricity as a labor-saving agent in the home is daily becoming more and more important. The big trouble is that the antiquated rate forms in use today do not permit the use of more electricity at a reasonable additional cost.

To illustrate: The average residence customer in Norwich uses 25 kilowatt hours per month, for which on the old rate he paid $2.50. Let us suppose this customer buys a toaster or percolator and increases his consumption 10 kilowatt hours. Immediately his bill goes up $1.00 and he generally decides the additional convenience costs too much and therefore stores it away in the cupboard, to be used only when he has guests.

Now, how much did the cost to the electrical department increase when the customer used the 10 additional Kwhour. The cost of reading the meter certainly remained the same; similarly with the cost of billing and the other office and general expenses of the company. The department's investment in its meter, service line, poles, wires, transformers and plant equipment did not change. So that the total additional cost to the department was only about 15 cents. Yet, on the old rate the department collected $1.00 additional for this something which only cost 15 cents. Is it any wonder the customers could not afford to make use of their appliances?

The new rate is an attempt to get the cost of additional energy down to a reasonable figure, so folks can afford to really use it. Now, how was this rate made up? Suppose we follow the various steps of actual design. First we had to pick the energy price and three cents a kilowatt hour was chosen as the lowest figure to which we could go at present. I do not mean by this that the department could afford to sell all energy at 3 cents but that 3 cents was about right for additional energy sold to present customers, this additional energy requiring no additional office or general expense and very little additional investment.

The department cannot afford to make a straight cut in the meter rate from 10 cents to 3 cents as that would mean a slash in residence revenue alone of about $150,000, to say nothing of another big cut in commercial lighting revenue. So we first started to design a rate which would yield the same money as the department received last year.

Using a 3-cent rate, the department would collect from the average customer 25x3 cents, or 75 cents a month. To collect the same money as it is now receiving it would be necessary to collect $2.50 less 75 cents, or $1.75 per month, per customer, in some other way—by means of a service charge, for example.

It was decided not to use a service charge and also to make some reduction in the revenue of the department. This was done by reducing the $1.75 to $1.65 and then including 5 Kwhr free with $1.65, thus our rate for the average home would be $1.65 for the first 5 Kwhr, plus 3 cents for all additional.

On Room Basis

The next step was to get this $1.65 down within the reach of the man of moderate means. Different methods were considered. The theoretically correct method would be the use of demand or speed meters in addition to the regular meters but these would cause too great an increase in investment and operating cost. The use of the house area method similar to that in Hartford was also discussed; also the use of meter sizes. The room basis was finally chosen as the method which, while possibly not theoretically correct, was an easily understood measure of the amount of equipment in meter, lines and poles required to serve a customer.

The next question was the size of the room charge. The average home in Norwich contains 6 rooms and our rate therefore becomes $1.65 for the first 5 Kwhr for a 6-room house. If a room charge of 10 cents is used, the rate thereupon becomes $1.55 for a 5-room house, $1.45 for a 4-room and $1.35 for a 3-room. If 15 cents is taken as the room charge, the rate becomes $1.50 for a 5-room house, $1.35 for a 4-room and $1.20 for a 3-room. With this 15 cent charge, however, the charge for a 12 or 13-room house becomes very large and so the 10 cent basis was chosen. Thus the final rate became 3 cents a kilowatt hour, with the variable initial charge. That it means a considerable reduction can be easily seen by calculating the bill of the average customer, as follows:

1st 5 Kwhr. 1st 6 rooms	$1.35
3 additional rooms	.30
20 additional KWH	.60
Total	$2.25
Present bill	2.50

Net Reduction of $17,000

On the total annual sales, this means a net reduction of $17,000 in residence revenue alone. Now that does not mean a reduction of $17,000 to some customers and increases to a lot of others but it means that the decreases exceed the increases by that amount.

In order to spare you from too many figures I have touched on only the high spots. Actually several other rates were also constructed. For example, if a 4 cent rate is used instead of 3, the initial charges will be lower but the customer will not be able to use his appliances as freely. The 3 cent rate was chosen as best after comparison of all of them. Frankly, rate making is not such a highly technical job, after all. It merely means making up several rates to yield a certain amount of money, and then choosing the one which is best for the customers.

Questions by Customers

There are several questions which many customers ask concerning this form of rate. Suppose we consider them:

The first claim is that the department is asking the small customer to pay for the big fellow.

Such is not the case. On the new rate the small customer is merely asked to more nearly pay his own way. It costs the department considerably more than $1.50 per month to serve each residence customer, before he takes a single kilowatt hour. Heretofore the medium and large users have been paying the way of the little fellow. To this the department would have no objection except that the old rate form prevents additional use by all customers. The new rate is the best rate for the small user in that it is the only rate form which offers to him the same 3 cent energy charge for additional use as is offered to every other customer.

Another question is: "If this rate means a decrease, how is it that my bill for the first month is higher than it would have been on the old rate."

There are two answers to this question. One is that every increase is more than offset by a decrease to some other customer or to the same customer some other month. The other answer is that man cyustomers whose bills were increased last month will show a decrease when an entire year is considered. Winter consumption is always much higher than summer use. For example note the following table, based on a 5 room house:

Month	Kwhr.	Old Bill	New Bill	Decreases	Increases
Jan.	30	$3.00	$2.30	$ .70
Feb.	26	2.60	2.18	.42
March	22	2.20	2.06	.14
Apr.	19	1.90	1.97		$ .07
May	18	1.80	1.94		.14
June	16	1.60	1.88		28
July	15	1.50	1.85		.35
Sept.	18	1.80	1.94		.14
Aug.	15	1.50	1.85		.35
Oct.	19	1.90	1.97		.07
Nov.	24	2.40	2.12	.28
Dec.	28	2.80	2.24	.56
Total	250	$25.00	$24.30	$2.10	$1.40

You will note that seven of the customers bills go up and only five are decreases. Yet the annual bill is reduced.

Why Refrigerator Charge?

Another question often asked is "Why the refrigerator charge?" The answer is simply to prevent too great a decrease in revenue. If a large decrease is made to refrigerator owners, it simply means that a lesser decrease must be offered to the customers who cannot afford refrigerators. Without the refrigerator charge the charge for the first 5 Kwhr. would have to be a little higher to all the other customers.

Incidentally, I would like to state here that for any electrical appliance dealer here in this city to oppose this new rate on the grounds that it will discourage appliance sales is absolutely ridiculous.

In the first place, the cost of refrigeration, even with the additional charge, is less on the new rate than on the old. In the second place, the customers will have more money to spend. This is aptly illustrated by the testimony of a customer in a recent rate change similar to yours. He said the new rate meant a reduction in his lighting bill but it would not mean any saving to him because his wife had already figured that the monthly reduction would almost equal the installment payment on a refrigerator and that she intended to buy one as soon as the rate went into effect.

Sale of Appliances

Since we have diverged into the appliance field, I would like to make a few remarks concerning the sale of appliances by the electrical department here in Norwich. In favor of this there are at least two important reasons.

In the first place, the handling of electrical appliances by the electric company results in better service to the public, in that the utility is interested in seeing that only efficient appliances are in use by its customers. For example some 5 and 10 cent stores sell a large number of old fashioned carbon lamps at a very low price. These carbon lamps require far more energy per candle power than a Mazda lamp and do not last as long. An electric company is justified in selling efficient lamps in order to meet this competition and protect its customers.

In the second place the sale of appliances is justified on account of the necessity for safe-guarding the customers. One of the 5 and 10 cent stores recently put on the market a large quantity of gas tubing for connecting gas appliances. It sold the tubing at one price, the rubber tips at an additional figure and also supplied glue to fasten the two together. A number of people in New York city were asphyxiated and the cause was apparently defective tubing similar to that sold by the 10c store. I do not charge the 10c store officials with deliberate murder but use this as an example to justify the sale of efficient, safe appliances by the department in order to meet the competition of cheaper but unsafe merchandise.

Comparing Two Stores

But let's get back to the rate question. What about the new commercial rate with its demand charge? What's that for? Let us consider two stores, side by side.

Store Number 1 has twenty 100 watt lamps which are burned only on dark December afternoons, so that the total annual use is only 600 kilowatt hours.

Store No. 2 has only two 100 watt lamps but it makes good use of these lamps all the year around, consuming 500 Kwhrs. the same as No. 1.

On the old rate each of these customers paid the same 600 x 10c or $60.

Yet the department is forced to construct its entire system in order to take care of those dark December afternoons. Customer No. 1 requires 2000 watts then, while customer No. 2 requires only 200 watts. Ten times as much plant equipment is required for No. 1. Similarly a much greater share of wires, transformers, meters and similar equipment is necessary. And yet, on the old rate, the two are charged alike. This is not only a manifest injustice but the high charge for additional energy prevents both of these customers from using more energy and brightening their stores and their town.

On the new rate customer No. 1 would pay as follows:

For the 1st 5 Kwhr.	$1.65
For 1900 watts added load	9.50
For the next 45 Kwhr.	1.35
Total per month	$12.50
Total per year	$148.20

while No. 2 would pay

For the 1st 5 Kwhr.	$1.50
For 100 watts additional	.50
For the next 45	1.35
Total per month	$3.35
Total per year	$40.20

Incidentally, I am authorized to say that the check of the first month's commercial lighting bills under the new rate showed a higher connected load than had been anticipated. This will permit some change in the rate and so I am going to ask the commercial customers to withhold complaint until this change can be completed.

When a private electric company makes a change similar to the one just made in Norwich, it is sometimes looked upon with suspicion. Possibly some of you feel the same way. The line of thought is like this:—

"The company wouldn't be for this rate unless it meant more money to the company. It can't mean more money to the company unless it means more money from the customers. Therefore it is an increase."

To explain this, I am going to switch over to the gas industry and tell of an actual incident. A washwoman was testifying concerning the effect of a new gas rate which was like the new Norwich electric rates in principle. She said she was saving money on the new rate. We checked her account on the books and found she was paying the gas company $2.00 more each month. This sounded funny and upon investigating further we found that under the old rate her gas bill was $4.00, and her coal bill $3.00, making a total fuel bill of $7.00. On the new rate her gas bill was $6.00, but she used no coal. She saved $1.00, the gas company sold more gas and a little less coal was allowed to spread its dirt and soot over the community.

In Montgomery, Alabama they used to have a $2.00 per thousand gas rate. Five years ago this was changed to $1.00 per thousand with a $2.00 per month service charge. Not a $2.00 minimum but a service charge. This rate meant a decrease in revenue to the company but sales have increased to such an extent that this has been more than made up. Now how have the customers benefited? The average rate at the end of 1927 including all the two dollar charges, was only $1.50 per thousand as compared to the old $2.00. Moreover, the earnings of the company had increased to such an extent that it could afford a cut in the rate, and the rate was recently reduced by including 500 cubic feet with the $2.00.

Now I am not advocating any $2.00 service charge for Norwich, but if you folks were to make the commissioners put in an initial charge of $1.50 for the first 200 cu. ft. they could cut the gas rate from $1.35 to 90c a thousand and not lose any money. 90 cent gas for water heating and for small stoves. It would be a fine thing for Norwich.

Frankly, a private company is often willing to make a reduction in its rate because it looks forward to not only getting this back, but more besides, through additional sales. This in turn means lower future rates. Your department of electricity cannot prosper under the new rate unless it proves so attractive to you that you voluntarily increase your use of electricity far beyond the present figure.

I believe you will do so. You are going to think a lot better of the new rate as the winter comes on and your bills appear so much more favorable as compared to those of last year. Don't compare the September bill alone. Dig out one for last January and try it on the new rate. If you will give the new rate a trial for a year or so, it will be impossible to persuade you to go back to the old method.

Throughout the address Mr. Reed illustrated his figures on a chart prepared for the occasion. In an effort to convince the audience that the new rates are much more beneficial than the old rates.

Questions Came Fast.

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Reed announced that he was open to questions and would answer as far as possible, all questions asked.

That the audience was in a questioning mood was evident from the fact that two score or more questions were fired at Mr. Reed, regarding the necessity for the new rates, in view of the earnings of the gas and electric department, the past year, just how he claimed the new rates were lower, in spite of the fact that residential lighting bills are higher, whether or not he thought the new rates are equitable, whether or not the new rates worked a hardship on the small user, whether or not the new rates were intended to force the small user to help offset the reductions granted the large users and how he could claim that the new rates are lower when, as a matter of fact, most of those who asked questions, are paying more monthly now than they were before.

Electric Refrigeration Charge.

Another question brought up was why householders should be required to pay 50 cents or a dollar a month, for the privilege of having an electric refrigerator in their homes whether they used the refrigerator or not. Mr. Reed endeavored to show that under the present rate the householder who has an electric refrigerator in his home, is paying less for the power he uses, than he did under the old rates. But the 50 cent and dollar a month service charge, depending on the motor attached to the refrigerator in use, remained the center of attack on the part of several persons who brought up the question.

Revise Commercial Rates.

The commercial rates, which a number of persons in the audience claimed have jumped their monthly bills from 200 per cent. to 500 per cent., Mr. Reed stated that he would rather not have brought up as a revision of those rates is now under way and he said that he felt that when the revision was put into effect that all commercial users would find their bills materially decreased.

One man in the audience told of representatives of the gas and electrical department appearing at his place of business to inquire as to the number of lights he used. He said all the lights in his place of business were turned on and kept turned for a half hour. He asked the representatives who was going to pay for the electricity used by the lights during the half hour they were turned on and was told that he would have to pay for them. He said his electric bill is much larger under the new rates than under the old rates.

John Ogulnick, jeweler, complained of his bill being much larger than it was under the old rates. He said that the only ones in the room who "applauded the new rates were employes of the department and that they were afraid of their jobs."

John Stoddard, Carl W. Brown, Albert Boardman, Samuel Kramer, and numerous others shot questions at Mr. Reed, about as fast as he could answer them, and appeared to be as dissatisfied as ever, after the answers had been given. There seemed to be a pronounced conflict of opinion between the speaker and those in the audience who asked questions, over the reduction in rates which Mr. Reed claimed the new schedule has accomplished. In answer to a question, Mr. Reed admitted that the small user, who used to pay one dollar a month, is now paying more, but the small user's increase is offset by the decrease in other residential users bills. In other words, Mr. Reed contended that the "dollar a month" customer has not been paying his share of the cost of delivering electricity to his house, and that the larger user of residential electricity has been paying more than his share of the cost. The new rates equalize this.

Variety of Complaints.

There seemed to be no end to the questions from the audience. There were all kinds of complaints and few, if any, words of commendation. About 10.30 o'clock James L. Case made the suggestion that the hour was getting late and he moved that a rising vote of thanks be given Mr. Reed for his fair discussion of the entire matter. This brought the long drawn out session to a close.

Never an Iron on My Hair

Wherever my theatrical engagements happen to take me I could have a marcel, but I never do. I prefer my own method—waving my hair with my Wave and Sheen. I always keep my hair clean by shampooing once a week. I apply Wave and Sheen with a comb. You can use a brush, or just your hands.

Elsie Wallace Hoagey as she looks today

I dampen the hair with it—insert combs in the direction I wish the waves and forget it for about an hour. Some types of hair require more time, some less.

The result is a soft, lovely, undulating wave. Most people in my audiences think I have it marcelled. Many ask whether it is a natural wave or if it is not.

You can have this same sheen no matter what method you use to wave your hair. Get a bottle at any toilet counter for 75 cents. One trial will convince you as it has thousands of others.

FUNERAL

Pametta Kandrow

The funeral of Pametta Kandrow, 2 years, 4 months and 5 days of age, daughter of Kostos Kandrow of No. 21 High street, was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the funeral parlors of Hourigan Bros. Relatives and friends of the family were present and there were a number of flowers. At 2:30 o'clock there was a service at the Greek Orthodox church and the burial was in Maplewood cemetery. A committal service was conducted at the grave. The child died Sunday at the Undercliff sanatorium at Meriden. She is survived by her father, a brother and a sister.

WHISPERINGS OF A FIRPO-DEMPSEY BOUT ARE BECOMING MUCH LOUDER

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—(AP)—Ears that listen at cauliflower keyholes are tingling these days to whisperings that indicate the return of Luis Angel Firpo, prosperous business man of Buenos Aires, and William Harrison Dempsey, actor and California real estate magnate, to the more rugged lines of endeavor they knew before affluence set in.

Dempsey, led to believe that he possessed the qualities of a great Thespian and convinced that he could never whip Gene Tunney in a dozen comebacks, announced last spring that he was "through" with the prize ring forever. Today his stage bubble has burst, the contract he signed for $5,000 a week for 20 weeks in a Broadway play has been cancelled. Tunney has passed from the ring picture and Dempsey, twice whipped by the big marine, is listening to daily advice and pleas that he don the padded mittens just once more to save the heavyweight ranks from utter stagnation.

The old Manassa Mauler, despite his 33 years, is wavering. Tex Rickard won't talk but Jack is believed to have set a $500,000 price tag on his services for one more battle. The mogul of Madison Square Garden is gun-shy now when requests for guarantees of that kind are shoved in his face. Tex has not forgotten the financial beating he took when he guaranteed Tunney $550,000 for blasting Tom Heeney before a crowd that paid little more than that to view the tid-bit of the summer season.

"What the public wants," Jack muttered in disgust when his show closed a few days ago without completing its "run" on the road, "is real fights, not acted fights. I'm no actor."

Dempsey, today, is restless. He believes and maintains that he will never fight again. But he is listening, arguing with those who try to convince him that the flatte lull is due to the absence of his own colorful, dynamic box office appeal. He misses the thrill of the crowds cheering him on, rooting him on, he wants again the roar that used to greet him as he stalked down the aisles, black brows glowering, while thousands around the ring tingled and chilled at the thought of his punching power and ferocity. More than ever he misses these things since his stage career collapsed.

The case against Firpo, the shaggy haired bull who lost the greatest of modern ring battles to Dempsey in 1923, is more obvious. Firpo actually is in training in South America, whittling away flesh from a body grown huge and soggy since he retired to a life of physical leisure in 1925. He has contracted for two matches and is negotiating for a third. Rickard has made him an offer to fight here. Firpo insists on finding out what fighting ability he has left before accepting.

Jose Lectoure, Argentine promoter, returned to Buenos Aires Saturday after announcing that he had clinched matches for Firpo with Jack Renault and Roberto Roberti, the Italian giant. Firpo has taken off 50 pounds in several months of training, he said, and now scales 240, about 30 pounds above his best fighting weight. The Renault match is scheduled for January, while Roberti would meet Firpo after two other matches in the stadium seating 30,000 at Buenos Aires.

Like Dempsey, the burley Argentine is wealthy now, and is listening to the call of glory rather than necessity. Firpo probably never will forget how close he was to the championship that night in the Polo Grounds when he pounded Dempsey from the ring with one mighty right hand smash after climbing off the floor seven times. The Latin temperament of the man is heeding the call of South America for another fistic idol.

AGGIE TEAM PREPARING FOR COAST GUARD BATTLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Oct. 30—After the usual layoff day on Monday following an intercollegiate contest, the Connecticut Aggies resumed their practice sessions this afternoon in preparation for the annual game with the New London Coast Guard Academy eleven. The game will culminate the work of practice this Saturday at Storrs in the second home contest for the undefeated Blue and White eleven this year. The result of the game last Saturday with Vermont university at Burlington continued to show the Nutmeggers as undefeated and also unscored upon, a feat not held in a long time at the state college.

Head Coach Sumner A. Dole will entertain his charges this week with only light workouts in order to give the men a respite over the strenuous contest at Burlington which the Aggies won 6-0. Fisher was the outstanding star of the game and his ball carrying was seconded only by Ray Ryan, quarterback and running mate to the versatile Nutmeg sophomore first named. The work of two Norwich boys, Martin Gilman and Pheno Tombari, on the line showed up for the Connecticut eleven. The deadly defensive work of both these men saved many a long yardage against the Aggies. Gilman, who is the lightest man on the line, showed up as only a veteran can and displayed an ability at his position that will long be remembered.

The formidable strength of the service eleven is unknown but from the work that they displayed against Rhode Island and Lowell Textile, it is very likely that if the Connecticut offensive keeps up, a duplication of the feat is in store.

The Nutmeggers are now swinging onto the second part of their eight game schedule. The home stretch is without a doubt going to prove the hardest of the two for the Blue and White. Maine, Wesleyan, Vermont, and Lowell Textile have felt the Blue and White thrusts and are still acknowledging the fact that there were all unable to score on the Nutmeg defensive machine. New Hampshire, which is being rated high due to their fine showing thus far this season, is the next formidable opponent of the Aggies. The two teams meet at Durham a week from this Saturday and an even battle is sure to be staged. Rhode Island comes next as the Aggies traditional rival at Storrs on the following Saturday. The Clam Staters should not give the Nutmeggers much to worry about but the final contest of the season with Boston College at Boston will. The last game of the year in the Hub city will be the hardest of all for the Nutmeggers.

PENN STATE LOOMS AS FAVORITE IN CROSS COUNTRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—(AP)—College cross country runners have yet to cover a good many miles before the eastern intercollegiate championship is decided at Van Cortland Park, here November 26. But they have travelled far enough already to demonstrate that Penn State, the defending champion, will take a lot of beating before relinquishing its laurels.

A review of the dual meet season at this early stage indicates that the Penn State runners, beginning where they left off last fall when they won varsity and freshman team and individual honors for the first clean sweep in the history of the intercollegiates, have about as good a record as is to be found in the east.

Led again by Bill Cox, champion for the last two seasons, a strong Penn State team missed a perfect score by a single point in defeating Syracuse by 16 to 39 in the only race it has run to date.

In somewhat striking contrast was a setback dealt out to Harvard by New Hampshire before the season was well under way, this marking the first defeat in five years for the Crimson in dual competition. It is true however, that victories for Harvard over Dartmouth and over a Holy Cross team which finished seven men in a tie for first place against Brown have indicated that New Hampshire strength rather than Harvard weakness was responsible for that startling upset.

Harvard's bid for intercollegiate honors is being led by Captain Jimmy Reid who was third in the title race last season and Leslie Flaksman, another seasoned veteran. Harvard's team was runner-up to state in 1927.

Penn State, incidentally, has probably the most experienced team now treading the cross-country trails. Of the five men who scored for state in the opening race, the first was Cox, the king of them all; second was Meisinger, member of the champion freshman team of a year ago and the fifth yearling to finish in that title event; third was Offenhauser, seventh varsity finisher in 1927; fourth was Bass, another varsity veteran; and next was Dick Detweiler, holder of the freshman championship.

While Cornell and Syracuse, institutions which usually figure in the forefront of the chase for premier hill and dale honors, have met dispiriting reverses, Columbia has been coming along fast and promises to give Penn State, Harvard and the University of Maine considerable of an argument before the campaign is over. Columbia's pack with Captain Joe Hagen in the van has outraced Syracuse and Lehigh for a clean sweep of its meets thus far.

Proud Cornell, which has won intercollegiate honors more times than all the other colleges together, was set back by Alfred, one of the strongest small college teams, and Syracuse, suffering from ineligibilities, was no match for Columbia or Penn State.

Union college of Schenectady, like Harvard, found a long list of dual meet successes broken when a promising New York university team that is to be reinforced by the addition of Phil Edwards, the Negro Olympic middle distance star, gave the Garnet its first beating in twenty three starts.

N. Y. U. and Alfred stand out as leading contenders for the middle Atlantic title won last season.

WANAMAKER RESIGNS AS YALE HOCKEY COACH

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 30—(AP)—Official announcement was made tonight of the resignation of Clarence Wanamaker as hockey coach at Yale, by George H. Nettleton, chairman of the board of control of the Yale Athletic association. As coach of Yale hockey teams for seven years, Wanamaker developed the game to its present position as a major sport. He leaves the college to confine his entire time to business in Williamsport, Pa. He came here from Dartmouth college where he starred in athletics.

PUTNAM HIGH STRIVING FOR FOOTBALL HONORS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, October 30—Putnam high school is now leading the Quinebaug Valley football league by a safe margin and is now headed toward Eastern Connecticut Scholastic football honors and their mythical claims are fast maturing into reality by reason of their five straight victories and no defeats with but four games left on the schedule. The Putnam gridsters feel confident they will return the much coveted championship to Putnam high school this year, placing it where it was two years ago, when the eleven of that season went through 10 games and suffered no defeats, setting a record that was unequalled by another high school in Eastern Connecticut.

By turning back Bartlett high school of Webster in an 18 to 6 victory, the Putnamites feel that only injuries to their star backfield men, Bill Shann and Walt Cody can possibly bring about a defeat in the remaining encounters. The Bartlett high game was supposed to have been the hardest fought tilt of the year and the Webster boys went on the field a 4 to 1 favorite to win, yet the final whistle brought them defeat at the hands of the Putnam group of gridsters and also wrested from them their only chance of the Southern Massachusetts titles, since they were beaten at the hands of the Mary E. Wells high of Southbridge the previous week.

Coach Lauriston Noyes of Putnam high school will put the locals through light workouts each day of this week in preparation for their second meet with the Webster team, and hopes for a victory are held by the Putnam fans. The Northbridge, and East Douglass games are the only battles left on the Putnam schedule that are doubtful. Putnam defeated Northbridge in the second game of the season by a score of 18 to 6, but rumors are to the effect that the Whitensville line crashers have improved considerably since their Putnam visit. East Douglass is a new member of the league and no telling what can happen when they stampede the city. Plainfield is still waiting for her chance to take honors that are now almost clinched by Putnam, though her chances are small, since she has received defeat at the hands of Coach Schofield's Killonians of Killingly high school. Rivalry will be renewed against Killingly on Thanksgiving day when the ancient opponents invade Putnam. The Killingly game will be the last of the season, and if Putnam is successful until then, there is but to say the Blue and White terriers will march triumphant to Eastern Connecticut championship honors, as Killingly has not won a football contest from the Putnam gridders since 1922 and last year was the first time they succeeded in crossing the goal line since the second year of the new decade.

IMPORTANT GAMES IN HIGH SCHOOL LOOP THIS WEEK

Important developments in the Eastern Conn. Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league are promised by nightfall Saturday. The joint leaders, Academy and Stonington play Saturday, the Wildcats tangling with Windham at Willimantic and Stonington with Chapman Tech at New London.

Of course, the Red and White and Bill O'Brien's outfit will be favorites to come through on the week end and thus throw the outcome of the race onto their final league tussles but should either one slip then the pennant will be as good as won for the other half of this two-team race.

It will, of course be quite an honor to gather the first championship in this newly formed league, Stonington won last year's grid bunting in the old four team league and beat the Academy in doing so. This year the two teams meet but not in a league game. Stonington's league games are with Chapman Tech, Bulkeley, Westerly and Windham and the Academy's with Westerly, Bulkeley, Windham and Chapman Tech. Stonington meets Chapman Tech and Westerly twice but only one of these games is counted in the league standing.

Bulkeley meets Hartford High at New London this Saturday in what will be a strong task for the Whalers. However, Canty's boys started winning last week with a 13 to 6 decision over Windham and hope to continue in that mood. The Academy will meet Hartford High, one week from Saturday, Nov. 10, here at the campus so that the coming pair of week ends should give a bit of a line on the Academy-Bulkeley classic Nov. 24 at the campus.

YALE VARSITY HAS STIFF SCRIMMAGE WITH FROSH

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 30—(AP)—Beginning a week of hard work in preparation for Dartmouth's annual invasion of the bowl, the Yale varsity team was put through a stiff scrimmage today against the freshmen which ended well after dark. While the teams faced each other to score points in the 45-minute drill, the varsity, minus five regulars, pushed across two touchdowns and an extra point.

Thereafter the freshmen handled the ball to bring out defensive weaknesses in the varsity but no scores were made and Coach Stevens appeared satisfied of the way his charges stood their ground. All of those out of the practice reported at the field with the exception of Garvey, scintillating halfback who was injured against the Army, Oldt, left end, Hall, right guard, Hoben, quarterback, and Hubbard, fullback, watched the work from the sidelines.

Both tomorrow and Thursday the varsity is expected to work out with scrimmages against the freshmen and by that time some of the injured may get into the lineup. One new face joined the regulars today, Coach Stevens promoting Walker, a scrub as a wingman. The lineup was Walker and McEwen, ends; Marting and Eddy, tackles; Greene and Stewart, guards; Charlesworth, center; Ellis, quarterback; Loud and Decker, halfbacks, and Dunn, fullback.

BOSTON COLLEGE PREPARES FOR MANHATTAN GAME

BOSTON, Oct. 30—(AP)—The Boston college varsity team was exceptionally effective against the Manhattan plays which the second and third elevens put on here today during a long scrimmage. Johnnie Dixon, varsity end, and Al Weston, the regular quarterback, practiced kicking after the varsity team completed the short signal drill, which ended the workout.

Though Warren McGuirk, the Boston college leader, returned to the squad this afternoon, Coach McKenney ordered him to take things easy for another week. McGuirk, who recently recovered from influenza, was far underweight and Coach McKenney said he would keep him inactive until the Armistice day game with Fordham.

E. C. ALL STARS BOWLING TEAM AT JEWETT CITY

This evening the all star bowling team of the Eastern Connecticut bowling league will play a return match with the All New London five at the Ashland alleys in Jewett City. In the first match the leaguers won by a margin of 41 pins

TALBOT-FARMER STEVE BOUT TOP AMATEUR CARD AT UNCASVILLE

Topping a card of unusual brilliance at Pappas hall in Uncasville on Thursday evening is the renewal of that memorable fistic struggle between Farmer Steve, the pachyderm of Yantic, and Harold Talbot, the Montville Panther.

Almost a year ago down in Olympic hall a bout was billed between two unknowns, Farmers Steve and Harold Talbot, two unknowns. No one going to the bouts that night had any inkling that they were to see pugilistic history in the making. Talbot and Steve were mere names—just another bout. In less than two hours the names of Talbot and Farmer Steve were on the lips of several hundred enthusiastic fight fans and inside of a week over 30,000 people in eastern Connecticut knew the life histories of these lads who were writing their names in scarlet letters all over the pages of the history of fistianna. They knew how Talbot during years of pitching one of the Connecticut company's trolley's had been dreaming golden dreams of pugilistic fame. They knew how he aspired to have his name emblazoned across the sport pages of the dailies, how he worked in a gymnasium many long hours after his electrical steed had been housed or turned over to other hands; how he ran for miles and miles on the open road, shadow boxed in the early dawn, just to get himself in condition to put his foot on the first rung of the ladder of success.

They knew also how Farmer Steve, an obscure country lad in the wide open spaces of Yantic, read of the fortunes made by boxers and dreamed his own rosy dreams. They knew how he took account of himself, found he had abundant weight, tough but flexible muscles, and a burning desire for the smell of resin in the squared circle. They knew how he enlisted the aid of Gene O'Brien, Phil Herts and Sid Shabecoff and how this trio of boys spent many hours teaching him the rudiments of the boxing game, taught him ring presence and a craftiness that was as original as it was effective.

The fans recall how the Pachyderm and the Panther met one cold winter night and battled through three torrid rounds. They recall how the tenets of civilization faded out after the first round and primieval man arose to dominate the boxers as they tore at each other eager for the kill. They recall how strong men raved and shouted themselves hoarse; how they slapped one another on the back and after it was all over left the hall in an exhausted state.

This is the background against which the bout on Thursday evening is staged. This is the bout which has kept boxing interest aglow during the summer months and this is the bout that will pack in the cash customers.

Supporting this feature are seven other bouts that bring into the ring such boys as Toots Gardner of Montville, Norman Reau of Oakdale, Sheik Godeau of Uncasville, Mallson Hoy of Quaker Hill, a team from New London as well as several lads from Norwich and Willimantic. This supporting cast is good and fast bouts should result which will be excellent appetisers for the star bout of the evening.

HARVARD START SECOND VARSITY AGAINST LEHIGH

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 30—(AP)—Indications that Harvard would start would start its second varsity football team against Lehigh next Saturday, were given here today, when Head Coach Arnold Horween gave his regulars their second consecutive day of rest and sent team B through an hour's scrimmage with the scrubs.

The "B" players had an easy time defeating the scrub eleven 28 to 6. Eliot Putnam, the quarterback, scoring two touchdowns. The scrubs' score followed when Putnam fumbled a punt on team "B" five yard line. Horween had Tommy Gilligan, who has been playing quarterback, at a halfback position, and the fast sophomore carried the ball 15 yards for a touchdown.

During the scrimmage Tom Mason, substitute fullback, received a broken finger which was expected to keep him inactive until the Pennsylvania game a week from next Saturday. Warner, a promising guard, injured his hand and Ogden, an end, suffered a leg injury. Dr. Tommy Richards, the Harvard physician, said both would be out for at least a week.

RAY BEATS EL OUAFI IN 10-MILE GRIND

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30—(AP)—Joey Ray, American star, tonight showed his heels to El Ouafi, French Algerian Olympic marathon champion, and two other middle distance stars in a 10-mile indoor race at the Arena.

Ray's time was one hour, 27 minutes, 18 1-5 seconds. He finished four and one-half laps ahead of El Ouafi with Ken Mullen, Philadelphia, third, and Willie Kohlemainen, brother of Hannes Kohlemainen, former Olympic marathoner, fourth.

In racing to victory, Ray established what was claimed to be a new world's indoor record for 15 miles, having been clocked in one hour, 22 minutes and five seconds. The race originally had been scheduled for 15 miles, but just prior to the start another mile was added.

JUDGE SAW STONINGTON PROPERTY BEFORE TRIAL

Preceding taking of testimony in the $1,000 damage suit brought in the superior court by Manuel and Clara S. Pereira of Stonington against Joseph Vargas, which went on trial in the superior court at New London Tuesday, Judge John Richards Booth accompanied counsel on both sides to view the Fellows Mill place in Stonington. Attorney G. Curtis Morgan is counsel for the plaintiff and Attorney John Gallagher of Westerly for the defendant.

The Pereiras allege that on Jan. 1, 1914, they owned, and still hold title to land known as Fellows Mill place, comprising about 105 acres of land, a dwelling house, grist mill and other buildings.

The plaintiffs claim that the defendant on this date entered upon the property and dispossessed the plaintiffs, depriving them of the income from rents and profits and from occupying and enjoying their land. They claim that rents amount to $200 a year. The plaintiffs seek a judgment for possession of the land and $1,000 damages.

The judge and counsel returned to court about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and the taking of testimony began.

EIGHT NEW MEMBERS FOR SONS OF REVOLUTION

Eight new members were taken into the Connecticut Society, Sons of the American Revolution, Saturday afternoon at a meeting of the board of managers of the organization held at the state library, Hartford. State Librarian George S. Godard presided.

The new members are Homer W. Brainard and William C. Gompf of Hartford; Rev. James H. Roberts of Silver lane, East Hartford; George W. Penfield, New Hartford; Anthony Sunderland, Danbury; Benjamin R. Larrabee, New London; James D. Fraser, Quincy, Mass., and Edward Lyman Bill, West Hartford.

WEST WILLINGTON LEGHORNS SET NEW WORLD RECORD

STORRS, Oct. 30—(AP)—A pen of ten White Leghorn hens owned by George Lowry, of West Willington, broke a world's record in laying 2,907 eggs during the past year, it was announced at the Connecticut Agricultural college today. The record was made in conjunction with the 17th annual international Storrs egg-laying contest which closed here last Monday.

The prize group of hens bettered the former mark by 21 eggs held by a pen entered by the University of British Columbia in 1926, with 2,886 eggs.

One of the prize hens, despite a handicap of a broken leg which was kept in a cast for 27 days, laid 314 eggs in 338 days.

Last week Lowry's hens won the annual Storrs contest with a record breaking lay of 2,969 eggs, just 300 more than the mark of the winners a year ago.

BONDS OF $3,500 ARE FURNISHED FOR GOLDEN

After having been locked up at police headquarters since Saturday night, Llewelyn H. Golden, 28, of No. 28 Thames street, was released Tuesday on bonds of $3,500 furnished by Louis F. Clark, Bridget Ward and Edward Neiderman. Golden is charged with manslaughter, in causing the death of Herman Bajorin 46 when the car he was driving struck Bajorin, at Trading Cove Saturday night. Golden's case has been continued until November 5.

Activities at the Y. M. C. A.

The Norwich Y. M. C. A. has an attractive and busy schedule these full days. Every day there are classes in the gymnasium for men or boys except on Wednesday when the girls and women have the exclusive use of the physical department. J. H. Demarest, the new physical director, is making a fine impression and his leadership on the gym floor is greatly appreciated. Indications are that the classes in gymnastics and swimming will grow in numbers and enthusiasm as the season progresses. Mrs. Philip Streeter and Mrs. Arthur Wirth, the instructors in the ladies' department, are proving popular this season as usual. The men's Bible class and the "Hi-Y" group are well under way, and the Sunday meetings are drawing good audiences each week. The interest in the lobby games is growing. It is safe to predict that this will be one of the best seasons in many years.

Two Men and Woman in Court

Two men and a woman were present in the city court Tuesday morning on intoxication charges. The men were each fined $10 an costs and the case against the woman was continued. The men were arrested Monday night near Osgood's dock where they were found tampering with an automobile. The woman was arrested on North Main street, near the Marguerite building, Monday night, after she had stopped a number of machines. All three claimed they became intoxicated at receptions they had attended.

WARNS GIRLS ABOUT RIDING IN AUTOMOBILES

DANBURY, Oct. 30—(AP)—At an inquest hearing today into the death of Miss Evelyn McDonald, fatally injured in an automobile accident in Brookfield, early Sunday morning Coroner John J. Phelan, of Bridgeport, warned four girls who appeared before him, of the evils of riding in a machine with acquaintances they had known but a short time. The accident occurred when a party of ten riding in the machine crashed into a tree on their way home from a dance in Danbury.

WESTERLY

VOTERS BEING WARNED TO WATCH ELECTION LIST

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 30 — Members of Westerly town council will meet Thursday night as a board of canvassers when the election list to be used Nov. 6th, will be gone over for the last time. Voters have been especially warned to see that their names appear on the lists posted in the Town hall and elsewhere about town. The responsibility for seeing that their names are properly upon the lists rests entirely upon individuals. Voters who signed the big books of the town clerk before the first of July do not have much to worry about as to their names appearing on the voting lists. The taxpayers who vote upon personal property are required by law to have their taxes paid before the first of November, or will find that their names have been stricken from the voting list. A third class of voters are those who exercise their franchise by paying taxes upon real estate and this property must stand as of record when the last town tax levy was laid by the Westerly assessors. Every year there seems to be increasing number of those who are disappointed in not being allowed to vote because their names do not appear upon the voting lists and the reason has been because the individual did not take the time or trouble to personally consult published lists in time for results.

Westerly Square and Compass club, No. 176, National League of Masonic clubs, Francis G. Haswell, president, plans to hold open house in its club rooms, Tuesday evening, Nov. 6th, National election day. The guests will be the members of Westerly Cycle club and Westerly Forest, No. 107, Tall Cedars of Lebanon. Special arrangements are to be made to receive election returns by radio and messenger service on local returns. Card and billiard games and refreshments are on the schedule.

Probate Judge Frank H. Hinckley, of Mystic, was in Pawcatuck Tuesday afternoon to hold a session of Stonington probate court.

Mrs. Newman F. Tuckerman was hostess Tuesday night at her home, 102 High street, to the members of the Bridge club. The favors and decorations had reference to Halloween.

The employes of the P. H. Opie company, Monday night, had the third floor of the department store in the Brown building transformed into Witchland for an observance of Halloween. About 100 employes and guests were present. Games, dancing and Halloween stunts were enjoyed. The committee of employes in charge of the party comprised Mrs. Norman C. Stanton, Miss Catherine Williams, Mrs. Vera Tillotson, Raymond E. Stillman, Stephen J. G. Cullen and A. E. Little.

Ushers of the Immaculate Conception church held an old-fashioned Halloween party Tuesday night in the auditorium of the parochial school. Prizes were awarded for the best and funniest costumes. In addition to the usual dance numbers there were square dances. The auditorium was decorated with pumpkins, cornstalks etc. The ushers' committee included James Jessop, Leo Rowan, Richard J. Butler and Joseph W. Delaney.

FUNERAL

James Berardo

The funeral of James Berardo at 8:30, Tuesday morning, were largely attended by relatives and friends at his home, 17 Pleasant street. A high mass of requiem was sung at 9 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. Henry Bruno, S. M. Burial was at St. Sebastian cemetery, where the committal service was also conducted by Fr. Bruno. The bearers were three members of the American Citizens' Calabro, Frank A. Toscano, Antonio Azzinaro and Genaro Salimeno, and three members of the Hod Carriers' Union, Nicola Castagna, Frank Terranova and Giogio Cappuccio.

The meeting of Westerly Hospital Aid association is to be held in Westerly Public library Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Samuel H. Davis, the president, has stated that the meeting will be brief and will close early enough not to conflict with the November meeting of Westerly Historical society, at 7:30, in the same room.

This (Wednesday) evening the republican party leaders will hold a rally in the Town hall when the men speakers will be the candidate for United States senator, Judge Felix Hebert, Philip Joslin and John C. Cosseboom. Governor Case will not attend, but is expected at a later date. The republicans are planning another rally for Sunday afternoon at the United theatre. The democrats have announced a rally for Sunday evening at the Central theatre.

REV. LEO C. WESTON ORATOR FOR ARMISTICE EXERCISES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 30—That business activity in Westerly will be generally suspended on Armistice day, Monday, Nov. 12th, to be observed as the tenth anniversary of the signing of the papers which brought the World war to a close, was learned when the committee in charge met Monday night. This year, as in the past, there is a joint Veterans' committee in charge of arrangements for the celebration. It was announced at the meeting that a number of local manufacturing plants have signified their willingness to close all day Monday, in accordance with the committee's request. Organizations desiring to march are to notify Capt. John F. Datson, the marshal, as soon as possible. The line will form at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the corner of Elm and Broad streets. The parade will proceed through Broad and West Broad streets to the Pawcatuck World War Memorial, where a stop will be made for patriotic exercises, including an address by Rev. Leo C. Weston, assistant pastor of St. Michael's church. The organizations will then countermarch through West Broad and Broad streets to Dixon square, whence they will proceed through High street and Grove avenue to Wilcox park. Present plans call for a halt at the Hiker statue that was erected several years ago by the United Spanish War Veterans. There an address will be made by a speaker to be announced. A final meeting of the Armistice day committee is to be held Friday night, after which the complete program for the celebration will be given out.

Rhode Island state troopers and members of Westerly police department again combined Monday night from 12 o'clock midnight to 4 a. m. in a second joint check-up on violators of motor traffic laws of Rhode Island. Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown was in charge of the law enforcement group and a careful examination of the rather light motor traffic revealed not one operator found violating any section of the automobile laws of Rhode Island. On the previous check-up one driver was arrested for operating a car while under the influence of liquor and there were two other arrests for minor violations. The checkup night was made in Dixon square and at the Stillmanville bridge. The officers who were engaged in stopping cars and making the investigation consisted of Chief Brown, Lieut. George H. Champlin and Officers Robert Kessel and Le Roy Norman and Troopers Norman and Harvey.

Everett A. Kingsley, of the state tax department, has returned to Westerly after several weeks' vacation in Nova Scotia.

Miss Marion Casey returned the first of the week to her home on Cumberland Hill, R. I., from a visit with friends in Pawcatuck. In company with Johnny Pescetello, former Stonington H. S. athlete, she attended the Army-Yale game in New Haven Saturday.

Reuben W. Austin, first trick ticket clerk at the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad, returned to his duties the first of the week after a short vacation.

Miss Helen C. Brophy, following a several days' illness at her home on Granite street, has returned to her duties with the Union News company at the railroad station.

Frank Richardson of Newport was a Westerly business visitor Tuesday.

Louis J. Reuter and family, former Westerly residents, have moved from Watertown, Mass., to Maywood, Ill.

Donald G. Whaley is in Cambridge, Mass., today (Wednesday).

James Tasca and John Mooney motored to Hartford Monday evening.

George A. Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Stoddard, Edgar W. Sisson and son, returned to their Westerly homes this month's end after a hunting and fishing trip in the Maine woods.

More than three-fourths of the democratic members of, and candidates for, congress have signed a declaration endorsing the democratic tariff plank and Governor Smith's interpretation of it in his Louisville speech, Democratic National Chairman John J. Raskob announced in a radio address.

STONINGTON

BOOTLEGGERS FINED— JAIL FOR NEXT OFFENSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Oct. 30—In Stonington town court Tuesday morning before Judge William A. Wilcox, Emily Radicioni of 12 Washington street, Mystic was charged with keeping intoxicating liquors with intent to sell and reputation. She was represented by Attorney Frank H. Hinckley, who demurred to the charges. Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna stated that the accused was brought into court as the result of a search warrant issued Oct. 25, enforced by State Policemen Kenerson and Whitmarsh. The demurrer was overruled and she was fined $100 and costs of $9.95 on each count. She paid. Quinto Basili of 4 School street, Mystic, was also charged with keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell and reputation. He was represented by Attorney Frank H. Hinckley who entered a demurrer which was overruled and the accused was fined $100 and costs of $9.95 on each count. He was brought into court as the result of a search made by State Policeman Kenerson and Whitmarsh. Judge Wilcox stated that if either party was presented in court again he would impose a jail sentence.

In the Stonington town court Monday morning before Judge William A. Wilcox, Henry J. Marikle of Mystic was given judgment of $276.01 and costs in his case against Patrick McKenna of Bristol. Claim was made for $300 damages by Mr. Marikle, following an automobile collision with the car of Mr. McKenna in September. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Benjamin H. Hewitt of Mystic. The defendant defaulted, not appearing.

The players' club of the Second Congregational church met in the church parlors Monday evening.

Check-Up on Lobsters

County Game Warden, W. S. Watrous and a force of deputies from Hartford and New London counties was in Stonington Sunday and made a search of boats, cars and pots in an effort to put a stop to the taking and sale of short lobsters. This law is being violated in a wholesale manner and the wardens have been at work for a month in an effort to get those guilty of taking and selling the undersized lobster. The case of one party will be tried early in November. Containers found by the officials Sunday were not marked and failed in all but two instances to bring to the searchers evidence which would lead to the trial of the owners.

Bishop B. Champion Acheson conferred the rites of confirmation on one candidate at the 10:30 a. m. service in the Calvary Episcopal church Sunday.

Henry R. Palmer of Providence spent the week end in Stonington.

Mrs. Otto Ide was in Norwich Monday.

The new Buick is the new Style

Men and women on every street--in every city and town--are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher!

Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized—when imitation was destroying individuality—these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode—

A mode of body-symmetry—of size and magnificence—of soft contours instead of straight lines—of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world!

And as the weeks have passed—and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent to the public—enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grows to unprecedented proportions!

Buick sales records have been broken! Production schedules have been increased again and again! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.

is unwise and expensive to flout the metric system in Mexico. A Tampico merchant was fined 200 pesos ($100) for advertising his wares in terms of pounds instead of kilos. The metric system is supposed to prevail all over Mexico. In the country the Indians often have vague measurements of their own and in the cities Americans and British sometimes lapse into pounds and miles and quarts. Such lapses in advertising in Tampico will be followed by fines, the department of weights and measures has announced.

POETRY

A Wise Old Bird

One day while walking, I chanced to see
A wise old owl as he sat on a tree,
And I thought, no reason have I ever heard,
Why they call the owl a wise old bird.
I wonder how came this honor to him,
As he stupidly sits there on a limb.
And he looked at me as much as to say,
Who do you think you are anyway?
Who, Who?

I looked this wise old bird in the eye,
And said, can you tell me the reason why
With the brainy ones you have made a hit?
Your looks are deceiving, I must admit.
Then he blinked at me in his owl-like way,
And I perceived he had something to say,
As he looked at me from his perch overhead,
Who saw I am wise? was all that he said.
Who, Who?

I thought I would test the wise old bird,
About whose wisdom I oft had heard;
And I said, pray tell how you get that way?
You seem to have very little to say.
Ah, that's the point, was his answer to me,
Not Fools, but wise ones listen, you see.
To listen, I think the far better way,
Who cares a "hoot" what the critics say?
Who, Who?

And I said, Mr. Owl, with you I agree,
Much talking is always obnoxious to me.
If listening has made you exceedingly wise,
Why won't it work with some other guys?
Now, since you are wise, just answer I pray,
A question I've pondered for many a day.
Who next will fill the president's chair?
The answer he made showed wisdom rare:
Who, Who?

—Fred E. Herrick, in The Pathfinder.

Autumn Leaves

The Autumn leaves upon the trees
Blaze in their bright array;
With flaming yellow, red, and bronze
They make the landscape gay.
Soon, one by one, they'll flutter down,
Through the cool, ambient air,
And noiselessly fall to the ground
And leave the trees all bare.

Then, what a change! Their beauty spoiled,
Their flaming colors gone,
In dirty, brown, and sodden heaps
They'll clutter up the lawn;
Or, whirling madly in the breeze,
They'll dance the dance of death
To lie at last where they may fall
When Nature's out of breath.

Then it is plain that we must clear
The gutters of the street,
And tidy up the garden bed
And make the lawn look neat;
And Gladys, with her poet's soul,
Must then, for order's sake,
Put on her khaki knickers, and Get busy with the rake.

—Somerville Journal.

Men are replacing women as eaters of sweets, say London confectioners. Women, ever thoughtful of their figures, eat less candy and smoke more cigarettes. The sweet habit among men has increased rapidly since the war. But both men and women are becoming more strict about their diet. Englishmen are said to be more careful about their figures today than at any time since the wearing of swords went out of fashion.

Under low tariffs, low wage rates allow European manufacturers to send goods into this country at lower prices than Connecticut manufacturers can compete with.

High protective tariffs equalize the difference in wages, and Connecticut industries have no decrease in production.

Competition with foreign products means curtailed business and decreased wages.

For 70 years the Democratic party has been for low tariffs. The Democratic candidate for presdent is for a "competitive" tariff. The Democratic party is committed to it in its platform. The non-industrial South controls the Democratic party in Congress.

The Republican party has been for high protective tariffs for 70 years.

Don't go backward. Don't swap for "something just as good."

Connecticut's future business existence, and the welfare of her workmen, are dependent upon Republican tariff protection.

THINK BOYS SMOKING STARTED SECOND FIRE

At 4 o'clock, Monday afternoon, the fire bell was rung by Eugene Mallett for a fire noticed by Arthur Fish and Raymond Sweat. They saw a blaze coming from a box near the fire room door and told Mallett to ring the bell. The Smoke Eaters came with speed to put out the blaze at their own station. Over 50 people gathered to see them in action. Ex-Fire Chief R. Donath of Mystic was in town, heard the bell and rushed to the fire. Charles Ellis, smallest fireman in the company, handed Ex-Chief Donath a number of pails of water and in 15 minutes the fire was out. The Smoke Eaters answered the roll call, then went home to supper. This is the second time that they almost lost their winter home. Chief Parks thinks boys are learning to smoke a pipe or cigarette and when anyone comes in sight will drop it in this box where there is paper and sawdust. He doesn't think there is a fire bug in the village, but after having two fires in two weeks in the camp place, one resident said, "Look out, for the third fire means a bad one! Never saw it fail yet in the village, and I've been a resident here for the last 50 years!"

Defeated East Boston Team

The East Boston Wildcats' football team came from the Hub Monday noon by bus, to play the Dance Hall team at Dunn field. After having dinner at Phillips', a codfish chowder on a cool day, putting on their football suits they were ready for the battle. It was 3 o'clock when Referee Orlando Clark lined them up for the kick-off. Each one of the Wildcats' team had a cat on his sweat-shirt. A crowd of 400 from in and out of town witnessed. In the first quarter, all both teams did was to kick out of danger. In the second quarter, Coach Red Fern of the East Boston team had some trick plays by which his players fooled the Dance Hoppers, gaining 15 to 20 yards on them and putting the ball on Noank's one-foot line, yet could not push it over for a touchdown. How that stonewall line held those city boys! That was done several times in that quarter. Light Horse Elliott Burnett made a 60-yard run through the center of the Wildcats' line, a pretty run, and when he went over the line had two men hanging on, but knew a trick that Light Horse Harry Wilson showed him last summer and he used it O. K. The fans gave him an ovation like Ken Strong of New York college got last week. Coach Bentley was smiling like a child with a pair of hockey skates, when the score read at the end of the first half: Dance Hall 6, Wildcats 0. When the whistle got the battle going for the third quarter, East Boston was using second-string men, and they rushed the ball up to the ten-yard line from the 70-yard line, when Snappy Jackson made a fumble and Chief Paul Sullivan, a western Indian, fell on the ball for Noank. The Dance Hall team was not taking any chances and punting down the field, coming in fast. MacComb of the Wildcats made a 30-yard run before Giant E. Ellis got him and the quarter was over, with no score. In the final quarter, the Dancers wanted to pile up the score and send the Wildcats back home, badly beaten, but the line they had was like hitting a million stonewalls; they could not gain and had to kick out of danger. The game ended with the ball in the middle of the field, score, Dance Hall team 6, East Boston 0, the first victory for Noank in three games.

The Late Boone Spink

Boone Spink, 66, a marine engineer, who died at his home after a long illness, was born in Poquonoc but was a resident of this village for 42 years. Mr. Spink was employed for 47 years on steamer New Hampshire as engineer, running from Providence to New York. He retired as engineer several months ago. Besides his wife he leaves a son, Clarence Spink, and a daughter, Miss Madeline Spink, both of Noank. He was a member of Charity and Relief lodge of Masons and of Pyramid commandery; also Pyramid temple, of Bridgeport. Mr. Spink was well liked by all who knew him, on sea and land.

PRICES LOWER IN THE STOCK MARKET OWING TO FALLING OFF OF SUPPORT

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—(AP)—Prices worked lower on the stock market today as pool support was withdrawn from a number of active issues and commission houses were inclined to recommend lightening of accounts in anticipation of a possible pre-election "scare."

The week before election is normally a week of considerable tension in Wall street, when wild rumors are likely to cause flurries on the market. This year the unsettling influence has been less marked than in previous national election years, and has had but a negligible effect upon business.

Today's sagging of prices was in the face of a number of favorable developments. Better conditions in the money market were forecast in a slight easing in 180-day bankers acceptances, and a number of corporations reported highly call money held at 7 1-2 per cent all day and was available at 17 per cent in the convertible market.

U. S. Steel reported total earnings for the third quarter of $54,143,476, while not more than $50,000,000 had been generally expected in Wall street. Earnings for the first nine months were on the basis of $8.17 per share, against $7.75 in the like period of last year. The stock sold up about a point during the day, but was under pressure toward the close.

Oils were inclined to heaviness although Barnsdall gained a point on publication of the highly favorable earnings report for the third quarter, then sagged on the traditional "selling on the good news." Pure Oil sold up to its previous high on increasing the dividend rate, then also turned heavy. Atlantic Refining dropped 6 1-2 points, and Royal Dutch eased on denials from Amsterdam that the dividend rate would be increased.

Radio Corp. lost more than 3 points on profit taking, while Western Union advanced 3 1-4 points on announcement that it is negotiating with Radio on a plan of using wireless, then fell back 6 points.

Motors developed weakness as pools liquidated their holdings in a number of specialties. Heavy selling of Briggs, which sold down nearly 3 points to 45 1-4 at one time, in contrast to the years high at 63 5-8, had an unsettling effect upon this group. Murray fell 5 points, Chrysler 3 5-8, and General Motors 1 1-4 points. Continental Motors rose more than a point to 16 1-2 on reports that it is going into airplane motor production, and Mack Truck gained a point.

Copper, yielded to realizing, although copper prices were advanced to 16 1-4 cents a pound for export yesterday. American Smelting lost nearly 5 and Greene Cananea 4 3-8 points. International Nickel was a strong feature of the session, selling up nearly 10 points at one time, on announcement that its shares would be exchanged for those of the International Nickel Co. of Canada. It closed 6 points higher. Kolster Radio also was in good demand, touching a new high at 86 7-8, up about 4 points, on buying inspired by the company's expansion program and favorable decision of the supreme court on the De Forest patent. Commercial Investment Trust also touched a new high at 137 1-2.

Merchandising shares encountered realizing. Montgomery Ward, Abraham and Straus Best & Co., Sears Roebuck, and National Bellas Hess sagging 2 to 4 points. Rubberstocks turned heavy on report of a cut in tire prices. Warner Brothers Pictures sold up nearly 5 points at one time on reports that it is negotiating with the Shuberts for the talking movie rights to their productions.

Rails generally went lower, a number of the western roads sagged on the victory of the trainmen and conductors in the wage dispute. Missouri Pacific preferred dropped nearly 4 points when the directors took no action toward paying up back dividends at their meeting today.

In the commodity markets, cotton was reactionary under hedge selling, while wheat was depressed by further bearish crop reports.

A drop of 40 points to 46.30 cents was a feature of the foreign exchanges. Sterling was slightly easier.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—(AP)—Reactionary tendencies were more preoccupied in today's stock market despite the efforts of pool operators to maintain bullish enthusiasm by bidding up a selected list of oils and specialties. Credit conditions were slightly easier, and the bulk of the day's trade news was favorable, but the fears of a "pre-election scare" induced many traders and small speculators to take profits in recent strong spots.

Buying of the oils was stimulated by the publication of an excellent third quarter report by Barnsdall, which incidentally created a brisk demand for the "rights," and by the placing of pure oil stock on a $1 annual basis. Prospects of a stock dividend accompanied the advance to record high levels in Standard Oil of Kentucky and Prairie Pipe Line, the latter retaining only 3 1-2 points of an extreme gain of 10 points. Crystal Oil Refining and International Petroleum also moved into new high ground.

Columbia Graphaphone opened with a block of 10,300 shares at 65 7-8, a new high record, but was unable to maintain its gain, selling down to 62 1-2 for a net loss of 1 1-2 points. Rainbow Luminous Products responded to reports of new contracts and expanding earnings by touching a new peak at 41. Fairchild Aviation, American Commercial Alcohol, Federal Screw, National Manufacturing and Storage, St. Regis Paper, Realty Associates of Brooklyn and Propper Silk also sold at new peak prices, but most of them lost part of their gains in the late selling movement.

Public utility and mining shares were hard hit by realizing sales although there were a few exceptions in each group. American Gas & Electric and Columbia Electric & Power each dropped about 3 points on a small turn-over while United Gas & Improvement and a few others sold down a point or more. Newmont dropped from an opening price of 136 3-4 to 180, closing fractionally above that level for a loss of 4 1-2 points, and Noranda showed a net loss of more than 2 points.

Among the many recently popular industrials to sell down a point or more were Hygrade Food Products, National Rubber Machinery, Consolidated Laundries, Keystone Aircraft and the Royal Baking Powder issues. Ford of Canada rallied from an opening price of 606 to 634 and then dropped back to 610, off 4 points net. Stutz turned reactionary when heavy selling developed in the motor group on the "big board."

Burgess Bedtime Story

Chatterer's Storehouse

Put your treasures safe away
'Til there comes a needful day.
—Chatterer, the Red Squirrel.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel was a very busy small person. He was cutting pine cones and spruce cones and fir cones. They kept falling, falling, falling to the ground. The best part of it all was that Chatterer knew that it was perfectly safe to cut them and let them fall to the ground that way, for there was no one else with the expertness and patience to open them. So all he had to do was to cut them before they opened on the trees and then let them lie on the ground until such time as he got ready to open them.

"It is clear to me," said Chatterer as he thought things over, "that food is going to be scarce with many folks this winter. That being the case, I shall have to store these pine seeds and fir seeds and spruce seeds with extra care. I must get a storehouse that no one else will be likely to discover."

So, leaving the cones where they had fallen on the ground, Chatterer spent a great deal of time during the next two or three days looking for a storehouse. He still had his old storehouses, but he wanted a new one. He knew that when snow and ice came and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Rusty the Fox Squirrel felt the pinch of hunger they would be quite likely to search long and hard for his storehouses. He suspected that they had an idea where a couple of these storehouses were, so he wanted a new one, a better one than any of the others.

It took a lot of searching for Chatterer to find just what he wanted, but he did find it at last. It wasn't in a tree. It was in the ground. Yes, sir, it was in the ground. It was a hollow in the ground under the roots of a big stump. There was no entrance to it by way of a hole in the ground. It was reached through a knothole several feet above the ground. That knothole was just big enough for Chatterer

It took a lot of searching for Chatterer to find just what he wanted to use. Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel or Rusty the Fox Squirrel would have been unable to even push their heads through. Inside there was a small hollow passage extending all the way down the trunk to the roots. There Chaterer had done a little work and had made an opening that led into this nice, dry cavity underneath the stump. It was a wonderful place for a storehouse.

Having found his storehouse, Chatterer set to work to lay in his winter's supply of seeds. With those sharp little teeth of his he snipped off the scales of the pine cones and the fir cones and the spruce cones and pulled out the little seeds between. These he carried to that new storehouse. My, my, what a busy fellow Chatterer was! It was astonishing how fast he could snip those little scales from the cones. They made a carpet, did those little brown scales. And Chatterer was happy. He was so happy that he didn't have time to scold anybody.

Several times Happy Jack Squirrel and Rusty Fox Squirrel came along and watched Chatterer at work. They did their best to find out where he was storing away those seeds. Happy Jack even sat right on top of that big stump. But though they spied and would hold no more Chatterer began secret, they never did. So gradually the storehouse was filled. When it would hold no more Chaterer began filling some of his other storehouses. He was going to take no chances of going hungry in the winter.

Happy Jack and Rusty, on the other hand, were having hard work. They were not finding much more than enough to eat day by day. The outlook for the winter was not at all good. They were worried. Yes, sir, they were worried. No stores meant starvation and suffering from cold. So both of them roamed far and wide, hoping that they might find a hickory tree or an oak tree bearing a heavy crop. While Chatterer was happy, they were worried.

What Doctors Say
About the Laxative Habit

What do YOU do when the bowels need a little assistance? If you clear up the condition with some laxative made with CASCARA, there is nothing better for the system—for the blood.

But if you don't KNOW the laxative you have learned to depend on is of harmless carcara, here's some truly valuable advice:

The bark of a tree called cascara is the most marvelous conditioner mankind has yet found. It stimulates the bowel's muscular action, but does NOT weaken. A violent laxative forms the laxative HABIT. You always need more on the morrow. With cascara, you don't. Its gentle influence carries on sometimes for days. With less and less need of any aid, as time goes on.

So, the very next time you feel sluggish, take only a candy Cascaret. Delightful to the taste, sweet and acceptable to any stomach, and just as efficient as the powerful purges that fairly paralyze the peristaltic walls of one's intestines. The only habit you'll get from Cascarets is the one of going weeks and months without ANY help of the kind. And when you do invoke their aid again, the same small dose suffices. Any doctor can tell you about cascara; and any druggist has the candy Cascarets.

WHEREAS, lawfully constituted authority of the Town of Lebanon did on the second day of April, A. D. 1928, place in my hands a Rate Bill, with Tax Warrant attached, said Rate Bill being duly signed by all of the Selectmen of the said Town of Lebanon, and said Warrant being signed by Clifford C. King, Esquire, a Justice of the Peace in and for the County of New London, for the collection of a Tax of twenty-five (25) mills on the dollar on the Grand List of the said Town of Lebanon as of October 1, 1927, and

Whereas, J. C. and J. Hollis Pease of Colchester, Connecticut, have after due notice and demand, refused and neglected to pay their portion of said Tax amounting to $27.00 and lawful interest on the same, and

Whereas, the property of the said J. C. and J. Hollis Pease, on which the said Tax was laid, consists of a tract of land with both wood and timber thereon, eighteen (18) acres, be the same more or less, located in the said Town of Lebanon, and bounded as follows: Northerly, by lands of George H. Thomas; Easterly and Southerly by lands of James Y. Thomas; Westerly, by lands of Jennie Lubetsky; or however otherwise bounded, and

Whereas, taxes assessed against the said J. C. and J. Hollis Pease on said property on the Levy of October, 1926, amounting to $27.00 and lawful interest thereon, remain unpaid,

Now, therefore I, George E. Briggs, Collector of Taxes of the Town of Lebanon, do hereby give public notice, in accordance with the Statute made and provided, that I will sell at Public Auction, to satisfy the claim of the said Town of Lebanon for unpaid taxes, the above described wood land of the said J. C. and J. Hollis Pease, said auction sale to be held on the said land on Saturday, January 5, 1929, at two o'clock in the afternoon, rain or shine.

Dated at Lebanon, Connecticut, this twenty-ninth day of October, 1928.
GEORGE E. BRIGGS,
Collector of Taxes, Town of Lebanon.

GETTING FAMILIAR AT NEW LONDON WITH WORKING OF VOTING MACHINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 30—Many voters are taking advantage of the demonstration of the workings of the voting machine being held in the municipal building. All day today crowds were going in and out of the building for the purpose of inspecting the device and familiarizing themselves with its operation.

BIG HALLOWEEN PARADE PLANNED FOR TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 30—Final preparations have been made for the Halloween parade which is to be held here tomorrow night. More than 500 boys in costume will start from the Y. M. C. A. and hundreds of townspeople are expected to join the line. Coupled with the democratic parade, it is expected that a big crowd will appear on the streets during the evening. The parade will be headed by a twenty-piece band, furnished by the musicians' union here. Prizes are to be awarded to those having the most original, spectacular and beautiful costumes.

James Falustico, of Hamilton avenue, Groton, was fined $100 and costs in the town court yesterday by Judge Cornelius Costello on a charge of keeping liquor with the intent to sell. He was arrested on the night of October 19 by State Troopers George Weber and John H. Smith.

Work on the widening of the Thames river channel between Allyns Point and Norwich is well under way. Tons of mud are being taken daily from the river body and completion of the project is expected even before the time set.

Beginning Thursday morning a force of 150 women, divided into twelve teams, will canvass this city in an endeavor to raise $12,000 for the Y. M. C. A. This amount is necessary to meet the budget for the coming year. The twelve teams will meet tomorrow night in Mercer hall for the purpose of making final plans for the drive.

Mrs. Charles Chaippone, of 21 Chappell street, was guest of honor at a party last night, celebrating her birthday. The evening was spent in the enjoyment of Italian and American dances after which refreshments were served.

The primary department of the First Baptist church held a Halloween costume party the other afternoon at the church with 65 children in attendance.

Mrs. Albina Smith of 37 Willetts avenue was given a surprise Halloween party at her home Monday night. After an evening of games refreshments were served by Mrs. George S. Smith, assisted by Mrs. Frederick Halyburton and Mrs. Edward Southworth.

Open house will be held by members of the Martha Winthrop club, tomorrow afternoon at the John Winthrop club. Beginning at 2:30 p. m. bridge will be played following which refreshments will be served.

Mrs. J. Raymond Cluett, president of the Annie Laurie club entertained members of the organization at her home in 55 Cole street tonight.

As the first in a series of concerts to be given this winter by Connecticut college, held tonight, Sophie Brasiau, noted contralto was heard.

Miss Minnie K. Roche, whose marriage with Gerald Aldworth will take place Monday was given a miscellaneous shower last night by Misses Helen and Madeline McLaughlin of Broad street. The affair was in the form of a bridge party, after gifts had been presented. Luncheon was served the guests.

ALEXANDER'S LONG ARM REACHING TAX DELINQUENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 30—Continuing his drive to enforce the collection of taxes due the city, Collector Hibbard N. Alexander today issued eight additional tax warrants, each demanding the sale of real estate owned by the delinquents. Property owned by Luigaro and Pasqualina Lombardo, Garfield avenue, consisting of a house and lot, has been ordered sold Dec. 31 at 10 a. m. Lombardo and his wife owe the city on the levies of 1925 and 1926, a sum of $289.87.

Property of Angelo and Minnie Oddo, a building lot on Shaw street, ordered sold Dec. 31 at 11 a. m. Oddo and his wife owe taxes of $649.40, levies from 1918 to 1927, inclusive.

A house and lot owned by Louis Margolis, Bank street, ordered sold Dec. 31 at 2 p. m. Margolis owes the city $458.40 on the levies of 1916, 1918, 1926 and 1927.

The three-story brick building on North Bank street, owned by Henry Marcus and Arthur and Anna Wilinsky, ordered sold Dec. 31st, at 3 p. m. Marcus and the Wilinskys owe the city $1,202.74, representing the assessment on the levies of 1925, 1926 and 1927. The upper floor of the building is occupied by lodgers of the B. P. Learned mission.

Isadore J. Kaplan owes the city $413.89, representing the assessment on the levies of 1925, 1926 and 1927. Property owned by Kaplan on Shaw street, consisting of a house and lot has been ordered sold Dec. 31st at 4 p. m.

Property owned by Lena Kaplan, a house and lot on Mountain avenue, ordered sold Dec. 31 at 9 a. m. She owes the city $377.53, levies on the assessment of 1918, 1920, 1921, 1924 and 1925.

Barney Belgrad owes the city on the assessment of the levy of 1927, $760.35. Property on Montauk avenue owned by Beigrad, consisting of a house and lot, has been ordered sold Dec. 31 at 1 p. m.

Raymond H. Hilliar owes $692 on levies of 1916, 1917, 1918, 1925 1926 and 1927. Building lots on Terrace avenue owned by Hilliar have been ordered sold Dec 31 at noon.

Tax Collector Alexander also issued the release of warrants against Mary L. L. Peck and Edna Zepp McGuire.

George Lekas, proprietor of the New York Coney Island Restaurant has sold an undivided one-half interest in the business to James Frans of New York.

A deed was received for record at the office of the city clerk today transferring title in a building lot on Adelaide street from Patrick Casey to Margaret A. Carey. The deed is dated January, 1919. Mr. Casey, who was formerly mate of the New London line steamers, died a week ago.

Kenneth Clark, of Flanders arrested last night by State Police Officer John Smith, Groton barracks, charged with non-support and who was held a prisoner at New London police headquarters over night, was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Charles Watrous at Niantic this morning. The case was continued a week and Clark furnished a surety on his bond of $250.

As was anticipated Clark, was re-arrested after his arraignment in the Niantic court for the New London authorities, being charged with evasion of responsibility. Sept. 10 Clark was driving an automobile on Main street, and collided with a car owned by Albert Santacroce, 61 Poquonoc road, Groton, near the corner of Church street. Although Clark stopped for a brief time, he refused to await the arrival of a police officer to investigate the crash and speeded away, although Santacroce's auto was damaged.

Winfield Gaskell, of Mystic and Mrs. Donald Greenanwald and infant son, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

City Manager William A. Holt today ordered parking restrictions on the westerly side of Howard street, between the northerly end of Woodbridge street and point opposite the center line of the property at No. 27.

William C. Small, 133 Thames street reported to the police today that he drove the car to a point on Bank street drove the car to a point on Bank street near Colman street at 10 o'clock last night and parked it. He did not return for the auto until 7:30 o'clock this morning when he discovered it missing; the thief undoubtedly had taken the auto long before the theft was discovered. The state police, Groton and Centerbrook barracks, as well as the police of Norwich, Willimantic, Westerly, Hartford, New Haven and Middletown were notified.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of John M. Guenther, submarine base, a member of the crew of S-13 and Carl Clausen, United States Coast Guard, a member of the crew of the destroyer Downes. Commissioner Stoeckel ordered the return of the license of L. E. Geiger, submarine base.

GOOD PROVED TO BE BAD WHEN HIS TEMPER ROSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 30—Justice Good, colored, residing on Main street, employed as a cook at Peck's restaurant, was in the police court this morning charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. With him was arraigned Harry Pina, also colored and a cook, residing at 194 North Bank street, who was charged with interfering with an officer, also driving without a license. Good was fined $60 and costs and paid. Pina, who was fined $54 and costs, was unable to pay and was committed to jail. The arraignment of Good and Pina in court was the result of their engaging Patrolman Louis Tooker in battle last night. Tooker was on Main street, near Hill street, when Good's automobile, in which he was riding, but which was being driven by Pina, stopped beside the curb. With Good and Pina in the car were the former's two police dogs. Tooker was not in uniform, for he was performing plain clothes duty. When Good and Pina and the dogs alighted, Good attempted to start a fight between one of the police dogs and a dog that was roaming in the vicinity. Tooker remonstrated with Good and at the same time displayed his shield. Good became incensed, removed his coat, attacked the officer and knocked him down. When Tooker regained his feet, he pulled his blackjack and started for Good. But Pina seized the officer's arm. A passing autoist drove to the corner of State and Main street, where Patrolman Henry Hick was informed of the fight. The autoist returned with Hick and then Good was subdued and quickly landed in a cell. Pina in the meantime had escaped. Later in the night Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolmen Hick and Tooker found Pina at his home and took him into custody.

Arthur Cook, 38, residing at 602 Main street, employed as a mechanic by the Central Vermont railroad and Klim Pika, 48, a stevedore, also employed by the railroad at the company's steamboat wharf and residing at 137 North Bank street, were charged with breach of the peace. The case was continued to Nov. 30. Cook and Pika engaged in a fight at the pier yesterday over possession of a freight truck. When one of the combatants made complaint to the police the other did likewise with the result that Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin arrested the pair.

Ray Jorgerson, a member of the crew of the yacht Thelma was charged with breach of the peace and was fined $20 and costs. Jorgerson went to the Garde theatre last night and as he had been drinking he became noisy, annoyed other patrons of the place, and refused to become quiet. Complaint was made to the police and Patrolman Henry Hick arrested the disturber.

CANDIDATE WM. CITRON TO ADDRESS WORKERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 30—William Citron of Middletown, democratic candidate for congress and the opponent of Richard P. Freeman, of this city, arrived in New London this afternoon and has made arrangements to address the working class for three days this week. Mr. Citron has arranged all of his speeches for 12:15 o'clock. Tomorrow he will talk to the employes of the Corticelli Silk company, Union street; Thursday he will address the employes of the Bloom Silk company, Garfield avenue and Friday he will take the stump in front of the plant of the J. N. Lapointe company, Pequot avenue, where the employes of the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing company will also be listeners.

The children of the B. P. Learned mission will celebrate Halloween Wednesday afternoon. The kiddies will assemble at the mission at 5 o'clock and after a brief street parade, will return to the mission where they will have games and refreshments. About 150 children will enjoy the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Foster entertained last night at a Halloween card party. Prize winners at cards were Harry J. Kennedy, Mrs. Robert J. Kennedy and Mrs. James T. Potter. Lunch was served after the play.

Announcement was made today of the engagement of Miss Anna Marguerite Wargo of Flanders to Clarence DeSota, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony DeSota of Groton. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Silva gave a Halloween party last night for their son Walter and nephew Luke Mavin. More than twenty guests were present and the evening was spent in games, after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. Carrie Davenport of 100 Howard street was surprised last night when a group of friends in Halloween attire dropped in for the evening. The guests proved to be members of Carrie Davenport camp of Juveniles, Royal Neighbors of America, of which Mrs. Davenport is past director. Games were played and refreshments were served by the hostess. About thirty were present.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Mattson of Farmington avenue entertained last night on the third birthday of their daughter Lillian. The house was gayly decorated in colors of the season and a program of holiday games had been arranged. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

At a short business meeting of the alumnae association of Lawrence-Memorial hospital held last night at the institution, nomination of officers took place for election at the December meeting. About twenty members were present.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bauer's Contribution to Art

It is not only as one of the great interpretative musicians of our time that the general music public knows and admires that gifted and versatile artist, Harold Bauer, who is to play at Slater hall this coming Friday evening, but for his activities and influence that extend far beyond the concert hall and for his great contribution to the furtherance of musical art in all ways.

Mr. Bauer was the first pianist who sought to popularize the music of Brahms in this country, at a time when the beauties of that composer's music remained unrecognized. Worthy contemporary composers, whose music he regards as sincere and meritorious, have found him their ardent champion. He is an indefatigable student of the music of the past, and has resurrected many forgotten master works, revising, arranging and editing others for ing, arranging and editing others for many young artists and teachers have profited by his advice and guidance.

Yet, perhaps, most notable among his many and varied services to musical art, aside from his personal interpretative work, has been his organization of the Beethoven Association of New York, an organization of musicians and persons interested in music either creatively or appreciatively. By means of the proceeds from annually given series of concerts by its own membership this organization is conspicuous for the altruistic work it has been able to do in fostering music appreciation and its record forms an interesting chapter in the history of music in the United States.

See adv. for further concert details.

Dance at Pulaski Hall

Halloween is here, and tonight there will be much celebrating and rejoicing. The main attraction will be at Pulaski hall where Fred Thumm and his orchestra will dispense tuneful melodies with perfect harmony and rythm. Tonight's features will be Old Man Sunshine fox trot and I Loved You Then a beautiful waltz. If you haven't attended the dances at Pulaski since its reopening, you should be there tonight. There will be confetti, streamers, etc., and a good time is assured to all.

Breed Theatre

Director Leo Meehan, who has gained a reputation as a director of human interest stories, principally through his work in producing "The Harvester," "Freckles" and other Gene Stratton Porter novels, has brought another absorbing story to the screen in "The Devil's Trade Mark," which will be seen at the Breed theatre today and Thursday. In this story by Calvin Johnston Mr. Meehan has found the human note and with the stellar cast at his disposal has made an outstanding production for FBO.

Belle Bennett, best known for her work in "Stella Dallas" and "Mother" has the principal role and the other parts in the production are taken by William V. Mong, Marion Douglas, William Bakewell, Patrick Michael Cunning, William Desmond and Olin Francis.

A comedy special "Ham and Eggs at the Front," with all the members of the cast made up to appear as Negroes, is the added feature on this bill which Warner Bros. are offering with Tom Wilson, Heinie Conklin and Myrna Loy in the leading roles, at the Breed theatre.

The film deals with the humorous adventures of two members of a colored regiment in France during the late war from a story written by Darryl Francis Zanuck. "Ham and Eggs at the Front" was directed by Roy Del Ruth, who has produced so many sucessful comedies for Warner Bros. during the past three years.

COLCHESTER

SMALL AIRPLANE LANDS IN WESTCHESTER MOVING LOT

Borough residents motored to Westchester Center on Sunday to look at the aeroplane in a mowing lot on the W. K. Raymond farm. The plane is a "monocoupe," one of the smallest airships ever seen in this vicinity, its length being not over 15 feet. The aviator was flying toward New York when the carburetor trouble necessitated a forced landing, the machine being left in the mowing lot until a new carburetor can be sent from Hartford.

Mrs. Herbert Wells and children of Kingston, R. I. were guests during the past week of Mrs. Well's aunt, Mrs. H. P. Buell.

C. J. Lyman and H. H. Bailey were callers in Hampton Sunday.

Local people who have been on hunting trips about the outskirts of the village report a scarcity of game partridge and squirrels being a rare sight.

Fire Warden Job N. Phelps and men extinguished a small forest fire near the Waterhole section of Westchester Saturday afternoon.

Harris Brainard of New Britain was on a hunting trip through the Westchester woods Saturday.

Employes of the S. N. E. T. Co. are setting new poles along the old Middletown turnpike.

Louis M. Minsk who is attending Wesleyan university was at his home here over Sunday.

Dr. Albert L. Schuyler has returned to work at the Red Wing Co. plant after several days' illness.

Doctor Found What is Best for Thin, Constipated People

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness — and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of his 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in his private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, but you may try it free by using this coupon.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR VOTERS ON USING THE MACHINES

In view of the large number of new voters this year, many of whom possibly cannot find time to get instruction on the machines before election day, the following directions are given on how to vote by the machines.

There are several rows of levers on the voting machine. The top row is republican, the second row democratic. The other parties follow in order, socialist. To vote the straight ticket for either party all that is necessary to do is to pull the large party lever at extreme left towards you as far as it will go. Then walk out of the booth.

If the voter wishes to split his ticket there is something more to be done after pulling the party lever.

Presuming that the voter is of the republican party, this is how to vote a split ticket after entering the machine.

First, pull the large party lever at extreme left toward you as far as it will go. This throws down all the levers for your entire party ticket.

Second, push up the levers over the candidates you want to vote against.

Third, pull down the levers of the candidates on the row below you want to vote for.

Remember, you must push up the levers o fthe candidates you want to levers of the candidates you want to the corresponding levers in the second row. To split a democratic ticket, follow same process except pull democratic party lever and pull down levers in the upper row.

DANCING AND MUSIC FOR HALLOWEEN PARTY

At the home of Miss Anna Boldrigine, No. 44 Forest street, Saturday evening, an enjoyable Halloween party was given by Miss Estella Dudek for about 40 guests. The decorations in the house were along the Halloween line with a color scheme of gold and black. The music for dancing was very acceptably furnished by the Venetian Trio and an exhibition of the black bottom by Miss Dudek and the interpretation of the varsity drag by her and Robert Williamson were enthusiastically received. There was also a round of applause for Joseph Boldrigine for his vocal selections. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by a number of girls, all receiving Halloween favors.

SONS OF REVOLUTION TO MARK PATRIOTS' GRAVES

At the meeting of the board of managers of the Connecticut society held at the state library on Saturday the 27th instant, Earle M. Wood, secretary-treasurer, of the Gen. Israel Putnam branch of Norwich, was in attendance as a member of the board.

Eight new members were elected, making thirty-three thus far during the fiscal year commencing April 1st.

A number of grave markers for revolutionary patriots were also ordered, among which was one at the grave of Daniel Bissell, the patriot spy, to whose memory a boulder with bronze tablet thereon was erected in Windsor by he Col Jeremiah Woodworth branch, S. A. R., in 1919. Thus does the society strive to keep alive the memory of Revolutionary patriots, which is one of the avowed objects of the organization.

MAYOR WILL CALL SPECIAL CITY MEETING OVER ELECTRICAL RATES

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins received on Tuesday from the gas and electrical commissioners a letter in which they suggested the appointment of a fact finding commission to investigate the matter of the new electric rates which the board has put into effect. This was in response to the mayor's letter of Oct. 19 in which he reiterated his contention that a public hearing shou'd be given on the matter.

When asked Tuesday night concerning his probable action in regard to the letter received in the morning from the gas and electrical commissioners, Mayor Robbins said:

"An increased demand during the past few days for the calling of a city meeting at which to express sentiment concerning the new electrical rates, coupled with the suggestion by the gas and electrical commissioners for the appointment of a finding committee, prompts me to call a special city meeting some evening next week, at which time opportunity will be given for general expressions concerning our municipal plant's future welfare, its present management, and the desires of the voters relative thereto."

The following was the letter from the board of gas and electrical commissioners to the mayor on Tuesday:

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins,
Norwich, Connecticut.
Dear Sir:

This commission has given your letter of the 19th careful thought, but still feels that the suggestion offered while at your office on the 15th should be given consideration, ei, that you appoint a committee of five or six citizens and that this commission appoint a like number, to act as a fact finding committee in the matter of electric rates. This commission believes that by this procedure the consumers will receive the benefits of rates which are just, non-discriminatory and in keeping with modern rate making practiced by utility companies of the present.

You will undoubtedly be interested in knowing that the rate schedule which became effective on October 1, was placed in effect only after months of study by this commission, assisted by competent rate engineers, one of whom represented a major group of business interests in this city.

We submit for your consideration the following exhibits:

(a) Comparative data of rates with other cities which have recently been placed in effect.

(b) Data on the application of residential schedules effective October 1. (Note the decrease in income.)

(c) Graphic charts showing the effect of the former and new rate on average monthly bills.

(d) Graphic charts showing the effect of the old and new rates on actual customer's accounts. Note that there is a marked decrease in high monthly bills, thus eliminating many high bill complaints which occur during the winter months.

(e) A letter of commendation.

This commission takes this opportunity, through you, to acknowledge their duty to the tax payers of the city who are the direct owners of the Gas and Electrical property. It's success can be continued or failure brought about by inexpedient action at this time.

We assure you that our endeavors have been to establish rates which will be of benefit to the greatest number of customers. The step taken is one of direct progress and we feel that the schedule adopted should be given a fair trial.

We ask for your cooperation.

Yours very truly,
CITY OF NORWICH GAS & ELECTRICAL COMMISSIONERS
J. A. Desmond, secretary

BEGIN DREDGING CHANNEL ABOVE ALLYN'S POINT

The work of widening and deepening the Thames river channel from Allyn's Point to Norwich is now under way and tons of mud from the river bottom are being daily carried out on scows to the Race and dumped from a section of the river at the "Long Reach." The work, which is being done by the Morris and Cummings Dredging company of New York, will result in the channel having a depth of 18 feet for a width of 200 feet.

The project is one which has been urged by Norwich interests for several years and was made possible by a federal appropriation.

BAYER ASPIRIN

You doubtless depend on Aspirin to make short work of headaches, but remember that it's just as dependable an antidote for many other pains! Neuralgia? Many have found real relief in a Bayer Aspirin tablet. Or for toothache; an effective way to relieve it, and the one thing doctors are willing you should give a child—of any age. Whether to break up a cold, or relieve the serious pain from neuritis or deep-seated rheumatism, there's nothing quite like Bayer Aspirin. Just make certain it's genuine; it must have Bayer on the box and on every tablet. All druggists, with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Bayer Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

An old Maine woods recipe gives the finest baked-bean flavor known

They have a unique way of baking beans in the logging camps of the Maine woods. They bake them in the ground!

The big round-bellied bean pot is filled with the flavor-rich ingredients—lots of brown sugar, molasses and prime sugar-cured pork. Then it is put to bake all night long in the "bean hole"—an oven in the ground.

This gives the finest baked-bean flavor known. A blend of forest fragrance, pungent wood smoke, fresh earthen oven.

And now this same wonderful woods flavor is reproduced for your own table. In Bean Hole Beans! You'll be delighted with this new achievement in flavor. It's so different! Enjoy it today. Ask your grocer to send you 2 or 3 cans. Two sizes —medium and large.
